But look at the disasters cyclonic. At the mouth of the Ganges are three islands—the Hattiah, the Sundep and the Dakin Shabazpore. In the midnight of October, 1877, on all those three islands the cry was, "The waters!" A cyclone arose and rolled the sea over those three islands, and of a population of 340,000, 215,000 were drowned. Only those saved who had climbed to the top of the highest trees! Did you ever see a cyclone? No? Then I pray God you may never see one. I saw a cyclone on the ocean, and it swept us 800 miles back from our course, and for thirty-six hours during the cyclone and after it we expected every moment to go to the bottom. They told us before we retired at 9 o'clock that the barometer had fallen, but at 11 o'clock at night we were awakened with the shock of the waves. All the lights out! Crash went all the lifeboats. Waters rushing through the skylights down into the cabin and down on the furnaces until they hissed and smoked in the deluge. Seven hundred people praying, shrieking. Our great ship poised a moment on the top of a mountain of phosphorescent fire and then plunged down, down, down until it seemed as if she never would again be righted. Ah, you never want to see a cyclone at sea!

But I was in Minnesota, where there was one of those cyclones on land that swept the city of Rochester from its foundations and took dwelling houses, barns, men, women, children, horses, cattle, and tossed them into indiscriminate ruin and lifted a rail train and dashed it down, a mightier hand than that of engineer on the airbrake. Cyclone in Kansas, cyclone in Missouri, cyclone in Wisconsin, cyclone in Illinois, cyclone in Iowa! Satan, prince of the power of the air, never made such cyclonic disturbances as he has in our day. And am I not right in saying that one of the characteristics of the time in which we live is disaster cyclonic?

But look at the disasters oceanic. Shall I call the roll of the dead shipwrecking? Ye monsters of the deep, answer when I call your names. The Ville de Havre, the Schiller, the City of Boston, the Melville, the President, the Cimbrina, the Oregon, the Mohegan. But why should I go on calling the roll when none of them answers and the roll is as long as the white scroll of the Atlantic surf at Cape Hatteras breakers? If the oceanic cables could report all the scattered life and all the bleached bones that they rub against in the ocean, what a message of pathos and tragedy for both beaches! In one storm eighty fishermen perished off the coast of Newfoundland and whole fleets of them off the coast of England. God help the poor fellows at sea and give high seats in heaven to the Grace Darlings and the Ida Lewises and the lifeboat men hovering around Goodwin sands and the Skerries! The sea, owning three-fourths of the earth, proposes to capture the other fourth and is bombarding the land all around the earth. The moving of the hotels at Brighton Beach backward 100 yards from where they once stood, a type of what is going on all around the world and on every coast. The Dead sea rolls today where ancient cities stood. Pillars of temples that stood on hills, geologists now find three-quarters under the water or altogether submerged. The sea, having wrecked so many merchantmen and flotillas, wants to wreck the continents, and hence disasters oceanic. Alas for Galveston and other cities almost drowned!

A Wealth of Blessings.

Look at the disasters epidemic. I speak not of the plague in the fourth century that ravaged Europe and in Moscow and the Neapolitan dominions and Marseilles wrought such terror in the eighteenth century, but I look at the yellow fevers and the choleras and the diphtherias and the scarlet fevers and the typhoids of our time. From Hurdwar, India, where every twelfth year 3,000,000 devotees congregate, the caravans brought the cholera, and that one disease slew 18,000 in eighteen days in Bessarabia. Twelve thousand in one summer slain by it in India and 25,000 in Egypt. Disasters epidemic. Some of the finest monuments in Greenwood and Laurel Hill and Mount Auburn are to doctors who lost their lives battling with southern epidemic.

But now I turn the leaf in my subject, and I plant the white lilies and the palm tree amid the nightshades and the myrtle. This age no more characterized by wonders of disaster than by wonders of blessing—blessing of longevity; the average of human life rapidly increasing. Forty years now worth 400 years once. Now I can travel from Manitoba to New York in less than three days. In other times it would have taken three months. Other words, three days now are worth three months of other days. The average of human life practically greater now than when Noah lived, with 950 years, and Methuselah lived 969 years.

Blessings of intelligence: The Salm P. Chases and the Abraham Lincoln and the Henry Wilsons of the coming time will not be required to learn read by pine knot lights or seated shoemaker's bench, nor will the gusons have to study astronomy watching the cattle. Knowledge rolls its tides along every poor man's door and his children may go down and bathe in them. If the philosophers of a hundred years ago were called up to recite in a class with our boys and girls, the old philosophers would be sent down to the foot of the class because they failed to answer the questions! Free libraries in all the important towns and cities of the land. Historical alcoves and poetical shelves and magazine tables for all who desire to walk through them or sit down at them.

Infidelity Dwindling.

Blessings of quick information: Newspapers falling all around us thick leaves in a September equinoctial. Not three days old rancid and stale. We see the whole world twice a day through the newspaper at the breakfast table and through the newspaper at the teatable, with an "extra" between and there between.

Blessing of gospel proclamation: you not know that nearly all the missionary societies have been born within a hundred years and nearly all the benevolent societies and nearly all the philanthropic movements? Christianity is on the march, while infidelity dwindling into imbecility. While infidelity is thus dwindling the wheel of Christianity is making about a thousand revolutions in a minute. All copies of Shakespeare and Tennyson and Disraeli and of any ten of the most popular writers of the day less in number than the copies of the Bible going out from our printing presses. A few years ago in six weeks more than 2,000,000 copies of the New Testament purchased—not given away, but purchased, because the world will have it. The most popular book today is the Bible, and the mightiest institution the church, and the greatest nation among the nations and more honored than any is the name of Jesus.

Wonders of self sacrifice. A clergyman told me in the northwest that six years he was a missionary at extreme north, living 400 miles from postoffice, and sometimes, the thermometer 40 degrees below zero, slept out of doors in winter, wrapped in rabbit skins woven together. I said, "Is it possible? You do not mean degrees below zero?" He said, "I and I was happy." All for Christ! Where is there any other being that will rally such enthusiasm? Noth sewing their fingers off to educate the boys for the gospel ministry. For many years no luxury on the table until course through grammar school and college and theological seminary completed. Poor widow putting a mite into the Lord's treasury, the father of emperor or president impressed upon the coin not so conspicuous as the blood with which she earned it. Millions of good men and women, more women than men, to whom Christ is everything. Christ first and Christ last and Christ forever.

Why, this age is not so characterized by invention and scientific exploration as it is by gospel proclamation. You can get no idea of it unless you can ring all the church bells in a

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M., From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

8:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Naples.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:50 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.
S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent,
F. S. GANNON,
Third Vice-President and General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address on application, if not of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY LINE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California, and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

Schedule in Effect February 24, 1901.

Route.	No. 27.	No. 31.
Leave Richmond.....	12:23 noon	10:40 P M
Arrive Petersburg.....	1:08 P M	11:30 P M
Arrive Henderson.....	3:52 P M	2:27 A M
Arrive Durham daily exc. Sunday.....		8:30 A M
Arrive Raleigh.....	5:04 P M	3:41 A M
Arrive South'n Pine.....	6:57 P M	5:37 A M
Arrive Pinehurst.....	7:17 P M	6:10 A M
Arrive Hamlet.....	7:50 P M	6:30 A M
Arrive Charlotte.....	10:45 P M	9:51 A M
Arrive Wilmington.....		12:05 noon
Arrive Columbia.....	11:20 P M	9:40 A M
Arrive Savannah.....	2:20 A M	12:10 noon
Arrive Jacksonville.....	6:30 A M	3:50 P M
Arrive St. Augustine.....	8:50 A M	5:00 P M
Arrive Tampa.....	5:00 P M	5:00 P M
Arrive Athens.....	4:08 A M	2:19 P M
Arrive Atlanta Cen T.....	5:30 A M	3:35 P M
Arrive Macon.....	11:10 A M	7:20 P M
Arrive Montgomery.....	11:00 A M	9:20 P M
Arrive Mobile.....	4:12 P M	2:55 A M
Arrive New Orleans.....	8:30 P M	7:30 A M
Arrive Chattanooga.....	1:00 P M	12:35 A M
Arrive Nashville.....	6:55 P M	5:35 A M

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:30 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:40 P. M. and Raleigh 4:22 P. M. daily, and Durham 4:30 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily; No. 44 at 5:10 A. M. and No. 66 at 5:55 P. M.

*Through Sleeping Car from Washington to Pinehurst, every Wednesday and Friday. Passengers from North of Washington can take this car by passing from the New York to the Washington sleeper.

**Connection daily at Southern Pines with all trains for Pinehurst, N. C.—20 minutes by electric cars.

Connections at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East Coast points, and Cuba and Porto Rico. At New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND DAILY:

4:45 A. M., No. 44, from all points South and Southwest.

5:35 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

6:13 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 44—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Drawing-Room, Sleeping, Compartment, and Observation Cars, and Through Day Coaches between New York and St. Augustine—Dining Cars, serving all meals en route. Also Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Florida and Atlanta Fast Mail. Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which Through Pullman Tickets are sold. Finest Day Coaches.

Z. P. SMITH,
District Passenger Agent,
Phone 405. 836 east Main street.
V. E. M'BEE. R. E. L. BUNCH,
Gen'l Supt. Gen'l Pass. Agent.
Portsmouth, Va.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo. for free examination and advice.
LOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent.
Write to C. A. SNOW & CO.,
Patent Attorneys, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,

Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing.

Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Lumsden &amp; Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

731 Main Street Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

PATENTS

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLS and UMBERYARD

MECHANICAL REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

— PLOW HANDLES. —

— TOBACCO HOGSHEADS. —

— CORN MEAL. —

— SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES. —

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blackstone, Va.

SUE BENNETT SCHOOL.

(Continued from page 5.)

a high school would be if there were one. During the first three months of each year the attendance is about 125. The long term begins in December, and lasts four months. The studies for this term are arranged with reference to preparing students to pass the summer examinations for teachers' certificates, and the attendance is double that of the other sessions. Students often walk, or ride long distances on horseback to get to school. Some of them have their provisions sent them from home, and board themselves in the little cottages, two rooms of which rent for $2 per month. Some of the girls who board in the dormitory pay all or a part of it in provisions from home.

The teachers are careful to be neat in their dress, but very plain, and wear their garments out before casting them aside, not wishing to develop in the students a love of display or a desire to dress expensively. That is the purpose also of the plain house. The rent of a furnished room in the dormitory is $1.00 per month for each student. A graduate of the school, a young woman, has a contract by the year to board students at a rate of $1.35 per week, and she says she makes a living. The dining-room is well kept, and there is enough to eat of clean, wholesome food.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

Mrs. M. N. Moorman.

The Woman's Home Mission Board will convene in Richmond, Centenary church, April 18th-23d, inclusive.

This is the first time that this Board has met East, save in Asheville, N. C., in 1895. Its sessions have mostly been held west of the Mississippi river.

We can, however, say with confidence that no entertaining city has ever given a more cordial welcome than awaits this body in Richmond.

The fact of the coming of the Board to Virginia awakens some pleasant recollections. It was in Richmond Centenary church in 1886 that our General Conference, then in session, authorized the organization of this society. It was then known as the Woman's Department of Church Extension. Miss Lucinda B. Helm was appointed the first general secretary—indeed she at first filled every office, was its sole worker, and will always be regarded as its founder. May her beautiful life ever be an inspiration and an example.

The three principal divisions of the work of this Board are: Parsonages, education and city mission. Since organization 1,147 parsonages have been built and aided. Money donated to parsonages, $107,385.00. Money loaned to parsonages, $31,625.00. This society built during the year 1900-1901 more than two parsonages a week. Still there are 1,098 charges without parsonages.

The Sue Bennett Memorial School, in London, Ky., was organized in 1896. The total enrollment for last term was 253. Besides the Sue Bennett School, there is the Home and School in Greenville, Tenn., for homeless children, Schools for the Cubans in Florida, and for the Japanese and Chinese on the Pacific Coast. To these may be added industrial and kindergarten schools.

The city mission work is considered of the utmost importance. Upwards of forty missionaries and teachers are already employed, and each year the number is increasing.

The general officers are Miss Bell Bennett, president; Mrs. J. D. Hammond, vice-president; Mrs. N. D. Kirkland, treasurer; Mrs. R. W. MacDowell, corresponding secretary; Miss Emily Allen, recording secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At a meeting of the official members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Blackstone, Va., a committee was appointed to draft resolutions respecting the death of Sister Lydia R. Cannon, the devoted wife of James Cannon, and the beloved mother of Rev. James Cannon, Jr., and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, in the wisdom of God, it has pleased Him to remove from our midst Sister Cannon; therefore, be it Resolved, 1. That we bow humbly to God's unerring will.

Resolved, 2. That in the death of this godly woman we have sustained a grievous loss.

Resolved, 3. That we commend her Christian character to all, and especially to the young ladies of the Institute, with whom she mingled daily, and pray that they may emulate her noble example, by daily living the Christian life, and "walk with the Lord" as she did.

Resolved, 4. That we extend our warmest sympathy to the bereaved family, and especially to her husband and son, commending them to the care of our "kind Heavenly Father."

Resolved, 5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our Conference record, a copy be sent to the family, and copies be sent to the Richmond Christian Advocate and the Methodist Recorder for publication.

(Signed.)

BENJAMIN IRBY,
G. P. ADAMS,
G. F. GREEN,
Committee.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Home Mission Society of the Virginia Conference will hold its twelfth annual session at Blackstone, Va., April 24-25, 1902.

KATE E. WALL,
Recording Secretary.

Delegates and visitors expecting to attend the meeting will please send names promptly to the chairman of Committee on Entertainment, Miss Cornelia Adams, Blackstone, Va.

BALTIMORE CONFERENCE.

(Continued from Page 9.)

the modern dilettantism which says, 'It doesn't make any difference what we believe.' He knew that character is a product of a creed. A man is no better than he thinks. It is doctrine that makes manhood and womanhood.

"After all, my young brethren, you can't do any greater work than preach the Gospel. All of our rationalizing and theorizing, however entertaining to those who listen to you, will never save a soul. St. Paul counted it the boast of his life, with the shadow of death falling on him; he rejoiced not in the fact that he had fought the good fight, not that he had met and mastered every foe, not that he had come to the end of his journey—but he placed special emphasis on this: 'I kept the faith.'

"Oh, my young friends, it is no small charge that is committed to us. We need to feel the awful apostolic responsibility. Whatever may be the appearance of failure, it is only in the seeming. Thank God, we have the assurance of Christ, who arose from the dead on that glorious Easter morning, that there could never be failure. Let our faith be like that of St. Paul, and if you cannot be anything else be living Lazaruses. Oh, I pray that the spirit of Paul may abide in the apostles of to-day! Oh, for such a faith for every stormy time! And we are not blazing out through a wilderness, but I like to think of that old hymn our fathers used to sing:

"We are travelling home to God

In the way our fathers trod."

"The voice that called Lazarus to life can speak into every open grave; that voice that bade the waves be still can hush the storms in every human heart. My dear young brethren, whatever the discouragements of your work, fall back on these triumphant words of our text: 'The foundation of God standeth sure.'"

(Continued next week.)

APPOINTMENTS.

Bishop Galloway, when he had finally arrived at the forty-sixth question of the general minutes, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" said:

"I will not detain you any longer in announcing the appointments for the ensuing year. But I want to say that this has been one of the most delightful Conference sessions I have ever seen. I never knew the spirit of the brethren to be more cordial, fraternal and reverent. It has not been so long since I sat where you are sitting now, and I never then enjoyed a homily from the chair at this hour. But I never look upon the closing hours of a Conference without realizing that it is a picture unsurpassed for moral sublimity. You are all here ready to receive the appointments which I am about to announce, and to go to the charges to which you are assigned. The spirit of the itinerancy is such that our happiness and success will be measured by our fidelity to it.

"Ours is a wonderful system. It furnishes every man a place, and every place a man—of some sort. If some of us had to wait to be called we might wait a good while. I don't believe the far-famed discipline of the German army can show so much fidelity as the itinerancy of the Methodist Church. No place in the Conference is unworthy of any of you. If you feel disappointed, don't tell anyone. If it's a question of stipend, why, there's not a baseball pitcher in the country who could not humble the Apostle Paul. You have submitted as well as any body of men I ever knew, and my prayer is God bless you."

THE APPOINTMENTS.

The appointments were announced by Bishop Galloway, as follows:

BALTIMORE DISTRICT.

W. H. D. Harper, Presiding Elder.
Baltimore—Central—J. A. Anderson.
Carnarvon—B. D. Harrison.
St. Paul's—H. H. Sherman.
Wilkins Avenue—F. A. Tyler, L. W. Haslup (supply).
Emmanuel—J. O. Knott.
Frederick Avenue—W. H. Best.
Arlington—J. R. Andrew.
Sudbrook—E. L. Woolf.
Reisterstown—J. F. Baggs, F. H. Shipley (supply).
Freedom—J. W. Whitesell.
Howard—T. J. Lambert.
Linganore—W. E. Miller and one to be supplied.
Frederick—B. V. Switzer.
Brunswick—George Hasel.
Rockville—G. D. White, J. H. Balthis.

Gaithersburg—W. A. McDonald.
Clarksburg—J. G. Michael.
Poolsville—J. H. Davidson.
Beltsville—J. H. Dulany.
Hyattsville—W. E. Woolf.
Emory—O. C. Beall.
Wesley Grove—W. H. Sanders.
Laurel—W. L. Smith.

EAST BALTIMORE DISTRICT.

B. W. Bond, Presiding Elder.
Baltimore—Trinity—E. V. Regester.
Calvary—P. W. Jeffries.
Taylor's—J. B. Henry.
North Point—W. E. Henry.
West Harford—J. R. Jacobs.
Aberdeen—L. Hammond.
Kent—I. Ryder.
Church Hill—J. W. Mitchell.
Queen Anne's—G. R. Mays.
Hillsboro—C. L. Kennard.
Easton and Caroline—H. W. Burruss.
W. D. King.
Trappe—H. M. Reed.
Royal Oak—J. W. Beall.
Tilghman's—J. B. Hupman.
Severn—C. W. Moore.
West River—Thomas Cooper.
Chesapeake—C. K. Millican.
Calvert—W. B. Dorsey and one to be supplied.

Patuxent—A. Weller.
Forest Grove—C. W. Mark.
Prince George's—J. H. Schooley.
Charles and St. Mary's—T. G. Nevitt and one to be supplied (by R. K. Nevitt).
Student Randolph-Macon College—C. M. Hesser.

WASHINGTON DISTRICT.

J. W. Duffy, Presiding Elder.
Washington—Mount Vernon Place—F. J. Prettyman.
Epworth—W. S. Hammond.
Marvin—W. L. Dolly.
West Washington—F. L. Day.
Del Ray—Supplied by Homer Welch.
Alexandria—J. P. Stump.
Fredericksburg—G. T. Tyler.

Fall's Church—W. H. Woolf.
 Leesburg—S. G. Ferguson.
 Loudoun—J. L. Kibler, L. H. Kincaid.
 Middleburg—J. H. Kuhlman.
 Hillsboro—William M. Waters.
 Hamilton—C. Sydenstricker.
 Warrenton—W. H. Ballangee.
 Bethel—J. W. Smith.
 Marshall—W. P. C. Coe, G. W. Staples.
 Fairfax—D. L. Blakemore, J. F. Peake.
 Sterling—S. B. Dolly, S. K. Cockrell.
 Occoquan—J. W. Bain.
 Fauquier—W. T. Gover.
 Remington—W. H. Marsh.
 Sudley—J. K. Gilbert.
 Manassas—W. G. Hammond.
 Stafford—C. L. Potter.
 Morrisville—J. M. Hawley.

WINCHESTER DISTRICT.

H. P. Hamill, Presiding Elder.
 Winchester—Charles D. Bulla.
 Frederick—N. N. Hall.
 Stephen's City—H. A. Brown.
 Middletown—A. M. Cackley.
 Strasburg—R. M. Wheeler.
 Woodstock—J. H. Wells.
 Woodstock Mission—J. H. Haley.
 Edenburg—J. L. Henderson.
 Front Royal and Riverton—W. F. Locke.
 Warren—L. Fox.
 Linden—L. Butt.
 Page—H. A. Wilson.
 White Post—D. L. Reid, C. F. McClintic.
 Berryville—W. Melville.
 Brucetown—D. F. Eutsler and one to be supplied by C. Maddox.
 Martinsburg—C. D. Harris.
 Berkeley—T. J. Miller.
 Charlestown—B. F. Ball.
 Jefferson—F. A. Strother.
 Shepherdstown—J. C. Thrasher.
 Bakerton and Halltown—G. K. Heyberry, Jr.
 Professor Vanderbilt University—J. A. Kern.

ROCKINGHAM DISTRICT.

David Bush, Presiding Elder.
 Staunton and Mission—I. W. Canter and one to be supplied by J. C. Granbery, Jr.
 Harrisonburg—D. H. Kern.
 Bridgewater—J. C. Hawk.
 Mount Solon—J. M. Anderson.
 Mount Crawford—S. V. Hildebrand.
 Parnassus—C. B. Sutton.
 West Augusta—F. Furr.
 Augusta—S. A. Parker.
 Waynesboro—J. H. Smith.
 Basic City—W. O. Ross.
 New Hope—O. F. Burgess.
 Rockingham—H. M. Roane.
 East Rockingham—L. R. Jones.
 Elkton—J. H. Wilhite.
 Port Republic—A. L. Harnsburger.
 Shenandoah—A. R. Martin.
 Marksville—Supplied by B. B. White.
 Luray—W. H. H. Joyce.
 New Market—J. J. Ringer.
 Mount Jackson—H. S. Coe.
 Fairfield—L. H. Graybill.
 Baths and Goshen—L. R. Markwood.
 McDowell—M. P. Weikle.
 Monterey—R. L. Eutsler.
 Crab Bottom—W. M. Compton.
 Secretary Board of Church Extension—P. H. Whisner.
 Student Vanderbilt University—G. H. Fielding.
 Student Randolph-Macon College—J. M. Kline.

ROANOKE DISTRICT.

James E. Armstrong, Presiding Elder.
 Salem—J. S. Engle.
 Roanoke—Green Memorial—C. M. Hawkins.
 Trinity—H. M. Carter.
 St. James—H. L. Hout.
 Grace—W. O. Talbert.
 Belmont—B. L. Parrott.
 Vinton—J. H. Boyd.
 Roanoke Circuit—G. O. Homan.
 Bethany—H. Q. Burr.
 Buchanan—H. L. Myerly.
 Fincastle—O. W. Lusby.
 Glen Wilton—F. E. Hammond.
 Eagle Rock—G. D. Kidner.
 Buena Vista—C. H. Buchanan.
 Rockbridge—S. Grady.
 Lexington—J. H. Light.
 Collierstown—A. C. McNeer.
 Elliston—W. W. Watts.
 Christiansburg—J. W. Grubb.
 Blacksburg—W. D. Keene.
 Newport—G. H. Echols.
 Newcastle—L. S. Rudisill.
 Catawba—W. A. Sites.
 Professor Vanderbilt University—Collins Denny.

LEWISBURG DISTRICT.

J. S. Hutchinson, Presiding Elder.
 Lewisburg—R. L. Fultz.
 Frankford—G. W. Richardson and one to be supplied.
 Blue Sulphur—H. C. Febrey.
 Hinton—J. R. Vanhorne.
 Talcot—C. B. Le Few.
 Greenville—L. B. Atkins.
 Peterstown—Jesse D. Pope.
 Alderson—J. M. Greene.
 Union—F. A. Gains.
 Ronceverte—William Stevens.
 White Sulphur—J. M. York.
 Alvon—Supplied by J. B. Hedrick.
 Alleghany—J. W. Canter.
 Covington—L. L. Lloyd.
 Clifton Forge—C. S. Stanton.
 Bath—J. F. Valliant.
 Millboro Mission—Supplied by J. L. McNeer.
 Levelton—Charles Lynch.
 Huntersville—H. Lawson.
 Green Bank—J. W. McNeil and one to be supplied.
 Hot Springs—Supplied by F. M. Richardson.

MOOREFIELD DISTRICT.

J. T. Williams, Presiding Elder.
 Moorefield—D. M. Brown.
 Petersburg—C. W. Stump.
 Franklin—J. H. Dills.
 Keyser—W. N. Wagner.
 Cumberland—S. K. Cox.
 South Cumberland—C. H. Cannon.
 Elk Garden—Supplied by G. W. Yost.
 Piedmont—G. T. D. Collins.
 Frostburg—J. C. Jeter.
 Flintstone—E. W. Brubaker.
 Romney—H. I. Stephens and one to be supplied.
 Springfield—H. M. Strickler.
 Slanesville—G. W. Bogle.
 Hardy—Supplied by J. W. Reeves.
 Morgan—C. M. Sarver.
 Gainsboro—A. A. P. Neel.
 Wardensville—D. W. Griffin.
 Capron Bridge—C. E. Simmons.
 Listonburg—A. B. Silis.
 Editor Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate—S. K. Cox.

RIGHT OF LAYMEN TO SPEAK.

Bishop Galloway announced his decision on the question of law raised by Mr. C. W. Armstrong, the lay delegate, who wished to speak last Thursday during the debate over the election of Rev. Seymour Grady to elder's orders. Bishop Galloway then ruled that Mr. Armstrong had no right to the floor. On the following day Mr. Armstrong submitted to Bishop Galloway a series of questions of law on his ruling.

The Bishop's decision yesterday is a partial reversal of his ruling last week. "If," said Bishop Galloway, "my decision is not the same as it was the other day, it means that the court has reversed its decision."

Mr. Armstrong's questions were:

1. Is this a question affecting ministerial relations upon which a lay member of the Conference has a right to vote?

2. Are lay members of the Annual Conference excluded from voting on any matter which properly comes before the body under question 12 of the general minutes?

3. Can the lay members of the Annual Conference be excluded from voting for or against the election of a candidate to elder's orders on the ground that the objections to his election consist of matters affecting his ministerial character?

4. If a lay member cannot be excluded from voting for or against a candidate for elder's orders, can he be excluded from speaking to the question?

"I give no answer to the first question," said the Bishop, "as it is contained in my answers to the others. To question 2, I answer No; to question 3, Yes, if the matter involves ministerial character; to question 4, he can speak on all questions upon which he can vote."

STATISTICAL REPORT.

The statistical report was as follows: Number of infants baptized during the year, 1,444; adults, 1,004; number of Epworth Leagues, 210; members, 9,789; Sunday schools, 583; officers and teachers, 5,473; scholars, 41,458; amount contributed for presiding elders, $12,981; for preachers, $124,870; number of societies, 522; number of houses of worship, 522, valued at $1,295,322; indebtedness, $45,116; pastoral charges, 174; parsonages, 146, valued at $256,300; indebtedness, $10,682; number of churches damaged or destroyed, 3; damage, $1,238; insurance carried, $468,885; losses sustained, $113; premiums paid, $2,019; collections on losses, $113.

EDUCATION.

The report of the Board of Education recommended an assessment of $2,360, of which $360 shall be for the General Board of Education and $2,000 for the benefit of Randolph-Macon College; also, an assessment of $500 in aid of Paine and Lane institutes. Revs. Dr. J. A. Kern and Collins Denny were recommended for appointment as professors in the Vanderbilt University, and Rev. H. P. Hamill was recommended as Conference secretary of education. The report was adopted.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The report of the Sunday School Board referred to the Sunday School Convention held last July at Lexington, Va., and urged upon charges the importance of large attendance at these conventions. The next convention will be held during July at Luray, Va. The report recommended that on Thursday night of the Annual Conference the Sunday school anniversary be held. The report was adopted.

TEMPERANCE.

The report of the Committee on Temperance stated that no greater evil confronts the American people than the liquor traffic. It commended the Anti-Saloon League and all other wise and proper movements for the suppression of the traffic, and recommended total abstinence among the members of the Church. The report was adopted.

BISHOP GALLOWAY RESIGNS

When the resolutions of thanks and appreciation were being introduced one member offered a resolution, thanking Bishop Galloway for presiding over the Conference, and assuring him of a hearty welcome whenever he comes to the Baltimore Conference. Bishop A. W. Wilson was presiding when the resolution was offered, and Bishop Galloway, who was sitting in the rear of the pulpit, asked the Conference not to pass the resolution. "I'm glad to come to Baltimore," he said, "but it might be I'd come to Baltimore some time when you would not be glad to see me."

"I can appreciate what Bishop Galloway says," remarked Bishop Wilson, "and I never allow such resolutions to pass when I preside over a Conference. A man never ought to be thanked for doing his duty." The resolution was withdrawn.

VERY LOW RATES TO THE NORTH-WEST MARCH 1ST TO APRIL 30, 1902.

The Norfolk and Western Railway will sell tickets to Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Coast Points at exceeding low rates from all stations. It is possible rates to the West will never be so cheap again; choice of three routes. Write for rates and schedules, say to what point you are going and your nearest station to this line. See any Agent N. & W. R'y or W. B. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,

Gen. Pass. Agt., Trav. Pass. Agt.,
 Roanoke, Va.

MEETING SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION, ASHEVILLE, N. C., MAY 8-15, 1902.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway announces one fare for the round trip, tickets to be on sale May 6th to 10th, inclusive, with return limit May 21st, except that by depositing tickets with joint agent at Asheville on or before May 10th, and upon payment of 50 cents an extension of limit until June 2d may be obtained. This offers a rare opportunity to those wishing to visit the favored section (Land of the Sky).

TENT FOR SALE

We have bought a larger tent, and must sell at what it will bring the one used last summer in revival work. It is in good condition, having been used only for three series of revival meetings; is circular in shape and fifty feet in diameter. Will sell for half cost. Address GEO. H. WILEY, Methodist Mission, Richmond, Va.

(Continued from page 10.)

came and sound all the organs in one diapason and gather all the congregations of Christendom in one "Gloria in Excelsis." Mighty camp meetings! Mighty Ocean Groves! Mighty Chautauquas! Mighty conventions of Christian workers! Mighty general assemblies of the Presbyterian church! Mighty conferences of the Methodist church! Mighty associations of the Baptist church! Mighty conventions of the Episcopal church! There may be many years of hard work yet before the consummation, but the signs are to me so encouraging that I would not be unbelieving if I saw the wing of the apocalyptic angel spread for its last triumphal flight in this day's sunset or if tomorrow morning the ocean cables should thrill us with the news that Christ the Lord had alighted on Mount Olivet to proclaim universal dominion.

The Divine Purpose.

All dead churches, wake up! Throw back the shutters of stiff ecclesiasticism and let the light of the spring morning come in! Morning for the land! Morning for the sea! Morning of emancipation! Morning of light and love and peace! Morning of a day in which there shall be no chains to break, no sorrows to assuage, no despotism to shatter, no woes to compassionate. Blessed Christ, descend! Scared temple, take the crown! Bruised hand, take the scepter! Wounded foot, step on the throne! "Thine is the kingdom."

These things I say because I want you to be alert. I want you to be watching all these wonders unrolling from the heavens and the earth. God has classified them, whether calamitous or pleasing. The divine purposes are harnessed in traces that cannot break and in girths that cannot slip and in buckles that cannot loosen and are driven by reins they must answer. I preach no fatalism. A swarthy engineer at one of the depots in Dakota said, "When will you get on the locomotive and take a ride with us?" "Well," I said, "now, if that suits you." So I got on one side of the locomotive, and a Methodist minister, who was also invited, got on the other side, and between us were the engineer and the stoker. The train started. The engineer had his hand on the agitated pulse of the great engine. The stoker shoveled in the coal and shut the door with a loud clang. A vast plain slipped under us, and the hills swept by, and that great monster on which we rode trembled and bounded and snorted and raged as it hurled us on. I said to the Methodist minister on the other side of the locomotive: "My brother, why should ministers quarrel about the decrees and free agency? You see that track, that firm track, that iron track; that is the decree. You see this engineer's arm; that is free agency. How beautifully they work together! They are going to take us through. We could not do without the track and we could not do without the engineer."

So I rejoice day by day. Work for all to do, and we may turn the crank of the Christian machinery this way or that, for we are free agents. But there is the track laid so long ago no one remembers it—laid by the hand of the Almighty God in sockets that no terrestrial or satanic pressure can ever affect. And along the track the car of the world's redemption will roll and roll to the Grand Central depot of the millennium. I have no anxiety about the track. I am only afraid that for our indolence and unfaithfulness God will discharge us and get some other stoker and some other engineer. The train is going through with us or without us. So, my brethren, watch all the events that are going by. If things seem to turn out right, give wings to your joy. If things seem to turn out wrong, throw out the anchor of faith and hold fast.

God on Our Side.

There is a house in London where Peter the Great of Russia lived awhile when he was moving through the land incognito and in workman's dress, that he might learn ship carpentry, by which he could supply the needs of his people. A stranger was visiting at that house, "What's in that box?" The owner said: "I don't know. That box was there when I got the house, and it was there when my father got it. We haven't had any curiosity to look at it. I guess there's nothing in it." "Well," said the stranger, "I'll give you £2 for it." "Well, done." The £2 was paid, and the contents of that box were sold to the czar of Russia for $50,000. In it the lathing machine of Peter the Great, his private letters and documents of value beyond all monetary consideration. And here are the events that seem very insignificant and unimportant, but they incase treasures of Divine Providence and eternities of meaning which after awhile God will demonstrate before the ages as being of stupendous value.

When Titans play quoits, they pitch mountains, but who owns these gigantic natural forces we are constantly reading about? Whose hand is on the throttle valve of the volcanoes? Whose foot, suddenly planted on the footstool, makes the continents quiver? God! I must be at peace with him. Through the Lord Jesus Christ, this God is mine and he is yours. I put the earthquake that shook Palestine at the crucifixion against all the down rockings of the centuries. This God on our side, we may challenge all the centuries of time and all the cycles of eternity.

Those of you who are in midlife may well thank God that you have seen so many wondrous things, but there are people alive today who may live to see the shimmering veil between the material and the spiritual world lifted. Magnetism, a word with which we cover up our ignorance, will yet be an explored realm. Electricity, the fiery courser of the sky, that Benjamin Franklin lassoed and Morse and Bell and Edison have brought under complete control, has greater wonders to reveal. Whether here or departed this life, we will see these things. It does not make much difference where we stand, but the higher the standpoint the larger the prospect. We will see them from heaven if we do not see them from earth.

Farewell to Death.

Years ago I was at Fire Island, Long Island, and I went up in the cupola from which they telegraph to New York the approach of vessels hours before they come into port. There is an opening in the wall, and the operator puts his telescope through that opening and looks out and sees vessels far out at sea. While I was talking with him he went up and looked out. He said, "We are expecting the Arizona tonight." I said: "Is it possible you know all those vessels? Do you know them as you know a man's face?" He said: "Yes. I never make a mistake. Before I see the hulls I often know them by the masts. I know them all—I have watched them so long."

A good mother, when her only son was leaving the home of his childhood and going out into the great world, knowing that he was ambitious, gave him this parting injunction: "My son, remember that, though it is a good thing to be a great man, it is a greater thing to be a good man."

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.*R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILD'NG. BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad Blackstone Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.*ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.FORTESQUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.*PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $300,000.*SURPLUS, $275,000.*INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.*W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va ;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SPOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va ;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties
IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT Agent, Blackstone, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

◎◎

Capital, $57,000; Surplus, $15,500.

◎◎

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

◎◎

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

◎◎

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by expe rience Druggists

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions

AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts?

If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished.
Time made to suit the borrower.
Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant,
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFEC-
REMEDY FOR TIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY
SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE.
STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES,
GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK
NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVE-
NESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND
ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Constipation, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
RICHMOND, VA.

It Will Pay You !

TO SEND A POSTAL CARD FOR OUR PRICES ON
Cane Mills, Cider Mills,
Buggies and Harness.

—In Fact—

Everything in the Hardware and Implement Lines
WE HAVE THE GOODS AND PRICES TO SUIT.
Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, — VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

...FOR TOBACCO...

Bellefonte

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to

Standard

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

Alliance

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 14.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., APRIL 10, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

REV. R. N. PRICE.

It is a great pleasure to announce to our readers that Rev. R. N. Price, the veteran editor of the Holston Conference, will write a weekly letter for the Recorder. The one in this issue is of the nature of a statement of the facts in the matter of his resignation from the editorship of the Midland. The men who have been most active in retaining the Book Agents were most active in trying to punish Bro. Price. There has been no more shameful chapter in the disgraceful history than the persecution of this noble, independent servant of the Church. We welcome him to our columns.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The rate to Dallas has been announced. It is one fare plus $2 for the round trip, making $38.80. The tickets are on sale on Saturday and Sunday, May 3d and 4th. It is likely that they will also be on sale on Monday, the 5th. But they will not be sold after that date. This is a poor arrangement, as there are many of our preachers who would like to go about one week later, so as to be at the Conference after the committee work had gotten well under way. But brethren who are planning to go will have to go in the beginning, or they will not be able to secure the special rate. The time on the road will be from forty-five to fifty-four hours, according to the route elected. By Atlanta and Shreveport the time is only about forty-five hours from Richmond. Several of the delegates expect to go on the Southern train, leaving Richmond at 11:30, May 4th, reaching Atlanta Monday afternoon, and there taking special cars with Georgia delegation, going by Birmingham, Vicksburg, Shreveport, and reaching Dallas at 8:30 Tuesday evening. Several of our preachers other than the delegates are speaking of going. The Conference comes only once in four years, and if a preacher is going to take a trip anywhere at any time this is a good time to take it. The editor will gladly give information as to schedules and routes.

A layman or church cannot do a more acceptable thing than to give a pastor a purse of about $60 to go to the Conference. There are several charges in Southside Virginia which can do this. Start it at your church next Sunday.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION BOARD.

This Board will meet in Richmond on Friday, April 18th. It represents the work all over the M. E. Church, South. It will be given a hearty welcome by the Virginia Conference Society, many of whose members will doubtless be in attendance upon the session. From the general secretary we have received the programme, which is given below, and also some statements as to the condition of the work.

The principal feature, outside of the presentation of the work itself, will be the presence of Bishop Granbery, who will preach on Sunday morning; Dr. J. A. Baldwin, of Civington N. C., who will address the body on Sunday evening on the factory problems of the South, and Prof. Graham Taylor, of the Chicago University, whose theme will be "Social Settlements as a Factor of Home Mission Work." Prof. Taylor has a chair of Christian Sociology in the University at Chicago, and is also at the head of the Chicago Commons Social Settlement. He is said to be a magnetic speaker, whose spirit is contagious, and whose beautiful life is said to be an inspiration to all with whom he comes in contact.

The collections this year have exceeded any of former years—the total for connectional enterprises amounting to $46,197. The membership is 29,034—an increase this present year of 4,000. The connectional features of the work are aiding in building parsonages throughout the connection (this year more than one hundred have been helped to the amount of $9,000), schools among the Cubans in Florida, the Japanese and Chinese in California, the mountains of Kentucky, and the mines of West Virginia, and rescue work, especially in Dallas, Texas. The feature which is stressed the most at present is city mission work. This is conducted by Boards formed from two or more auxiliaries in each city banding together and employing a missionary, who visits among the destitute and those who are in spiritual need. There are kindergartens conducted by teachers of missionary spirit, and in Nashville, Norfolk, Va., and Atlanta, Ga., there are settlement homes, where our missionaries and teachers live in the most destitute parts of the city, and thus come in contact with those who need the ministry of Christian love and service. The programme follows:

PROGRAMME.

Friday, April 18th—8:45 A. M., Scripture lesson and prayer, by Miss Bennett.

9 A. M., roll-call; address of welcome, Mrs. Wm. J. Maybie; response, Mrs. Robert Somerville, Greenville, Miss.; address to the Board, Miss Belle Bennett, president; report of treasurer, Mrs. W. D. Kirkland, Nashville, Tenn.; report of general secretary, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, Nashville, Tenn; announcement of standing committees; presentation of papers to be referred to committees; announcements.

12 M., Prayer service, Miss Mary Helm, Elizabethton, Ky.

12:30 P. M., adjournment.

2 P. M., committee meetings.

8 P. M., devotional exercises; music; presentation of the work of the Board with stereopticon; adjournment.

Saturday, April 19th—8:45 A. M., Scripture lesson and prayer, Mrs. W. H. Pemberton, Little Rock, Ark.

9 A. M., reports of superintendents and editors.

12 M., prayer and Bible reading, Mrs. L. P. Smith, Lewisville, Texas.

12:30 P. M., adjournment.

2 P. M., committee meetings.

Sunday, April 20th—11 A. M., sermon, Bishop J. C. Granbery.

8 P. M., devotional exercises; address, Dr. J. A. Baldwin, Covington, N. C.

Monday, April 21st—8:45, devotional exercises, Mrs. R. C. Neely, Waynesboro, Ga.

9 A. M., reports of superintendents (schools).

10 A. M., paper, City Mission Work, Mrs. M. C. Faville, Norfolk, Va.; reports of city missions; announcements.

12 M., prayer service, Miss Allen, Macon, Ga.

12:30 P. M., adjournment.

2 P. M., reports of committees.

4 P. M., committee meetings.

8 P. M., devotional exercises; address, Prof. Graham Taylor, Chicago, Ill.

Tuesday, April 22d—8:45 P. M., Scripture and prayer, Mrs. S. P. Wilfley, St. Louis, Mo.

9 A. M., reports of committees.

11 A. M., paper, "Conditions of Southern Factory and Mining Populations," Mrs. W. D. Murrell, Denver, Col.; announcements.

12 M., prayer service, Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Owensboro, Ky.; adjournment.

2 P. M., Workers' Conference, Mrs. F. P. Clark, Atlanta, Ga.

4 P. M., reports of committees.

8 P. M., business session.

Wednesday, April 30d—8:45 A. M., devotional exercises, Mrs. S. A. Babcock, Jonesboro, Ark.

9 A. M., reports of committees; election of superintendents and editors; fixing place of next meeting.

12 M., consecration service; adjournment.

MANY MEN OF MANY MINDS.

BY R. N. PRICE.

It is known that in the fall of 1898 my Conference (Holston) censured the editorial management of the Midland Methodist while I was editor; whereupon I gave notice of my resignation, and also located. It seems to be the general understanding that I was censured for the stand I took in the case of the Publishing House claim. The censure was to me thunder in a clear sky, for I was not aware of having committed any impropriety, and was not prepared for the assault. I had sympathizers enough in the Conference to have changed the vote; but my friends were not on their guard, and several of them were absent from the Conference room when the case came up. I myself was absent, and did not get in till the case was nearly disposed of. The majority margin was very small, and if my friends had been on the alert, the margin would have been on the other side.

While in charge of the paper I took the ground that the agents of the Church had deceived the Senate, and that the money received from the government, as war damages, to the Publishing House, should be returned to the United States treasury; and that there should be a called General Conference to dispose of the matter. As Barbee and Smith had been kind to me, and as they were printing our paper, I felt that it was my duty to be mild and conservative in my remarks in regard to the methods used in securing the appropriation; and I was so. Was not harsh or denunciatory; manifested no acerbity.

I did discuss the subject editorially, but not extensively. I admitted a number of communications on the subject, but the files will show, I think, that I published two columns in defence of Barbee and Smith to one against them; and thus assisted in creating in Holston the sentiment that crucified me. For instance, I published the long and elaborate reply of E. C. Reeves, Esq., to Dr. James M. Buckley, without publishing Buckley's article, which, by the by, was the best I have seen on the subject, and really unanswerable. I published article after article in defence of the agents from the pen of Dr. Ransom; but all this fairness to the agents and unfairness to my own side.

(Continued on page 4.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1900, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"I'm sure this matter is fully as important as the studies," replied the professor quietly. And that was all that was said by either of them as they went out and stepped over to the association room in the chapel where the meetings were being held. Edward was naturally silent, and the professor seemed to be a little embarrassed by the unusual situation. If his action had been due to any move on the part of the president, there was at least no attempt on Clark's part to attempt more with Edward than seemed possible to do with him. Somehow he knew that Edward would not be moved to make a Christian decision by arguments or by much talking. If he ever decided, it would have to be because he saw clearly for himself that the only thing for an educated man to do was to be a Christian.

When they went in, the meeting had begun, and the audience was singing. Edward noticed the president and sev-

"I came in to ask you to go over to the meeting tonight," said the professor. Several of the teachers present. The room was crowded, and he had difficulty in finding a seat. He finally went down near the front. When he was seated, he noticed Freeda sitting with some of the girls from the hall.

The evangelist was a wide awake, businesslike man who attracted Edward favorably. He was not dressed ministerially and had no disagreeable or noticeable mannerisms. He began his talk in a plain, straightforward fashion and gave the impression, which he everywhere gave, of sincerity and earnestness. There was a wholesome good sense in his appeal to both the intellect and the emotions, and Edward found himself listening not only with attention, but with real and growing interest.

But when the evangelist had finished his address and the audience had sung a hymn he announced that the meeting was open for testimony, and then Edward Blake began to indulge his pet habit of criticism. In ten minutes all the good effect of the evangelist's talk was dissipated from Edward's mind. The president had said a few words, very sensibly urging in a quiet but strong manner the points emphasized by Mr. Vail. Edward listened to him with the respect that was deeper in him every day. But the very next person to rise was one of the students who was active in the association work, but a very poor student in classroom work. Edward indulged in a sneer as he contrasted the frequency with which Wheaton failed to make a recitation compared with his zeal for religion. Wheaton had an unfortunate habit also of going around the college grounds with a Bible under his arm, and Edward remembered that all the time he was speaking. It did not count any with Edward that what Wheaton was saying was true, and it did not occur to him to give him credit for being sincere even if he was a poor student. It was almost a crime in Edward's eyes that a student should have a reputation for being pious and at the same time be so poor a student that neither professors nor scholars could respect his intellectual life. He could not help despising a type of Christianity which was so zealous for Christian character and so indifferent to physical and mental power.

As one after another of the students and professors made brief talks or offered prayer Edward grew more and more critical. He began to compare his own righteousness with that of the different speakers. That one talking now was a hypocrite, and he had seen him do questionable things during examination. That one praying now was mean and stingy and selfish in his relations to the other students. This one was unpopular on account of a disagreeable mannerism, and so on.

It was unfortunate for Edward that the principal speakers that evening were students who in one way and another failed to win his respect. And yet, Edward Blake, are you any better yourself, as you sit and sneer at others and complacently review your own righteousness? How much Christianity is there in that? Do you really believe you are making a better world by sitting outside the universal struggle and finding fault with those who at least have humbly been willing to declare their dependence on a saving power outside of themselves? And who are you, strong in your boasted morality, to take for granted that these men who are talking and praying here tonight do not have their inward struggles after the better life?

It is not an exaggeration to say that Edward left the meeting that night farther away from the personal Christian life than ever. He had set the barrier of his self righteousness against the appeal of the evangelist to let the spirit of truth have its way regardless of what other souls might do, and as a result he went away not only indifferent, but hardened and established in his moral standard.

Freeda came out at the door just as Edward was going down the chapel steps, and they walked over to the ladies' hall together.

She had not seen Edward in the meeting and was somewhat surprised that he had come. There was no question, however, that she was glad.

"I thought you were too busy with your debate to come," she said, referring to a little talk they had had at noon chapel, when Edward had mentioned how very busy he was preparing for the coming contest.

"I didn't expect to," he answered shortly.

"Did you enjoy the meeting, Ned?" Freeda asked somewhat timidly.

"No. I can't bear Wheaton or Jaynes."

Freeda was silent a moment.

"But Mr. Vail and the president spoke well. The meeting was helpful on the whole, don't you think?"

Edward did not answer. They had just come to the steps of the hall and stopped a minute there.

"Quite a number of the girls are interested. I think Miss Field and Ida will join the church next communion."

Ida was Freeda's roommate, and Miss Field was a senior who had become much interested in Freeda and was a good friend of both of the girls in the lower class.

A group of the girls went up the steps into the hall and left Freeda and Edward alone. Freeda hesitated and then said simply: "I wish you would join the church, Ned. Mother would be glad. She said in her last letter to me that it never seemed right that she and I should belong and you not be a member."

"I shall never belong to a church unless I can be better than most church members I know," said Edward, unconsciously letting Freeda into the secret of his self righteousness.

"Do you mean mother and me?" asked Freeda, with a smile. At the same time she could not help feeling that it was useless to argue with him.

"Mother and you are exceptions. I don't believe in making professions and not living up to them."

This time it was Freeda who was silent as Edward turned to go back to his room. As he moved away she asked him something about the debate.

"I'm working hard at it. So is Willis, on the other side. But I'm going to do my best to beat him." He paused and then added, "I had a letter from Willis tonight that I think I can use to good effect."

"How is he?" Freeda asked simply as any one might inquire after any chance acquaintance.

"He says he's all right. His mother says he's drinking again," Edward added, and then, without being able to give any reason for it, he said, "Willis wished to be remembered to you."

There was just a moment's silence, then Freeda called out to Edward, who had started on again, "When you write to him, give him my best wishes, and tell him I hope he will let the drink alone."

"I've already written him," replied Edward as he walked along, and he was uncertain whether Freeda heard him or not.

When he went up into his room, it was quite late, but he sat down and worked at his debate until midnight. He went over every sentence with painstaking slowness and care. When he had added that part of Willis' letter which described the death of the Filipino mother and her baby, he could not help feeling that he had a fitting climax to the argument. For a piece of work done by a young college man it was really good. His training on the paper was proving of great value to him, and he was profiting by it to do creditable work as a writer.

He had a feeling of exultation as he laid his manuscript down and got up to walk back and forth, as his custom was, to work off the mental excitement before he went to bed. He felt more and more confident that he could beat Willis, even if Willis did have the popular side of the question.

"If the judges are not prejudiced by their partisan feelings, I think I shall win," he said several times as he continued his short pacing of the room. His mind was full of the subject matter of the debate, and he was very wide awake.

And still as he continued his walk other subjects obtruded on his thoughts.

His mind began to call up again Professor Clark's unexpected call and the probable motives that led to it. Then he went over again the incidents of the meeting. He could see the evangelist, with his strong, earnest, sensible face, pleading with the students for a reasonable acceptance of Christian life on its own merits regardless of other people's interpretation of it either on doctrine or in daily practice. Then the picture of the president rose very distinct, his noble, frank plea seconding the evangelist's, and then Wheaton and Jaynes and several others giving testimony and his own critical attitude toward it all. The talk over to the hall with Freeda brought up the reference to Willis and raised in his mind the disagreeable question of Freeda's possible interest in him, although the darkness concealed Freeda's face when she spoke, and he had never detected anything but ordinary interest on her part for his chum.

Then at last he came back again to the debate, and that was his last thought before he went to sleep. The contest was called for two weeks from Friday night of that week, and his last waking thought was a vivid picture of the appearance of the big chapel room on the night of the annual debate. It was an indication of the way he had put from him the religious question that not even the remarkable fact of the president's and professor's appeal had any real place in his mind by the side of the approaching debate, which now absorbed him with an intensity that even he himself did not realize. How much depended on the result he did not know. It is not easy to tell either ourselves or others the meaning of all the experiences that become not only a part of our interest in life, but also the determining factors in our choice of those habits which make the real character what it finally becomes.

There were two Sundays between this evening when Willis' letter and Professor Clark's visit had been events for Edward and the night of the great debate. And when the first one came Edward was tempted to do a thing he had so far not done in his college course.

He was putting a vast amount of time and of thought into his debate. The work he was doing in addition to his paper route had increased until now every spare moment of the day seemed to be filled with something, and he thought his regular studies began to suffer. He was very ambitious for classroom honors and had so far prided himself on first rate work.

One day he failed in a recitation in a rather humiliating fashion. Next day he repeated the experience with Professor Clark, and to his chagrin Wheaton happened to know just the thing Edward had missed.

(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms; music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✂ ✂ THREE COURSES. ✂ ✂

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANY MEN OF MANY MINDS.

(Continued from page 4.)

of the question went for nothing. I was led as a lamb to the slaughter.

It is not, however, my object in this communication to vindicate myself; but to show how the question is viewed by different eyes. The following was the resolution by the Holston Conference of 1898:

"Resolved, That the mechanical make-up of the Midland Methodist is excellent; that we recognize in the editor a man of unusual ability, and we believe in the freedom of the press, and expect our editor to express his views on all current events; but the editorial management of the Midland Methodist has not been satisfactory. We do not concur in the commendation of its editorial management by the joint committee, nor do we believe that its editorials are calculated to conserve the peace and harmony of the Church."

The commendation of the joint committee of publication referred to was in the following language (I take only a small part of it):

"The editorial management of the paper has been conducted on a high plane of Christian courtesy, free from what has been designated personal journalism, but none the less manly and outspoken on the living issues of the day. * * * We commend the editor for his wisdom and tact, as well as for his great ability, in guiding the paper through these stormy times."

It is due to myself here to say that, although I got in late, I soon caught on to the question before the house; and while a brother was on the floor advocating the resolution, I interrupted him by demanding that he specify a single word or act of mine as editor justifying such a resolution of censure, and he declined to do it. Indeed, he could not do it. No one has ever done it yet, or ever will do it, and tell the truth. No; I had run against a machine, and, of course, got hurt. A victim was demanded, and I was chosen as the victim; but before my immolation, I was beautifully garlanded with epithets of eulogy.

A public censure is a punishment. Here we had punishment inflicted without the form of trial, and without giving the accused an opportunity to defend himself, as there was no specific allegation. Admitting for the sake of argument the regularity of a censure by simple resolution, the resolution should have specified the offence or offences that had been committed, thus giving the accused an opportunity to deny and present rebutting statements and testimony. But there was none of that. The paper published by the talented and able editor (sic) was not calculated to promote the peace and harmony of the Church! That was all he was permitted to know about it. He did not know what to repent of, what to confess, and on what points to promise amendment. Specific charges would have divided the opposition. Here was platitudinous plank broad enough for every disgruntled man to stand on, every man who had debated with the defendant, or collided with him in any way; every man who believed in three orders, every man who favored the special transfer system, every man who wanted to bridle local preacher evangelists, every advocate of prerogative, every man who was dissatisfied with the result of the episcopal election in Baltimore, every man who favored Stahlman's triumphant methods, every man about whom there had been a scandal and who dreaded the defendant as a notorious prosecutor, together with all honest men who honestly believed the spirit of the paper wrong—all these could be accommodated on this wide, indefinite platform.

The Tennessee Conference, which met shortly after the session of the Holston Conference, in a resolution said:

"We further approve the editorial management of Rev. R. N. Price, and we do fully endorse the commendatory language used in reference to him by the joint commission in their report to the Holston and Tennessee Conferences."

A short time after the adjournment of Holston Conference the following editorial remarks appeared in the Richmond Christian Advocate under the head of "Ruction," by which the editor probably meant belching, though the word ruction would have better corresponded to the dictionary. The editor did not say who belched—the Conference or Editor Price, or the Richmond editor himself. The remarks were as follows:

"The Midland Methodist is the organ of the Tennessee and Holston Conferences. It is edited by Rev. R. N. Price, who for years has conducted the Holston Methodist. We were pained to notice a certain acerbity in discussing the claim. And with regret we saw, or thought so, severity towards men who have given unspotted careers to the Church. The upshot is that Editor Price, honored often by his brethren, has had a backset by his Conference. He has located, and resigned the editorship of the Midland Methodist. The issue seems to have been made as to the unbrotherly spirit of the Midland Methodist. It is hardly worth while to say that Brother Price did not attack by name ministers of years' distinction and service with ugly epithets. He is by instinct far lifted above this vocabulary. There is, as preachers say, a lesson in this event. The Methodist Church intends to protect ministers against whom no just word of reproach can be uttered. It is as little as any preacher can ask of his brethren. We know it demanded a supreme courage of conscience to turn down such an one as R. N. Price; but the Holston seems to have known no man after the flesh when they were in this high mood. The Church has no more precious possession than the good name of its ministers."

Another paragraph in the Richmond Advocate at or about the same time said:

"At the Holston Conference a resolution censuring Editor Price, of the Midland Methodist, for his attitude on the Publishing House question, was adopted by a vote of 61 against 57. Dr. Price immediately gave notice of his intention to resign the editorship, and also asked for a location, which was granted. We quote from the Midland Methodist."

It is due to myself to say that I myself wrote the editorial paragraph in the Midland Methodist in relation to my resignation, which Dr. Lafferty quoted. I wished the world to know the action taken by my Conference "to protect ministers against whom no just word of reproach can be uttered," and to know the exact occasion of this action. I also wished the matter to go to record that my posterity might know where I stood on the issue, that I went down in an honest fight against wrong, and without a blot on my escutcheon.

The following is an editorial in the St. Louis Christian Advocate of March 26th of the present year.

"WHAT WILL OUR BISHOPS DO?"

"This is a question many of our readers are asking. They cannot afford to do otherwise than right. One of them says: 'There is one thing to decide. Will the Church sanction the misstatements and concealments of the agents and the confessed falsehoods of the attorney, and thus make them her own misstatements, concealments and falsehoods? Or will she repudiate the misstatements, concealments and falsehoods? This is the one question for the Church to decide. There is no evasion. And I confidently predict she will seek none. Such repudiation, to my mind, implies the return of the money. This done, the Church will come forth as the Hebrew brothers from the furnace. Less than this means for her a trailing banner for all future.'"

"In a letter to the United States Senate of August 28, 1898, our entire Board of Bishops said: 'If the Senate by affirmative action declares that the passage of the bill was due to such misleading statements, we will take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the government.'"

"The Senate in its action of January 9, 1899, in answer to the above letter, did reaffirm its former declaration of having been deceived by the concealments and misstatements of the representatives of our Church. And now, as will be seen in letters from Senators Hoar and Vest, on page five of this Advocate, the Senators are declaring individually and separately what the Senate has already declared collectively."

"By the time our Bishops issue their pastoral or quadrennial letter they will doubtless see what ought to be done. To simply make 'scapegoats' of our agents and hold on to the money, as some people suggest, will not do. If we hold on to, and stand by the stuff, justice demands that we stand by the agents who secured it for us. Our Bishops have had four years to study the question, and we trust will make wise recommendations."

Dr. Hoss, in the Nashville Christian Advocate of March 24th, says:

"In one way or another it will be necessary to effect a final settlement of the Publishing House war claim, which has agitated the Church with such unwholesome effect during the past quadrennium. That this will be done in a candid spirit, with a due reference to all the facts, and without regard to mere partisan clamor, is approximately certain. A good deal of wild talk that has filled the newspapers will be thoroughly threshed out. Honest men will look one another in the face, and weigh one another's words with serious care. If anything has been hidden, it will be revealed. There may be some warmth of discussion. Under the circumstances, we could scarcely look for anything else. But the body and bulk of the delegates are thorough Christians, animated by the sincere desire to know the truth and follow it. Of personal animosity or ill will they have not a trace. Whatever they say or do will be said and done in the fear of God and in the interest of His kingdom. We believe that after full and mature deliberation they will reach conclusions satisfactory to the whole Church."

"The important thing to be urged in advance is that all concerned should feel it to be their duty to keep 'the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.' This is not intended to suggest that anybody should be gagged or restrained of his liberty of speech. Whoever wishes to talk should be allowed to do so to his heart's content, even if he talks foolishness. Up to the point at which liberty becomes license, we are heartily in favor of lifting the flood-gates of utterance, though we know perfectly well that some things will be spoken which will do harm and damage. To bottle up a conceited man is a dangerous experiment. He may ferment and explode."

Your readers are doubtless familiar with the open letter of Rev. John C. Shackleford to Major Stahlman, exhorting him to restore to the Church the $100,800 paid him as a fee, deducting a reasonable fee. The attention of senators has been called to this open letter, and Senators Hoar (Rep.) and Vest (Dem.) have written to Brother Shackleford on the question. The letters are as follows:

Washington, D. C., Mar. 3, 1902.

"My Dear Sir,—It seems clear to me that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should send the money back—the whole of it. It was obtained by what is admitted to be a false representation, made by the authority of their agents and their representatives and senators, and made, of course, in absolute sincerity, by their senators and representatives on the floor of the Senate, and probably also in the House of Representatives. The member from Tennessee, who was himself grossly deceived in the matter, sat by me when I advocated the passage of the claim, and assured me that no part of the claim belonged to any lobbyist or claim agent. He had good reason and right to make this assurance, for it was made on the authority of a telegram from the Church authorities who had been inquired of."

"When the money is sent back the claim of the Church will stand as it did before the act was passed. In my opinion, it is unaffected by what has happened. But that should make no difference in the action of the Church. It is required by their own honor that they pay it back, even if they thought it would never be allowed again."

"I am faithfully yours,

"GEORGE F. HOAR."

Washington, D. C.

"My Dear Mr. Shackleford,—I sent you on yesterday all papers here in regard to the Publishing Company matter. I also took occasion to talk with the Southern senators, and all of them agreed that the conduct of the agents of the company had been shameful. Some of them think the money should be returned to the government, while two or three say the Conference should pass a resolution repudiating the action of Barbee and Smith. I believe myself that the money should be paid back. The Church cannot afford to retain money obtained by deception and fraud, even though the debt be a just one. Senators Hoar and Hale say they will insist upon repayment, and I have no doubt one of them will offer a resolution to that effect unless the Conference orders repayment.

"Your friend, G. G. VEST."

LETTER TO PASTORS.

Dear Brethren,—The programme for our Children's Day service is now ready for delivery.

Please get a sufficient supply and make the occasion as pleasant and valuable as possible.

The collection taken on that day is very important. No fund of similar amount is doing more good.

If you will call especial attention to it beforehand, the young people will no doubt make a liberal contribution.

I am glad to announce that the net gain in Sunday school scholars the past year was 30,578.

The Children's Day can be made the occasion for enlisting the interest of many people who are not availing themselves of the advantages which our Sunday schools offer.

Hoping that you may make the most of the day, I am,

Truly and cordially yours,

JAMES ATKINS, S. S. Editor.
Nashville, Tenn.

FROM ONANCOCK, VA.

A protracted meeting has been held in this station, beginning on the 9th of March, and ending on the 29th. From the 9th to the 19th the services were conducted by the pastor, the Baptist and Presbyterian preachers giving one sermon each. On the 19th Rev. Walter Holcombe, of Montreat, N. C., reached the town, and wrought in the interest of immortal souls up to and including the 30th. Up to this date twenty persons have been received into Church fellowship (about thirty professions). Brother Holcombe goes hence to Hagerstown, Md. He is a workman true and faithful, we feel assured. The number of conversions have exceeded the number who joined our Church.

F. M. EDWARDS.

HIGH-STREET M. E. CHURCH REVIVAL.

The revival which has been in progress at High-Street M. E. church for nearly three weeks, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Geo. E. Booker, was brought to a close last Wednesday night with an interesting love feast.

All our city pastors, except Bro. Lipscomb (who had a revival at his church), rendered valuable assistance during the meeting, which was highly appreciated.

The congregations were large and attentive. In order to accommodate the Sunday night service it was necessary to place six dozen chairs in the auditorium. There were fifty-eight conversions and reclamations during the revival, and two last night, making ninety during this Conference year.

Forty-six have joined our church, and others will join next Sunday.

One of the most interesting and impressive services was on Sunday morning a week before the revival began. After the pastor had preached on "The Joy in Heaven Over Sinners Repenting," he extended a most earnest invitation, stating that he felt the presence of the Holy Spirit, and was sure that many in the congregation were convicted and by all means should give their hearts to the Lord that very morning. Eighteen—nearly all adults—came to the altar, and before the services closed were happily converted. Bro. Booker is steadily growing in popularity with the church and congregation.

A MEMBER.

PETERSBURG LETTER.

Mr. Editor,—Your recent editorial, "My Mother," touched a responsive chord in my own heart. When death takes from us the best of earthly friends she is missed, and when the precious form lies still and cold memory brings vividly back her tender ministrations. Cowper's exquisite lines addressed to the picture of his deceased mother showed him in an enviable light. In the fire of your afflictions the loving Master will be with you, and your brethren sympathize with you. The value and preciousness of religion are seen in such dark hours, and our trusted Guide says: "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." To meet loved ones in the beautiful land is a thought inexpressibly sweet and precious, and there, amidst the supernatural glories, no partings, no tears, no sickness, no pain forever! With the glorious prospect that faith in Jesus reveals to us, we can afford in this world to bear the "light afflictions."

Last Sabbath evening a walk brought me to Blandford Cemetery, where so many are sleeping and the balmy weather was favorable for many persons to visit the beautiful spot. Tender hands laid flowers on the graves, and loving eyes viewed again the piece of God's acre "that holds the loved one." The lessons of Easter Sabbath amidst such surroundings were especially impressive. The ties between the dead and the living are not forever sundered so long as Easter Sabbaths dawn.

At this writing a protracted service is in progress at Market Street church, and the pastor, Rev. S. C. Hatcher, is hopeful of gracious results. A similar service will be commenced soon at Blandford. You have been giving your readers the reports furnished our preachers' meeting, and I need not enlarge here.

Rev. L. W. Guyer, the business manager of the enterprise, is working very earnestly to make a success of Dr. J. M. Buckley's lecture the 15th in this city. This is an opportunity that our Methodist people don't often have, and I hope a large audience will greet the Doctor. Our local orphanage here will get the surplus over the expenses of the lecture.

Rev. H. M. Hope, associate editor and business manager of the Advocate, who has been quite sick at his home here, is now convalescent. The pressure of business and the uniformly good health our genial brother has had made it trying to him to be numbered with the "shut ins" for so long a time, but the strongest sometimes must fall victims of sickness.

A sad service, performed by the writer this evening in the church and at the grave, emphasized afresh the Saviour's words, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

An explosion at the fire-works factory, near our city, in Chesterfield county, without warning to the unfortunate victim, deprived him of life. Yesterday morning the fearful accident occurred. Terribly lacerated, the poor fellow lived a few hours after the explosion, and then died. It was an affecting scene I saw at the home of the unfortunate man, and the grief of the family was touching to behold. Not to be always ready for death is exceedingly unwise.

In the April number the Review of Reviews, under the head of "Leading Articles for the Month," gives a very suggestive article on temperance legislation in Russia. In 1895 an imperial ukase passed into a law in that country, which has had the effect on the whole to make the Russians far more sober. Russia is following the example of Sweden and Norway, where the Gothenburg system started in 1865, has worked in producing largely sobriety among the people. Among the Russians the terribly intoxicating beverage known as kwass, used to be freely imbibed by the peasants, the backbone of that country, but the evil has been greatly lessened since temperance legislation has been resorted to. If temperance legislation is found to be a good thing in Russia, Sweden and Norway, it will be a good thing in the United States. Let everybody say Amen.

E. P. P.

Petersburg, Va., April 4, 1902.

FROM BROTHER HOBDAV.

I read with interest your article in the issue of February 20th, and construing it to be a call for expression of opinion from our membership on the war claim question, herewith send mine. Pay back every cent. Let not the least suspicion rest upon our beloved Church. Condemn the agents, who helped on the deception, not only removing them from office, but putting them out of work. Give us an entirely new Book Committee. Cut down the salaries of the officials. Doesn't it seem strange that while we cannot pay anything to our poor superannuates, yet salaries can be increased for some of the officials? Oh, for a J. B. McFerrin to put in charge now!

While there is no law in our Discipline authorizing our Bishops to make transfers, try and have one enacted forbidding them to make one, except by consent of the Conference to which the transfer is made. It used to be that transfers were made for the good of the Church. Now, if rumors be true, they are made for the good of the transfer. Let some preacher who has friends wealthy or in positions of influence pursue a course that brings him into disrepute in his own Conference, and he is at once transferred to some other. Again, some seek transfers for gain. The average salary in Virginia is greater, I am told, than elsewhere, and the men like to come to us. Of late I have heard the rumor that some who have come to us because they were not assigned to charges paying large salaries have complained that they are not appreciated. Stop all this foolishness by giving the Conferences the right to say whether or not they will receive them.

Take away from the Bishops the right to arrange the districts, unless they agree to study geography, common sense and religion. Think of Smithfield and Hampton, 85 and 105 miles, respectively, from Richmond, and 17 and 30 from Portsmouth, being on the Richmond district. Think of Gloucester and Gloucester Point charges, 55 and 65 miles from Richmond by public travel, being on the Rappahannock district, and to meet the officials our representatives have to travel very nearly 100 miles by buggy across the country. Any knowledge of geography, common sense, or religion (Luke 6: 31) in an arrangement like that?

Give the Conferences the right to name the elders. I have heard of late that such appointments are sometimes made through the influence of parties not connected, except incidentally, with our bodies. We who know the men ought to be the better judges. And forbid that any elder should serve more than two terms. One would be better.

Enact a law forbidding the constant addition of collections. Next Conference I expect that an effort will be made to have Orphanage added. Since our last session we have Orphanage month appointed. This is the extreme of "the thin edge of the wedge." I would rejoice to see such an institution if we would endow it, but I do not believe that we should add to the burdens of our preachers, many, if not most of whom do not average more than $400 per year, while the officers of our various institutions have salaries going far beyond the thousand mark. I have had three calls for extra work in the line of collections since Conference. If we keep on adding such we will be shkel-scrappers instead of soul-savers. My people have all they can bear. Assessed for pastor, $600; assessed by district board, $325. This is a shame. At this rate in a few more years the pastor's claim will be one-third of the whole.

Now, as regards our own actions. Let us stop taking collections for the widows of our deceased preachers who would not join the Brotherhood. By doing as we did last Conference we will encourage our young men not to join. Had I have been worth millions I would not have contributed one cent. Not that I am unwilling to aid a brother or his family in need, but that principle forbids. When a brother who receives a good salary for years refuses to aid the families of his less fortunate brethren, it looks to me like a travesty upon simple justice for his friends to come before our body and ask help for his family. For one, I will not take part in it. Let every man "fete his own end of the log."

C. E. HODAY.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 20.

Text of the Lesson. Acts x, 34-48.
Memory Verses. 42-44—Golden Text.
Acts x, 34—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

34, 35. Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons.

As in Gen. I and II and Rev. xxi and xxii so throughout this whole Bible the story is that of God working out His eternal purpose (Eph. iii, 11) notwithstanding the opposition of the devil and of sinful men controlled by the devil. The special story of the Acts is that of the beginning of the gathering out from the gentiles a people for His name (xv, 14), and this work began in the home of Cornelius under Peter, as recorded in our lesson. Although the Lord had commanded before His ascension that the gospel be preached to every creature and unto the uttermost part of the earth (Mark xvi, 15; Acts i, 8), the preaching had up to this time been to the Jews only (xi, 19), and Peter had to receive a special vision to teach him that God was no respecter of persons.

36-38. Preaching peace by Jesus Christ.

These glad tidings were for Israel first (Luke xxiv, 47; Acts i, 8), but in order that Israel might reach out to the gentiles, which they were slow to do. God made the sinless one to be sin for us that we might in Him be made righteous before God (II Cor. v, 21), and apart from Him there is no righteousness, no salvation, however devout or prayerful a man may be. Even Nicodemus had to be born from above in order to enter the kingdom of God, and Peter had to bring to Cornelius the message by which he and his house might be saved (xi, 14), for there is no salvation apart from the reception of Christ and faith in His atoning blood (Acts iv, 12; Lev. xvii, 11).

39. We are witnesses.

A witness does not need to get up his little speech or make up anything. He simply tells truthfully what he knows, and the redeemed of the Lord are continually on the witness stand proclaiming something concerning Jesus Christ. If all the redeemed were true witnesses, what a glorious testimony would be ever going forth concerning Him who is altogether lovely!

40-42. He commanded us to preach unto the people and to testify that it is He which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

In all their preaching these witnesses fail not to declare that although the Jews killed Jesus God raised Him from the dead and showed Him openly to chosen witnesses, and now Peter declares, as Paul afterward does (xvii, 31), that He is the God appointed Judge of all mankind.

43. To Him give all the prophets witness.

On the way to Emmaus as He talked with those two that resurrection day He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself and taught that all things concerning Him in the law, the prophets and the psalms must be fulfilled (Luke xxiv, 27, 44). The Spirit of Christ was in the prophets, and the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy (I Pet. i, 10, 11; Rev. xix, 10), and the uniform testimony of all in whom the Spirit speaks is that the first great essential is the forgiveness of sins, and this can be had only in Christ by His precious blood.

44. While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

The message was not Peter's message, but the Lord's own message through Peter, and Cornelius so recognized it, for he had said to Peter, "We are all here present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God" (verse 33). As the word was spoken the Spirit wrought, their opened hearts received Him of whom Peter in the power of the Spirit spake, and the Spirit Himself came in power upon them at the same time.

45, 46. They heard them speak with tongues and magnify God.

It was as at Pentecost (chapter ii, 4), except that there was no waiting, for the Spirit having come as our Lord promised there is no longer any need to wait, but where the heart is open and the Lord truly received there may be also the filling of the Spirit. While there is no need to wait any definite time to be filled with the Spirit, there may be a need to wait because of the unreadiness of the believer to receive. There came with Peter six Jewish brethren from Joppa (Acts xi, 12), who, although believers, were astonished when they saw the Holy Spirit given to these gentiles. It is to this day difficult for some believers to think that any people can be blessed outside of their so called churches, but they need to learn that God is no more a respecter of denominations than of persons.

47, 48. He commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord.

Here is something helpful for those who make baptism with water essential to the new birth. For behold in this company in Cornelius' house some saved and Spirit filled people who have not yet been baptized with water and are thus baptized after they have been saved and have received the gift of the Holy Ghost. On the other hand, we have in Acts xix, 1-6, some disciples who, having been baptized, had not heard anything about the Holy Spirit, so they were baptized again and at the hands of Paul received the gift of the Holy Ghost and spake with tongues and prophesied. I mention this to show that we must make essential to salvation only that which God makes essential—viz, receiving Christ (John i, 12; I John v, 11, 12).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 20, "Missionary Activity;" "The First Christian Century and the Twentieth"—Text, Acts ii, 41-47; v, 14; xxvi, 11; Heb. xi, 36-38; Rom. xiii, 14—Read Matt. iv.

"Jesus went about teaching, preaching, healing."

Both in words and deeds He revealed to us the nature of God and His will concerning us. He taught us what to do and how to do it by doing Himself the things which men ought to do.

The disciples followed in His path. In doctrine, fellowship and practices of worship the early church in Jerusalem has been a model for all after times. They continued steadfast with the apostles in spite of poverty and persecution, and multitudes were added to them continually.

No clearer example of missionary activity is presented by any time than this first century shows in Paul. He appeals first to his own people, the Jews, and when they reject Him turns to the gentiles, who gladly hear. He was not of the twelve apostles who at first kept very close to Jerusalem. His mission was to the far ends of the world.

In Antioch at first—populous, wealthy, luxurious, wicked Antioch—he taught and preached and worked at his trade. Then through Cyprus, Asia Minor, Macedonia, Greece, Rome and perhaps even in Spain he carried the gospel where it had never been before preached—dauntless amid perils, joyous under persecution and privation, victorious in martyrdom, glorified in memory to all ages.

What does this century show to compare with the story of the first? The nineteenth century exhibited greater gains for Christ than all the preceding ones put together, in some respects. We enter upon the new era with highest hopes and fairest prospects.

Never before was there more earnest study of the word of God. More intelligent, diligent and continuous searching has never been seen. Pickaxe and spade are uncovering treasures of the far east buried for ages which give new light upon the Bible. The past year has brought fresh confirmation and illumination of the record. The prospect is that in the near future more will be available in this line of things than the world has possessed since the gospels were written.

More men and women are today teaching, preaching and healing in the name of Christ than ever before. Hundreds are waiting for the commission of the church to go. The young people from our colleges and other schools are ready in greater numbers than have before been seen. Consecrated talent and training are grandly available.

Doors of the nations are open as they never before have been. A letter just received from Nankin, China, says: "We are carrying on our work here the same as before the Boxer trouble and with constantly increasing favor with all classes of people. Last year's uprising was markedly educational in its effects upon the Chinese people. It was an awful tuition fee to pay, but the aggregate of influence toward improvement and civilization has justified the expenditure so far as it could be justified." The nations are open to the gospel.

Never before were such vast sums of money poured into the Lord's treasury for the salvation of men as are at the present time given.

The Kingdom of Power.

Language, we are told, is the channel through which flow to our fellow men and the world our thoughts. But thoughts, however grand and noble, generous and great, far-reaching and inspiring, will not of themselves perform the required things of life. Mankind must not merely think and impart thought, knowledge, but they must accompany their thoughts with a quickening zeal and a characteristic energy. Words may inspire, but deeds will lead and drive men to action. Words may foster a spirit of noble thinking, but actions, guided by discretion, based on achieving thought, permeated by the feeling of highest good and controlled by unselfish aims, will move the world of humanity.—Western Methodist.

Punishment For Disobedience.

God will brook no rival, no idol in the heart and life. He is the Lord, our God, and we must have no other, for to do so is the greatest insult to Him and denies His very deity. And any disobedience to any of His commandments opens the door to the great sins of idolatry and atheism. The spirit of disobedience is the spirit of Satan and of all sin. Disobedience must end in and be punished with death. Obedience to God involves the divine favor and all good and blessing and fullness of life. Obey and live is the sum of the commandments of God.—Evangelist.

Taking Him With Us.

It is our duty as well as our pleasure, being brothers in Christ, to take Him with us everywhere—on the farm, in the store, in the office, at the home or wherever we may be—make Him our companion, His words our watchword and His life a straight line, which, with God's help, we must parallel as near as possible and fulfill the mission that He has designed for us.—Universalist.

God Will Use It.

No good deed, no genuine sacrifice, is ever wasted. If there be good in it, God will use it for His own holy purposes, and whatever of ignorance or weakness or mistake was mingled with it will drop away as the withered sepals drop away when the full flower has blown.—Frederic W. Farrar.

DRINK IN GERMANY.

INCREASE IN ALCOHOLISM CAUSES GREAT ALARM THERE.

Stated That Young and Old Alike Are Now Turning to Rum—Startling Results of an Examination in a Boys' School.

The Society For the Supervision of Alcoholism has lately held a meeting at Breslau at which some disquieting statements were made by the speakers on the subject of the consumption of alcohol in German, says the Berlin correspondent of the London News. The question affects all classes, from the lowest to the highest. The poor drink gin and brandy, and those above them are no less addicted to the drink habit in other forms. With the students drinking has gradually become a regular sport, and the attitude among them toward it is fairly summed up in the song that hails the man who drinks most as king. This being so, one cannot help feeling that a step in the right direction is being made when the professors of the University of Breslau issue an appeal to the students to abstain from too much drink, which they declare brings ruin to body and soul. At the meeting itself the chairman of the Silesian society in the course of a long speech said:

"The time will come when the consumption of alcohol will be regarded as something uncivilized. The fight against it is a truly Christian work. The German empire spends £150,000,000 a year on drink and only £600,000,000 on food. The consumption per head of the population is about ten quarts of pure alcohol, or thirty quarts of gin, per year, or say five glasses of gin a day for every German, man, woman or child. How much, then, falls to the man who drinks his full quantity?"

"How little the people care about the dangers of alcohol is seen by the state of things in upper Silesia. Among the working classes there when a child cries a sponge soaked with gin is stuck into its mouth. In this way the population are accustomed to drink from infancy. The suppression of alcohol would mean the solution of the social question and deal a heavy blow to tuberculosis."

The speaker went on to remark that the campaign against drink was unsuccessful because in Germany, as in England indeed, people are financially interested in it. The state itself derived tremendous revenues from met-ated spirit and beer. Germany, moreover, had introduced alcohol into her colonies. Was it not dreadful that one-third of her imports into Togoland and one-seventh of those into German East Africa consisted of alcohol drink?

The military authorities had for a long time been endeavoring to put a stop to drinking, the speaker added.
 The late Emperor William as long ago as 1862 gave orders that the soldiers were to have coffee supplied to them instead of brandy, and on recruits being enrolled and reservists dismissed the sale of drink at the stations was strictly prohibited. Generals Count von Haseler and Von Lindequist had strictly prohibited the sale of brandy in all the canteens in Lorraine and Hesse-Nassau. Moltke was a strict teetotaler and was one of the first members of the society. In the thirty soldiers' homes and in the similar institutions for sailors no alcoholic drinks were served. If officers gave their men a good example, drunkenness would disappear from the German army. At the recent maneuvers large quantities of tea were served to the troops, and the consumption of aerated waters was increasing in both army and navy, being manufactured on board his majesty's ships. On the Vineta in one year 74,- 000 bottles of such water had been made.

Great amusement was caused when the speaker quoted the reply of the war department of Bavaria to a question addressed to it on the subject of measures taken to remedy the drink evil among the Bavarian troops. Beer is drunk by the gallon in Bavaria, but the war office was able to reply that in the Bavarian army no abuse of alcohol existed, and therefore no measures were necessary such as those in question.

Out of 591 scholars examined in a large school in Leipsic only 134 were innocent of the taste of alcohol. Of 42, whose ages averaged seven years, 14 confessed to having been drunk, 24 to habitually tasting brandy and 17 to daily drinking.

No less than 12,000 persons are annually treated for delirium tremens, and one-fourth of the entire number of cases of lunacy in Germany are directly traceable to alcoholic liquor.

Alcohol In the Human System.

The Medical Record is of the opinion that while recent experiments have shown that alcohol is easily and abundantly oxidizable in the human body this fact does not entitle it to rank as a food, and still less can this supposition be entertained if it at the same time causes decomposition and destruction of living protoplasm. That alcohol does this cannot be doubted in our present knowledge of metabolic processes, and, this granted, it may be contended that a substance capable of destroying body tissue cannot at the same time serve to build up and replace the parts destroyed.

What Canadians Are Drinking.

The drink habits of Canadians are gradually changing, resulting in an increased consumption of beer and a decreased drinking of wine and liquors.
 During the past fiscal year Canadians consumed 4,737 gallons of beer per head as against 2,290 gallons in 1869.
 Since confederation the per capita consumption of beer has therefore more than doubled. This has been accompanied by a considerable decrease in the drinking of liquor.

When a soul prays, there are no great things of which it is not capable.

If a tree be fixing itself in the earth and spreading out its roots, it is certainly growing, although it be nothing taller than formerly. So, albeit a Christian may want the sweet consolation and flashes of affection which sometimes he has had, yet if he be growing in humility, self-denial and a sense of needy dependence on Jesus Christ, he is a growing Christian.—
 Thomas Boston.

On Jellies
 preserves and pickles, spread
 a thin coating of
PURE REFINED
 PARAFFINE
 Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package.
 Sold everywhere.
STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY
 THROUGH THE STATES OF
 MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
 WEST VIRGINIA, and
 NORTH CAROLINA
Shenandoah Valley Route
 THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULED SLEEPERS
 LURAY
 GROTTOS
 NATURAL BRIDGE
 MOUNTAIN LAKE
 BRISTOL
 KNOXVILLE
 CHATTANOOGA
 LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
 BIRMINGHAM
 MEMPHIS
 NEW ORLEANS
 CHICAGO
AND THE N. & W. T. Line.
 Write for Rates, Maps, etc., to the Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptive, etc., to the Agent at W.B. BEVILL, ALLEN, CHICAGO, ILL.
 GENERAL PASS AGENT, DIVISION OF THE N. & W. T. RAILWAY, RICHMOND, VA.

FURNITURE
 IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN
 Blackstone to call at our nicely
FITTED-UP STORE
 where you will find everything kept in a
FIRST-CLASS,
 UP-TO-DATE
 FURNITURE STORE.
 We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.
C. L. CARTER.

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

makes the LARGEST INTEREST RATE, and has the LOWEST DEATH RATE of all old line companies; hence the LARGEST SURPLUS to divide among its policy-holders. It is needless to make any other comparison; that speaks for itself.

This Company was established in 1867, and now has assets of over $26,000,000, with a surplus of over $3,000,000.

IT WILL PAY YOU

to investigate the rates and advantages of this Company before insuring with any one. We can certainly give you the best on the market at a most reasonable rate.

Protect your loved ones to-day and yourself in old age by insuring now, when you can get better advantages than you ever can again.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
 BLACKSTONE, VA.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
 10-11 Chamber of Commerce, Richmond, Va.

N. B.—The editor of this paper had two policies in this Company, and was so well pleased that he recently took out another.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,
 HEADACHE,
 STIFF NECK,
 STIFF MUSCLES,
 STIFF JOINTS,
 STIFF KNEES,
 SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
 PAIN IN THE BACK,
 PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
 PAIN IN THE SIDE,
 CORNS AND BUNIONS,

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment
OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
 RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—SECOND ROUND.

Market Street, February 23d, morning.

Ettrick, February 23d, night.

Prince George, Mt. Sinai, March 1st, 2d, morning.

Blandford, March 2d, night.

Greensville, Forest chapel, March 8th, 9th, morning.

Sussex, Centenary, March 9th, evening; 10th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Smith's Grove, March 15th, 16th, morning.

West Street, March 16th, night.

Surry, Carsley's, March 22d, 23d, morning.

Wakefield, Waverly, March 23d, night; 24th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Zion, March 29th, 30th, morning.

South Hill, Pleasant Grove, March 30th, evening; 31st, morning.

West Lunenburg, Olive Branch, April 4th, morning (Friday).

Lunenburg, Providence, 5th, 6th, morning.

West Brunswick, Macedonia, April 6th, evening; 7th, morning.

Brunswick, Pleasant Grove, April 11th, morning (Friday).

South Brunswick, Bethany, April 12th, 13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Canaan, April 13th, evening; 14th, morning.

Nottoway, April 19th, 20th, morning.

Blackstone Station, April 20th, night; 21st, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Trinity, April 26th, 27th, morning.

Matoacca, April 27th, 28th, night.

Dinwiddie, Ocran, May 3d, 4th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—SECOND QUARTER.

South Pittsylvania, Providence, February 22d, 23d.

Prince Edward, Meherrin, March 1st, 2d.

Charlotte, Drake Branch, March 2d, 4th.

BOTH
FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times,

The Southern Farmer, and

American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Henry, Mt. Bethel, March 29th, 30th. Martinsville, March 30th, 7:30 P. M. Danville Circuit, Sutherlin, April 2d, 11 A. M.

West Franklin, Callaway, April 5th, 6th.

Rocky Mount, April 9th, 7:30 P. M. Franklin Circuit, St. Paul, April 10th, 11 A. M.

Pittsylvania, Anderson's, April 12th, 13th.

Washington Street, April 16th, 7:30 P. M.

Patrick, New Hope, April 19th, 20th. South of Dan, Harmony, April 23d, 11 A. M.

Hyco, Cherry Hill, April 24th, 11 A. M.

East Franklin, Liberty, April 26th, 27th.

Smith's River, Elamsville, April 26th, 27th.

Ridgeway, Ridgeway, May 3d, 4th. Main Street, May, 4th, 11 A. M.

Calvary, May 4th, 7:30 P. M. Meadows of Dan, May 10th, 11th.

J. C. REED, P. E.

THE THRUST OF A LANCE is scarcely more agonizing than the recurrent pains in the abdomen which follow the eating of improper food or too free indulgence in ice water. The immediate cause of cramps and colic is often the distention of the bowels by gas. Quick relief follows the use of Perry Davis' Painkiller. Careful housekeepers give it the place of honor in the family medicine chest.

BLACKSTONE NOTES.

Rev. E. T. Dadmun will assist the principal of the Institute in a series of meetings in the Institute next week. Bro. Dadmun has been at the Institute before, and is very helpful to the students in such meetings.

Dr. J. M. Buckley is to deliver two lectures at the Institute chapel on Wednesday and Thursday, April 16th and 17th. Dr. Buckley is in such demand throughout world-wide Methodism that it was only by the most persistent correspondence that he was finally secured. The arrangement was broadened so as to include Petersburg on the way, and Petersburg owes Blackstone a debt in this matter which we doubt not she will some time gladly repay.

The annual meeting of the Virginia Conference Home Mission Society will be held at Blackstone on April 24th and 25th, immediately after the adjournment of the General Board in Richmond. The society will be entertained by the joint efforts of the societies in the town and at the Institute. It is hoped that there will be a full attendance, and that Miss Belle Bennett and some other officers of the General Board will be present.

The most important item of news so far as the Blackstone charge is concerned is the determination of the congregation to build a new church. The present building has only one thing to commend it, and that is accommodation for a large crowd, it being one of the largest country churches in the State. It was improperly constructed, however, and after several attempts to repair it, it was seen to be impossible, and it was decided to build a new church. A committee was appointed to look into the matter and to bring in a report to a church conference. This was done, and two reports were brought in, both recommending the building of a new church, but the majority report recommended the building of the church on the other side of the railroad from where it is located at present, and the minority report recommended that it be built on the present location, or near by. The matter was discussed in open church conference, the debate being participated in by both sides. The service lasted from 11:30 till 3:30, fully four hours. The roll was called, and the members present voted for or against removal. The next day a printed circular was sent to every member of the church who did not vote at that meeting, giving the majority and minority reports in full, and requesting a vote for or against removal. The final vote was in favor of removal to the south side of the railroad, the vote being 120 for removal to 110 against. It is very gratifying to report that the decision has been accepted by both sides, committees on plans and finances have been appointed, and it is hoped that a modern church, thoroughly adapted to the needs of the town and of the Institute will be built at a suitable and convenient place.

Bro. George F. Greene held an even balance during the discussion, and commended himself more favorably than ever to his people. He is doing excellent work, and the editor doubts whether he will ever have a finer opportunity to do abiding work than he has at Blackstone. When the new church is finished we want the District Conference to meet with us, and if the Annual Conference only met in summer time we could entertain that also.

Commencement will come a week later than usual this year, as the session began a week later. It will be held on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, June 8th, 9th, and 10th. Bro. J. Whitley, of Centenary church, Lynchburg, will preach the annual sermon, and Bro. E. H. Rawlings, of Monmouth, Portsmouth, will deliver the annual address. Neither of these brethren have ever been to the Institute, and we expect to like them, and will expect them to like us.

***

"What Women Like in Men," "What Men Like in Women," and "Husband and Wives," are the titles of a series of very interesting papers by Rafford Pike, the third of which appears in The Cosmopolitan for April. The same number of The Cosmopolitan treats of Prince Henry's visit, with a series of beautifully printed photographs, under the title of "A Clever Emperor and Confederation of Nations." F. Hopkins Smith, Israel Zangwill, Bret Hart and Maarten Maartens are among the other contributors to this number, which is unusually good in fiction.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Home Mission Society of the Virginia Conference will hold its twelfth annual session at Blackstone, Va., April 24-25, 1902.

KATE E. WALL,

Recording Secretary.

Delegates and visitors expecting to attend the meeting will please send names promptly to the chairman of the Committee on Entertainment, Miss Cornelia Adams, Blackstone, Va.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D. will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. J. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA VIA THE SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway offers special Colonists rates of $47.50 from Richmond to San Francisco and all other California points. Tickets sold daily until April 30, 1902. The Seaboard offers choice of routes going either via Atlanta and New Orleans or via Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville and Memphis.

For further information, apply to W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent. Z. P. Smith, District Passenger Agent, 1006 East Main street. Phone 406.

Religious News.

Rev. J. O. Babcock, pastor of the Fairmount Methodist church, closed on Sunday night a revival meeting which added seventy-five new members to the membership. The church was greatly strengthened.—Dispatch.

The committee appointed by the Methodist District Conference have located the district school at the old Fair Grounds about a half mile from Culpeper. The site is donated free of charge, and it is now thought that the necessary buildings for the school will soon be in course of erection.—Times.

At Memorial M. E. church three persons were admitted to membership Sunday morning. Rev. W. A. Christian, the pastor, preached perhaps one of the ablest sermons since his pastorate began at the church on the subject, "Risen With Christ." In the evening his subject was, "The Judgment Seat of Christ."

The revival services which have been in progress for the past two weeks came to a close at the evening services last night with very helpful results to the church.—Virginian-Pilot.

Rev. Joseph D. Langley, of this city, pastor of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, South, was married yesterday at the residence of the bride's brother, in Nashville, Tenn., to Miss Edith Thompson, one of that city's fair daughters. Mr. Langley met his bride while he was a student at the Vanderbilt University, and from the acquaintance thus begun the marriage is the result. The parsonage has been handsomely refurnished for its new occupant. Mr. and Mrs. Langley will arrive in this city in a few days.—Times.

The following speakers will appear before the Home Mission Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on April 18th, at Centenary church:

Rev. Dr. W. V. Tudor, the address of welcome, in behalf of the ministry

Mrs. W. J. Maybee, welcome address in behalf of Richmond homes and local societies.

Mrs. W. J. Young, the address in behalf of Virginia, who is the State president.

Bishop Granbery, the opening sermon.

Miss Belle Bennett, president of the society, will preside.

Easter Sunday was a great day at Epworth Methodist church. The eminent Dr. Tigert, of Nashville, preached at both services to overflowing congregations. The Easter offering for the church debt amounted to $42,000, and with others to hear from and some little later work, the great debt is practically extinguished. It was a great day and a great offering.

This large sum was contributed by 390 persons, and was for the purpose of paying the church debt, which amounts to $55,000. This is considered one of the most notable events in the history of the church and was brought about largely through the efforts of the assistant pastor, the Rev. B. H. Bennett, who has spent much time in the matter. Four and a half years are allowed the subscribers in which to complete their subscriptions.—Exchange.

Park View, Portsmouth, has had a fine meeting. Rev. E. H. Rawlings has done the preaching. The church has been very much revived and is entirely united. Those who have grown cold have had their spiritual temperature brightened. Seven were received on profession, and two by certificate yesterday. There have been about sixteen conversions.—Virginian-Pilot.

On Easter Sunday Conference and missionary collections were taken up at Cumberland-Street and McKendree, Norfolk. Cumberland-Street contributed $900, a surplus over the assessment, and McKendree $350, with others to hear from.

The brethren will be glad to hear that the health of Bro. Jolliff seems to be entirely restored.

At Central church the Easter services were attended by large congregations both morning and evening. Rev. D. T. Merritt, pastor of the Port Norfolk M. E. church, preached at the morning service, and Rev. R. H. Bennett, assistant pastor of Epworth church, Norfolk, at night. Both sermons were greatly enjoyed by the Central congregation, who appreciate these ministers filling the pulpit of Central church for their pastor, who is sick.

The Rev. George H. McFaden, pastor of Wright Memorial church, preached to a large congregation an able sermon on the "Necessities of a Future Judgment."—Star.

The Methodist Institute, on East Main street, has just secured a charter from the Legislature. The incorporators, who have thus practically placed themselves behind the institution, met Thursday night at the building on Main street and Nineteenth. Several matters were transacted and officers, who are to direct the affairs of the institute, were elected. Those chosen are as follows: President, Mr. John P. Branch; vice-president, Mr. C. W. Hardwicke; treasurer, Mr. T. A. L. Harrelson, and secretary, Mr. I. R. Davenport. The institute, under the charter, will be in the hands of the "Methodist Mission Association."

Large plans are afoot to develop the work of the institute. In the first place, this work in the future will not be confined to the Methodists, but will take in all denominations. Other steps toward enlarging the scope of the institute will be taken in the future.—Leader.

Rev. J. T. Mastin, agent for the Methodist Orphanage of the Virginia Conference, was in Chase City on last Sunday. In a short and exceedingly practical address he explained the nature of the Orphanage, after which he preached an appropriate sermon. We believe this was Mr. Mastin's first visit to our town. He is a very pleasant and interesting speaker, and the exercises were much enjoyed by the large congregation. A collection for the Orphanage amounted to $217, which will be increased. The committee to look after the interest of the Orphanage in the M. E. Church here is as follows: J. W. Swift, W. F. Clark, Lucius Gregory, and E. S. Emory. We have been requested to say that parties wishing to pay subscription to the Orphanage can do so by calling on Mr. Lucius Gregory, who has the papers.

Rev. R. P. Lumpkin closed his meeting at Grant's last Sunday night. Bro. Lumpkin is a faithful and enthusiastic worker, and his labors were crowned by a glorious revival of the church, and an ingathering of thirty-five souls for the Master. On Friday night of last week the writer was present, and he cannot recall a meeting in which the people were so deeply interested and where the presence of the Holy Spirit was more apparent, and under His influence fifteen persons confessed Christ. On Sunday, the last night of the meeting, there were five conversions. Bro. Lumpkin had been preaching every night for two weeks, and was physically unable to carry on the meeting longer. —Northern Neck News.

A collection of $250 was taken yesterday in the Broad-Street Methodist church for the Methodist Institute. Rev. G. W. Wiley was present, and made an address.—News.

Captain Richard Irby, of Randolph-Macon College, who was in the city in the interests of the Twentieth Century Fund, was present this morning at the Methodist Preachers' meeting, and gave an account of the increased interest in the institution with which he is connected. Captain Irby's most interesting statement was to the effect that a friend of the college had recently contributed $10,000 to the endowment fund. He did not give the name of the donor.

Dr. Palmore, of St. Louis, who is visiting relatives in the State, was also at the meeting, and made an address.—Leader.

The Easter exercises at Court Street Methodist Sunday school were not elaborate, but were in specially good taste, and in entire keeping of the day. A very large attendance of the school was much pleased with the rendition of the special programme prepared under the direction of Miss Mary U. Patteson. After the usual opening exercises of the school the Easter Scripture lesson from John's Gospel, 20th chapter, 1-18, was impressively read by different departments of the school, and a recitation by Master Frank Gilliam and little Miss Eliza Glass was followed by the vocal duet, "Of Such is the Kingdom of Heaven," by Misses Elsie Braddock and Josephine Thornhill.

At this point special reports of the schools representative to the recent State Sunday School Convention at Petersburg were made by Misses Mary U. Patteson and Daisie Bell. These reports clearly indicate that the Sunday school work throughout the State is engaging more than ever the earnest thought and sympathy of Christian workers. Their reports stirred the school to form resolutions to press forward in this work and to do more to build up the cause, not only in this community, but throughout the State. A pleasing recitation, entitled "Purity, Truth and Fragrance," was given by Miss Susie Dawson, and an appropriate floral exercise by Willie Waldron. Ambrose Harris, Alice Flemming, Lillian Trotter and Susie Krebs closed the special programme.

It was announced that the offerings for missions were larger than last year, and the prediction was made that next year, with a completed and handsomely furnished school room and church, the school would have in its various departments a thousand members, and the capacity of the schoolroom would be taxed to accommodate those who would attend the next Easter service.

After the morning sermon at the church there was a reception of new members, about ten being received on profession of faith, most of whom were members of the Sunday school, and a large number were received by letter from different sections of the country.—News.

The Executive Committee of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League met yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Young Men's Christian Association and transacted a large amount of business, most of which was not given out for publication, the plan of the league being not to divulge its work until it is under way.

Rev. W. J. Cocke, of Woodstock, was elected superintendent of the Valley District, to devote one-fourth of his time in the field organizing. When a superintendent shall have been placed in the field for his full time, Staunton will be the headquarters.

Mr. Cocke, who is considered one of the strongest preachers in that section of the Valley, was in the city a few days ago and conferred with the officials of the league, and it is understood that he will accept.—Dispatch.

REVIVAL AT CENTRAL CHURCH.

The Rev. E. T. Dadmun, pastor of Centenary Methodist church, Norfolk, preached last night at Central church, the occasion being the opening of a series of revival meetings, which will continue during the week and possibly longer. Mr. Dadmun will preach every evening during the present week. His discourse last night was an able one, and was heard by a large and attentive congregation. The Rev. Mr. Green, pastor of Central, as well as members of the official board, expect a successful revival to result from the meetings.—Virginian-Pilot.

METHODIST PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Methodist preachers' meeting of the city was well attended this morning. President, Rev. B. F. Lipscomb, presided, and Rev. C. F. Comer led the devotional exercises. Church services held on yesterday were well attended, and, from the reports, of an interesting character.

The old building at Wesley is being torn down, preparatory to erecting the new church at the same site, and Pastor Thomas and his flock worshipped yesterday at St. Andrew's chapel.

Pastor Hatcher preached yesterday

(Continued on page 12.)

Talmage's Sermon.

WASHINGTON. —This discourse is a most unusual presentation of things that take place in many lives, and Dr. Talmage pleads for merciful interpretation of human behavior. The text is Joshua iii, 4, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

In December, 1889, I waded the river Jordan, and, although the current was strong, I was able to bear up against it, but in the time of spring freshet, when the snows on Mount Lebanon melt, nothing but a miracle would enable any one to cross this river. It was at the dangerous springtime that Joshua and the officers of his army uttered the words of my text to the people who were in a few hours to cross the Jordan. About that crossing we say but little, because on a previous occasion we discoursed concerning that piling up of the waters into crystal barricade. We only speak of the march to the brink of the river. No stranger thing has ever occurred in all history.

The ark of the covenant was a brilliant chest of acacia wood, overlaid with gold, on the top of which were two winged figures facing each other. It was five feet long and three feet wide. Poles were thrust through the rings at the side, and by these poles the ark was lifted. This splendid box was to be carried three-quarters of a mile ahead of the hosts of Israel on the way to the crossing. That distance between the box and the advancing thousands must be kept because of reverence. There was a sanctity in that divine symbol that they must observe by keeping three-quarters of a mile away. They must watch that glittering box and follow; otherwise they would lose their way and not arrive at the right place for crossing. They had never been there before, and they must be guided. For that reason Joshua utters the words of my text, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore." And the subordinate officers at the head of the regiments repeated it, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

What was truthfully said of the ancient Israelites may be truthfully said of us. We are making our first and last journey through this world. It is possible, as some of my good friends believe, that this world will be corrected and improved and purified and floralized and emparadised as to climate and soil and character until it shall become a heaven for the ransomed, but I do not think it. I have an idea that heaven is already built somewhere. Our departed friends could not wait until this world is fixed up for saintly and angelic residence. Having once gone out of the world, I do not think we will come back, except as ministering spirits to help those who remain in the earthly struggle or perhaps to look at the wondrous spectacle of a burning planet.

Traveling New Paths.

But, leaving that theory aside, we are very sure that we are for the first time walking the earthly pilgrimage. "Ye have not passed this way before." Every minute is a new minute, every hour a new hour, every century a new century. Other folks have gone over the same road we are traveling, but it is our first trip. New appearances, new temptations, new sorrows, new joys. That is the reason so many lose their way. They meet some one on the road of life and ask for direction, and wrong direction is given. We have all been perplexed by misdirection after asking the way to some place we wished to visit. Some one said to us, "Take the first road to the right and, having gone a mile on that road, take the first road on the left, and you will soon reach your destination." We took the advice, but our informer forgot a turn in the road or forgot one of the roads leading to the left, and we took the wrong road and were lost in the woods, and night came on, and we were put to great irritation and trouble.

The fact is, I blame no one for making lifetime mistakes. I pity them instead of blaming them. There are so many wrong roads, but only one right one. You cannot in midlife draw upon your youthful experiences for wisdom, for midlife is so entirely different from youth. You cannot in old age draw upon midlife experiences, for the two stages of existence are so diverse. What is wisdom for one man to do would be folly for another to undertake. A man of nerve and pluck is not qualified to advise a man timid and shrinking. An achievement that would be easy for you might be impossible for me. Human advice is ordinarily of little value. People review their own successes or failures and then tell us what is best for us to do, not realizing that our circumstances are different, our temperament is different, our physical and mental and moral capacities different. Most of the great mistakes that have been made have been made under human advisement.

So, also, it may be said to every nation, "Ye have not passed this way before." Our own republic is going through novel experiences. Could wisest statesman twenty years ago have prophesied present conditions? Every president, every congress, has new crises to meet and new questions to settle. So prophecies made about conditions in this country fifty years from now may turn out as far untrue as the prophecies made fifty years ago by the greatest of American statesmen when he declared on yonder Capitol hill that it was unwise to think of civilization or prosperity the other side of the Rocky mountains, and according to his belief the Pacific coast would be the perpetual abode of barbarians and mountain lions, and we must not think of annexing those forbidding regions.

A Road of Novelty.

Many prophecies in regard to our nation failed and many prophecies concerning its future will fail because it is traveling a new road. Every step it takes on that road is a novelty. The opinion of a Monroe or a Jefferson in the far past is not of as much value as the opinion of our wisest men now. How could men know in 1823 what it would be best for this nation to do in 1901? It is belittling as well as unwise for our statesmen, who are quite equal to the statesmen of the past and who have, in addition to the natural talents of their predecessors, attainments in knowledge that were impossible in any decade but our own, to depend on advice of men who have been dead three-quarters of a century. In all other things the world has advanced. Can it be that in statesmanship it has gone back and that this opening of the twentieth century must consult the opening of the nineteenth century? "Ye have not passed this way before."

Yea, our entire world is on a new pathway. It may be swinging in the same old orbit as when, by the band of the Almighty Immensity was sprinkled with worlds, but it has been rocked with earthquakes and scorched with volcanic fires and wheeled with tidal waves and wrought upon by climatic changes—cities sunk, and islands lifted, and mountains avalanched into valleys. So it is another world than that which was first started in the solar system. Yet it is all the time changing and will keep changing until the hour of its demolition. Of this beautiful world, this lustrous world, this glorious world, it may be said, "Ye have not passed this way before."

What is the practical use of this subject? Instead of putting so much stress upon human advice and instead of asking of the past what we ought to do, follow the divine leading as the men of Joshua followed the golden lidded chest of acacia, which was the symbol of the divine presence.

Teaches Reverence to God.

That three-quarters of a mile distance between the ark or sacred box and the front column of Joshua's troops mightily impresses me. It was a forceful way of teaching reverence for the Almighty. They needed to learn that lesson of reverence, as we all need to learn it. Irreverence has cursed all nations, and none more than our own. Irreverence in the use of God's name. Hear you it not on the streets and in social groups, and is not a profane word sometimes thought necessary to point jocosity? Irreverence for the Scriptures, the phraseology of the Bible often introduced into the most frivolous conversation and made mirth provoking. Irreverence for the oath in courtroom or custom house or legislative hall by the conventional and mechanical mode of its administration. Irreverence for the holy Sabbath by the way it is broken in pleasure excursion and carousal. Irreverence on the part of children for their parents, insolence being substituted for obedience. Irreverence for rulers, which induces vile cartoons and assassination. Irreverence in church during prayer, measuring off song and sermon by cold, artistic or literary criticism, and in prayer time neither bowing the head nor bending the knee nor standing as one does in the presence of earthly ruler, thus showing more respect for a man than to the King of kings. We ask not for genuflections or circumflexions or prostrations, but when prayer is offered let us either bow the head or bend the knee or let us in some way prove that we are not indifferent. In how many places have presumption and foolhardiness taken the place of reverence! That three-quarters of a mile between the chest of acacia covered with gold and mounted with wings—a symbol of the divine presence—and the marching regiments of Joshua suggests a reverence that is woefully lacking in social life, in legislative hall and religious assemblage. A farmer went to the wheatfield, taking his son with him. The child said, "These stalks that stand straight up must have the best grain. Those stalks that bend over cannot be worth anything." Then the father broke off two of the tops of the stalks and said, "Child, that one that bends clear over has the grain." It is the soul that bows in deepest reverence which is the best soul.

Follow the Divine Leading.

But though Joshua's host observed the three-quarters of a mile command, they followed the ark, and you will do well to follow the divine leading, as the path you tread now has not yet been trodden. "Ye have not passed this way before." Many of you are suffering from just such annoyances as have not occurred in all your history. There have been meannesses practiced upon you or you have received slights or you are the subject of misinterpretations or you are in the midst of sore disappointments or there are demands made upon your strength and time more than you can meet or some physical ailment is laying siege to your castle of health or you are under embarrassments that you cannot mention even to nearest friends. You say, "Well, I never saw anything like this. I never expected such treatment as this. I never thought it possible to be placed in such circumstances." And when you say all that you are only translating the words of my text into your own phraseology. If you had suffered something like this before, you would have known what to do, but here is a flank movement for which you are not ready.

As you have had no experience of this kind upon which to draw for wisdom and as you cannot fully state all the circumstances to any human ear, go to God and tell him all about it. He knows already, but it will relieve you and help you if you tell him. That is what he has been doing ever since the world got into trouble by disobedient behavior on the banks of the Euphrates. If in the first chapter of the Bible we see the gate through which the woes of the world entered, in the third chapter of the Bible we see the opening of the gate through which they are to be driven out. Promises by the scores and hundreds and thousands. Sacrificial lambs foretelling the Lamb of God. Rock stricken into gushing floods, typical of the fact that the world's thirst is going to be slaked. Pillar of fire hoisted above wilderness march. Star of hope over birthplace in a barn. Sepulchers rent open. Trumpets of deliverance sounded. All heaven to take part in the rescue of our planet. The Infinite God listening with an ear in which a whisper 10,000 miles away is as audible as thunder.

Perhaps it is a bereavement. You have felt sorrow for those who lost children or thought you did, but now that the sorrow has come to your own nursery it is a different thing. You never could have imagined the silences about the house now that the little feet are quiet and the infant voice has ceased its prattle. What a sensation at eventide with no one to put to bed! What toys put away to be looked at on anniversary days! How Christmas day is shadowed and the world is changed! Get over it? You never can get over it in this world. Perhaps it is your first sorrow. "Ye have not passed this way before." God grant that you may never pass this way again.

In the Wake of the Ark.

But follow the ark, and it will lead you to rivers of consolation. You will find that your child has gone into a heaven of children, a land where children are in vast majority, a score of infant souls to one manly or womanly soul, for the vast majority of the race die in infancy. It is the exception when people live to grow up. Heaven a great playground for children. Palaces for kings and queens? Oh, yes! But what wide halls of pleasure, what gardens of delight, what raptures, such as on earth with ball and kite and hoop they never felt! Let them go, mother. You can trust him in the land of music and flowers. The front door of that eternal home was opened by him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." What a time the children have up there! Can you not almost hear their quick feet on the ivory

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

3:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 51 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:00 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Clayback and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.
S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent,
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY LINE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California, and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

Schedule in Effect February 24, 1901.

Route.	No. 27.	No. 31
Leave Richmond	12:23 noon	10:40 P M
Arrive Petersburg	1:08 P M	11:30 P M
Arrive Henderson	3:52 P M	2:27 A M
Arrive Durham daily exc. Sunday		8:30 A M
Arrive Raleigh	5:04 P M	3:41 A M
Arrive South'n Pine	6:57 P M	5:37 A M
Arrive Pinehurst	7:17 P M	*6:10 A M
Arrive Hamlet	7:50 P M	6:30 A M
Arrive Charlotte	10:45 P M	9:51 A M
Arrive Wilmington		12:05 noon
Arrive Columbia	11:20 P M	9:40 A M
Arrive Savannah	2:20 A M	12:10 noon
Arrive Jacksonville	6:30 A M	3:50 P M
Arrive St. Augustine	8:50 A M	5:00 P M
Arrive Tampa	5:00 P M	5:00 P M
Arrive Athens	4:08 A M	2:19 P M
Arrive Atlanta Cen T.	5:30 A M	3:35 P M
Arrive Macon	11:10 A M	7:20 P M
Arrive Montgomery	11:00 A M	9:20 P M
Arrive Mobile	4:12 P M	2:55 A M
Arrive New Orleans	8:30 P M	7:30 A M
Arrive Chattanooga	1:00 P M	12:35 A M
Arrive Nashville	6:55 P M	5:35 A M

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:30 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:40 P. M. and Raleigh 4:22 P. M. daily, and Durham 4:30 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily; No. 44 at 5:10 A. M. and No. 66 at 5:55 P. M.

*Through Sleeping Car from Washington to Pinehurst, every Wednesday and Friday. Passengers from North of Washington can take this car by passing from the New York to the Washington sleeper.

**Connection daily at Southern Pines with all trains for Pinehurst, N. C.—20 minutes by electric cars.

Connections at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East Coast points, and Cuba and Porto Rico. At New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND DAILY:

4:45 A. M., No. 44, from all points South and Southwest.

5:35 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

6:13 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 44—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Drawing-Room, Sleeping, Compartment, and Observation Cars, and Through Day Coaches between New York and St. Augustine—Dining Cars, serving all meals en route. Also Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Florida and Atlanta Fast Mail. Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which Through Pullman Tickets are sold. Finest Day Coaches.

Z. P. SMITH,
District Passenger Agent,
Phone 405. 836 east Main street.
V. E. M'BEE, R. E. L. BUNCH,
Gen'l Supt. Gen'l Pass. Agent.
Portsmouth, Va.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo. for free examination and advice.

BOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent.

Write to C. A. SNOW & CO.
Patent Lawyers, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds, Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing. Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing Lumsden &amp; Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

721 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

PATENTS

SWIFT &amp; CO.,

Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW, PLANING MILLS and UMBER YARD.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

— PLOW HANDLES.

— OBACCO HOGSHEADS.

— CORN MEAL.

— SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blackstone, Va.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

(Continued from page 9.)

to the children in the Sunday school, and occupied his pulpit at the usual hours. Revival services are going on at Market Street, and the earnest pastor is working hard. One conversion reported on yesterday.

At Blandford the revival services in progress bid fair to be a success. The membership of the church is being aroused. A good deal of material for the work of soul-saving is thereabouts, and, with earnest work and increasing prayer great good will result.

Some very nice things were said by a visiting preacher of the orderly conduct and good management of the Ettrick Sunday school. He was impressed to tell his own Sunday school of such a commendable way of running a Sabbath school. Very wisely and successfully did this same visiting pastor manage a little incident that occurred in another Sunday school he was visiting in the interest of a good cause. Tact, good humor and common sense go a long ways in the Lord's work.

The blessed influence of the recent revivals still linger, and the pastors are never happier than when engaged in such work.

Our president was never in better or more genial humor, and the witticisms and pleasantries from him and others were greatly enjoyed.

Pastors Booker and Guyer are running a friendly race in their respective fields. In the West End of our town in religious circles these genial brethren have a move on them all the time it seems. In Sunday school percentage the jolly, popular West Street pastor leads the whole business. It is up-hill work to catch him. Those of us who go in a moderate gait are looking on and enjoying the race, and we hope are trying to bring up our end.—Petersburg Progress.

The regular weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Berkley, and vicinity was held at Epworth church yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The president, the Rev. W. R. Proctor, occupied the chair. Prayer was offered by the Rev. H. C. Cheatham.

After the reports were made, an animated discussion concerning the status of the Epworth League work took place, but as the time was limited, it was decided to continue the discussion at the next meeting.

Reports being called for, were made as follows:

Rev. H. C. Cheatham conducted the usual services at Huntersville. He reported a good Sunday school; also a League meeting in the afternoon.

The Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at Epworth in the morning and at Centenary at night. At the former church eleven were received on profession of faith, and two by certificate.

The Rev. J. B. Merritt had well-attended services at the Seamen's Bethel.

At LeKies' Memorial the Rev. G. H. Lambeth conducted the usual services.

The Rev. George Wesley Jones closed a meeting of three weeks' duration at Trinity church. There was one conversion on Sunday night. Three were received on profession of faith. There were twelve conversions during the meeting.

The Rev. J. N. Latham had a good day at Park View, a large congregation being present in the morning. The communion was well attended. Seven were received on profession of faith and three by certificate.

The Rev. Ernest Stevens preached in the morning at Owens Memorial and the Rev. C. W. Cain at night. One was received by certificate. The Sunday school is steadily increasing.

The Rev. D. J. Traynham preached at Beech Grove to a very large congregation in the morning, and at Jolliff's in the afternoon. From $100 to $200 have been recently expended on the parsonage.

Monumental—The Rev. E. H. Rawlings preached in the morning and the Rev. H. M. Roone, of the Baltimore Conference, at night. The communion service in the morning was conducted by the Rev. C. W. Cain.

At Cumberland Street the Rev. Chas. L. Bane conducted the usual services. Four were received by certificate and one on profession of faith.

The Rev. D. T. Merritt reported a very large attendance on the Sunday school at Port Norfolk. Five new scholars were enrolled. The attendance on the morning service was also large.

The Rev. E. T. Dadmun preached to a good congregation at Centenary. Six were received on profession of faith and two by certificate.

At Lambert's Point four new scholars were admitted to the Sunday school. The attendance at the morning service was good and the communion service was helpful. Electric lights have been recently placed in the church and were used for the first time. The protracted meeting will be held this week. The Rev. G. H. Lambeth will preach each night.

At Queen Street the Rev. J. K. Jolliff had a good congregation in the morning and a large Sunday school.

The Rev. W. R. Proctor had a fine congregation in the morning at McKendree, and notwithstanding the inclement weather conducted services also at night. The communion was largely attended.

At Memorial the Rev. W. A. Christian had a good day, the congregation in the morning being very large.

The Rev. Dr. A. Coke Smith preached at Epworth at night to a good congregation. He reported a good day.

Wright Memorial—The Rev. G. H. McFaden had a good day, preaching morning and night. One was received by certificate.

The Rev. C. C. Wertenbaker, of Cape Charles City, was present and stated that his charge is getting along well. Arrangements have been made to pay off a pressing debt. He serves a pleasant and considerate people, and the spirit of hopefulness and progress has revived. A new parsonage is contemplated at Sunnyside.

At Central church the Rev. W. T. Green had a very good day. The protracted meeting there goes on this week.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. P. Woodward.—Landmark.

The announcement was made yesterday by Captain Richard Irby, treasurer of Randolph-Macon College, that the institution at Ashland has received a donation of $10,000 from a generous patron of the college, whose name was not given for publication.

It was ascertained last night that the fund was the gift of Mr. John P. Branch, president of the Merchants National Bank, of this city.

This fund has been placed at the disposal of the Board of Trustees of Randolph-Macon College for the purpose of endowing a loan fund for students who are unable to meet their tuition expenses at the college. It is understood that this fund is to be known as "The Mary Louisa Merritt Loan Fund," as a memorial to Mr. Branch's wife.

There are no conditions placed upon the gift, other than its proceeds shall be used to assist needy students who are seeking to secure an education, and who are without the means to accomplish their desire.

In accordance with the system already in vogue at Randolph-Macon, the revenue from Mr. Branch's generous gift will be advanced to those students who make application for assistance with the view to return the amount loaned them after they have left college and have had the opportunity to earn money.

This plan has been the means of bringing many worthy young men to the college who otherwise would have been deprived of the benefit of a superior college education. The young men who have secured aid from the loan funds already controlled by the college have been able after graduation to make restitution to their Alma Mater for the succor they received from her at the time when it was so necessary to their education.

Mr. Branch has been a liberal contributor to the needs of Randolph-Macon College in the past. His last large contribution was for $5,000 to the endowment fund of the institution. This was a portion of the $40,000 raised in the city of Richmond among the prominent and wealthy Methodists and other friends of Randolph-Macon, by Dr. W. W. Smith, chancellor of Randolph-Macon system.

Among the other large donations to this particular fund was that of $15,000 from Mr. James B. Pace, and $7,500 from Colonel A. S. Buford, both of Richmond.

There are now several student loan funds at Randolph-Macon; among them that of Mrs. I. N. Vaughan for $25,000; the "Anderson Fund," of $2,000; the "Melissa Baker Fund," of $5,000, devoted to the Woman's College, at Lynchburg, Va., and the "Winch Fund" of $1,000.

The recent addition to this particular department through the liberality of Mr. Branch will enable the college to offer increased facilities to the struggling young men of Virginia and sister States.

Mr. Thomas Branch, father of the present donor, was also a substantial friend of the college during his life. He was for many years a member of its Board of Trustees and in his latter days contributed $5,000 to its endowment.

It is stated that Mr. Branch has in contemplation the establishment of a "Branch Chair," to be added to the faculty of Randolph-Macon, which will be endowed by him.

Through the subscriptions raised by the Twentieth Century Fund among the Methodists of Virginia, Maryland, and West Virginia, during the past year, over $90,000 has been added to the general endowment of the schools and colleges under the Randolph-Macon system.

Mr. Branch would not discuss the matter of his gift last night. He is known, however, to be a strong friend of education in the State of Virginia, and believes that every effort should be made to afford increased facilities to the poor young men of the State to secure a higher college education.

The large endowments of the Northern institutions of learning have come through those who have been students in the past, and it is the conviction of Mr. Branch that the best way to get friends for the college is to have as many students in attendance as possible. Many of the most liberal supporters of the various educational institutions in the country are those who in their early college days have had to struggle with financial difficulties in acquiring their education.

It has been the experience of the colleges that these young men who have had to borrow the money for their college careers have generally been able and willing to make prompt return to the loan funds of which they have been the beneficiaries.

The revenue from the several loan funds at Randolph-Macon College are not devoted exclusively to the payment of tuition expenses. In many instances where the student is known to be worthy of assistance, aid is extended to him toward the defrayment of his general expenses while at college.—Dispatch.

MEETING OF THE JOINT COMMISSION ON FEDERATION.

The Joint Commission on Federation, appointed respectively by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1894, and by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1896, met by invitation of President J. F. Goucher at the Woman's College, Baltimore, Friday, March 21st, concluding its work the afternoon of the next day. A former meeting was held in Washington, D. C., in 1898, the results of which, as embodied in a series of resolutions, were submitted to our last General Conference in Chicago, and, with slight modification, were approved. The substance of them is:

1. The adoption of measures "for the joint administration of our publishing interests in China and Japan."

2. In our "missions in foreign lands * * * the desirability of co-operative administration as a means for lessening the expenditure of funds in prosecution of the work."

3. "The taking of prompt steps for the preparation of a common Catechism, a common hymn book, and a common order of public worship."

4. The enactment of provisions by the General Conferences of both Churches "to the effect that where either Church is doing the work expected of Methodism the other Church shall not organize a society nor erect a church building until the Bishop having jurisdiction in the case of the work shall be consulted and his approval obtained."

5. "The provision of a plan by which a travelling preacher of an Annual Conference in either Church may be received into an Annual Conference of the other Church, retaining his credentials, without the formality of having his orders recognized."

6. "That we have observed with much interest the growth of the Epworth Leagues in our respective Churches, and rejoice in the spirit of fraternity manifested in their biennial international conferences, and commend to the several governing bodies of the Churches interested the question as to whether official recognition of these meetings can be given, and whether authoritative regulations are required to increase or promote their efficiency."

For item 4 the following was substituted: "We recommend that the respective General Conferences enact provisions to the effect that where either Church is doing the work expected of Methodism the question of organization of the new societies or the building of new churches shall be left to the decision of the presiding elders and the preacher in charge, subject to the approval of the Bishop having jurisdiction" (Journal of General Conference of 1900, pages 369, 370 and 469, 470.)

The General Conference continued the commission during the quadrennium, "with full power, in connection with the Board of Bishops, the Missionary Board, and whatever bodies it may be necessary to consult, to carry out the provisions of this report."

The joint commission is composed as follows:

Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Bishop John C. Granbery, Bishop W. W. Duncan, Bishop R. K. Hargrove, Dr. E. E. Hoss, Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. J. H. Dye, Camden, Ark.; the Rev. G. G. MacDowell, Judge Walter Clark, Raleigh, N. C.; Professor R. W. Jones, Oxford, Miss.; Colonel Asa Holt, Abilene, Texas.

Methodist Episcopal Church: Bishop S. M. Merrill, Bishop J. M. Walden, Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, Dr. John F. Goucher, Baltimore; Dr. H. G. Jackson, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. R. J. Cooke, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Judge Thomas H. Murray, Clearfield, Pa.; Mr. R. T. Miller, Cincinnati, O.; Mr. T. B. Sweet, Topeka, Kan.

All the members were present at the recent meeting except the Rev. G. G. MacDowell and Colonel Asa Holt, of the Southern branch. The Rev. R. P. Prettyman was appointed to take the place of the former. All the commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church were present.

At the opening session Bishop Merrill presided, and Drs. Hoss and Cooke were elected secretaries. The following rules of order were adopted:

"The chairman of the respective commissions shall preside at the sessions of the joint commission in alternation, and the secretaries of the two commissions shall act conjointly as secretaries of the sessions of said commission.

"In view of the greatness of the responsibility imposed upon us, and in view of our utter dependence upon divine guidance in a matter of so much importance, a half hour shall be spent in earnest prayer at the commencement of each daily session of the commission.

All resolutions, propositions, and reports shall be submitted in writing, signed by the member or members offering the same.

"No action of the joint commission shall be deemed valid unless by a majority vote of each board of commissioners.

"The deliberations of said commission shall be governed by the ordinary rules of deliberative bodies.

"Votes of the joint commission shall be taken by yeas and nays whenever three members of the joint commission shall require it."

The results of the several conferences, as far as they have been given out after final adjournment, are the reaffirmation of the resolutions adopted at the Washington meeting of 1898 and acted upon by our last General Conference, the adoption of a resolution of congratulation that fraternal relations in the home and foreign fields are becoming closer and increasingly productive of good results, the preparation of a common hymn book and of a common Catechism and order of public worship for the two Churches, the former to be prepared by a joint commission of eleven representatives of each Church, the latter by a joint commission of seven from each Church. The several commissioners are to be appointed in May next by the Bishops of the respective Churches, the present commissioners on federation co-operating in the selection.

The brethren on both sides testify to the admirable Christian spirit that marked all their deliberations, and to the desire of all to correct misunderstandings and reach an agreement that would promote a genuine and abiding fraternity between the Churches. The ratification of what they have done by their General Conferences is earnestly desired by them. There is universal gratification among the Methodists of both Churches in Baltimore over the outcome of these deliberations.

Pleasant social features of the meeting were a dinner at the Hotel Rennert on Thursday, March 20th, given by members of Southern Methodism to their commissioners; a splendid reception at the Woman's College on Friday evening, March 21st, to all the commissioners, at which, with President J. F. Goucher, Bishops Merrill, Foss, and Walden, of our Church, and Bishops Hargrove, Duncan and Granbery, of Southern Methodism, were in the receiving party; and a pleasant luncheon given by Dr. Goucher to the commissioners on Saturday, March 22d, at Vingolf Hall of the Woman's College Homes.—N. Y. Advocate.

WHEN YOU GO INTO A DRUG STORE to get a bottle of Painkiller, examine it carefully to see if it is made by Perry Davis, and don't be persuaded to take something "just as good" because it is a few cents cheaper. There is only one Painkiller, "Perry Davis'." Large bottles, 25 and 50c.

ANNUAL MEETING GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS., MAY 14-17, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Jackson and return. Tickets on sale May 12th 13th, and 14th, return limit May 30, 1902.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS' REUNION, DALLAS, TEXAS, APRIL 22-25, 1902.

One cent per mile each way for the round trip applying from all points. Tickets on sale April 18th, 19th, and 20th, with return limit May 2d, except by depositing tickets at Dallas, and upon payment of 50 cents, extension of return limit may be had until May 15, 1902.

MEETING GRAND COUNCIL ROYAL ARCANUM, RICHMOND, VA., APRIL 15, 1902.

One and one-third fares for the round trip from all points within the State of Virginia. Tickets on sale April 13th, 14th, and 15th, with return limit April 20th.

GRAND LODGE OF VIRGINIA, I. O. O. F., PORTSMOUTH, VA., MAY 13-16, 1902.

Four cents per mile one way for the round trip from points within the State. Tickets on sale May 11th, 12th, and 13th, with return limit May 17, 1902.

BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION VIRGINIA, PETERSBURG, VA., MAY 14-18, 1902.

Four cents per mile one way for the round trip from points within the State. Tickets on sale May 12th, 13th, and 14th, with return limit May 21st.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Federation Woman's Clubs, Los Angeles, Cal., May 1st to 8th.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

VERY LOW RATES TO THE NORTHWEST MARCH 1ST TO APRIL 30, 1902.

The Norfolk and Western Railway will sell tickets to Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Coast Points at exceeding low rates from all stations. It is possible rates to the West will never be so cheap again; choice of three routes. Write for rates and schedules, say to what point you are going and your nearest station to this line. See any Agent N. & W. R'y or W. B. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen. Pass. Agt., Trav. Pass. Agt.,
Roanoke, Va.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, DALLAS, TEXAS, MAY 7TH, JUNE 7TH, 1902.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway begs to announce one fare plus $2 for the round trip from all points on its lines to Dallas and return. Tickets to be on sale May 3d and 4th, with return limit June 9th, except that by deposit of tickets with joint agent at Dallas on or before May 20th, and on payment of 50 cents, an extension to June 30th may be obtained.

The Southern Railway offers the choice of routes to Dallas, but the trip must be made in both directions over same route—through Asheville (Land of the Sky) and Memphis; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Shreveport; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis, or through Atlanta, Montgomery and New Orleans.

For detail information call on or write any agent of the Southern Railway, or to . C. W. WESTBURY,
D. P. A., Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND TO DALLAS VIA SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY—CONFEDERATE REUNION, DALLAS, TEXAS, APRIL 25-26, 1902.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway will sell tickets from Richmond and other points on its line to Dallas, Texas, on account of the above occasion, at a rate of one cent per mile in each direction for the round trip, short line mileage. Tickets on sale April 18th, 19th, and 20th, with return limit May 2d, and holders of tickets may have their tickets extended until May 15th by paying to the joint agent at Dallas, on or before April 30th, the small fee of fifty cents. Rate from Richmond to Dallas and return $28.65.

The Seaboard offers the choice of routes, going via New Orleans or via Atlanta, Chattanooga and Memphis.

There will be a special train out of Atlanta 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, April 20th, which will be run solid to Dallas, Texas. This train will consist entirely of tourist sleepers. Passengers can leave Richmond 10:37 Saturday night and reach Dallas Tuesday morning at 5:45. One change of cars only.

For further information apply to W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. Smith, District Passenger Agent, 1006 East Main street. 'Phone, 405.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION SALEM FEMALE ACADEMY, WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., MAY 22-29, 1902.

From all points within a radius of 200 miles of Winston-Salem, tariff one. From all points in the territory beyond the 200 mile radius, one fare for the round trip.

TENT FOR SALE

We have bought a larger tent, and must sell at what it will bring the one used last summer in revival work. It is in good condition, having been used only for three series of revival meetings; is circular in shape and fifty feet in diameter. Will sell for half cost. Address GEO. H. WILEY, stairs? What rounds of gladness. What laughter of eternal glee! Follow the ark, and it will lead you to the crossing into the reunions of the home where you will never part.
Methodist Mission, Richmond, Va.

(Continued from page 10.)

As our sorrows are new, our joys are new and all our experiences are new. Our life is one long discovery of things that we did not know and could not know, because we have not passed this way before. We have found, for instance, that gratitude is the rarest of virtues. You used to suppose that if you do a kindness it will be fully appreciated and reciprocated. You have found out by experience, as you could have found out in no other way, that gratitude is apt to be only another ax to grind. While there is a possibility that you may return still more service you are thanked, but when you can return no more advantage you are dropped. Here is a man whom you have helped in political elevation. When the time comes for the compliment to be returned, you are not only refused help, but you receive positive opposition. You have found out that you should do the right thing not with respect to reward or gratitude, but because it is the right thing to do. Many are miserable because they are all the way looking for gratitude which they cannot find. You might as well go down Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, or Broadway, New York, or Tremont street, Boston, your eyes scrutinizing the pavements looking for turquoises and emeralds and rubies. Perhaps you might find them, but there is not much probability that in fifty years you would find one of them.

Surprising Discoveries.

No one has come to midlife who has not been stung of ingratitude. On the battlefield of Alma in 1854 a wounded Russian was crying in anguish of thirst for water. Captain Eddington of the English army ran to him and gave him drink. As the captain was running by to join his regiment the wounded soldier shot him. Almost all languages have proverbs setting forth this perversity. English proverb, "Bring up a raven, and it will pick out your eyes." Arabic proverb, "Eat the present and break the dish." Italian proverb, "The ass, after having drunk, gives a kick to the bucket." An old proverb says, "If God were to be so complacent as to carry us on his back to Rome, we would not thank him for his pains if he did not also set us down in an easy chair." You will never be happy in this world if you do not do all the good you can and look for no responsive gratitude. All the damage I did a man who is my enemy was to take him from a position where he received $700 a year salary into a position where he has ever since received $2,500 a year. He never forgave me, but has pursued me with a pen vitriolic ever since. The worst enemy you ever had is the man you introduced and favored and helped. But be not disturbed or even irritated. You are no better than your Lord. If the world had had any thankful appreciation of his coming it would have filled that Bethlehem caravansary with flowers, which bloom there clear on into the December month, and Herod, instead of attempting his death, would have sent a chariot to fetch the infant to the palace, and the oyer and terminer of Pilate's courtroom would have pronounced him not guilty, and instead of a cross and a crown of thorns it would have been a coronation, with all the mighty ones of the earth kneeling at the foot of his throne.

Another discovery that surprises us because we had not passed this way before is the fact that if two be in quarrel or in war with each other the one who is the most wrong is the hardest and the slowest to make up. Who wrote them I know not, but I cut these two lines out and pasted them in my scrapbook twenty years ago, for the words are so strikingly true:

Forgiveness to the injured does belong,
But they never pardon who have done the wrong.

We talk about the great discoveries of the age, the electric power, the steam power, the telescopic and microscopic power, but do not say anything about the discoveries we all make year by year and day by day. There are surprises all the time. It is a new road we are traveling. "Ye have not passed this way before."

Our Only Opportunity.

But closely allied is the other fact which we hinted at in the opening—that we will not pass this way again. This is our only opportunity for doing certain things that ought to be done. On all sides there are griefs we ought to solace, hunger we ought to feed, cold that we ought to warm, kind words that we ought to speak, generous deeds we ought to perform. All that you and I do toward making this world better and happier we must do very soon or never do at all. Joshua and his troops never came back over the way they were marching toward the crossing of the Jordan. The impress of the sandal or the bare feet of each soldier showed in what direction he was going, but never did the impress of the sandal of any one of them show that he had returned. We are all facing eternity to come. There is no retreat. Alertness and fidelity would not be so important if we could truthfully say: "I will be back here again. The things I neglect now I will do the next time I come. I will be reincarnated, and I will resume my earthly obligations. Having then more knowledge than I have now, I will discharge my earthly duties better than I can now discharge them. I do not give solemn farewell to these obligations and opportunities, but a smiling and cheery goodbye until I see them again." No, we cannot say that. There will be no new and corrected edition of the volume of our earthly life. After we make exit from the stage at the close of the fifth act we cannot re-enter. How many millions of people have lived and died I know not, but of all the human race who have gone only seven persons that I now think of have returned, the son of the widow at Zarephath, the young man of Nain, the ruler's daughter, Tabitha, Eutychus, Lazarus and Christ. Among all the ages to come I do not suppose there will be one more who will return to this life, having once left it.

Put Your Trust In God.

At this point I ask you to notice the fact that my text does not call attention to the crossing of the Jordan, but to the way leading thereto. We all think much of our crossing of the Jordan when the march of our life is ended, but put too little emphasis on the way that leads to the crossing. What you and I need most to care about is the direction of the road we are traveling. We need have no fear of the crossing if we come to it in the right way. In other words, we need not care about death if our life has been what it ought to be. We will die right if we live right.

What an absurdity it would have been for Joshua and his men to have asked each other questions like these: "How can we cross the Jordan if we get there? Will not the water be too deep to allow us to wade? Will we not all be so saturated that we may lose our lives by exposure? How many of us can swim? Had we better not wait until the annual freshet has subsided?" No such folly did they commit. They were chiefly anxious about the way that they had "not passed before"

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

Established 1860.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER ELLIOTT & SPOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

tration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO., OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

◎◎

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

◎◎

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

◎◎

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

◎◎

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by expert

Science Druggists

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured by Dr. David's Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing and pleasant, Dr. David's Cough Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE, STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO., RICHMOND, VA.

It Will Pay You!

TO SEND A POSTAL CARD FOR OUR PRICES ON
Cane Mills, Cider Mills,
Buggies and Harness.

—In Fact—

Everything in the Hardware and Implement Lines
WE HAVE THE GOODS AND PRICES TO SUIT.
Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, — VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company,

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS.

... FOR TOBACCO. ...

Bellefonte,
4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Hard Cash,
2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Standard,
2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Alliance,
2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

FOR CORN AND COTTON,

Highland,
1 to 2—10 to 12—2 o 2.

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 15.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., APRIL 17, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

We will give our friends a statement in reference to the Mann liquor license law next week.

The railroads have extended the time in which tickets can be purchased to attend the General Conference at Dallas till midnight Monday, May 5th.

On another page we publish an editorial by Bro. Richardson, of the Southern Christian Advocate, and the chairman of the South Carolina delegation to the General Conference. We are glad to hear him talk. He rightly says that the great questions are, "Did the Agents deceive the Senate?" and "Did the Book Committee defend their conduct?" These are the great issues. On these it is believed that a majority of the General Conference will be agreed.
The question of what to do with the money is the third question in the chain, but cannot be considered at all until the first two are settled. The reason it has been so widely discussed is that there has been great difference of opinion on this point among those who are agreed on the first two. With many of us the first two questions have passed out of the range of discussion and are accepted as sad, solemn and settled facts.

THE ARMY CANTEEN.

The editor had the honor at the meeting of the National Anti-Saloon League in Washington last December to introduce resolutions in reference to the best method of effectually destroying the saloon feature of the army canteen or post exchange. Those resolutions urged the wisdom of introducing positive as well as negative legislation to abate the saloon nuisance in the army.
It was urged that innocent and healthful amusements and light, non-alcoholic beverages be given to the soldiers in place of the saloons—temperance saloons, in fact. The League adopted the resolutions, and has been working to secure the framing and presentation of such measures as will provide a healthy substitute for the old saloon.

Senator Hansborough has introduced the following amendments to the army appropriation bill:

1. "For the construction and maintenance of suitable buildings at military posts and stations for the conduct of the exchange store, school, library, reading, lunch, and amusement rooms, gymnasium, and so forth, one million dollars."

2. "To take the place of the funds heretofore accumulated from profits of the canteen, six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars."

Now, if the real friends of the army want to do something for its good, they should write at once to our Senators, Daniel and Martin, and to the representatives of the various districts in which our readers may live. Spend enough time, stationery and stamps to do this. Do it yourself and urge all your friends to do so. We must speak our minds on these great questions, and let people know where we stand.
The drunkard-makers and their friends speak their minds and work for their cause. They are heard because of their much speaking. We will be heard if we speak. Our representatives cannot know what we think unless we tell them. Write at once.

"THE EDUCATIONAL OUTLOOK IN VIRGINIA."

My attention has been called by a friend to the address of Miss Parrish, recently published in the Dispatch on the above subject, it being the address delivered by her on February 1st, of which address a report was given in the Dispatch at the time, upon which report I based some comments, which were published in the Dispatch of February 7th. Absorption in other matters had well-nigh driven the subject from my mind, but upon reading the address this morning, I thought that I should say something in reference to it.

First of all, I think that thanks are due me from the readers of the Dispatch for the publication of the address. It is not only interesting, but it is helpful and stimulating, and to those who were fortunate enough to hear it delivered, the personality of the speaker made it even more impressive and suggestive. It was unfortunate, however, that the whole address was not written out in full, and then no question could have arisen as to what was said, and it so happens that none of my criticisms are upon the part of the address which was written out in full, but upon the remarks which were made by Miss Parrish from her notes, which notes she says she has amplified from memory, and of which she says: "It represents what I meant and what I believed. As to whether this or the reporter's version is more nearly correct, I can only appeal to the common sense of those who know how frequently reporters misunderstand, and to the candor of those who heard me."

I am not able to sit in judgment upon the question of whether the reporter listening and taking notes, or Miss Parrish amplifying her rough notes from memory is the more accurate; that is a matter for them to settle. It is my place to take what Miss Parrish says she meant to say, and what she thinks she did say, and see whether it is still open to my criticism, that she had made some statements which are too sweeping.

After a careful reading and rereading of her own statement of what she meant to say, I think that I am justified in repeating the closing sentence of my comments of February 7th: "In discussing this matter, there is no intention to reflect upon the ability of Miss Parrish, or to deny that there are many improvements needed in our educational work, but the statements are entirely too sweeping; the facts do not justify such broad generalizations, and the encouraging features and improvements in our educational work are not given the place that one would naturally expect in an address upon "The Educational Outlook in Virginia." My criticisms of the address were specially directed to her strictures upon denominational schools, and upon female secondary schools in particular. I criticised her illustration of the election of a principal at Farmville as a proof of the evil of sectarian zeal. Her address as given by her to the Dispatch contains this illustration, and, strange to say, although she gives an explanatory note of fourteen lines, she does not withdraw this statement or express regret for her mistake, but simply says that she will give the name of her informant privately, if desired. The willingness to believe that sectarian zeal would lead to such a betrayal of trust, by such prominent citizens, would indicate an estimate of denominational ideas of education which I do not believe to be warranted by facts as they exist in Virginia. I cannot agree with Miss Parrish that the rivalry of denominational schools for boys and girls is a real evil in Virginia. I do not know of facts to warrant any such sweeping statement. I do not believe that denominational schools drag each other down. I do not believe that we have enough good secondary schools in Virginia. I believe that every denomination should have more, and I believe that every time a denominational school stimulates another denomination to establish one, that instead of the first one being dragged down, it will be made better. I told

Dr. Nelson on last Thursday that if he was going to establish a secondary school in Southside Virginia, that I would be very glad to have it placed at Blackstone. I do not believe that any such rivalry exists among the denominations in Virginia as would be inferred from Miss Parrish's statements.
They are too sweeping.

Now as to the female secondary schools: As I said in my former criticism, "the secondary schools do need greatly many things," but I think that here, again, the statements are too sweeping and do not give sufficient credit to the secondary schools, which are doing honest work, and which have college-bred men and women in charge of their various departments. I do not mean that she should have mentioned any special schools, but I do mean that in an address on "The Educational Outlook in Virginia" one has a right to expect that some notice should be taken of the effort which has been made by a number of educators to establish genuine secondary schools, with thorough courses and college-trained teachers.

I honor Miss Parrish for her ability and for her work's sake. I think that her address was stimulating and really helpful. I regret that the portion of it which was not written out beforehand was not as well balanced as that which was written out, but that, of course, is not surprising, and often happens from speaking from notes. I hope she will understand the spirit of my comments on her address.

And now, if I may be permitted to speak of another matter, which was referred to in her address, I think that it will be seen that the most important fact to be considered at the present moment in reference to the "Educational Outlook in Virginia" is "The General Education Board, and Our Attitude Toward It."

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD AND OUR ATTITUDE TO- WARD IT.

I have been somewhat surprised that so little has been written concerning the General Education Board by the leaders of our educational work in Virginia. I have been much interested in the matter ever since it was brought to my attention in a conversation with Dr. Robert Frazer, who is himself greatly interested in the work, and I have read with care everything that I have been able to find on the subject.
It is of such great importance that I have thought it should be discussed by all of our papers, especially in view of

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1900, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

So when Sunday came Edward pulled his books down in the afternoon and began to study. He had been to church in the morning and expected to go again in the evening. His old habits in which his mother had trained him were still strong, and in fact he had prided himself on the way he had kept his Sundays since leaving home.

But he excused himself now by saying that he needed the time that Sunday afforded to get caught up in his studies. He studied for nearly two hours, making good headway and counting the time he was saving as good to put into his debate.

At the end of two hours he went out for a walk with one of the boys in the hall, who had dropped in rather suddenly.

Edward felt a little confused to be caught with his books open on his table as his visitor came in.

"So you've come to it all right, eh?" asked Ladd as he helped himself to as if he were a guest. "I said he was getting 'beloved,' like so many of the fellows here, and the president's hour there's anything going on Saturdays."

"Do many of the fellows study on Sunday?" asked Edward as he put on his hat and overcoat. He really did not know, and Ladd was a junior and had a much larger acquaintance.

"Do they? More than three-fourths, I should say. Oh, yes; it's the regular thing. Sunday's a hard day to get through, don't you think? We can't read the papers all the time, and there's a limit to church."

Edward was silent. He was not yet in a position where he felt like arguing for the Sunday study, or trying to defend it. At the same time he began to justify it on the score of necessity, and when the week was gone and another Sunday came he found it much easier to silence any scruples he may have had before. He even picked up one of his books in the morning before going down to church, and in the afternoon when he took the books down again he seemed to be relieved to think that one of the studies had been got out of the way in the morning.

When evening came, he went over to get Freeda to go with him to some special service down town.

It was a bright, frosty night, and they walked both ways. Edward as usual was silent until Freeda had asked a few questions.

"Are you working too hard, Ned?"

"No, I don't think so. I feel well enough. I'm pegging away at the debate all my spare time. It comes off this week Friday, you know."

"You have worked very hard on it, haven't you? I do hope you will win it," said Freeda, who, in spite of her disappointment in Edward, that he had not made a decision during the evangelistic meetings just closed, still felt the deepest possible interest in her brother's success and was very enthusiastic in her praise of his scholarly abilities.

"I shall do my level best. Are the girls coming out to the debate?"

Edward asked because there had been in past years a noticeable lack of interest on the part of the girls in the annual debate.

"Are they? Why, they are coming over in a body. You don't seem to realize, Ned, that you are very popular at the ladies' hall."

"Am I?" Among Edward's really sterling good qualities was an absence of conceit. If he prided himself on his morality overmuch, he was at least free from that pride of intellectual attainments or physical attractions that distinguished a good many college students. He was not a ladies' man, as Willis always was, and so far he had no special friends among the girls except Freeda. He did not seem to care one way or the other. He was one out of a very few men in college who probably never looked over to the girls' side of the room during chapel. And in classroom he managed to have a seat at the end of the row as far from any girl as he could get. He did not dislike girls' company. He was simply indifferent.

"You ought to have heard the girls talk about your great football play at the last game on the home grounds," said Freeda, who felt a little vexed at Edward's silent indifference.

Edward laughed a little. "Some day I suppose I'll fall in love and be as big a fool as some of the other fellows. You'll have to take second place then. Unless," he added with a lightness of speech not characteristic of him, "unless you do the same thing, and then you won't care."

Freeda was silent, and Edward was afraid he had hurt her feelings in some way.

"Did I hurt you, Freeda?" he asked more as he used to speak when they were together on the farm.

"No, Ned," she replied softly, and they both walked on for some distance without talking.

"I have a little confession to make, Freeda," at last Edward spoke, his old habit of extreme truthfulness compelling him to the statement. "I've had to study on Sunday lately. I've been so busy I couldn't get my lectures any other way."

"Don't do it, Ned," Freeda urged after a moment, during which Edward had a conviction that his confession had affected her disagreeably.

"Don't you?"

"No, I don't believe in it."

"Nor Miss Seton, either?" asked Edward, a little ironically.

Ida Seton was a great friend of Freeda's and was rooming with her this term.

"Yes, Ida studies once in awhile on Sundays," said Freeda, reluctantly. "I can't make her see it the way I do."

"There's nothing very wicked about it."

"No, but it's foolish. You don't gain anything by it in the long run."

"Then I don't see," answered Edward, with a growl, "why the professor gives it to us so heavy for. Fridays they give us a double dose, as if they expected us to study on Sunday. Ladd told me today that more than three-fourths of all the fellows have to study on Sunday."

"They think they have to, maybe. But they don't really have to. Besides, Ned, you know mother would not like it, and the president must be opposed to it."

"He's never said anything against it."

"No, but he may at any of his Friday talks. Tell me, Ned, if the president comes out against it, will you give it up?"

"I will if Miss Seton will," replied Edward, laughing.

"I'll tell her," replied Freeda quickly.

"No, don't do that!" cried Edward, feeling alarmed at the idea.

"I shall, though. You've promised." Freeda laughed, and all Edward's remonstrances, which lasted until they parted at the door of the hall, would not change her purpose.

"Oh, well, she won't give it up any way," was Edward's parting shot as he left Freeda.

"I'll see about that," she replied, and she was silently determined that he should be made to keep his word if she had any influence over her roommate. It was perhaps a coincidence that the president chose for his Friday talk that very week the subject of how best to spend a Sunday in college. Edward afterward charged Freeda and one or two other girls who felt as she did with having been to the president and urged him to speak on the subject. Freeda did not deny that she had talked with the president on the matter, and the very next day after her talk with her brother; but she said she had not asked him to take the subject for one of his Friday talks. He had told her that for some time he had been intending to do so anyway.

The college listened with peculiar interest that day. Probably more than half of the entire student body was in the habit of more or less Sunday study.

The president spoke briefly of several good ways for a student to use the day, and then went on to give his reasons why Sunday study was not only unnecessary, but absolutely harmful in the long run:

"First.—First of all, you need one whole day in the week for complete change of programme. To keep right on studying seven days in a week is contrary to God's great law of change and rest.

"Second.—If you are in the habit of thinking that the Saturday study does not remain as fresh with you as the Sunday study, probably your method of study, especially of memorizing, is at fault. You need to memorize so as to retain the lesson for a longer period than simply one day.

"Third.—The Sunday study is apt to dull the mind instead of brighten it. Experience seems to prove the truth of this statement. The best students in my university were the men who rested on Sunday or at least did some work in connection with the day that gave them new ideas of other things outside of a regular college course. The college student who is interested in nothing but the books and studies of his college life will develop in a small way. He needs to give the religious life a chance at him, a full sweep unhindered by the books that have held his attention during the week.

"Fourth.—In some way a change of the weekday holiday from Saturday to Monday would be desirable. I am somewhat in favor of that plan, and in some colleges where it is adopted the results are excellent. But whether such a change is ever made at Hope or not the excuse that the student must study on Sunday because Saturday is his rightful play day does not hold good. It does not, because the students who manage to get their Monday lessons without studying on Sunday prove my statement. If it was an absolute necessity to study Sunday for any reason, then that necessity would be seen in the failure of those students who refuse to use Sunday for study. Monday failures in the classroom do not come from an absence of Sunday study. They come from other causes.

"Fifth.—We are here in this college for something in addition to the things we can find in the textbooks. Sunday comes to us for the purpose of giving us an opportunity to enrich our lives with meditation and rest and service. A college student will grow narrow and selfish unless he does something on Sunday that he does not do on other days. Teach a class somewhere in the church where you attend. Help some Christian cause that needs it. Use the day for building up tired physical and mental forces, but I beg of you do not use the day, even a small part of it, to study the college lessons. It is harmful to mind and body, and in the long run it will leave you poorer in spirit and in all those qualities that go to make a full grown man and woman."

Edward was busy that afternoon getting ready for the debate in the evening, and he did not have time to see Freeda and comment on the president's talk or ask her what Miss Seton was going to do. He went up to his room right after dinner and lay down for half an hour. Then he went over the whole debate carefully. He went down town and carried his papers and immediately after supper went to his room again, rested for a little while, dressed for the evening, and then spent the time until he was expected at the chapel in rehearsing his speech. He was not afraid of forgetting it, and he thought he had no timidity before an audience. The only thing that gave him any trouble was the selection of the judges. Two of them were pronounced partisans in politics. He knew enough about the whole debate over the Philippine question to feel afraid that his side of the question would be contrary to the political views of these two men. Yet they had been selected as judges who would give an impartial decision, and Edward had enough magnanimity to give them credit for treating him fairly.

The president went forward and introduced Edward.

(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 53, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✻ ✻ THREE COURSES. ✻ ✻

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications.

ON THE WING AGAIN.

After Chicago, St. Louis. But I do not know that it will always be so. No city in America is more eligibly situated for a great metropolis than St. Louis, and it is growing by leaps and bounds. I went to St. Louis on invitation of the Epworth League Union to address the Leagues of the city at Centenary church, and we had a great meeting. My, how they sung! Such singing throws the finest choirs into the shade, and inspires the heart like the roll of the drum in the lull of the battle. McMurray, the presiding elder, is a leader who leads. Under his masterful policy, Southern Methodism is flourishing in St. Louis. I have solved that presiding elder problem, which gives you all so much trouble in old Virginia, as well as others elsewhere. Get rid of the fossils and put men of enterprise in the office like McMurray. You won't want to get rid of them then, or to limit the term, or to rotate them in office. Holding Quarterly Conferences is the least thing McMurray does. He is planning to build new churches, to renovate old ones, to help weak ones, to secure strategic sites for future occupation. He is an organizer and a leader, a genuine field marshal, marching at the head of his men to victory. I think he fooled the Bishop. Mac is not yet forty, but his hair is as gray as if he carried a record of sixty summers, and the Bishop perhaps thought he was getting a safe, slow, dear old "beloved," like so and so, who jog along and ask that famous question: "How much has been collected the present quarter for the support of the ministry, and how has it been applied?" McMurray is a sure enough presiding elder; and if the Bishops would put such men in the office, and the Conference would superannuate a lot of mere machine men, we would hear less complaint about presiding elders. Don't abolish the office, but abolish fossils in it. Methodism needs leaders, broad, up-to-date, progressive, full of enterprise and enthusiasm and faith.

From St. Louis I dropped down to Lumberton, Miss. Lumberton is a thriving little town about eighty miles from New Orleans on the Northeastern Railroad. Here I have located my industrial school, which will be known as the Lumberton Manual Labor School. The enterprising citizens of Lumberton have given me one thousand acres of beautiful land adjoining the town, bounded on one side by the Northeastern Railroad, and on another by the Gulfport and Ship Island. It is high, rolling, well-watered with running streams, and admirably adapted to our purposes. There are men of large means and public spirit behind the scheme to establish a school where an industrious boy or girl, who is willing to work, may get an education and learn a useful trade, and pay for it by his work. Industrial education is a great need of the times. And some plan is also needed by which an industrious poor boy or girl may get such an education without going in debt for it. It is true that by various methods self-reliant youth may get an education at any of our institutions of learning. A great many poor boys work during summer vacation and manage to pull through by a close economy. That is one way, but it is a precarious one. Some get scholarships or State appointments. That is another way, and good for the successful ones. Some borrow money, and give their obligation to repay it when they are through. That is another way, and a mighty bad one, for it leaves the poor fellow to start in the race handicapped by debt. Now, in our manual labor school we propose to obviate these disadvantages. We don't give the student anything and humiliate him by making him an object of charity. Neither do we credit him, and get him in debt. When he gets through with us, he will have a good education, be the master of a useful trade, have paid for everything he got by his work, and be ready to enter the labor world a skilled workman, to command the highest wages.

Of course there are plenty of skeptics who say this can't be done. But thank God the skeptics don't run this world. Some of us believe that it can be done. The men that are putting their money into it are mighty shrewd business men, and they believe it can be done. The public feel an interest in such work because it aims to meet important economic wants. Why we have hardly got started, yet I have just received a letter from the editor of a leading magazine in New York asking me to send him an account of "your most interesting experiment" for his magazine—invited into a national journal before we are fully born. Here is a Michigan millionaire asking "the privilege of subscribing to a school on that plan." That shows how the public regard such an educational enterprise.

We will hardly be able to show much except a fine site as you go on your way to Dallas, but when you come to Mardi Gras next year book yourself to lay off a day or two at the Lumberton Manual Labor School. It is lovely down here now. The wide spaces of these vast pine forests are flooded with sunshine, the bayberry blooms fill the air with rich perfume, our feathered friends have all come back, and the woods are full of song. While you are wrestling with the serious problems of ecclesiastical legislation in the sweltering committee rooms at Dallas, I'll be riding over my wide acres amid the glorious quiet of field and forest, planning for our work and looking up "through nature unto nature's God."

I have been re-elected president of Logan Female College, at Russellville, Ky., for another year, and will also have charge of that institution. I'm getting ahead of you, Mr. Editor. You have one school, but I have—two. And who knows but that I may yet become a "chancellor" like Dr. Smith! The "authorities" had no further use for me, and virtually told me to look out for myself; and as sure as your name is "Jimmy" I don't intend to play the role of a clerical Micawber, and suck my thumb till something "turns up." I had to paddle my own canoe at the start, and I haven't forgotten how. Now I am going to have a school where I am going to teach boys, and girls, too, to be self-reliant, to work out their own salvation, to take for their motto and live up to it, "Find a way, or make one" through the world.

At this writing I am in a good meeting in Meridian, Miss. I am preaching the glorious Gospel two and three times a day. There are extensive railroad shops here, where they build everything from a hand car to a locomotive. I have just been to preach to the men at the noon recess, and we had a fine service. I enjoy preaching to working men. These stalwart toilers at forge and machine gave close attention while I talked about Jesus the Carpenter. I always try to have a few anecdotes ready with which to catch the attention of the careless. I did not need to use any on this occasion for that purpose, but I did use one for illustration, and it instantly caught their ear. I was exhorting them to put absolute confidence in Jesus, and follow the path of duty loyally to Him marked out, though they might not be able to see far ahead. I told them that path was sometimes like a railroad track. The man on the engine couldn't see the curve, and it looked at a distance like the train was going to dash right into the hillside. Then I told them the story of the two Irishmen who had just arrived in America from the old country. They had never seen the railroad, and their first view of the cars was a train on the Hudson River road dashing around a curve and darting into a tunnel. After it had disappeared, Mike turned to Pat and said: "Pat, what d'ye think of it?" "Faith," said Pat, "Mike, I was thinking suppose it had missed the hole!" But when we are on the track there is no danger of missing the hole. That little story clinched the sermon. If you are going to preach to railroad men, don't dabble in Kant. By the way, a railroad shop is a splendid place to study men and ways of reaching them. These men expelled a man from the Meridian shops last week because he used profane language. God bless labor that runs its work on that line.

S. A. STEEL.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

BY R. N. PRICE.

Mr. Editor,—You expressed a regret that I shall not be a member of the next General Conference. Thanks. I located in 1898, and was not readmitted till 1900. This dropping out of two links in my itinerant chain, just at that part of the chain, rendered me ineligible to a seat in the General Conference. This was known to some of the members of the Conference; but I got a complimentary vote all the same. I came near being elected a delegate, and was elected first alternate; but made a virtue of necessity by declining the honor. Hoss was chosen at the head of the delegation; Richardson and Waterhouse were elected second and third in the delegation. I can't say how our delegation will vote when the issue is joined in the General Conference at Dallas.

The letters of Senators Hoar and Vest put a new face on the question. They say that, in their opinion, every cent of the money should be returned. So say I. Also, Senator Vest believes that Hoar or Hale will introduce a resolution demanding a return of the money, unless the General Conference orders its return. My opinion is, that we should return the money, whether it is demanded or not; and whether there is a prospect of its being voted to us again or not. The trouble could have been nipped in the bud four years ago. The thing was known at our last General Conference. At that time it should have been taken to settle the matter honorably. We could have saved our manners and our money. But we have lost our manners, and stand a chance to lose our money.

This question should be kept before the General Conference delegates in the elections, especially in that of the Resolutions Committee. We should be careful to have wise men at the head of the affairs. Stahlman and his like are competent to run a great Church. In the way, I understand that Stahlman is still a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, although he acknowledged before the senatorial committee that he intentionally deceived the Senate as to the question fee.

Kelley had to step down and apologize because he apologized for Emma Abbott, a woman actor. Two months ago he canvassed for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, when he had the consent of his presiding elder and his place was temporarily supplied, was sufficient cause for his suspension from the ministry. Poor Steel, that honest, brilliant man, was hounded for God knows what. Morrison was expelled from the Church for attending a camp-meeting in Texas after being ordered away by a resident pastor. But Major Stahlman is still a member of the Church in good standing. Can you tell me, Mr. Editor, what all this means?

I understand that Major Stahlman has sued Editor Palmore for libel. This reminds me of an incident. Some years since one of our Holston ministers (a man from the North) was talking of suing a certain layman who had been writing him up—suing for his character. An old local preacher hearing it, said: "If I were in his place, I would not sue for my old character; I would sue for a new one."

The Publishing House affair has soured a good many of our people throughout the connection. A prominent lawyer of Morristown, who longed to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1898, has withdrawn from the Church. His disaffection towards the Church began in the Publishing House matter. Another prominent man in the Church here has taken very little interest in the Church since 1898, except to pay his assessments. This spirit of disaffection prevails, I doubt more or less throughout the Church, and it ought to be, and can be cured by some stalwart action by the coming General Conference. Let us pray that the Holy Spirit may rest upon that body and guide it to wise conclusions in the Publishing House affair, and everything else. I trust the Bishops will, in their address, make such wise recommendations as will start legislation in the right direction. I am anxious to see something done for the local ministry. Legislation in recent years has not favored this branch of the service. It is falling in disrepute and inefficiency. In the tions it is a comparative nullity. But on the circuits, especially in sparsely settled districts of the country, it is still needed. It is a valuable arm of the service. We can't do without it. The local ministry is, at least, equal in numbers to the travelling ministry; and its rights ought not to be ignored. It is not right to class the local ministry with laymen. They are not laymen. At present local preachers have only a quasi reputation in the councils of the Church. One of the four delegates from a district to the Annual Conference may be a local preacher. One fourth of the lay delegates from an Annual Conference may be local preachers; and yet a district may send no local preacher to the Annual Conference; and the Annual Conference may send no local preacher to the General Conference. The legislation that made these provisions was class legislation, though perhaps not so intended.

I would have the local preachers in the District Conference to elect their delegates to the Annual Conference, and the local preachers in the Annual Conference to elect their own delegates to the General Conference. I see no good reason why the travelling ministry, the local ministry, and the laity should not have equal representation in the General Conference. Such an arrangement would dignify the local ministry and increase its popularity and usefulness.

I am also of opinion that preachers should be dismissed from one Conference to another, and received from one Conference to another by Conference vote. As it is, a Bishop can put down in a Conference any man he pleases from another Conference. This power has been used practically, but probably not intentionally, to defeat the ends of discipline. A preacher once became obnoxious on moral grounds in Conference A, and the Bishop transferred him to Conference B. Again a preacher lived out his welcome in Conference B, and was transferred to Conference C. Privately members of Conference C informed the Bishop that they did not want the transfer. So he was transferred to Conference D. Before he was lighted the Bishop was informed that, if he did light, he would be covered with charges. Therefore, the man was transferred again while on the wing, only to give trouble where he went. The Bishops in these cases were, no doubt, honest, and believed that they were assisting in the protection of a persecuted man.

I believe the Bishops should still have power to make transfers in the intervals of Conference sessions; but such transfers, to be permanent, should require confirmation by Conference action at both ends of the line. Such a law as I suggest would kill the special transfer or "giraffe" system, at least in its objectionable features. We have two appointments in Holston Conference which practically do not belong to the Conference. Of late years they have been uniformly supplied from broad. I hold with Bishop Keener (precious old man), that the men who make the stations ought to fill them.

I do not object to transfers. Let them come and go. The Church would be hampered without it. But let us have no places kept open for foreigners. When a man is transferred let him be transferred to the Conference and not to a place in it, and let him go before the cabinet for his place; let him take pot-luck. The special transfer system works a great hardship on our Bishops. It has of late years exposed them to much suspicion and criticism. It has weakened the confidence of some in the episcopal prerogative itself. Let us free our Bishops from such an unpopular responsibility. They have enough to do and to bear without this responsibility. Morristown, Tenn, April 5, 1902.

THE MAIN ISSUE IGNORED.

"How to settle our Publishing House War Claim?" is the question which Rev. J. O. Branch, of the South Georgia Conference, discusses in the last issue of the Wesleyan. The article is a very thoughtful one—expressed in strong language. With much that the writer says we agree, but his conclusion, as to what the General Conference ought to do in the matter, we do not accept. He raises a new question, which has not heretofore been taken into consideration: "Has the General Conference any legal or moral right to order that $288,000 be taken for the 'produce' or the capital of the Publishing House and put into the treasury of the United States? I answer most emphatically, no." He goes on to say: "The Publishing House is not the property of the General Conference. Its original owners created the General Conference and appointed it their agent for the transaction of their business. They have the power to delegate to this agent, under certain restrictions. These restrictions were deemed of such vital importance that they were incorporated in the constitution of the Church—a constitution which the General Conference cannot change. One article of this constitution, limiting the power of the General Conference, reads: 'They shall not appropriate the produce of the Publishing House to any other purpose than for the benefit of the travelling supernumerary, superannuated and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children.' If it would be a violation of the constitution of the Church for the General Conference to appropriate 'the produce of the Publishing House' to any purpose other than the one here specified, then, manifestly, it would be illegal, a monstrous wrong involving the whole body in disgrace, for the General Conference to lay its hands on $288,000 of the capital from which the produce of the Publishing House comes, and appropriate that to the United States. I shall not insult the intelligence of my readers by arguing this point, and will only add that, unless I have been misinformed, any attempt on the part of the General Conference to perpetrate this great wrong will be promptly stopped by a writ of injunction; and there is not a court in the land that will not make the injunction permanent when the issue is tried on its merit."

The above is a very ingenious piece of reasoning, but we are not so sure as the writer seems to be that his opinion would be sustained by the civil court. The threat of a "writ of injunction" is a species of bulldozing. If the General Conference decides that the return of the money to the United States Government is the right thing to do, any attempt to nullify that decision would be disloyalty. And we are sure that the beneficiaries mentioned in the sixth restrictive rule would not, and could not conscientiously, wish to become the recipients of money which the highest tribunal of the Church says the Church should not retain.

The plan proposed by the writer for settling the matter does not meet the case. He says: "Only the beneficiaries of the Publishing House fund have been injured. What action on the part of the General Conference can alone repair this injury, give contentment to disappointed and aggrieved Senators by carrying out their purpose in making the appropriation, and relieve the Church of all possible blame? Evidently this—provide for the payment to the Publishing House of the $100,800 given to Major Stahlman, less a reasonable sum on expense account, say $5,000, the amount named by Senator Lodge in the amendment he offered to the bill appropriating the money. This is the only conceivable course that exactly meets the demands of the occasion; it is the only rational response to the report of the committee on claims adopted by the Senate; it ought to be perfectly satisfactory to all parties, and will be satisfactory to every reasonable human being who understands the situation."

"Only the beneficiaries of the Publishing House fund have been injured!" No, sir; they are the least injured parties. The Southern Methodist Church has been made to suffer, and the injury to the Church is beyond calculation. We would rejoice if provision could be made for putting $95,000 into the treasury of the Publishing House for the benefit of the beneficiaries. But let us keep in mind the fact that any resolution, passed by the General Conference, providing for the raising of such fund, would be an acknowledgment of the guilt of our Book Agents and Book Committee. That after all is the main issue in the question. Did our Book Agents deceive the Senate, and did our Book Committee endorse their deception? If they did, —and no man who has common sense enough to understand the English language can doubt it—then they must be called to account.

The more we study this question the more we are impressed with its seriousness. Any delegate to the General Conference who does not apprehend the gravity of the situation, and who is controlled by passion, prejudice, or a partisan spirit, would serve the Church best by staying at home. It is a time for prayer.—Rev. W. R. Richardson, in Southern Christian Advocate.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS' RE-UNION, DALLAS, TEXAS, APRIL 22-25, 1902.

One cent per mile each way for the round trip applying from all points. Tickets on sale April 18th, 19th, and 20th, with return limit May 2d, except by depositing tickets at Dallas, and upon payment of 50 cents, extension of return limit may be had until May 15, 1902.

THE VIRGINIA EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

Rev. E. T. Dadmun, president of the Virginia State Epworth League Conference, has mailed to all charges in the Conference which have Epworth Leagues a letter requesting that each League contribute the sum of two dollars, or, if they are not able to contribute this amount, one dollar, toward the expenses of the State Executive Committee incidental to the Biennial Conference, which takes place at Danville June 12th to 15th next.

Comparatively few Leagues have been heard from, and it is possible that many of these letters did not reach their destination; or that they have been overlooked. All charges having Epworth Leagues desiring to contribute are urged to send their contributions at once to Charles M. Graves, Jr., secretary, post-office box 613, Norfolk, Va., when they will be promptly acknowledged. All Leagues who have not done so are asked to send to the secretary the names and post-office addresses of their presidents and secretaries, the name of the charge and the name of the League. This information is very essential, and it is hoped that all pastors and presidents of Leagues will respond promptly to this request.

The following contributions and pledges are acknowledged:

Memorial Epworth League,
Lynchburg .....	$ 2 00
Charlottesville Epworth League.	2 00
Mt. Vernon Epworth League,
Danville .....	2 00
Martinsville Epworth League...	1 50
White Marsh Epworth League,
Lancaster .....	1 00
Bellamy's Epworth League, Gloucester Circuit .....	2 00
Salem Epworth League, Gloucester Circuit .....	1 00
Carroll Epworth League, Bethel.	2 00
Clay Street Epworth League,
Richmond .....	2 00
Blandford Epworth League, Petersburg .....	2 00
Sledd Memorial Epworth League,
Danville .....	1 00
Main Street Epworth League,
Danville .....	2 00
Manson Epworth League, Harper's Home, Va. ....	1 00
Temperanceville Epworth League, Atlantic Circuit .....	1 00
Seaside Union of Epworth Leagues of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Berkley .....	25 00
(Signed.) E. T. DADMUN,
President.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

All virtues depend upon humility; so, if you wish a quick way to gain them and a short road to perfection, here it is: be humble.—Rodriguez.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IV, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 27.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xi, 1-18.
Memory Verses, 7-9—Golden Text
Acts x, 43—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.)

1 The gentiles also received the word of God

The apostles and brethren that were in Judaea heard this, and it is plain from the context that it did not fill them with joy. How unlike our Lord Jesus the most of His disciples are! At one time some of the apostles felt like burning a town because the people would not receive Christ, and now they seem to feel somewhat like burning Peter because through him some uncircumcised people had received Christ. We receive Christ when we receive the word of God concerning Him. It is a simple and most reasonable thing to receive with meekness the word of God, yet comparatively few do it. Those who do give joy to our Lord (Jas. i, 21; John xvii, 8).

2, 3. When Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him.

Though they had been for years with Jesus and had been filled with the Spirit, they had not learned the significance of "whosoever" nor that "in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything nor uncircumcision, but a new creature" (John iii, 16; Gal. vi, 15). The feeling still exists in some quarters that it would be wrong to officiate or take the communion outside of one's own denomination.

4-10. Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning.

About the sixth hour Peter felt led to go on the housetop to pray and, being hungry, would have eaten, but while they made ready he fell into a trance and saw this vision (x, 9, 10). At that very time the messengers from Cornelius were near to Joppa, and it was necessary that Peter should be ready to receive them and go with them, which he certainly would not have done but for this special vision. It is beautiful to see God preparing His servants for the good works which He has prepared for them.

11, 12. The Spirit bade me go with them.

While Peter was considering the significance of the vision the messengers from Cornelius were at the gate inquiring for him, and, instructed by the Spirit, he called the men in and lodged them, and the next day he and six others started with the messengers for Caesarea and the home of Cornelius. This book might well be called the acts of the Holy Spirit in the name of the Lord Jesus. In it we see God and angels and men all working together that men may know the riches of God's grace and His wonderful love.

13, 14. Who shall tell these words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

As Cornelius told Peter why he had sent for him, this is what he said that the angel said Peter would do; therefore at the time of that vision neither Cornelius nor his house, however devout, was saved, and Peter had to come from Joppa to tell them the good news concerning Jesus Christ that they might be saved. How few seem to feel as Paul did when he said, "I am debtor both to Greeks and to barbarians, so, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel" (Rom. i, 14, 15).

15. And as I began to speak the Holy Ghost came upon them as on us at the beginning.

Chapter x, 44, says, "While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word." So it was while Peter was still speaking and just at the beginning of his discourse that God wrought so marvelously. There was nothing in all this got up by man, neither the discourse nor the results. All was from God. It is my increasing conviction that if we preach the preaching which God bids us (Jonah iii, 2) the results will be all that God pleases (Isa. lv, 11).

16. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that He said, John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

These ascension words (Acts i, 5) had therefore only a fulfillment at Pentecost. Here is another fulfillment, and so it goes on and will until the great fulfillment, or fulfillment, of Joel ii, 28-32, in the near future. Jesus had told them that the Spirit would bring to their remembrance what He had said unto them (John xiv, 26), and He is now doing this with Peter.

17. Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I that I could withstand God?

Peter was in the hands of the Lord, the Lord's messenger, the Lord's servant, and it was the Lord who wrought all this, as they might have expected He would had they believed what He commanded concerning giving the gospel to every creature and the prophecy of Joel concerning pouring out His Spirit upon all flesh. Before Peter and the other six Jewish brethren God did for the uncircumcised gentiles just what He had done at Pentecost for circumcised Jews.

18. When they heard these things, they held their peace and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the gentiles granted repentance unto life.

The promise to Abram was that all families of the earth should be blessed in him (Gen. xii, 3), and it was written by the Spirit through Isaiah that Israel should blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit (Isa. xxvii, 6). One would think that in the blessing to this gentile household through Peter the Jew the brethren might have seen some fulfillment of these things and not have been surprised at them. Yet it is true that many prophecies still awaiting fulfillment when fulfilled shall greatly surprise a host of believers.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 27, "Samuel's Call"—Text, I Sam. iii, 1-21.

There are many pictures of childhood given in the Bible. Among them the account of the child Samuel holds a leading place and is of unfailing interest. In a rude age when pure religion was rare and even the priests of Jehovah were sometimes wicked men, unrestrained by the aged high priest, it is refreshing to see the simple faith and obedience of the boy who received messages from God and spoke confidently to Him.

The age of Samuel was one of the transition periods of religious history, and his influence in those changes was the most powerful of any one person. Moses stands as the representative of the law and Elijah as the type of the prophet, as a preacher of righteousness. Samuel represents the change from the older form of seers, who in trance and ecstatic vision and frenzy professed to reveal hidden truth and foresee the future, to a new type of men who by the use of rational powers came to know the will of God in clear eyed vision and to speak for Jehovah to men. They became prophets not so much because they foretold future events as because they told truth for God. They were for-tellers rather than fore-tellers.

Samuel was influential in driving divination and witchcraft of all kinds from the land and in their place establishing the study of the law of God as the all sufficient rule for the guidance of men. He founded the schools of the prophets which flourished for a long time afterward and prepared young men to teach the people religious truth.

Samuel never lost the simple, direct faith of his childhood. He was fearless in his defense of the right and direct in rebuking wrong, whether found in the king or people.

This lesson is chosen with special reference to a union meeting with the Junior League. This section of our organization is doing most important work. The impress made by religious truth upon the child's mind has great influence upon the after life. Too great care and attention cannot be given to this branch of our work. The little boys and girls should be taught the facts in regard to these Bible characters and shown how to apply the lessons of faith and obedience to their own needs. This story of Samuel cannot fail to be interesting and very helpful to them if handled in a sensible manner. Vastly more fascinating and helpful are these Bible stories than all the fairy tales and nonsense stories with which so many of them are often amused at the present time.

They should be taught how they may learn to know God's call to them, not in an audible voice, as Samuel seemed to hear Him speak; but as really and plainly as we know what a father or a mother wishes of us, so can they know what God has for them to do. As all Israel knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet, so may people now know that these children are Christian boys and girls and are determined to live for God.

Self Examination.

Activity is a necessary condition of life, and activity has reality only as we act. It is true of bodily life, of mental life and equally so of spiritual life. To keep the commandments we must do God's will, not merely think about doing it, not simply know how it should be done. Life consists in a series of actions, and life in Christ must accordingly be a series of actions in Christ. But when all this has been said and as much more upon the need of activity and of doing as you may be able to add by way of emphasis the whole truth has not been told. Action must be intelligent, have a proper final cause, understand its agencies and instruments, its environment and its limitations. We must think before we act.—Lutheran.

In Time of Trial.

During the time of trial do not seek to divert your mind wholly from the fact or strive to bury yourself in some business, with the view of "drowning your troubles," but honestly and squarely face the issues and trust the Lord to accomplish all His will in the trials through which He calls you to pass.—Gospel Witness.

A Hymn to Tomorrow.

"If it wasn't for hope, we should die with fear"
 Runs the dear old adage we used to hear
 When we needed no hope to borrow,
 And ever the sweetest thing in life,
 Through storm or sorrow or bitterest strife,
 Is the hope that enshrines tomorrow.

The world may be old,
 And our faith grow cold,
 And the blackest of shadows today enfold.

THE TOMORROW.

Tomorrow.

Tomorrow,

The way shall be paved with gold.

Out of the unknown we swiftly glide
 O'er the river of life so deep and wide,
 And ever new faith we borrow,
 For the way of God is a wondrous way,
 And it leads, by the path of the stern to-day,
 To the edge of a glad tomorrow.

We know not how
 It shall come, but Thou,
 O Lord, dost nothing but good allow,
 And tomorrow,
 Tomorrow,

We shall learn the truth which we know not now.

Sometimes it seems that the world is dark,
 All silent the song of the thrush and lark
 And vanished all else but sorrow,
 But over the edge of the darkest night
 There waits a sunrise serene and bright,
 And life will be glad tomorrow.

And so will it be
 When the end we see,
 For death means only a life more free,
 And tomorrow,
 Tomorrow,
 Tomorrow,
 Shall be heaven, dear Lord, with Thee!
 —Chicago Inter Ocean.

A TEMPERANCE TRIUMPH.

Details of Manitoba Measure That Has Been Declared Constitutional.

Rejoicing is general among Canadian prohibitionists because the privy council of London has declared the Manitoba prohibitory measure to be constitutional.

This law was passed by the provincial legislature early in the summer of 1900, but since then it has been tossed about from court to court with varying hopes of life until now the highest tribunal in Great Britain announces its right to live and do the service for which it was brought into being.

This service aims at the closing of all places where liquor is sold both by the glass and in bulk, with the exception of drugstores, where it may be procured for medicinal purposes when so certified by a doctor. The manufacture of liquor for use outside the province is prohibited, and no liquor can be imported except for the individual's private use. The dispensing of free drinks and liquor in the flask or bottle is expressly forbidden. The penalty for violating the act is severe, a fine of from $200 to $1,000 being imposed for the first offense and imprisonment with hard labor for the second.

The act is not all that prohibitionists desire, but if supported by a strong temperance sentiment it will make an effective measure. The decision of the privy council has also a wider significance than Manitoba, and now that the constitutional power of the provinces is assured there is good reason to believe that before long every province with the exception of Quebec will enact prohibitory legislation.

ORIGIN OF ABSINTH.

Was Once a Medical Remedy, but Has Since Deteriorated.

Temperance people in Europe were recently much surprised at the discovery that the deadly absinth was originally an extremely harmless medical remedy, says a writer in the New York Herald.

It was a French physician who first used it. His name was Ordinaire, and he was living as a refugee at Couvet, in Switzerland, at the close of the eighteenth century. Like many other country doctors at that time, he was also a druggist, and his favorite remedy was a certain elixir of absinth, of which he alone had the secret.

At his death he bequeathed the formula to his housekeeper, Mlle. Grand-pierre, and she sold it to the daughters of Lieutenant Henriod. They cultivated in their little garden the herbs necessary for concocting it, and after they had distilled a certain quantity of the liquid they sold it on commission to itinerant peddlers, who quickly disposed of it in the adjacent towns and villages.

Finally during the first decade of the nineteenth century a wealthy distiller purchased the formula, and very soon afterward he placed on the market the modern absinth, which differs greatly from the old medical remedy, since the latter contained no alcohol and very little absinth.

DRINK AND THE BRAIN.

How the Former Gradually Weakens the Latter.

Dr. Clouston of Edinburgh asylum, Scotland, writes to The Health Monthly:

"I am safe in saying that no man indulges for ten years continuously, even though he was never drunk in all that time, without being psychologically changed for the worse, and if the habit goes on after forty years the change is apt to be faster and more decided. We see it in our friends, and we know what the end will be, but we cannot lay hold of anything in particular. Their fortune and works suffer, and yet we dare not say they are drunkards, for they are not.

"It all depends on the original inherent strength of the brain how long the downward course takes. Usually some intercurrent diseases or tissue degeneration cuts off the man before he has a chance of getting old. I have seen such a man simply pass into senile dementia before he was an old man from mild, respectable alcoholic excess without any alcoholism or preliminary outburst at all.

"I am sure I have seen strong brains in our profession, at the bar and in business break down from chronic alcoholic excess without their owners ever having been once drunk."

The Fruits of Abstinence.

The total abstinence from intoxicating liquors is consistent with and conducive to the highest degree of physical and mental health and vigor, and such abstinence would greatly promote the health, the morality and happiness of the people. It is an indisputable fact that the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage is productive of a large amount of physical and mental disease and that it entails diseased appetites and enfeebled constitutions upon offspring and is thus the cause of a large percentage of the worst forms of disease and of the crime and wretchedness and pauperism in our large cities and country.—W. G. Haeselbarth.

The Views of a Grand Jury.

The following words are from a recent deliverance of the grand jury of Chicago: "The members of this body are not Puritans, but the fact that at least 90 per cent of all criminal cases coming before this body have had some saloon connection, direct or indirect, convinces us that the interest of public morals will be subserved by a strict enforcement of existing ordinances governing the conduct of saloons."

Strength of Temperance Leagues.

The Loyal Temperance legion has 250,000 members, the Woman's Christian Temperance union 300,000 and the Y's 250,000.

They who love melancholy live in misery.—Ram's Horn.

Puny-Balsam Relieves Right Away and makes a speedy end of coughs and colds

We shall never be sorry afterwards for thinking twice before we speak, for counting the cost before entering upon any new course, for sleeping over stings and injuries before saying or doing anything in answer, or for carefully considering any business scheme presented to us before putting money or name into it. It will save us from much regret, loss, and sorrow always to remember to do nothing rashly.

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—use a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. It has no taste or odor. It is air tight and acid proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake.

Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

NEW WESTERN VALLEY ROUTE

THROUGH THE STATES OF MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.

THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.

LURAY GROTTOES
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS

AND THE NORTH ATLANTIC.

Write for Rates, Maps, and Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptions, and Brochures to W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, GENERAL PASS AGENT, ROANOKE, VA.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS, UP-TO-DATE FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Blackstone, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, HEADACHE, STIFF NECK,

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

STIFF MUSCLES, STIFF JOINTS, STIFF KNEES, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, PAIN IN THE BACK, PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS, PAIN IN THE SIDE, CORNS AND BUNIONS,

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—SECOND ROUND.

Market Street, February 23d, morning.

Ettrick, February 23d, night.

Prince George, Mt. Sinai, March 1st, 2d, morning.

Blandford, March 2d, night.

Greensville, Forest chapel, March 8th, 9th, morning.

Sussex, Centenary, March 9th, evening; 10th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Smith's Grove, March 15th, 16th, morning.

West Street, March 16th, night.

Surry, Carsley's, March 22d, 23d, morning.

Wakefield, Waverly, March 23d, night; 24th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Zion, March 29th, 30th, morning.

South Hill, Pleasant Grove, March 30th, evening; 31st, morning.

West Lunenburg, Olive Branch, April 4th, morning (Friday).

Lunenburg, Providence, 5th, 6th, morning.

West Brunswick, Macedonia, April 6th, evening; 7th, morning.

Brunswick, Pleasant Grove, April 11th, morning (Friday).

South Brunswick, Bethany, April 12th, 13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Canaan, April 13th, evening; 14th, morning.

Nottoway, April 19th, 20th, morning.

Blackstone Station, April 20th, night; 21st, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Trinity, April 26th, 27th, morning.

Matoacca, April 27th, 28th, night.

Dinwiddie, Ocran, May 3d, 4th, morning.
R. T. WILSON, P. E.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—SECOND QUARTER.

South Pittsylvania, Providence, February 22d, 23d.

Prince Edward, Meherrin, March 1st, 2d.

Charlotte, Drake Branch, March 2d, 4th.

BOTH

FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times,

The Southern Farmer, and ### American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Henry, Mt. Bethel, March 29th, 30th.
Martinsville, March 30th, 7:30 P. M.
Danville Circuit, Sutherlin, April 2d, 11 A. M.

West Franklin, Callaway, April 5th, 6th.

Rocky Mount, April 9th, 7:30 P. M.
Franklin Circuit, St. Paul, April 10th, 11 A. M.

Pittsylvania, Anderson's, April 12th, 13th.

Washington Street, April 16th, 7:30 P. M.

Patrick, New Hope, April 19th, 20th.

South of Dan, Harmony, April 23d, 11 A. M.

Hyco, Cherry Hill, April 24th, 11 A. M.

East Franklin, Liberty, April 26th, 27th.

Smith's River, Elamsville, April 26th, 27th.

Ridgeway, Ridgeway, May 3d, 4th.

Main Street, May, 4th, 11 A. M.
Calvary, May 4th, 7:30 P. M.

Meadows of Dan, May 10th, 11th.
J. C. REED, P. E.

EVERY HEALTHY BOY likes to get himself into places of danger. Hence, bruises, strains and sprains. Mother scolds and brings out the bottle of Perry Davis' Painkiller and rubs it on the injured spots with an energy and frequency depending on the seriousness of the case. There is nothing like Painkiller to take out the soreness. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. Price, 25 cents and 50 cents.

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD

(Continued from first page.)

the fact that I believe the purposes are not fully understood.

(1) The first question concerns itself necessarily with the general purpose of this Board. What do the incorporators aim to accomplish by this movement?

(2) The second question is in this case equally important. How do they propose to carry out their purpose? What will be the methods employed? (3) The third question goes a little deeper into motive and manner, and asks, In what spirit is the work undertaken by these gentlemen? What attitude do they assume toward us, and toward our people?

The answers to these three questions will determine the answer to a fourth question, which is equally as important as the first three—namely, (4) What shall be the attitude of our educators toward this movement, and in what spirit shall we meet it?

I shall try to give answers to these four questions as briefly as will be consistent with clearness.

(1) What is the purpose of this Board? For the answer to this question we must look to their printed statement. It says:

"It is the purpose of the Board to promote education within the United States of America without distinction of race, sex or creed."

This fundamental statement of purpose must be commended by all persons interested in the cause of education. It is a broad platform. It makes no discrimination of any sort or kind. It leaves the question of where work shall be done to be determined by the facts which shall come before the Board. Is it possible to object to the formation of a Board with such a purpose? Does it not appear on its face to be an expression of genuine patriotism of the broadest type? I think the answer to the first question is satisfactory. Can the second question be answered in such a way that the answer will prevent any unsettling of the opinion in reference to the first?

(2) How does this Board propose to carry out its purpose? How to do a thing is usually a difficult problem in every sphere of life. Families, societies, cities, countries—aye, even churches—can decide that a certain thing ought to be done, but the question of the "how" is a source of discussion, contention, and sometimes of bloodshed. So when one enters upon this point, he does it feeling that it will be almost impossible for this Board to present plans that will be free from criticism or universally approved. But may not the fact that honest differences in plans to accomplish a good purpose are so prevalent in other matters among us act to keep us from questioning too hastily the sincerity and importance of the purpose in this case even if we should not be able to approve all the methods employed? What are, then, the methods of the Board?

Like every other Board, they have first found out the educational conditions of the field in which they propose to operate. Having secured their facts, they examine and compare them, and find out where there is the greatest need for their work, and there they go to work. Is not this the only reasonable method to adopt? If it is right to establish such a Board, ought not that Board to find out where the cause of education is most backward, and seek to promote the cause there? Well, the facts in this case are at hand, brought up to the year 1900, and I give the figures in reference to the white population in the North and the South, leaving the question of need among the negroes out of the comparison. The figures show the per cent. of white population over ten years old, unable to read and write:

Northern States.—Maine, 2.5; New Hampshire, 1.5; Vermont, 3.5; Massachusetts, 0.8; Rhode Island, 2.3; Connecticut, 1; New York, 1.8; New Jersey, 2.7; Pennsylvania, 3.5; District of Columbia, 1.7; Ohio, 3.5; Indiana, 5.3; Illinois, 3.1; Michigan, 2.5; Wisconsin, 2.1; Minnesota, 1.4; Iowa, 1.4; North Dakota, 1.4; South Dakota, 1.2; Nebraska, 1.3; Kansas, 2; Montana, 1.6; Wyoming, 7.3; Colorado, 3.8; Utah, 2.3; Nevada, 0.8; Idaho, 3.8; Washington, 1.3; Oregon, 1.8; California, 1.7.

Southern States.—North Carolina, 23; South Carolina, 18.1; Alabama, 18.4; Virginia, 14; Georgia, 16.5; Louisiana, 20.3; Arkansas, 16.6; Tennessee, 18; Texas, 8.3; Mississippi, 11.9; Maryland, 5.9; Florida, 11.3.

Can there be any question with these figures staring us in the face, where this Board ought to work, if it is to work at all? Suppose this Board, after its organization, had issued a call to the country to give funds that it might promote education in Minnesota, Iowa, Dakota, and Nebraska. Would it not have said that it is not a National Board, but a sectional Board, and that hatred of the South had caused its great needs to be ignored? These figures show that if this Board is to promote education at all, it ought to give special attention to the Southern States, and that is just what it has decided to do. If the purpose of the Board is good, the purpose to work, especially in the South, is also good, for there the need is greatest.

How does it propose to help us in our educational work?

First, and of prime importance, it does not propose to come among us and take charge of our educational systems, or to put Northern or foreign born men in charge of our work. It does not come with a demand that we shall surrender all our traditions, and conform our views on social or political questions to men of other sections and of different training. This should be strongly emphasized everywhere, for were there such a purpose we would be obliged to decline the proffered aid and continue to struggle on alone against adverse conditions, as we have done for nearly fifty years. But this movement is characterized by its sanity on this very point. This Board has recognized the fact that if it is to do the work needed to be done, it must do it through men who can do it, and that these men are our own Southern men. The plan of this Board, therefore, is to select men who are known to us, who are of our people, who understand us, our feelings, our customs, our needs, and to gain through our own men knowledge of our needs, and to co-operate with us in meeting these needs,

Is not this a sensible method? Is it not a great improvement on anything we have had before? Money has come into the South from the North for many purposes. The funds for yellow fever sufferers, for the flooded districts of the Mississippi and of Galveston, for drought and famine in Texas, all have been largely helped by the North. Millions of dollars have come to establish negro schools and colleges. And moreover our white people have not only not refused money from the North, but have in many cases sent their agents to the North to secure funds for our educational work. Emory and Wesleyan Colleges of Georgia, Vanderbilt University, and right here in Virginia, within the last year or so, Richmond College, Washington and Lee, University of Virginia, and Hampden-Sidney, have all received and been glad to receive money from the North. This giving has not been considered a doling out of alms to beggars, but an effort of broad-minded men to foster noble enterprises, and to invest their money where it would bring the greatest returns. But it is true that many of the gifts of Northern men have been made without any comparative idea of the needs, and without any means of knowing whether they were doing the best thing when they gave their money. The great educational needs in the South have never been presented to the wealthy philanthropists of the North. Only a few of the more prominent white colleges have been brought to their notice. They know very little of the struggle we have had to maintain our colleges, academies, seminaries—aye, even our high schools and common schools. The privations and self-denials of the men and women who taught the present generation have been too great to be recounted here. Suitable houses, equipment, and textbooks have all been lacking, and the three or five months term of the common school has been the despair of all good teachers and scholars. It is a constant wonder that we have done so much. But of these needs there was little knowledge at the North. I saw in one of the Richmond papers a few days ago that Robert Billings, of Boston, made public bequests of $900,000. Of this amount $40,000 came to the South, and all to three negro schools. The needs of all three of these schools had no doubt been brought prominently to his attention, and he probably knew little of the other educational needs of the South. Now, if money is to be given to our Southern educational work, is it not better that it should be given after consultation with men who have made a careful survey of the whole field, and who are planning, not to push one particular enterprise, but to elevate every branch of the work? Is it not better that money should be placed in the hands of this Board to use in promoting the cause of education than that it should be given by men because of individual appeals to special enterprises, without any regard to the comparative needs of white or colored or common school or university education? Especially when we remember that this Board is to do its work in close co-operation with Southern men, I ask again, is this not a sensible plan? It seems so to me.

I cannot enter elaborately into a discussion of other methods of work, but will indicate a few of them. In the "World's Work" for April, the editor, Dr. Page, who is a member of the Board, gives a clear statement of the principles underlying the work:

(1) "It is worth while to help those that help themselves, and only those."

(2) "It is best worth while to help the public that helps itself, because by building up public sentiment a permanent investment is made in democracy."

The Board has also sent out a statement, from which I select the following as some of the methods they will pursue:

"To co-operate with other organizations interested in educational work; to develop the public school system, especially in rural districts; to aid in the maintenance and improvement of educational institutions already established; to further the establishment of training schools for teachers; to develop the principles of self-help by urging increased local taxation, local contributions, or by other means; to act as an educational bureau both in the collection and dissemination of educational information."

These are some of the ways in which this Board proposes to promote education. Is not the answer to the second question sufficiently satisfactory for us to go on to the third?

(3) In what spirit does this Board undertake this work? This question I believe to be the most important of all, and the one that must be most clearly answered. The spirit shown by those who offer to help us determines in most cases whether we will accept their help. Is there any evidence that this Board has any improper spirit? Have they assumed a Pharisaic air, or do they pose as missionaries? There is no proof of it. Their attitude is that of men who have learned some facts and who feel that in view of those facts they want to do certain things. They have discovered that the North is jointly responsible with the South for the condition of affairs in the South; that the burden upon the Southern white man since the war has been greater than he could bear; that he has not been able to educate his own children, and yet they have discovered that, out of their poverty, the Southern whites have given millions to the education of the negroes. They have discovered that we are earnestly engaged in the promotion of public education, but that we have a far greater task than any other section of the country, and so they have come forward, and they say, "You have a great work to do; it is more than you ought to be expected to do alone. We want to help you do this work, and we are going to do so, if you will accept our aid." This is the spirit of this Board, if I understand it. It does not come to minimize our work, or to ridicule our condition. It does not come with an air of arrogance or superiority. It does not come demanding to be put in charge of our affairs. It comes appreciating the great work we have done under adverse conditions, and asks that it may aid us in our great work. The names of some of the men on this Board is a further guarantee of the spirit of the undertaking.

Dr. J. L. M. Curry, Dr. D. C. Gilman, Dr. Walter H. Page, and Mr. George Foster Peabody are men who are well known throughout our section, as either natives or well-wishers of the South. Is there any reason, therefore, in view of the above, to doubt that the spirit of this Board is fraternal and sympathetic in the broadest sense?

(4) What shall be the attitude of our educators toward this movement, and in what spirit shall we meet it?

In view of what has been said above, the reader already knows my answer to this question. I believe that Southern educators should heartily co-operate with this Board, and should accept its aid in the same fraternal spirit in which it is offered. We have a great work to do, especially in the public school work, from primary to high school grade. My experience of nearly ten years as principal of one of the largest secondary schools in the State, with students from nearly every county east of the Blue Ridge, and my canvassing throughout the country districts, have revealed conditions which cause me to welcome most heartily the aid which this Board proposes to extend. I hope all those who are giving their lives to this great cause, and all those who are interested in it, will investigate the plans of this Board, will feel encouraged by the fact that we have another strong ally in our work, and will give a hearty welcome to these gentlemen, who have shown a practical appreciation of our labors and difficulties by offering to help us to do our great work.

JAMES CANNON, JR.

Blackstone, Va., April 15, 1902.

DR. T. DEWITT TALMAGE.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., the noted Presbyterian divine, died at 9 o'clock Saturday night at his residence in Washington. It had been evident for some days that there was no hope of recovery, and the attending physicians so informed the family. The patient gradually grew weaker, until life passed away so quietly that even the members of the family, all of whom were watching at the bedside, hardly knew that he had gone.

The immediate cause of death was inflammation of the brain.

Dr. Talmage was in poor health when he started away from Washington for Mexico, for a vacation and rest, six weeks ago. He was then suffering from influenza, and serious catarrhal conditions. Since his return to Washington some time ago he had been quite ill. Until Thursday fears for his death were not entertained.

The last rational words uttered by Dr. Talmage were on the day preceding the marriage of his daughter, when he said: "Of course, I know you, Maud." Since then he had been unconscious.

At Dr. Talmage's bedside were the members of his family, his wife, Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, of Chicago; Mrs. Warren G. Smith, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Daniel Mangum, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Allen E. Donnan, of Richmond; Mrs. Clarence Wyckoff, and Miss Talmage, of Washington.

The funeral took place at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the Church of the Covenant, with simple services. There was no funeral sermon, but short addresses concerning the life and works of Dr. Talmage were made by men who have been intimately associated with him. Dr. Teunis S. Hamlin, pastor of the church, and Dr. Thomas Chalmers Easton, of the Eastern Presbyterian Church of Washington, both assisted in the services. Dr. Samuel J. Nicols, of St. Louis, a life-long friend, made an address, and Dr. E. P. Terhune, of New Jersey; Dr. Howard Suydam, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., and Dr. James Damerest, of Brooklyn, all school friends of the deceased, were asked to assist. Music was furnished by the male quartette of the Church of the Covenant. At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning interment took place in the family lot at Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

DR. TALMAGE'S LIFE AND WORK.

Rev. Thomas DeWitt Talmage, D. D., was born at Bound Brook, N. J., January 7, 1832. He was educated without graduating in the class of 1853, University of the City of New York, and at the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. In the years 1856 to 1859 he was pastor of Reformed churches at Belleville, N. J. In the year 1859 he took charge of the church in Syracuse, N. Y., which he held for three years. He was then called to the Second church, Philadelphia, and lived there until the year 1869, when he moved to Brooklyn, to accept the pastorate of the Second Presbyterian church, afterwards known as the "Tabernacle." In 1895 he began his popular afternoon service at the Academy of Music, New York. During his pastorate in Brooklyn the Schermerhorn Street church was opened as a tabernacle lay college for training Christian workers, with Dr. Talmage as president; the Tabernacle was built in 1870, was burned in 1872, rebuilt in 1874, burned in 1899, rebuilt in 1891, burned in 1894; the membership last reported was 4,447.

The last few years of Dr. Talmage's life were spent in Washington, D. C., where he continued his Church work.

Dr. Talmage edited the Christian at Work, New York, 1873-'76; the Advance, Chicago, 1877-'78; Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine; and since 1890, the Christian Herald.

HIS PUBLISHED SERMONS.

His sermons appeared every week in many hundred secular and religious papers, and were translated into many foreign languages.

Besides frequent contributions to periodicals, including a series of articles describing his journey around the world in 1893-'94, he published the Almond Tree and Blossom (Philadelphia, 1870); Shots at Gats; Crumbs Swept Up (1870); Sermons (four volumes, New York, 1872-'75); Abominations of Modern Society (New York, 1872; second edition, 1876); The Battle for Bread; One Thousand Gems, or Brilliant Passages and Anecdotes (1873); Old Wells Dug Out (1874); Around the Tea-Table (Philadelphia, 1874); Orange Blossoms Frosted; Sports that Kill (New York, 1875); Every Day Religion (1875); Night-Sides of City Life (1878); Mask Torn Off (1879); The Marriage Ring (1866); Social Dynamite (Chicago, 1887); The Pathway of Life; From the Pyramids to the Acropolis (Philadelphia, 1892); Ready! Aye (New York, 1894); The Brooklyn Tabernacle—104 Sermons (1884)

WASHINGTON, — The discourse of Dr. Talmage is full of the nativity and appropriate for the holidays; text, Luke ii, 16, "And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph and the Babe lying in a manger."

The black window shutters of a December night were thrown open, and some of the best singers of a world where they all sing stood there and, putting back the drapery of cloud, chanted a peace anthem until all the echoes of hill and valley applauded and encored the hallelulah chorus. Come, let us go into that Christmas scene as though we had never before worshipped at the manger. Here is a Madonna worth looking at. I wonder not that the most frequent name in all lands and in all Christian centuries is Mary. And there are Marys in palaces and Marys in cabins, and, though German and French and Italian and Spanish and English pronounce it differently, they are all namesakes of the one whom we find on a bed of straw, with her pale face against the soft cheek of Christ in the night of the nativity. All the great painters have tried, on canvas, to present Mary and her child and the incidents of that most famous night of the world's history. Raphael, in three different masterpieces, celebrated them. Tintoretto and Ghirlandajo surpassed themselves in the adoration of the Magi. Correggio needed to do no more than his Madonna to become immortal. The "Madonna of the Lily," by Leonardo da Vinci, will kindle the admiration of all ages. But all the galleries of Dresden are forgotten when I think of the small room of that gallery containing the "Sistine Madonna." Yet all of them were copies of St. Matthew's Madonna and Luke's Madonna, the inspired Madonna of the old book which we had put into our hands when we were infants and that we hope to have under our heads when we die.

Brute Creation Honored.

Behold, in the first place, that on the first night of Christ's life God honored the brute creation. You cannot get into that Bethlehem barn without going past the camels, the mules, the dogs, the oxen. The brutes of that stable heard the first cry of the infant Lord. Some of the old painters represent the oxen and camels kneeling that night before the newborn babe. And well might they kneel! Have you ever thought that Christ came, among other things, to alleviate the sufferings of the brute creation? Was it not appropriate that he should, during the first few days and nights of his life on earth, be surrounded by the dumb beasts, whose moan and plaint and bellowing have for ages been a prayer to God for the arresting of their tortures and the righting of their wrongs? Not a kennel in all the centuries, not a bird's nest, not a wornout horse on towpath, not a herd freezing in the poorly built cowpen, not a freight car in summer time bringing the bees to market without water through a thousand miles of agony, not a surgeon's room witnessing the struggles of fox or rabbit or pigeon or dog in the horrors of vivisection but has an interest in the fact that Christ was born in a stable surrounded by brutes.

Standing then, as I imagine now I do, in that Bethlehem night, with an infant Christ on the one side and the speechless creatures of God on the other, I cry: Look out how you strike the rowel into that horse's side; take off that curbed bit from that bleeding mouth; remove that saddle from that raw back; shoot not for fun that bird that is too small for food; forget not to put water into the cage of that canary; throw out some crumbs to those birds caught too far north in the winter's inclemency; arrest that man who is making that one horse draw a load heavy enough for three; rush in upon that scene where boys are torturing a cat or transfixing butterfly and grasshopper; drive not off that old robin, for her nest is a mother's cradle and under her wing there may be three or four musicians of the sky in training. In your families and in your schools teach the coming generation more mercy than the present generation has ever shown and in this marvelous Bible picture of the nativity, while you point out to them the angel, show them also the camel, and while they hear the celestial chant let them also hear the cow's moan.

Masterpiece of Jehovah.

Behold also in this Bible scene how on that Christmas night God honored childhood. Childhood was to be honored by that advent. He must have a child's light limbs and a child's dimpled hand and a child's beaming eye and a child's flaxen hair, and babyhood was to be honored for all time to come, and a cradle was to mean more than a grave. Mighty God! May the reflection of that one child's face be seen in all infantile faces!

Enough have all those fathers and mothers on hand if they have a child in the house. A throne, a crown, a scepter, a kingdom, under charge. Be careful how you strike him across the head, jarring the brain. What you say to him will be centennial and millennial, and a hundred years and a thousand years will not stop the echo and re-echo. Do not say, "It is only a child." Rather say, "It is only an immortal." It is only a masterpiece of Jehovah. It is only a being that shall outlive sun and moon and star and ages quadriennial. God has infinite resources, and he can give presents of great value, but when he wants to give the richest possible gift to a household he looks around all the worlds and all the universe and then gives a child. Yea, in all ages God has honored childhood. He makes almost every picture a failure unless there be a child either playing on the floor or looking through the window or seated on the lap gazing into the face of the mother.

It was a child in Naaman's kitchen that told the great Syrian warrior where he might go and get cured of the leprosy which at his seventh plunge in the Jordan was left at the bottom of the river. It was to the cradle of leaves in which a child was lain, rocked by the Nile, that God called the attention of history. It was a sick child that evoked Christ's curative sympathies. It was a child that Christ set in the midst of the squabbling disciples to teach the lesson of humility. A child decided Waterloo, showing the army of Blucher how it could take a short cut through the fields when, if the old road had been followed, the Prussian general would have come up too late to save the destinies of Europe. It was a child that decided Gettysburg, he having overheard two Confederate generals in a conversation in which they decided to march for Gettysburg instead of Harrisburg, and, this reported to Governor Curtin, the Federal forces started to meet their opponents at Gettysburg. And today the child is to decide all the great battles, make all the laws, settle all the destinies and usher in the world's salvation or destruction. Men, women, nations, all earth and all heaven, behold the child!

A Tribute to Science.

Notice also that in this Bible night scene God honored science. Who are the three wise men kneeling before the Divine Infant? Not bores, not ignoramuses, but Caspar, Balthasar and Melchior, men who knew all that was to be known. They were the Isaac Newtons and Herschels and Faradays of their time. Their alchemy was the forerunner of our sublime chemistry, their astrology the mother of our magnificent astronomy, and when I see these scientists bowing before the beautiful babe I see the prophecy of the time when all the telescopes and microscopes, and all the Leyden jars, and all the electric batteries, and all the observatories, and all the universities shall bow to Jesus. It is much that way already. Where is the college that does not have morning prayers, thus bowing at the manger? Who have been the greatest physicians? Omitting the names of the living lest we should be invidious, have we not had among them Christian men like James Y. Simpson and Rush and Valentine Mott and Abercrombie and Abernethy? Who have been our greatest scientists? Joseph Henry, who lived and died in the faith of the gospels, and Agassiz, who, standing with his students among the hills, took off his hat and said, "Young gentlemen, before we study these rocks let us pray for wisdom to the God who made the rocks." All geology will yet bow before the Rock of Ages. All botany will yet worship the Rose of Sharon. All astronomy will yet recognize the Star of Bethlehem.

Shepherds Were Welcomed.

Behold also in that first Christmas night that God honored the fields. Come in, shepherd boys, to Bethlehem and see the child. "No," they say, "we are not dressed good enough to come in." "Yes, you are; come in." Sure enough, the storms and the night dew and the brambles have made rough work with their apparel, but none has a better right to come in. They were the first to hear the music of that Christmas night. The first announcement of a Saviour's birth was made to those men in the fields. There were wisacres that night in Bethlehem and Jerusalem snoring in deep sleep, and there were salaried officers of government who, hearing of it afterward, may have thought that they ought to have had the first news of such a great event, some one dismounting from a swift camel at their door and knocking till at some sentinel's question, "Who comes there?" the great ones of the palace might have been told of the celestial arrival. No; the shepherds heard the first two bars of the music, the first in the major key and the last in the subdued minor, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men!" Ah, yes, the fields were honored!

The old shepherds with plaid and crook have for the most part vanished, but we have grazing on our United States pasture fields and prairie about 42,000,000 sheep, and all their keepers ought to follow the shepherds of my text, and all those who toil in fields, all vine dressers, all orchardists, all husbandmen. Not only that Christmas night, but all up and down the world's history, God has been honoring the fields. Nearly all the messiahs of reform and literature and eloquence and law and benevolence have come from the fields. Washington from the fields.

Jefferson from the fields. The presidential martyrs, Garfield and Lincoln and McKinley, from the fields. Henry Clay from the fields. Daniel Webster from the fields. Martin Luther from the fields. Before this world is right the overflowing populations of our crowded cities will have to take to the fields. Instead of ten merchants in rivalry as to who shall sell that one apple we want at least eight of them to go out and raise apples. Instead of ten merchants desiring to sell that one bushel of wheat, we want at least eight of them to go out and raise wheat. The world wants now more hard hands, more bronzed cheeks, more muscular arms. To the fields! God honored them when he woke up the shepherds by the midnight anthem, and he will, while the world lasts, continue to honor the fields. When the shepherd's crook was that famous night stood against the wall of the Bethlehem khan, it was a prophecy of the time when thrasher's flail and farmer's plow and woodman's ax and ox's yoke and sheaf binder's rake shall surrender to the God who made the country, as man made the town.

Motherhood Consecrated.

Behold also that on that Christmas night God honored motherhood. Two angels on their wings might have brought an infant Saviour to Bethlehem without Mary's being there at all. When the villagers on the morning of Dec. 26 awoke, by divine arrangement and in some unexplained way the child Jesus might have been found in some comfortable cradle of the village. But no, no! Motherhood for all time was to be consecrated, and one of the tenderest relations was to be the maternal relation and one of the sweetest words, "mother." In all ages God has honored good motherhood. John Wesley had a good mother; St. Bernard had a good mother; Samuel Budgett, a good mother; Doddridge, a good mother; Walter Scott, a good mother; Benjamin West, a good mother. In a great audience, most of whom were Christians, I asked that all those who had been blessed of Christian mothers arise, and almost the entire assembly stood up. Do you not see how important it is that all motherhood be consecrated? Why did Titian, the Italian artist, when he sketched the Madonna make it an Italian face? Why did Rubens, the German artist, in his Madonna make it a German face? Why did Joshua Reynolds, the English artist, in his Madonna make it an English face? Why did Murillo, the Spanish artist, in his Madonna make it a Spanish face? I never heard, but I think they took their own mothers as the type of Mary, the mother of Christ. When you hear some one in sermon or oration speak in the abstract of a good, faithful, honest mother, your eyes fill up with tears while you say to yourself, "That was my mother."

Waiting at the Throne.

The first word a child utters is apt to be "mother," and the old man in his dying dream calls: "Mother! Mother!" It matters not whether she was brought up in the surroundings of a city and in affluent home and was dressed appropriately with reference to the demands of modern life or whether she wore the old time cap and great, round spectacles and apron of her own make and knit your socks with her own needles seated by the broad fireplace, with great backlog ablaze, on a winter night. It matters not how many wrinkles crossed and recrossed her face or how much her shoulders stooped with the burdens of a long life. If you painted a Madonna, hers would be the

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast rail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

3:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:50 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.
S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent,
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY LINE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California, and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

Schedule in Effect February 24, 1901.

Route.	No. 27.	No. 31
Leave Richmond.....	12:28 noon	10:40 P M
Arrive Petersburg.....	1:08 P M	11:30 P M
Arrive Henderson.....	3:52 P M	2:27 A M
Arrive Durham daily exc. Sunday.....		8:30 A M
Arrive Raleigh.....	5:04 P M	3:41 A M
Arrive South'n Pine.....	6:57 P M	5:37 A M
Arrive Pinehurst.....	7:17 P M	*6:10 A M
Arrive Hamlet.....	7:50 P M	6:30 A M
Arrive Charlotte.....	10:45 P M	9:51 A M
Arrive Wilmington.....		12:05 noon
Arrive Columbia.....	11:30 P M	9:40 A M
Arrive Savannah.....	2:20 A M	12:10 noon
Arrive Jacksonville.....	6:30 A M	3:50 P M
Arrive St. Augustine.....	8:50 A M	5:00 P M
Arrive Tampa.....	5:00 P M	5:00 P M
Arrive Athens.....	4:08 A M	2:19 P M
Arrive Atlanta Cen T.....	5:30 A M	3:35 P M
Arrive Macon.....	11:10 A M	7:20 P M
Arrive Montgomery.....	11:00 A M	9:20 P M
Arrive Mobile.....	4:12 P M	2:55 A M
Arrive New Orleans.....	8:30 P M	7:30 A M
Arrive Chattanooga.....	1:00 P M	12:35 A M
Arrive Nashville.....	6:55 P M	5:35 A M

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:30 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norfolk, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norfolk with train arriving Henderson 2:40 P. M. and Raleigh 4:22 P. M. daily, and Durham 4:30 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily; No. 44 at 5:10 A. M. and No. 66 at 5:55 P. M.

*Through Sleeping Car from Washington to Pinehurst, every Wednesday and Friday. Passengers from North of Washington can take this car by passing from the New York to the Washington sleeper.

**Connection daily at Southern Pines with all trains for Pinehurst, N. C.—20 minutes by electric cars.

Connections at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East Coast points, and Cuba and Porto Rico. At New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

TRAINE ARRIVE RICHMOND DAILY:

4:45 A. M., No. 44, from all points South and Southwest.

5:35 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

6:13 P. M., No. 36, from Norfolk, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 44—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Drawing-Room, Sleeping, Compartment, and Observation Cars, and Through Day Coaches between New York and St. Augustine—Dining Cars, serving all meals en route. Also Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Florida and Atlanta Fast Mail. Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which Through Pullman Tickets are sold. Finest Day Coaches.

Z. P. SMITH,

District Passenger Agent,

Phone 405. 836 east Main street.

V. E. M'BEE. R. E. L. BUNCH,

Gen'l Supt. Gen'l Pass. Agent.

Portsmouth, Va.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo. for free examination and advice.

BOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent.

Write to G. A. SNOW & CO.

Patent Lawyers, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

diamonds,

Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing.

Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing

Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

921 Main Street Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,

Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLS

and

UMBERYARD

MECHANICAL REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

— PLOW HANDLES. —

— OBBACO HOGHEADS. —

— CORN MEAL —

— SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES —

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blackstone, Va.

Religious News.

Two hundred members of the local lodge of Knights of Pythias attended worship at High Street Methodist church last night, where a special sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. George E. Booker. Many people were turned away for lack of standing room.

The revival services continue at the Methodist church now for the second week. The Rev. Dr. A. Coke Smith, of Epworth church, Norfolk, will preach to the congregation at the services. At last night's meeting the Rev. Dr. Smith was greeted with a good congregation. The reverend gentleman took as the text of his sermon "Escape for Thy Life." In his remarks the preacher made a strong appeal to his hearers to put away from themselves the allurements of the world and improve Christianity in spirit as well as in name. Dr. Smith spoke in his usual subdued tones, yet his words went home to his hearers, and many of them seemed visibly affected by the strength of his remarks. Before the close of the meeting several came forward and professed conversion. Rev. Dr. Smith will preach at the service each evening during this week.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

At Central Methodist church last night the Rev. R. M. Chandler preached to one of the largest congregations the church has ever seen. There were many converts. At the morning service the doors of the church were thrown open for those who wanted to come in. There were thirty-four received. The revival services will continue through the week. During the last week, at each service, large crowds have heard the eloquent preacher.—Leader.

The rally of the Epworth Leagues at Cumberland Street Methodist church Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the Seaside Union, was a grand success. Mr. T. J. Kegebein, president of the Union, presided. The opening invocation was made by Rev. E. H. Rawlings, of Monumental church, Portsmouth, and Rev. E. T. Dadmun, State president of the Epworth Leagues, made a most interesting address, outlining the work of the State Conference, held at Danville June 12th.

The address of the evening was made by Rev. W. A. Barr, of St. Luke's Episcopal church. His subject was "True Greatness," which he discussed in his usual eloquent and impressive manner. He took Christ as the pattern of "True Greatness," who ministered unto others, and said that in order to be truly great in this life we must take Him as our model and minister unto others if we wished to reach the highest and only source of true happiness.

The musical selections by the choir were a most pleasing and attractive feature of the meeting, especially the duet by Mrs. J. W. Gregory and Mr. J. R. Fisher, and the solo by Mrs. Dr. Farmer. The services concluded with the benediction by Rev. C. L. Bane.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The vice-president of the Methodist Preachers' meeting of the city, Rev.

L. W. Guyer, presided this morning in the regular weekly meeting, and Rev. S. C. Hatcher led the devotional exercises.

Rev. Mr. Hatcher reported fourteen additions to the membership at Market Street on profession of faith and three by certificate. Revival services will continue this week.

Other reports were of the usual routine order, and the pastors all had profitable services on yesterday. It is apparent that at some of our churches the congregations are very large, while all are well attended.

The various needs of Church work here were discussed, and a most hopeful aspect does the condition of the work present. Preaching and texts were also discussed, and these happy, though hard toiling representatives of the pulpit, were in excellent trim. The clergyman's "blue Monday" is greatly alleviated in the society of others of the same profession or calling. Petersburg's religious side is seen in such gatherings, and the sight tends greatly to encourage us in the Master's work.—Progress.

METHODIST PREACHERS.

There were thirty pastors present at the Methodist preachers' meeting yesterday morning, and the session was the most interesting one held for several weeks. Rev. W. R. Proctor presided, and prayer was made by Rev. Charles E. Watts, of Southampton Circuit.

The most important factor in the meeting was a general discussion of the work of the Epworth League and its needs as an auxiliary of Church work.

Rev. Dr. Smith was the first speaker. He said what was needed mostly in the Epworth League is something to prevent our young men and women from dropping off from the church and going into other communions. He said something was needed to indoctrinate our children in the great doctrines of the Methodist Church, and this should be the most important factor in Epworth League work in building them up in religious, intellectual and Church life, and to arm and equip them to battle against the great current of worldliness that is now sapping and undermining their character and usefulness in the Church and the world. He said we needed something in the work of the Epworth League to draw the young from the evil fascinations of the world and to make them pillars in the temple of God.

Rev. E. H. Rawlings, who has been greatly interested in the work of the Epworth League, said that he had been associated with five Epworth Leagues since the movement was first inaugurated, and that all of them had been a success. The Centenary League had been largely the spiritual life of the church. The League at Clay Street church, Richmond, was one of the best in the State, and the League at Monumental church, Portsmouth, is also a fine organization, and has been the means, in a large measure, of giving inspiration to the church. He admitted that the literary department was a difficult field of operation, and, in some respects, had not been a success, but not in many. Another difficulty was to know how to conduct its devotional meetings, which were intended as the successor of the old-timed class meetings. They should be the head and life of the Epworth Leagues. One great need of the League is a competent and consecrated leader, and the pastor ought to instruct them thoroughly in their work and to be discreet in handling the work of the League.

Rev. W. A. Christian said that the Epworth is not solitary and alone in having these difficulties to contend with. The Christian Endeavorers, the B. Y. P. U., the Westminster League, and the St. Andrew's Brotherhood all labor under the same difficulties. He regretted to say that the work of the Epworth League had been in many instances sharply criticised for its failures, and this, he said, was no fault of the pastors. Those who have labored to make it better had, in some respects, labored without results. What we want to make of the Epworth League is an organization chiefly for the young people of the Church, in which they can be made a great spiritual force for building up the kingdom of Christ in the world.

Rev. R. H. Bennett and Rev. J. K. Jolliff spoke earnestly on the subject. Mr. Bennett said what the League mostly needs is to be practical in its work. Mr. Jolliff said we will always find difficulties in the way, but we must meet them, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit conquer them. We can never be absolutely perfect in any of our work.

The discussion was an animated and profitable one.

RESOLUTION OF SYMPATHY.

The following offered by Rev. Graham H. Lambeth, was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That we tender to our beloved brother, Rev. Dr. J. P. Barrett, our sincere sympathy in his recent affliction in the loss of his brother, Mr. Joseph A. Barrett. We commend him to the God of all grace, and rejoice with him in the assurance of the presence and consolation of the Divine Comforter.

GRAHAM H. LAMBETH,
GEO. WESLEY JONES,
W. ASBURY CHRISTIAN.

CALL OF CHURCHES.

Under the regular call of the churches reports were heard from the following:

Rev. J. B. Merritt reported a good week at the Seamen's Bethel and excellent services and a fine attendance Sunday.

Rev. Dr. Barrett, of the Christian Memorial Temple, said that he was absent from the city Sunday, but that the usual services were held at his church.

At Oaklette the pastor, Rev. Mr. Smith, conducted the usual services.

Rev. J. D. Hank, presiding elder of the Charlottesville District, preached at Denby's church Sunday morning, and the pastor, Rev. W. R. Crowder, in the afternoon. Both services were well attended.

Trinity—Rev. Geo. Wesley Jones had a good day. He received two new members—one by certificate and one on profession of faith.

Rev. C. E. Watts, of Southampton, reported the work on his charge in good condition.

Monumental—Rev. E. H. Rawlings preached morning and night to large congregations. He took up a collection for the work in Cuba and realized $45. He said that since the last Conference 240 members had been added to the church in this missionary field.

Rev. R. H. Bennett reported that Dr. Smith preached a fine sermon at Epworth church Sunday morning, and the service was a most excellent one. Two members were received on profession of faith, and four by certificate. Mr. Bennett preached at night on "The Ministry."

Dr. Smith announced the death of Mrs. Harrison Sunday. She was the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Adam C. Bledsoe. Her remains were taken to Amherst county for interment yesterday.

Rev. W. R. Proctor preached a splendid sermon at Cumberland Street church Sunday morning on "The Excellency of the Knowledge of Jesus Christ." The pastor, Rev. C. L. Bane, preached at night, and received two on profession of faith. Very large congregations were present at both services.

Rev. Daniel T. Merritt received four new scholars at Port Norfolk, and preached to the usual congregations morning and night.

Rev. Graham H. Lambeth preached morning and night at Lekies Memorial.

Rev. C. L. Bane assisted Rev. W. T. Green in a revival service at Central church.

Rev. George H. McFaden had the largest Sunday school in the history of Wright Memorial church, 342 scholars of the 386 on the roll being present. Large congregations attended the regular church services.

Rev. W. Asbury Christian had the usual congregations to hear him at Memorial church, Berkley.

At Park View, Rev. J. N. Latham received three new scholars in the Sunday school, and had large congregations to hear him at the morning and evening services.

Queen Street—Rev. J. K. Jolliff reported a fine Sunday school and large congregation. He began a revival meeting Sunday night. There was one conversion and six requests for prayer.

Rev. C. L. Bane preached the missionary sermon before the Missionary Society of McKendree church Sunday morning, and a large collection was raised for the cause. The pastor, Rev. W. R. Proctor, preached at night.

Rev. J. D. Hank, presiding elder of the Charlottesville District, reported the work on his district in fine condition.

Lambert's Point—Rev. C. H. McGhee had a revival service in the Sunday school, and fifteen children presented themselves at the altar. The service was continued at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. Dr. Smith will preach every night this week.

Rev. Ernest Stevens reported the usual services at Owens Memorial church.

A resolution in regard to the temperance question was made the order of the day for next Monday.—Virginian-Pilot.

The character which you are constructing is not your own. It is the building material out of which other generations will quarry stones for the temple of life. See to it, therefore, that it be granite and not shale.—A. J. Gordon, D. D.

THE DISPENSARY IN ITS NATIVE STATE.

BY REV. C. S. GARDNER, D. D.

I have been asked to give my view of the dispensary system as it has worked in South Carolina. After living in that State for seven years, and having studied the temperance problem in the light of the actual working of the dispensary law, I am prepared to say deliberately that the temperance people of Virginia would make a grave blunder to acquiesce in the establishment of that system here.

It is needless to say that the dispensary is utterly and radically wrong in principle, and an institution that is radically wrong in principle will inevitably lead to disastrous results. To say, as some temperance people do, that the selling of intoxicating liquor as a beverage is wrong, and then to advocate that the State, or the municipality, or the county engage in that business is so clearly and hopelessly inconsistent as, in my judgment, to stultify us.

But what of the dispensary in practice? When the system was first inaugurated in South Carolina it did for awhile diminish drunkenness. But after it had been in operation for some years this improvement began to disappear. The restrictive features of the law were gradually disregarded. The administration of the law fell, as it will inevitably always fall, into the hands of men who are not interested in promoting temperance. Indeed, after a while it became apparent that the law was being operated, not for the purpose of promoting temperance, but for promoting revenue, and the two ends were absolutely contradictory of each other. After a while the liquor men, who were driven out of business by the system, learned how to adjust themselves to it. It is an open secret that in some of the larger cities there is an understanding between the "blind tigers" and the dispensary to the effect that if the "tigers" would purchase their liquor from the dispensary they would not be disturbed.

Besides this, "beer privileges" were granted in the towns; and the beer shops were saloons under another name, purchasing their supplies from the dispensary. In many of the counties there were travelling "blind tigers"—i. e., a man would buy a supply of liquor in a bordering State and then cross the line in his wagon or buggy, in which his liquor was hidden, and peddle it out through the country. He would drive his vehicle up into a thicket, or some secluded place, and all who wished to patronize him would soon know of his location.

The dispensary in South Carolina has become a political machine of great and far-reaching power, ideally adapted to dirty work in the interest of the politicians who control it. This is one of the most offensive features of the system. It has been a curse, a stench, a corrupt and corrupting influence in the political life of the State. It is a running sore in the vitals of the civic body. As they are logically bound to do, the chief advocates of the system now preach to the people that the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is justifiable and right. The father and chief advocate of the South Carolina law a little less than two years ago stumped the State in defence of the law, and boldly took the position that the sale of intoxicating beverages was not wrong in principle, and he triumphed. That was in the State which about eleven years ago gave a good majority in favor of prohibition, when the will of the people was defeated by the enactment of the dispensary law, instead of the prohibition for which they had voted.

Six months ago I changed my residence from South Carolina to Richmond. After careful observation, I will say that proportionately there is as little drunkenness here as in South Carolina, perhaps less. The dispensary is not what we want in Virginia. I have written hurriedly, but am very earnest in the hope that the temperance people of my adopted State will not follow after false temperance gods. I was favorably disposed toward the dispensary when I went to South Carolina eight years ago. I left there profoundly convinced that the dispensary is not progress, but reaction.—Christian Federation.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Home Mission Society of the Virginia Conference will hold its twelfth annual session at Blackstone, Va., April 24-25, 1902.

KATE E. WALL,
Recording Secretary.

Delegates and visitors expecting to attend the meeting will please send names promptly to the chairman of Committee on Entertainment, Miss Cornelia Adams, Blackstone, Va.

VERY LOW RATES TO THE NORTH-WEST MARCH 1ST TO APRIL 30, 1902.

The Norfolk and Western Railway will sell tickets to Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Coast Points at exceeding low rates from all stations. It is possible rates to the West will never be so cheap again; choice of three routes. Write for rates and schedules, say to what point you are going and your nearest station to this line. See any Agent N. & W. R'y or W. B. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Trav. Pass. Agt., Roanoke, Va.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION SALEM FEMALE ACADEMY, WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., MAY 22-29, 1902.

From all points within a radius of 200 miles of Winston-Salem, tariff one. From all points in the territory beyond the 200 mile radius, one fare for the round trip.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, DALLAS, TEXAS, MAY 7TH, JUNE 7TH, 1902.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway begs to announce one fare plus $2 for the round trip from all points on its lines to Dallas and return. Tickets to be on sale May 3d, 4th, 5th, with return limit June 9th, except that by deposit of tickets with joint agent at Dallas on or before May 20th, and on payment of 50 cents, an extension to June 30th may be obtained.

The Southern Railway offers the choice of routes to Dallas, but the trip must be made in both directions over same route—through Asheville (Land of the Sky) and Memphis; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Shreveport; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis, or through Atlanta, Montgomery and New Orleans.

For detail information call on or write any agent of the Southern Railway, or to . C. W. WESTBURY,
D. P. A., Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND TO DALLAS VIA SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY—CONFEDERATE REUNION, DALLAS, TEXAS, APRIL 25-26, 1902.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway will sell tickets from Richmond and other points on its line to Dallas, Texas, on account of the above occasion, at a rate of one cent per mile in each direction for the round trip, short line mileage. Tickets on sale April 18th, 19th, and 20th, with return limit May 2d, and holders of tickets may have their tickets extended until May 15th by paying to the joint agent at Dallas, on or before April 30th, the small fee of fifty cents. Rate from Richmond to Dallas and return $28.65.

The Seaboard offers the choice of routes, going via New Orleans or via Atlanta, Chattanooga and Memphis.

There will be a special train out of Atlanta 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, April 20th, which will be run solid to Dallas, Texas. This train will consist entirely of tourist sleepers. Passengers can leave Richmond 10:37 Saturday night and reach Dallas Tuesday morning at 5:45. One change of cars only.

For further information apply to

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.

Z. P. Smith, District Passenger Agent, 1006 East Main street. 'Phone, 405.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Federation Woman's Clubs, Los Angeles, Cal., May 1st to 8th.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA VIA THE SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway offers special Colonists rates of $47.50 from Richmond to San Francisco and all other California points. Tickets sold daily until April 30, 1902. The Seaboard offers choice of routes going either via Atlanta and New Orleans or via Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville and Memphis.

For further information, apply to

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.

Z. P. Smith, District Passenger Agent, 1006 East Main street. 'Phone, 405.

"CO-FRACTIONS."

This little well-printed and well-bound book of forty-six pages, 16mo, contains and elaborates a new and valuable discovery in mathematics. It is an addition to science; it presents what was never before known or published; its methods are short and easy; in many problems the solution is briefer than the statement; a very large number of problems can be solved by these methods; it handles problems in percentage, arithmetical and geometrical progression, simple and compound interest, loss and gain, stocks and bonds, and a great variety of analytical questions. Teachers should teach it, students should study it, business men should use it, and mathematical text-makers should introduce its methods into their books.

We present the following testimonials:

Professor Edmund Longley, A. M., now retired, but for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, Virginia, and a brilliant mathematician, writes: "This goes just to thank you for the copy sent me of your 'Co-Fractions,' with the attendant personal note. Pardon me for directly expressing my admiration of the vigorous and acute brain work that evolved the work."

Professor Charles E. Vawter, LL.D., for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, and now president of the Miller School, Albemarle county, Va., says: "I have read with most pleasing interest the work on 'Co-Fractions,' by my old friend, Professor R. N. Price. Every one who teaches arithmetic should read it. It presents in a new, concise, skillful, and ingenious way, facts of arithmetic that all should know. It will widen the view and pull many a plodder out of the ruts."

The book sells for 25 cents, postpaid, or $2.40 per dozen by express at expense of purchaser. Order from Barbee & Smith, Agents, or R. N. Price, Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., or R. N. Price, Morristown, Tenn.

TENT FOR SALE

We have bought a larger tent, and must sell at what it will bring the one used last summer in revival work. It is in good condition, having been used only for three series of revival meetings; is circular in shape and fifty feet in diameter. Will sell for half cost. Address GEO. H. WILEY, Methodist Mission, Richmond, Va.

(Continued from page 10.)

face. What a gentle hand she was when we were sick and what a voice to soothe pain, and was there any one who could so fill up a room with peace and purity and light? And what a sad day that was when we came home and she could greet us not, for her lips were forever still! Come back, mother, in these Christmas times and take your old place and, as ten or twenty or fifty years ago, come and open the old Bible as you used to; read and kneel in the same place where you used to pray and look upon us, as of old, when you wished us a merry Christmas or a happy new year! But, no! That would not be fair to call you back. You had troubles enough and aches enough and bereavements enough while you were here. Tarry by the throne, mother, till we join you there, your prayers all answered, and in the eternal home-land of our God we shall again keep Christmas jubilee together. But speak from your thrones, all you glorified mothers, and say to all these, your sons and daughters, words of love, words of warning, words of cheer. They need your voice, for they have traveled far and with many a heartbreak since you left them, and you do well to call from the heights of heaven to the valleys of earth. Hail, enthroned ancestry! We are coming! Keep a place right beside you at the banquet!

Slow footed years! More swiftly run
Into the gold of that unsetting sun.
Homesick we are for thee,
Calm land beyond the sea.

[Copyright, 1901, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

An Experiment That Failed.

In order to encourage marriage in Servia all young persons with at least 2,000 dinars in the government savings banks were until recently presented upon their wedding day with a handsome premium from the bank directors. The consequence was that all these young people upon reaching the age of eighteen hastened to marry. The divorce frequently followed as soon as the money was run through. As there is thus no chance of the expected increase in the population, the generous premium has been withdrawn.

Dean Farrar's Warning.

Dean Farrar of Canterbury cathedral, England, startled the religious world of England last week by declaring that the Church of England must make several essential reforms if it would hold in its membership the masses of the English people. The dean says ceremonials, rituals and theological subtleties must be abandoned and a living spirit infused into the forms of the state religion. He says the prayer book no longer attracts the people. The poor of the cities complain that the services are tiresome and too long.

Collects Philippine Orchids.

The finest collection of Philippine orchids in this country is owned by J. C. Siegfried of Alameda, Cal., and is kept in a private conservatory, which has but lately been opened to the public. In the various hothouses of his botanical gardens Mr. Siegfried has collected 2,760 orchid plants, and their commercial value is approximately $69,000. For upward of fifteen years he has been adding to the list until now he has more than 166 varieties imported from thirty-six different parts of the world.

Not Theories, but Practice.

Some people will fight much more vehemently for their theory concerning the Bible than for the practice of the spirit of Jesus Christ.—Rev. J. C. Hall, People's Church, Denver.

"I GAVE THEM MYSELF."

Said a mother to me one day: "When my children were young I thought the very best thing I could do for them was to give them myself. So I spared no pains to talk with them, to read to them, to teach them, to pray with them, to be a loving companion and friend to my children. I had to neglect my house often. I had no time to indulge myself in many things which I should have liked to do. I was so busy adorning their minds and cultivating their hearts' best affections that I could not adorn their bodies in fine clothes, though I kept them neat and comfortable at all times. I have my reward now. My sons are ministers of the Gospel; my grown-up daughter is a Christian woman. I have plenty of time now to sit down and rest, plenty of time to keep my house in order, plenty of time to indulge myself, besides going about my Master's business wherever He has need of me. I have a thousand beautiful memories of their childhood to comfort me. Now that they have gone out into the world, I have the sweet consciousness of having done all I could to make them ready for whatever work God calls them to do."—Life and Faith.

A very curious bi-literal cipher, which has been discovered by Mrs. Gallup, running through the first editions of Bacon's works, has excited wide interest in the literary world. This cipher consists of the use of two wrong-font letters at intervals, combinations of these two letters in groups of five constituting an alphabet. These repetitions of a wrong-font letter cannot have been matters of chance. Whether placed there by Lord Bacon or by the printer, remains in doubt. If by the printer, they relate a wonderful romance—the story of Queen Elizabeth's marriage to the Earl of Leicester, when both were confined in the Tower prior to the Queen's accession; the birth of two sons, of whom Lord Bacon was the elder, the Earl of Essex the other. Lord Bacon considered himself the heir to the throne of England. The bi-literal cipher further tells that Queen Elizabeth condemned her own son, the Earl of Essex, to death. The Cosmopolitan for March contains an article by Professor Garrett P. Serviss, fully reviewing this remarkable romance—if it is concluded to have been inserted by the printer—or tragedy, if inserted by Lord Bacon.

"For every evil under the sun
There is a remedy, or there is none;
If there be one, try and find it;
If there be none, never mind it."

Rest from a guilty conscience. No matter what the past has been, no matter how black the record or how sinful the heart, when the peace-speaking blood is applied it removes all fear of God or man.—W. J. Mosier.

WHY TAKE ANY CHANCES with some new and untried medicine for such serious troubles as diarrhoea, cramps, dysentery, when you should know that for over half a century Pain-killer has cured millions of cases? Look out for imitations, there is only one genuine, "Perry Davis'."

INSURANCE*Fire, Life, and Accident.*Best Companies only Represented.*R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING. BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.*ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.*PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $300,000.*SURPLUS, $275,000.*INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.W. E. HURF, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE*For Our Readers.*EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.
"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOS. S. L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

◎◎

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

◎◎

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

◎◎

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

◎◎

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by experience Druggists

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished.
Time made to suit the borrower.
Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFEC-REMEDY FOR TIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY
SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE.
STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES,
GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK
NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVE-
NESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND
ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

It Will Pay You !

TO SEND A POSTAL CARD FOR OUR PRICES ON
Cane Mills, Cider Mills,
Buggies and Harness.

—In Fact—

Everything in the Hardware and Implement Lines
WE HAVE THE GOODS AND PRICES TO SUIT.
Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, — VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

...FOR TOBACCO...

Bellefonte

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3

Standard,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

Alliance,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 3

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,
Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 16

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., APRIL 24, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

RANDOLPH-MACON ALUMNI.

We give below an account taken from the Dispatch of the first banquet of the Randolph-Macon Alumni Association of Richmond. The banquet was notable for the unusual merit of the responses to the various toasts. The programme was well conceived, and there was a greater variety in the speeches than the editor had ever heard before on such an occasion. The banquet was also notable for the statement of Mr. John P. Branch, that he had been authorized to announce that there was a gentleman who would give one dollar for every two dollars which was given by the friends of Randolph-Macon up to $200,000. That is to say, the gentleman in question would give one dollar for every two dollars laid down from any and all other sources combined until his contribution reached $100,000. This would mean $300,000 for the College. Bro. Branch said that he would be security for the gentleman in question. Most of the company had more than a suspicion that Brother Branch was offering to go security for a gentleman whom he knew very well—namely, himself. It is a notable offer, the greatest which has been made in the history of Randolph-Macon in many respects, and ought to be accepted at once. The report from the Dispatch follows:

The first annual banquet of the Richmond Alumni Association of Randolph-Macon College was held last night at the Westmoreland Club. The occasion was a distinct success. The toasts offered were confined to Randolph-Macon, and were responded to in a most effective manner by the selected speakers.

Sixty alumni and invited guests assembled at the board. The college spirit prevailed from beginning to end. The various addresses were of a very high order from some of the most distinguished sons of the old institution at Ashland.

HOW RANGED ABOUT THE TABLE.

At the head of the table sat President Patteson, with the orator of the occasion on his right; Mr. John P. Branch on his right; Captain Richard Irby, proctor of the College and its next oldest graduate; Mr. James B.

Pace, one of the greatest benefactors of the school; Bishop John Cowper Granbery, who is connected with the school; Professor Robert Emory Blackwell, Rev. W. B. Beauchamp, and others. To the left of President Patteson, in the order named, were Dr. William W. Smith, chancellor and builder of the system; Dr. J. J. Lafferty, Mr. John L. Williams, Dr. William E. Evans, Mr. S. W. Travers; Mr. J. Thompson Brown, one of the school's oldest graduates; Rev. W. F. Davis, Professor Royall Bascom Smithey, scholar and author, and others. Among the other prominent men present were Colonel A. S. Buford, Dr. W. W. Lear, Professor G. M. Nolley, Professors Arthur Kyle Davis, Dr. John Hannon, Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Mr. John Jackson, Rev. John T. Bosman, Rev. James A. Duncan, and many others prominent in business and professional life.

The menu was chaste and appropriate, and heartily enjoyed by the assembled banqueters. Each guest was provided with the College colors of lemon and black for his buttonhole, and the menu cards were tastefully decorated with the same colors. In the adjoining hallway the orchestra furnished a choice repertoire of selections.

The reminiscences of college days as related by some of the speakers formed one of the most interesting events of the occasion. Hon. Claude A. Swanson, who was to respond to the toast, "Randolph-Macon—Her Sons in Politics," was detained at Washington by an important meeting of the Ways and Means Committee, and could not be present. He dispatched a letter expressing his sincere regrets.

DR. WOODWARD THE ORATOR.

The orator of the occasion, Dr. Frank C. Woodward, president of the South Carolina College, and a distinguished graduate of Randolph-Macon in the seventies, came to the banquet with an enviable reputation as an orator, thinker, and scholar. It is sufficient to say that he fully sustained it by his address on this occasion. It was a thoughtful speech; it was eloquent with the earnestness of conviction, and it sparkled with epigram and happy phrase. The speaker was introduced by President S. S. P. Patteson, of the Association, who made a pleasing reference to the olden days and to Dr. Woodward's pseudonym as a student.

Dr. Woodward chose as his subject, "The Small College—Its Value and Use." Few anticipated that he would make of the theme such an attractive and at the same time practical one as he did. He handled the subject in such a manner as to hold the interest of his audience closely, and to so arouse their enthusiasm as to win long and universal applause.

The speaker paid a tribute to the small college as distinguished from the great colleges, where thousands of students are educated, who often never know each other, and, as he expressed it, who are fortunate to see in the distance the trailing garments of the great men who are the professors of those colleges, the students being taught generally by sub-professors. In the smaller colleges the students were in close touch with the professors, in close range, as he expressed it, thus giving the professor opportunity for enlisting the interest of the pupil and requiring him to master the subjects taught.

THE PERSONAL PHASE.

Dr. Woodward laid great stress on the personal phase of life at the smaller colleges, the personal influence, and the example of the professors, and the mutual influence of men upon men in their intimate daily association. The college must be carried home to the people, and this is what the small college does. In the course of his address the speaker paid fine tributes to the men who moulded the minds and characters of the men at Randolph-Macon College in his day.

The speaker deprecated the prevalence in this day of the idea of mere bigness, which is too often confused with greatness, and made an earnest appeal for the smaller college, wherein men are in daily contact with the splendid examples and the potent influence of men of ripe scholarship, long experience, and robust characters. He advocated a college with a course which left no room for election of studies until the essential bases of broad culture had been builded by a compulsory curriculum.

THE TOAST LIST.

At the termination of Dr. Woodward's address, Rev. William E. Evans, rector of the Monumental church, assumed the duties of toastmaster, and presided in his usual graceful and effective style.

The list of toasts, referring to Randolph-Macon, was as follows:

"Her Allied Interests," Dr. W. W. Smith.

"Her Sons in Politics," Hon. Claude A. Swanson.

"Her Board of Trustees," Mr. John P. Branch.

"Old Times and the New," Dr. J. J. Lafferty.

"Her Sons in Literature," Dr. J. Leslie Hall.

"Her Portraits in Memory's Hall," Captain Richard Irby.

"Her Sons in War," Mr. J. Thompson Brown.

"Our Alma Mater," Professor R. E. Blackwell.

"Her Sons in the Ministry," Rev. W. B. Beauchamp.

"Her Flirtations With Cupid," Dr. John Hannon.

Roll-call. "Auld Lang Syne."

Dr. W. W. Smith, chancellor of the Randolph-Macon System, set forth the financial situation at Randolph-Macon with a striking array of figures. He called attention to the fact that twenty years ago Randolph-Macon's property interests were valued at $60,000, while now they amount to over $800,000. He referred to the important part played in the commercial world by college men, as well as in the professions. He cited the fact that out of the 8,000 names mentioned in "Who's Who in America," more than 5,000 were college-bred men, and over 50 per cent. were college graduates. His ability in the use of figures as illustrations was shown to great advantage.

The reminiscences of Captain Richard Irby were greatly enjoyed by every one present.

Mr. John P. Branch spoke of the great needs of placing loan funds at the disposal of ambitious but poor students seeking a college education. He said he could find a man who would give a dollar for every dollar raised by the friends of Randolph-Macon for this purpose.

His talk, interspersed frequently with considerable humor, was loudly applauded.

Dr. Lafferty was very felicitous in his remarks. His keen wit and pointed illustrations evoked a great deal of merriment.

Mr. J. Thompson Brown reviewed the war record of the Randolph-Macon men in one of the most forceful speeches of the evening. He paid a marked tribute to the valor of their services in the ranks of the Army of Northern Virginia, and dwelt with earnestness upon the fact that at Randolph-Macon the students were inspired to enlist in the cause of the Confederacy by the doctrine of the State's right that was impressed upon them by their professors.

Professor R. E. Blackwell spoke of Randolph-Macon as it stands to-day. He brought out the fact that with a

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1899, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"I've done the best I could," he muttered as he finally blew out his lights and walked over to chapel hall. His pulses were beating high as he heard the college yells on the chapel steps. The crowd was coming up the hill, also from down town, as the interest in the debate was more than local. As he went in by the side door, where the speakers on programmes went up stairs to the room back of the platform, he began to feel that strange dread of a crowd which nearly all public speakers at some time or other have felt. When he reached the room, some of this feeling had left him, but he was still under a tense excitement.

Wilson was in the room, and the president, who was to preside, came up a moment after Edward. He said a few words of encouragement to both of them, and his hearty manner did both the young men good.

Then he led the way out upon the platform. The chapel was choked with a great crowd, one of the greatest ever known. As the president appeared, followed by the contestants, the college cheered. The girls had come in with small flags representing the rival societies. They had waved them, and the members of the societies tried to drown one another's voices in shouting for Wilson or Blake.

Edward was conscious of the crowd, and he saw Freeda's sympathetic face, with that of Miss Seton, looking up at him. The sight helped him. Somehow he associated Miss Seton's face with Freeda's, as if both girls were equally interested in his success. The president spoke a few words, stating the rules that were to govern the debate. He then introduced Wilson, the speaker on the affirmative of the question:

"Resolved, That the United States is justified in the present war in the Philippines."

Wilson rose and walked slowly forward. The great crowd was as still now as it had been noisy before, and the great debate had begun.

CHAPTER VIII.

Wilson began his speech slowly and was evidently cool and determined. He had been in college two years longer than Edward and had had more training as a speaker. He had as a sophomore won the second prize for the best declamation in the annual contest and was considered the best all around speaker in the society that was rival to the one in which Edward had his membership.

The arguments of Wilson were in brief that the United States was justified in carrying on the war in the Philippines, because the natives were the first to provoke the outbreak, because they were in reality rebels in that the islands belonged to the United States by purchase and the authority of our government was being defied; that to withdraw our troops would mean a condition of anarchy and result in more cruelty and loss of life than would result from the war; that in short the war was necessary before the United States could assert its control, inasmuch as the Tagalos did not represent the Filipinos as a race, but were only a small part of all the inhabitants, the majority of whom were willing to become subject to our authority. He closed with an appeal to all loyal Americans to uphold the flag and do all in their power to support the government in its efforts to end the war speedily and inaugurate a reign of peace and justice in the islands that had for so long a time been the victim of greed and priestcraft.

As Wilson closed very strongly, he received tremendous applause, that broke out again and again. The president rose to introduce Edward, but the applause continued, and he sat down again. The girls who were friends of Wilson's society waved their flags, while the girls who sided with Blake held theirs down over the seats. For five minutes the shouting and demonstration continued. Then the president went forward and introduced Edward for the negative, and the chapel suddenly became as still as it had been boisterous.

Edward felt his knees tremble as he went forward, and his tongue was dry and his hands cold. For a second or two he was horrified to find that he could not remember the very first sentence of his speech. He actually made a beginning a paragraph farther on. Then he stopped just long enough to make it seem either that he was very deliberate or that he was not quite sure. But his manner was naturally slow, and it is doubtful if any of the college people noticed anything strange.

Then he gathered himself together and went on finely, doing his best, and gaining added interest in the argument as it developed.

He took the ground that war between nations is never justified, except when every other measure has been exhausted. He claimed that every measure had not been exhausted in the present war in the Philippines. He cited in support of his argument several witnesses from the seat of the war itself. He also called attention to several instances where more serious international disputes had been settled by arbitration. He then went on to quote quite largely from one of the members of the supreme court of the United States, who had come out in a speech against the war and had opposed the policy of colonial expansion. "This eminent jurist has said:

"Again, a necessity of colonial possessions is an increase in our regular army, and the first increase proposed is from 30,000 to 100,000 men. It is a strange commentary that, at the close of the nineteenth century, the head of the most arbitrary government in the civilized world, the czar of the Russias, is inviting the nations of the world to a decrease in their arms, while this, the freest land, is proposing an increase in its. Yet such seems to be the imperative need if we enter upon the system of colonial expansion. We have lived and prospered for 123 years with a handful of regular troops. We have preserved peace at home, and have been respected abroad. Government by consent of the governed has little need of the soldier. So the world has come to believe, and so it is. Are we ready to forfeit this high position? Do we not endanger the very foundation principles of this government when we make the blare of the bugles and the tramp of the armed battalion the music which is heard on every side and the inspiration which attracts the ambition of our youth?"

"If," continued Edward, as he finished the quotation, "we begin to war on a nation for conquest, what future do we anticipate for our country? To quote again from the same source, from this distinguished member of our highest court whose motives certainly cannot be impugned as selfish or partisan:

"My friends, two visions rise before me: One of a nation, growing in population, riches and strength, reaching out the strong hand to bring within its dominion weaker and distant races and lands; holding them by force for the rapid wealth they may bring—with perhaps the occasional glory, success and sacrifice of war; a wondrously luxurious life into which the fortunate few shall enter; an accumulation of magnificence which, for a term, will charm and dazzle, and then the shadow of the awful question whether human nature has changed, and the old law, that history repeats itself, has lost its force; whether the ascending splendor of imperial power is to be followed by the descending gloom of luxury, decay and ruin. The other of a nation, where the spirit of the Pilgrim and the Huguenot remains the living and controlling force, devoting its energies to the development of the inexhaustible resources of its great continental territory; solving the problem of universal personal and political liberty, of a government by the consent of the governed, where no king, no class and no race rules, but each individual has equal voice and power in the control of all, where wealth comes only as the compensation for honest toil of hand or brain, where public service is private duty; a nation whose supreme value to the world lies not in its power but in its unflinching loyalty to the high ideals of its youth, its forever lifting its strong hand, not to govern, but only to protect, the weak; and thus the bright shining which brightens more and more into the fadeless eternal day.

"Brethren, Ebal and Gerizim are before us. Might and right stand on either side, with their great appeals.

"Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood for the good or evil side;
Careless seems the great Avenger; history's pages but record
One death grapple in the darkness 'twixt old systems and the word.
Truth forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow keeping watch above his own.

"We see dimly in the present what is small and what is great,
Slow of faith how weak an arm may turn the iron helm of fate,
But the soul is still oracular, and amid the market's din,
List the ominous stern whisper from the Delphic cave within:
They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin.

"Paraphrasing in part the invocation which attends the opening of the supreme court, God save the United States of America and keep them from the road so often traveled by nations, of increasing territory, accumulating dominion, rapidly and easily acquired wealth, luxurious splendor, a growing separation between the poor and the rich, preraging decay and death, and may we always bear the solemn prayer of Abraham Lincoln borne upward to heaven from the consecrated field of Gettysburg upon the mighty volume of patriotic incense which ever rises from that sacred spot, that government of and by and for the people may never perish from the earth."

It was very still while Edward was presenting this part of his argument, for the quotation was from an address so recent that it was not generally known and, so far as Edward knew, had not been printed in any of the Raynor papers. One of the judges listened with a marked expression of surprise, as if he could hardly believe that a judge of the supreme court of the United States could be the author of the sentiments attributed to him in the address. [Address by Hon. David Brewer, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, before the Liberal club, Buffalo, Feb. 16, 1899.]

There was no attempt, at any point in his speech, to break out into applause, as there had been in the case of Wilson. Even when Edward closed his description of the horrors of war in general, by quoting Willis' story of the battle and the death of the native Filipino and her baby, there was not the slightest indication that he had any sympathy from the audience. It was only when he finally closed and walked back to his seat, that the applause broke out, and apparently it was then fully as hearty and prolonged as that which followed Wilson's peroration.

In Wilson's rejoinder, he showed a slight hesitation, similar to that which had marked Edward's beginning. Those who knew what he had prepared, said afterward that he left out a large part of what he intended to say, and extemporized to a great extent. However that may be, he spoke with considerable force and again provoked loud applause.

Edward closed the debate with a rebuttal that, in the opinion of a large part of the student body, was far stronger than his main argument and again divided the honors with Wilson, as far as applause was concerned.

And now came the most trying moment of the evening to the young contestants. The judges retired to make their decision, and while they were out the glee club sang by request. When some one called for the old war song, "O Cuba, the land that ought to be free!" it seemed to some of the audience that the sentiment provoked by it was in the nature of a prophecy, anticipating the decision of the judges against Edward. There was no doubt that, owing to the enthusiasm for the war, Edward had the unpopular side of the question. And yet, more than one woman in the audience that night, thinking of her own child safe and warm in its bed at home, felt her eyes dim at the memory of Willis' picture, as Edward had drawn it from his letter. If these women had been the judges, it is possible that the verdict would have been very quickly reached.

The glee club sang half a dozen selections, and still the judges did not appear. The classes began to stamp their feet and shout their class yells. Wilson and Edward, who had remained on the platform, were uncomfortably nervous, although neither of them showed it.

At last the judges appeared, and one of them mounted the platform and came forward slowly.

"Make it brief!" cried some one in the junior class. Some of the audience laughed, and others hissed, while the president sternly raised his arm to demand order.

(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✦ ✦ THREE COURSES. ✦ ✦

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications.

FROM BRO. KILBY.

Prior to Lent the Methodists in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Berkley held co-operative revival services, and perhaps it would not be amiss to make some running comment on the results from a layman's standpoint. I circulate around among the brethren a great deal, and hear things that are not said to the preachers, which it might be well for them to hear. Under the arrangement, Centenary, Cumberland Street, and Epworth churches were grouped together, and meetings were held two weeks at each church in the order in which they are mentioned above, and what I have to say refers to these meetings, as they are the ones I attended.

They were very poorly attended, and none of the churches were full at any meeting, and at Epworth church they were held in the Sunday school room, which, when packed, will seat possibly 500 persons, and yet this room was never filled. The three churches represented have an aggregate membership of 1,746, as reported at the last Annual Conference. Now, where were the members, and why were they absent? Well, no doubt some were sick; some of the ladies had no one to go with them, others were waiting on the sick; some were detained by young children, etc., etc., but after making all excuses that may suggest themselves, it was evident that a large number did not come possibly because they were not interested, and hence did not care to come. Unfortunately this latter class represents those who most needed the reviving influences of the meetings. Fortunately there are a few faithful ones in every church, who can be counted on for every good work, and those were present pretty much all the time. What would the churches do without these faithful ones? No doubt they came under great difficulties. Some of the men were just as busy as others who stayed away, and some of the ladies had to overcome house-keeping problems just as difficult as those confronting others, who did not come.

Now, I contend that church members who attend such meetings nearly every night for six weeks deserve some consideration, which they did not always receive, for most of these meetings were run too long and at times became very tiresome, and most of the sermons were longer than necessary. Take a business man, who had all day been leading a strenuous life, inseparable from modern mercantile pursuits, attended with all the various and perplexing problems that confronts him in these days of red-hot competition, and nightly meetings have got to be mighty interesting to hold him. You may talk all you please about a man being so interested in the salvation of souls that he must quit everything else and give his time to that work, but a man of good common sense is not going to do any such thing, for he knows that when he is engaged in an honorable business and working faithfully and honestly to take care of his wife and children, that he could scarcely be engaged in a more religious service.

The preliminary services were often too long, and one night these services that commenced at a quarter to eight ended at half past eight, and at that hour the preacher arose and preached fifty-five minutes; so the first invitation was given out about half past nine, when some of the children present ought to have been at home in bed and asleep. On another occasion one of the preachers was called on to pray after the sermon, and he preached on his knees for fifteen minutes. I have it from the lips of one layman that he went to sleep; no doubt many others did likewise. Who blames them? By the way, the first prayer at all our Sunday services is much longer than necessary. Some of our preachers specify and particularize almost ad infinitum. Why not split some of these prayers in the middle and save half for next Sunday? They remind me of a story told on a good old preacher, who prayed for England, France, Germany, Russia, Prussia, China, Japan, and then not being able at the moment to recall any other country, said: "O Lord, Thou knowest geography better than I do, bless all the countries I haven't mentioned." But to return to my subject. Sometimes things were done which did no good. On one occasion the invitation had been given, three penitents were at the altar, and the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was being grandly sung, led by full choir and large organ with great volume of sound, which was very inspiring, and after two verses had been sung, the preacher, without any apparent reason, stopped the choir and organ, raised the third stanza himself, and a few weak voices followed him. The result was that the singing fell flat, with all the life taken out of it. This sudden departure gave me such a shock that I lost all interest in the meeting from that moment, and I have since learned that others felt as I did. On another occasion, at twenty-five minutes to 10 o'clock, when all the penitents at the altar had been converted, and all was done that could be accomplished for the evening, and the congregation should have been dismissed at once, a preacher arose and treated his hearers to a sixteen minute exhortation. What he expected to accomplish was not apparent, but he succeeded grandly in literally wearing the people out, who were already tired and wanted to go home. Another night, at a late hour, those who did not attend the meetings were lectured for not coming. Of course not a single one of them was present to hear it, but the faithful ones had to sit still and listen to it all the same. Before he was half through the congregation was ready to render the verdict, "not guilty."

The conversions at these meetings were not numerous, but, as a whole, the meetings were uplifting to those who attended. The meetings at Epworth were conducted by Bro. Dadmun, and were perhaps the best of the series. Bro. Dadmun has a very tender and persuasive manner that generally brings results, and there were about twenty conversions at Epworth. Swapping the ministers around is probably a good plan, but, as a whole, I do not see any advantage in the co-operative plan. Each church could, no doubt, have commanded just as large a crowd as the three combined, for usually the members of the respective churches attend the meetings at their church only, while a number that were anxious to do their whole duty were attending meetings for six weeks solid. One of the churches in the combine held a feast for about a week during the progress of the meetings.

Our preachers stand up before the laymen and tell them of their faults, which they ought to do, and, as a rule, the layman take it very good naturedly; so, my good brethren of the ministry, I am sure, won't mind these few shots from the pew.

There is another phase of this question, which I wish to discuss, but will defer it for another time.

L. CLAY KILBY.

UPON A TECHNICALITY.

Editor Southern Methodist Recorder:

As the Southern Methodist General Conference will soon assemble, the anxieties of the membership are quickened and intensified. To all sober and reflecting minds problems of the gravest import confront the assembling of this representative body of Christians, and challenge the earnest prayers of the entire membership—that our beloved Church will be piloted through the quicksands of expediency in which her publishing house officials have placed her, vindicated and with her face to the sun. Probably the prime cause of this incubus resting on the honor of the Church was timidity. Some of our chief pastors and several of the Church advocates were afraid to discuss and expose the dubious methods that reflected on the integrity of trusted officials; the few who saw the effect of such procedure and dared to do right, were criticised and abused, but the policy of silence excited inquiry, and to-day this writer believes the consensus of religious sentiment of the Church, excepting some officials and expediency folks, is overwhelmingly on the side of right and duty. Perhaps even to-day there are many in the Church who do not know how difficult it was for our Southern representatives in Congress to create in the Northern mind, even on the score of a benefaction to our worn-out preachers, their widows and orphans, the consideration of this claim; for, before the Court of Claims, the case had no standing, and from the Northern point of view had no merit outside this sentiment. It got consideration in the Congress on a technicality, since corporations are irresponsible, for no one will claim that the personnel of the Southern Book Committee in 1861-'65 were not heart, soul and body in sympathy with the Confederacy. Individually, no one of this official committee would have stood a ghost of chance to have recovered any damage for any kind of loss sustained during the prosecution of the war by the Federal powers. So, after these Northern representative members of Congress had consented upon technical grounds to listen to the plea of widowhood and orphanage and grant this benefit, what must have been their disappointment when the methods of the Southern Book Committee and the agents entered into a conspiracy with a trickster to divert a large per cent. of the benefit from the beneficiaries and to employ a shrewd lobbyist. It is idle for the Church to plead justice and right on the premises, for if the Federal Government was actuated by such principles, the four millions of slaves Mr. Lincoln's expediency proclaimed liberated would be paid for, a claim for damages was worked out on technical and sentimental issues, would have been concluded satisfactory to both sections had not the cupidity of a sharper betrayed our fishing house officials into a trap, the situation seemed to require their part a premeditated and stratagem to deceive in order to protect to fee an extortioner, and thereby deprive the beneficiaries of their share to the amount of $100,800.

Both Northern and Southern representatives affirm the claim never would have been allowed had the facts been known. The Congress and all informed people look upon the transaction as disreputable to the individuals practicing such methods, and will look upon the Church accepting such benefactions as dishonorable.

The Southern Church is poor as compared to the Northern, but this we can't believe we are so poor as to accept knowingly money from any source procured under false pretenses.

Let the General Conference wipe its hands of the dirty transaction, to the entire amount, $288,000, to the Congress, if the publishing house has been sold, for the whole of it is vitiated. Let the conscience of the Church be acquitted before God and man.

"OLD FOE"

Sunny Side, Va.

TO THE DELEGATES TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Honored and Dear Brethren,—studied silence of the connection press on the preservation of the honor and consistency of Southern Methodism, together with the fact that the Annual Conferences have, so far as this scribe is informed, failed to make any expression of opinion as to what ought to be done at the General Conference in regard to the unfortunate and now celebrated deeds of our Agents and their employee, as brought before a committee of the United States Senate, will be sufficient for these lines and their caption.

Much regret is experienced by those that all the Conferences did not make decided opinions and send up memorials similar to those from Georgia, Tennessee, and Virginia (and possibly some others) upon a matter so vital to the future usefulness of our Methodist body. Intelligent and thoughtful lay and clerical, can't feel otherwise than as a Christian scholar in one of the highest institutions of the United States expressing his views to the undersigned that the Church is in great peril. You, honored members of our general legislative and executive Conference, rank and file of laymen and preachers must look for such authoritative and positive action as will give permanent relief to anxious hearts and safety to the great body, whose mission has been (and we hope will continue to be) "to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands."

The eyes of the civilized world will be largely turned toward Dallas, Texas, in the month of May, 1902. Not curiosity alone, but anxious observation may be looked for, and that expectation will be on tiptoe need not be prophesied. The lovers of our Zion can hardly be asked to be unconcerned when the very life of the Church, as to its piety and honesty, is at stake. To lose honor is to lose efficiency in calling sinners to repentance. To suffer such a loss is to gain the moral gain which that must eventuate in the death of that will receive the verdict of suicide. Brethren, our loved Church has not yet lost her fair fame for integrity and religious enterprise destroyed, or her standard even lowered, because up to this year of grace no delegated body having authority from the provisional executive thousands has given consent to the erratic measures adopted in Washington city by those who claimed to represent us. The smothering policy adopted by certain men at the last General Conference kept from the knowledge of that body, and from the Church, the facts, the discovery of which has since so much troubled us.

According to the written statement of Dr. A. G. Brown, in a letter to this writer, before the fatal disease had struck our financial chairman for his pension, a report from the committee on publishing interests was kept back until the hurry of adjournment precluded the possibility of such action. He (Dr. Brown) intended to ask for the General Conference of 1902, then, to have the grand opportunity and the hardy responsibility of being the legal body to act authoritatively on this "war claim" history. Pardon me, the boldness of an humble itinerant in asking attention to what lies so much on his heart, the avoidance of the appearance of conniving at an act of even doubtful morality, certainly of one of positive immorality. If there was good sense in the assertion, "Jesus's wife must be above suspicion," surely with ten thousand-fold emphasis should it be thundered from the ecclesiastical legislation, "the Church must be above even the surmise of corrupt practices for the sake of money." His writing is suggested by some things which have appeared in print and especially by editorial refusal to let some other things be printed. Probably, the idea of advising silence or inaction as to the whole matter, as it seems to be the policy of our good brother and able lawyer (R. H. Peas, Esq.), as also that of our conditional press to a large degree, is prophetic of the danger at Dallas. Will there be an attempt to silence the whole matter? Or will there be an inaction or uncertain action, which, in coming years, may be interpreted to be even a quasi approval of doing that good may be supposed to be?

Real good can never come from real evil. Our Church can never consent to the Jesuit theory, that deception can be virtuous when it is retaliatory and because it is retaliatory.

Hence we cannot believe that anything short of an outspoken and plain spoken repudiation of any and all things done or said by the lobbyist or by the agents of the Church, partaking of the nature of immorality in a religious sense, or of unlawfulness in a civil sense—we say, nothing short of this can satisfy the honest Church.

Silence is said to be sometimes golden, but as often it may be a fatal corrosive, or a deadly poison.

We place in your keeping, brethren of the General Conference, the reputation of a large section of Immanuel's army; may we not say the future of the Church we love will largely depend upon the action at Dallas?

If it be said that the repudiation spoken of will necessitate the return of the funds to the United States Treasury, and that such action will destroy our Publishing House, let it be done rather than the contrary action, which will bring loss of reputation for honesty; albeit we do not see how the Senate could consistently allow the loss of the funds, when, by positive enactment, that body has declared the claim entirely just.

Common sense is generally good sense. Now, it is plain that common sense would say that to repudiate a thing one must begin at the beginning. The secret bargain made with the lobbyist was the first violation of our country's laws. There is no need of harsh or disrespectful verbiage toward the members of the Book Committee; they were, no doubt, deceived as to the champertous, and hence illegal nature of the paper they authorized. They perhaps had not at hand the numerous decisions of the highest courts as to such contracts. They did not perhaps know that lobbyism was regarded in Georgia as a felony, and in Washington as against public policy. But certain it is, the paper itself was one that Mr. Stahlman dared not exhibit in Washington, or avow its contents to United States Senators. He must have known something of its illegality. His positive denial of the existence of such a bargain argues this. A bargain contrary to law is certainly void.

Our Book of Discipline gives no authority to the Book Committee to make a contract violative of civil law. There is a paragraph which prohibits any increase of the debt of the Publishing House by the Book Committee. Now all this is plainly indicative of the fact that, had there been refusal to pay the enormously exorbitant fee, no court on earth (as we suppose) would have given a verdict for its payment had Mr. Stahlman sued the house therefor. The contract would have been pronounced void, and a legal and reasonable allowance for services would have been readily paid. If this be true, the way is plain as to justice now. Let the General Conference respectfully, but plainly, request of the lobbyist a return of funds unjustly and illegally paid to him. If such request be refused, let a suit in equity follow. The meagre interest of four per cent. per annum on the sum wrongly paid would in the four years, from General Conference to General Conference, be $16,128; at six per cent., it would be $24,192. Let this fact be considered in the adjustment.

We insist upon the repudiation of an illegal and unholy first step in this troublesome affair, and respectfully submit for consideration the only proposition that seems approvable—viz., that the only effectual repudiation must embrace a demand for a return of the funds, because not to make such request is to give consent to the wrong. To allow the retention of the vast sum paid by our agents is not doing justice to the lobbyist. It cannot be the right thing to the honor of our Church, because it implies consent to an illegal bargain. Let this be first to settle. Then let the whole sum be offered to the Federal Government, and let us trust to that Government to do what is just. But let the idea be plainly stated that the return is not "conscience money" on our part, but it is only because of the abhorrence we have of participating in any representation of a false character made to Senators, and of our refusal to be a party to a contract void of legality. The noble, the honorable, the religious thing to do when one finds that he has been led into an error, is to have the heroism to say, "I was wrong." The good men who have participated in these transactions now so troublesome will be able to see the entering wedge of error. May we not say they will be equal to the heroism?

May the spirit poured out at Pentecost be with our General Conference! Amen.

F. M. EDWARDS.

Onancock, Va., April 16, 1902.

DR. TALMAGE.

"It is not an easy matter to give a spectrum analysis of the light of the brightest star in the American pulpit. Others may have been 'the first'—Dr. Talmage was 'the only.' For thirty years he had been the incomparable Talmage. Erratic, eccentric, swinging around the Sun of Righteousness in an orbit of his own—his 'passing' will be noticed even in the glare of our age. There have been no moral eclipses. His song was not the highest, but it was always 'of the highest.' Turgid rhetoric—careless homilies—but never an adulterated Gospel. The truth in his sermons was always twenty-four carats fine. A bold, dashing stream—not navigable for heavy draft vessels of thought—but irrigating—refreshing the world! Dr. Talmage was an 'appetizer' for able and duller preachers. He excited the hunger of a generation for strong meat.

"Superficial! Yes, as morning glories are superficial. As the dews of heaven are superficial. He has had his greatest call. He fills a pulpit henceforth in the great cathedral of immensity! He never had a message for the 400. He has one now for the forty and four thousand. Amen."—Rev. John Hannon, pastor of Union Station Methodist church.

A CENTURY OF EDUCATION.

Our Progress Since 1800.

The United States began the nineteenth century with an average of 82 days of schooling for each person. They begin the twentieth century with an average of 998 days of schooling for each person. The rate of increase is shown by the following figures taken from the report of the United States Commissioner of Education: Beginning with 82 days in 1800, the rate had increased to 238 days in 1840; 420 days in 1850; 430 days in 1860; 672 days in 1870; 792 days in 1880; 892 days in 1890; 998 days in 1900. The estimate includes instruction in the common schools and colleges. The average for the eleven Southern States in 1900 was 433, or about the same as that for the whole country in 1860.

It is difficult to overestimate the value of a good superintendent or the injury done by an incompetent one, says the Atlantic Educational Journal. Just as the teacher is the school, the superintendent is the school system, which, regardless of statutes and legal restrictions, will seldom be either better or worse than it is made by the ability and care of the superintendent.

The April issue of the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine begins with a bright and entertaining article by the Rev. C. F. Wimberly, on Mark Twain's early haunts on the Mississippi river. The writer was for some years pastor of the "trig and rather hilarious new edifice," described by Mark Twain, and known in Hannibal as Park Methodist church, South; and speaks with some inwardness. The illustrations are excellent.

The famous hymn-writers series is represented by Ray Palmer, who for many years was Congregational minister at Bath, Maine. Pictures are given of his unpretentious cottage in that shipbuilding centre, and of his church.

The second installment of "The Twentieth Century Life of John Wesley" has some illustrations of peculiar value; among others the school-room at the Charterhouse, where Wesley fascinated the younger boys with stories; a portrait of the founder of the Charterhouse, and a picture of the dial that stands on the site of the old parsonage at South Ormsby, Lincolnshire, and of the adjoining hall. The story of the Life grows in interest.

Dr. N. Luccock has an illustrated article on John Baptiste Ford, the Pittsburgh millionaire, who, when an old man of over seventy, showed the pluck of a Palissy, in wresting from nature the secret of making plate glass, and has effected a revolution in its production.

Published monthly by the Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo. One dollar a year.

No one can tell the unending power for good which each of us may have in our homes, among our fellow-men, by faith in them—how far we can strengthen their feeble desire for God and all good. Care, then, for the soul of people, and for the soul of what they do, as well as of what they are.—Henry Wilder Foote.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON V, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 4

Text of the Lesson, Acts xi, 19-30.
Memory Verses, 22-24—Golden Text,
Acts xi, 21—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. STERNES.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

19. Preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

Thus did those who were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, and in chapter viii, 1, we are told that all were scattered abroad except the apostles. The twelve were originally commanded to go neither to the Samaritans nor to the gentiles, but rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and on one occasion our Lord said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. x, 5, 6; xv, 24). All this was, however, changed before His ascension, and the command was plainly given to go unto all the world and to every creature.

20, 21. The hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and turned unto the Lord.

Thus in these new places the called out ones were being gathered unto Him to whom all must come, whether Jews or Greeks, for there is salvation in no other (iv, 12). The Jews ask for a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom, but to those who accept Him, both Jews and Greeks, Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God (I Cor. i, 22-24). The good tidings of the kingdom and of the gospel of the grace of God when faithfully proclaimed will always be owned of God to gather out His elect.

22, 23. Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

This is written of Barnabas, whom the church at Jerusalem sent to Antioch when they heard the tidings of the Grecians turning to the Lord. They could not have sent a better man than this one, who had already proved himself a true son of consolation (iv, 35; ix, 26, 27). He gladly recognized the grace of God wherever he saw it, whether in a persecuting Saul or in the Grecians, and he now encourages these saved people to cleave to the Lord alone and not to any of their teachers.

24. For he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, and much people was added unto the Lord.

Our Lord Jesus said, "There is none good but one; that is God" (Mark x, 18), therefore Barnabas was in God, and God was in him through Jesus Christ. His goodness was the righteousness of God in Christ. Many are thus righteous who are not filled with the Spirit, but Barnabas was Spirit filled (Eph. v, 18), as every believer should be. Unless people are added to the Lord it matters little to what so called church or company of Christians they are added, for there is no salvation in anything short of being a part of Christ Himself.

25, 26. Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus for to seek Saul.

He found him and brought him to Antioch, and for a whole year they abode there and taught much people. After Barnabas had persuaded the apostles that Saul was really a disciple he preached so boldly at Jerusalem in the name of the Lord Jesus that the Grecians went about to slay him. Then the brethren sent him to Cesarea and to Tarsus (ix, 26-31), and there he had evidently continued until now, and we can have no doubt but that he proved a faithful witness in his own city and to his own people. It is refreshing to see Barnabas and Saul together again and to find them teaching the people at Antioch for a whole year. Very much is often accomplished in a week or even a few days of Bible study, but how great things must have been accomplished in that year of teaching by these two Spirit filled men at Antioch! The church today sorely needs simple Bible teaching, that the people may learn to eat the word of God.

27, 28. And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

Their message was not a cheerful one, for tidings of a coming famine are anything but cheerful, yet it is well to be forewarned. If you have learned some helpful lessons from the famine stories in connection with Abram, Isaac, Joseph, Elimelech and the others, you will not lack for profitable meditation upon these verses. It is blessed to so trust in the Lord and have our hope in Him that we shall be as trees planted by the waters, spreading out our roots by the river, with leaves always green, not seeing when heat cometh and not careful in the year of drought nor ceasing from yielding fruit (Jer. xvii, 7, 8).

29, 30. Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judaea, which also they did and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

Paul afterward taught thus: "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" (I Cor. ix, 11.) See also his plain and helpful teaching on the privilege of giving us II Cor. viii and ix, concerning a willing mind, and a cheerful giver because of the grace of God to us in Christ and His making all grace abound toward us. Doubtless some teaching on the same lines had been given during this year at Antioch, and now the fruit is manifest. On this occasion they give for the body, but in chapter xiii we shall see them giving missionaries to go forth with the living bread for the soul. Many who would like to give when there is a real need and their hearts are touched and willing are often troubled because they have not the money to give. They will find comfort in II Cor. viii, 12, with I Pet. iv, 11.

A CAUSE OF INSANITY.

Some Startling Statistics That Form an Indictment of Alcohol.

That alcohol is a powerful influence for evil cannot be disclaimed even by those who advocate most earnestly its legitimate and intelligent employment. Apart from the effects of acute intoxication, says The Journal of the American Medical Association, the deleterious influence of long continued indulgence in alcohol is witnessed in chronic visceral changes principally of a degenerative character.

In speaking of the increase in the number of cases admitted during the year 1900 to the Royal Edinburgh asylum the physician superintendent, Dr. Clouston, in his annual report was unable to avoid the conclusion that this was due to a large extent to the excessive use of alcoholic stimulants during times of prosperity, attended with brisk trade and high wages.

The number of alcoholic insane admitted to the asylum has increased from an average of 15.5 per cent in the period between 1874 and 1883 to 21.5 per cent in the period between 1889 and 1898 and to 22.5 in 1899. Of 472 new cases received during the year 1900 drink was assigned as either the sole or contributory cause in 115, or about one-quarter of all. In the men alone eighty-one, or about one-half, were alcoholic patients. Besides, for every man in whom excessive drinking causes absolute insanity there are twenty in whom it injures the brain, blunts the moral sense and lessens the capacity for work in varying degree.

Dr. Clouston makes an earnest plea for legislative or state means for the diminution of alcoholism. He rightly contends that it is an irrational application of the doctrine of liberty to grant to every man the inalienable right to render himself a burden to others and a source of degradation and danger to the community.

BREWERIES' EARNINGS.

One British Concern Paid $4,320,000 Duty in a Year.

Some idea of the quantity of malt liquors produced and sold in Great Britain, to take no note whatever of the imported beers sold and drunk, may be gained from the annual reports which have lately been published of the two great brewing companies, Guinness and Alsopp, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

Guinness paid as beer duty for the year £864,000, approximately $4,320,000. The item of income tax on the business amounted to £11,000 "extra," so the report reads. In addition £100,000 has been placed to the reserve fund, £30,000 to the depreciation fund, and a 9 per cent dividend, with a 4 per cent bonus added, has been paid. The sum of £48,562 was carried over as surplus.

The Alsopp report shows a deficiency and a decrease in the original value of the concern of nearly $10,000,000 on a capital of about $22,000,000. This is attributed partly to bad investments in "public houses," of which the company had as many as thirty-one, including some large hotels, and to an attempt to make lager beer, in which field the company found powerful competition in the importation of German beer. From these figures an idea may be obtained of the vast capital invested in beer and breweries in England, those named being only two of the companies engaged in the business, although they are the largest.

WELL ANSWERED.

Prohibition Paper's Reply to a Liquor Traffic Journal.

A paper published in the interest of the liquor traffic justifies the traffic on the ground that in this country alone it employs 364,000 persons and 1,800,000 people derive their support, as families of the former, directly from it. This liquor organ wishes to know what is to be done with this great army of 2,000,000 people in case the traffic is abolished. To which inquiry a Prohibition paper gives answer:

We would set them to raising grain and meat to fill the hungry mouths of the wives and the children of the patrons of the saloon.

We would employ them in the production of cotton, wool and hides and in making them into clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes for those who on account of the saloon are never comfortably clad.

We would set them to felling trees and sawing them into lumber and making them into homes for those who live in hovels because the husband and father spends his wages for drink, if indeed his patronage of the saloon has not put him "out of a job."

We would keep them busy making carpets, furniture, pictures, pianos and organs, boots and newspapers for the millions by whom on account of the drink most of these things are considered as luxuries intended only for loon keepers and other fortunate people.

A Town's Great Record.

Several Illinois towns claim to be the oldest prohibition towns in Illinois. Normal, however, can beat them all. As is said, When Normal was first out, in 1856, deeds to various lots contained very rigid stipulations that a saloon could be operated upon said lot only if each lot was sold with understanding that no saloons would be erected in town. This agreement was adhered to. As a result no saloon has ever been operated within the borders of that city.

Help Others Along.

As we meet and touch each day
 The many travelers on our way,
 Let every such brief contact be
 A glorious, helpful ministry;
 The contact of the soil and seed,
 Each giving to the other's need,
 Each helping on the other's best,
 And blessing each as well as blest.
 —J. R. Miller in Union Signal.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The humblest life is glorified by high ideal.—Rev. Bruce Brown, Christian, Denver.

The Final Arbitrator.

Religion will become the final arbitrator between men.—Rev. Dr. Rubenstein, Hebrew, Baltimore.

Leading Into the Truth.

Human educators lead men up to truth, but Christ only leads men into it.—Rev. C. C. Albertson, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Secret of Christian Usefulness.

"Forgetting those things which are behind" is the secret of a life of Christian usefulness.—Rev. S. P. Hans, Baptist, Brooklyn.

Be Earnest Even in Play.

Be light hearted, joyous, but never frivolous or trivial. Be in earnest even in play.—Rev. David N. Beach, Congregationalist, Denver.

The Church Under Bond.

The church is under bond to the world to demonstrate the joyous character of the religion of Christ.—Rev. P. Cheeseman, Pittsburg.

Accuracy in Religion.

Let the careful system and can accuracy that characterize our secular calling be brought to bear upon our religion.—Rev. Dr. S. B. Warner, Methodist, St. Louis.

The Side Door Evil.

When the sovereign people of a whole state enacts a law, it is political and moral anarchism not to enforce it, and I may say in passing that good men never have evil "side doors."—Rev. Dean Richmond Babbett, Episcopal, Brooklyn.

The Source of Happiness.

Indolence breeds misery. Honesty breeds happiness. The man that knows his duty and does it toward Creator and his fellow creatures gathers honey of sweet happiness to his own soul.—Rev. E. Mona Jones, Baptist, Pittsburg.

No Room For Gloom.

One of the earliest church fathers taught that the Holy Ghost will not dwell in a gloomy heart. But joy can be had for mere desire of it. The heart must be crowded with high resolve and righteous deed.—Rev. John Brush, Baptist, Methodist, Chicago.

Tangle of Mammon Roots.

Many so called Christian hearts are a perfect tangle of Mammon roots, evil inclinations springing out of inordinate seeking after the things earth that wither often before we have fully grasped them.—Rev. James T. Coffey, Catholic, St. Louis.

Makes Life a Blessing.

Do your duty bravely; guard your integrity; see that the world is richer for your presence in it; love others as you would be loved by them. You will then see that it is a blessing to be alive.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Rational Belief, Not Dogma.

It is not the formalist's creed that man needs, but beliefs based on reasons and approved by conscience. We need not dogmas, but principles founded on the eternal aspirations of the human soul and the universal experience of man.—Rabbi J. Leonard Levy, Pittsburgh.

Laying Up Treasures.

Any poor man has access to the treasury of God's truth and love, and he can lay up treasure in a thousand ways. Kindly words and deeds are immortal, and the Divine Recorder of man's doings and sayings keeps a correct account.—Rev. Dr. George Adams, Methodist, Brooklyn.

Bible Needed.

Again, it is written. "If a man love me, he will keep my words." But how is it possible for a man to keep those words of which he has no knowledge? And how is it possible for a man to have a knowledge of the words of the Lord without a thoughtful, diligent and prayerful study of the Bible?—Rev. H. P. Aston, Baptist, Atlanta.

Leave the Mysterious Alone.

If life is short, then I think it will be wiser on my part to leave the mysterious alone. I think so. Why so? Because life is short. We cannot do everything. We had better, therefore, make a selection and attend to those things we can get hold of and work to the soul's best advantage.—Rev. Joseph Parker, D. D., City Temple, London.

All Men Alike.

Virtue and vice, intelligence and ignorance, and all the other human qualities and faults are so little a matter of monopoly, are so well distributed, that a dip from the ocean of humanity at any point will reveal about the same assortment of human fish as will another dipperful from another point of that ocean.—Rev. Charles Fleischer, Hebrew, Boston.

Money and Peace.

One cannot say of the rich that they are the happiest class in the community, and it would be a curious comment on the providence of God if it were true. Peace of mind is quite independent of a bank account. It depends more upon the mental and spiritual attitude of the soul than on a well filled pocket-book.—Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

A True Woman.

A true woman—she is gentle. Gentleness in woman is a queenly grace. A true woman—she is sympathetic. The heart that does not feel another's woe is not the heart of a true woman. A true woman—she is wise. "To know that which before us lies in daily life is the prime wisdom," says Milton. A true woman—she is pious, divorced from the false and the evil and married to the true and the good. And, lastly, the true woman is enthusiastically interested in the right, whether in the home, in the church or in the state.—Rev. J. G. Patton, Presbyterian, Decatur, Ga.

The church founded from wrong motives can never do right work.

Piny-Balsam Stops the Tickling, and quickly allays inflammation in the throat.

The knowledge of divine things flows through prayer, reading, meditation and observation.

There is a blessed reality in the Christian's consecration of himself to the service and glory of God, and in the supreme influence of his indwelling spirit over all our powers, mental and physical, which are "hallowed" unto him.—Moravian.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of
PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE
Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package.
Sold everywhere.
STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK NEW WESTERN
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULED
SLEEPERS.
Shenandoah Valley Route
LURAY GROTTOES
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS
AND THE NORTH ATLANTIC
Write for Rates, Maps, etc. See Sleeping Car
Reservations. Descriptive Literature. Agents
W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, etc.
GENERAL PASS AGENT, etc.
Richmond, Va.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN
Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,
UP-TO-DATE
FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
Blackstone, Va.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,

For

STIFF MUSCLES,
STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
PAIN IN THE BACK,
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS,

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.

Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—SECOND ROUND.

Market Street, February 23d, morning.

Ettrick, February 23d, night.

Prince George, Mt. Sinai, March 1st, 2d, morning.

Blandford, March 2d, night.

Greensville, Forest chapel, March 8th, 9th, morning.

Sussex, Centenary, March 9th, evening; 10th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Smith's Grove, March 15th, 16th, morning.

West Street, March 16th, night.

Surry, Carsley's, March 22d, 23d, morning.

Wakefield, Waverly, March 23d, night; 24th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Zion, March 29th, 30th, morning.

South Hill, Pleasant Grove, March 30th, evening; 31st, morning.

West Lunenburg, Olive Branch, April 4th, morning (Friday).

Lunenburg, Providence, 5th, 6th, morning.

West Brunswick, Macedonia, April 6th, evening; 7th, morning.

Brunswick, Pleasant Grove, April 11th, morning (Friday).

South Brunswick, Bethany, April 12th, 13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Canaan, April 13th, evening; 14th, morning.

Nottoway, April 19th, 20th, morning.

Blackstone Station, April 20th, night; 21st, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Trinity, April 26th, 27th, morning.

Matoacca, April 27th, 28th, night.

Dinwiddie, Ocran, May 3d, 4th, morning.
R. T. WILSON, P. E.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—SECOND QUARTER.

South Pittsylvania, Providence, February 22d, 23d.

Prince Edward, Meherrin, March 1st, 2d.

Charlotte, Drake Branch, March 3d, 4th.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times,

The Southern Farmer, and
American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Henry, Mt. Bethel, March 29th, 30th.
Martinsville, March 30th, 7:30 P. M.
Danville Circuit, Sutherlin, April 2d, 11 A. M.

West Franklin, Callaway, April 5th, 6th.

Rocky Mount, April 9th, 7:30 P. M.
Franklin Circuit, St. Paul, April 10th, 11 A. M.

Pittsylvania, Anderson's, April 12th, 13th.

Washington Street, April 16th, 7:30 P. M.

Patrick, New Hope, April 19th, 20th.

South of Dan, Harmony, April 23d, 11 A. M.

Hyco, Cherry Hill, April 24th, 11 A. M.

East Franklin, Liberty, April 26th, 27th.

Smith's River, Elamsville, April 26th, 27th.

Ridgeway, Ridgeway, May 3d, 4th.

Main Street, May, 4th, 11 A. M.
Calvary, May 4th, 7:30 P. M.

Meadows of Dan, May 10th, 11th.
J. C. REED, P. E.

WILL CURE SAOMACH ACHE IN FIVE MINUTES! This is just what Painkiller will do; try it. Have a bottle in the house for instant use, as it will save you hours of suffering. Watch out that the dealer does not sell you an imitation, as the great reputation of Painkiller (Perry Davis') has induced many people to try to make something to sell, said to be "just as good as the genuine."

RANDOLPH-MACON ALUMNI.

(Continued from first page.)

smaller attendance at the college now than formerly, a larger number of graduates were graduated every year. He attributed this to the advanced entrance of requirements that called for a higher degree of preparation on the part of the matriculates.

Rev. W. B. Beauchamp reviewed the extensive work that was being done by the ministers who graduate from the theological department of the College. He showed the great pioneering that was being done by them in all the remote parts of the State.

FROM A SISTER COLLEGE.

Dr. J. Leslie Hall, of William and Mary College, and a graduate of Randolph-Macon, responded to his toast with an original ode to his Alma Mater that was a splendid production of his genius and ability.

The concluding toast was responded to by Dr. John Hannon. In his peculiar, unique style he was the source of great mirth. In the choicest diction, he paid a chivalrous tribute to the womanhood of the State.

GRANULES.

BY R. N. PRICE.

The question of the day is not which religion is true, but which is truest.

Sectarian bigotry is one of the chief hindrances in the way of the evangelization of the world.

Free thought and free discussion will do no harm in the long-run.

When government reaches perfection, despotism, monarchy, oligarchy, and aristocracy will disappear from Church and State.

Common people read creeds in the lives of those who hold and teach them. They regard a religion as good only as it makes good men and women. They have no taste or time for abstractions. They judge of churches as they do of manufactories, by the jobs they turn out. A few rascalities in the leaders of a church will break down the confidence of the people in its doctrines. A drunken preacher tolerated by his sect, a lying editor not called to account, a tyrannical Bishop lording it over God's heritage, a lecherous presiding elder or doctor of divinity going unwhipped of justice—all such things sow the seeds of infidelity.

The pains of an old man are only the drawing by the claw-hammer of time of the nails that fasten the beams and boards of the human frame.

If there were more knowledge, there would be less superstition. We never see ghosts except in the dark.

Reformers are always cursed by their own generation and deified by posterity.

The greatest men have not been place men. The courage of one's convictions and independence of thought and expression do not commend one to the dispensers of patronage. The world's greatest benefactors are compelled to look for compensation to the heirs and executors of their beneficiaries. In the long run no good deed will go unpunished, and no bad deed unpunished.

All true punishment is corrective never vindictive. When wrongs are going on in the Church and country there is more danger in silence than controversy. It is as certainly wrong to allow sin in your neighbor as to commit it yourself.

Where ignorance is the mother of devotion, the daughter is no better than the mother.

Honesty is always policy; but policy is not always honesty.

There are some diseases where the knife is indispensable, and there are some congregations where denunciation of the vices of the day is essential to the accomplishment of good. A smooth sermon in such a case is like cream poultice on a malignant cancer.

There cannot be a religious life where prayer and purpose are at loggerheads.

Men often indulge in a bad sport for the cause of right. This is burning strange incense to the Lord.

Where moral questions are involved a pure heart is essential to a clear head.

It is one of God's eternal decrees that all sin shall come to grief.

A man who is always right is always safe.

If people worshipped God more, and popular pastors less, there would be more religion in the land.

Less medicine and more treatment is the demand of the therapeutics of the day.

Verily the sycophant and buckling rascal has his reward, but his success is only bloat.

Every dog has his day, and every day has its dog.

The most eloquent advocates of holiness are those who practice it.

Those who advocate needed reform in the Church are usually regarded as disloyal to the Church, but really they are the only true loyalists.

There are two kinds of Methodists: those who know that they belong to the Church, and those who think the Church belongs to them.

The martyrs of the world have been its greatest benefactors. Civilization has been but little advanced by successful men; the men that have failed are the men that have succeeded. No one can calculate the amount of good that has been done by such men as Hannibal, Julius Cæsar, Napoleon, Duke Monmouth, Stonewall Jackson, Albert Sidney Johnson, Bacon of Virginia, Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee, Galileo, Mesmer, Harvey, Fulton, Henry Clay, James G. Blaine, Samuel J. Tilden, Wm. J. Bryan—men who failed and yet succeeded gloriously. The greatest benefactor of the race was crucified as a malefactor. The Apostles were all put to death save John, omitting to mention the traitor Judas, who lost all by a successful business negotiation.

"What's done we partly may compute,
But know not what's resisted."

PARSONAGE DEPARTMENT OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

It is easy to see that the itinerant policy of the Methodist Church renders it necessary for her ministers to be provided with furnished homes by the churches which they serve. In communities where the Church has long been established these homes have been made, but on the frontiers, where the preachers battle against adverse and constantly changing forces, or on hard circuits in the older Conferences, they are not always provided. To help make homes on these hard appointments has been one of the most interesting features of the Woman's Home Mission Society. At the end of the first six years of the organization more parsonages had been built than in the first fifty years of American Methodism. The annual report of the Society shows that during the sixteen years of its existence 1,265 parsonages have been aided to the amount of $117,284.23. During the past year $9,899 has been given to aid in building or repairing 129 parsonages. "As long as the itinerancy exists and the Church continues to grow," parsonage building will be a work of vital importance. There are 1,092 men in the Church serving charges which pay salaries ranging from one to three hundred dollars. Many of these men have families, and a large number of these charges have no parsonage.

The evident need of these homes for the preachers is a strong link between the auxiliaries of this organization.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

"Happy release," we sometimes hear when a great sufferer has departed this life. But it is not so much that from which we are released as it is that to which we are released that determines whether the release is a happy one or not.

Religious News.

There was a large congregation present at Wright Memorial M. E. church last night. The pastor, Rev. George H. McFaden, made an earnest appeal, basing his sermon on "Come thou and all thy house into the Ark." There was one profession. Rev. A. L. Franklin, of the Southern Circuit, will arrive in the city to-morrow and assist the pastor during the continuance of the meetings. Song service every evening at 7:40 o'clock. Rev. Mr. McFaden preaches to-night.—Star.

The Christian Thought Club held an unusually interesting meeting yesterday, President Rev. A. Coke Smith, D. D., in the chair. Rev. C. L. Bane led in prayer. Rev. G. H. Lambeth read an excellently written paper on "The Relation of the Methodist Church to Popular Amusements." A general discussion followed. It was the consensus of opinion that no change is needed in the law of the Methodist Church on these questions, but only enforcement of that law; and that the spirit, if not the law, of all Protestant denominations forbids what are known as "Popular Amusements" as much as does the Methodist Church. True recreation and pleasure are necessary and helpful, and are to be commended.—Virginian-Pilot.

The district stewards of the Richmond District of the Methodist Conference assessed the Fairmount Avenue church a total of $360 for benevolent and missionary purposes. Yesterday Rev. J. O. Babcock, the pastor, preached on the subject. The people responded liberally, and in a short time the pastor had $360 in cash and good subscriptions. This is exceedingly liberal, as this church has only recently paid a debt of long standing of nearly $2,000 on the comfortable church building. The latter sum is not quite liquidated, but about all subscribed, and Mr. J. S. Brauer has that in hand, which means the last cent soon will be paid. Well done for the good people of Fairmount. The pastor is proud of his noble people, and worthily so.—Leader.

Rev. W. R. Proctor presided at the Methodist preachers' meeting yesterday morning. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. C. Vaden, presiding elder of the Portsmouth District.

The most important matter that claimed the attention of the body was the reading by Rev. R. H. Bennett of a paper prepared by him and intended for publication in the Methodist Recorder this week on the war claim of the Methodist Church, South, in which he reviewed at length the action of the Southern Methodist Publishing House and the Book Agents in their transaction in the matter with Attorney Stahlman. The paper took the ground that the whole action was a shame and blight upon the Church, and held to the opinion that in order to save the fair name of the Church every dollar of it ought to be returned to the United States government; also, that Stahlman ought to be required to disgorge his ill-gotten gains, and if there was no way to make him do so, then the Church ought to do so, and thus place herself upon the highest pinnacle of purity and righteousness. After a brief discussion of certain points in the paper by Rev. H. C. Cheatham, Rev. W. Asbury Christian, Rev. George Wesley Jones, Rev. C. H. McGhee, and Rev. E. T. Dadmun, the paper was made the order of the day for next Monday.

The resolution presented at the last meeting favoring the continuation of the temperance question in the Sunday School Quarterly, which was to have been acted on at the meeting yesterday, was, by general consent, laid over until next Monday.

Rev. H. C. Cheatham preached at 11 A. M. Sunday at Huntersville church and attended an interesting meeting of the Epworth League in the afternoon. There was no service at night, owing to the electric lights going out.

Rev. J. B. Merritt had fine congregations to hear him at the Seamen's Bethel. His work is in fine condition.

Centenary—Rev. E. T. Dadmun reported large congregations and pleasant services. He said he was with the Rev. James Cannon at Blackstone last week, and reported a fine meeting in progress there. He talked to seventy-five pupils, who seemed deeply concerned on the subject of religion.

Rev. C. L. Bane attended the Sunday school at Cumberland Street church and preached at both morning and evening services, and preached the first of a series of sermons on "The Demand of the Lawbreaker to Keep Possession of the City."

Rev. Dr. J. P. Barrett preached morning and night at the Christian Memorial Temple, and in the afternoon at Providence church, Norfolk county.

Rev. W. P. Jordan reported a fine Sunday school at Park Place.

Central—Rev. W. T. Green reported a good Sunday school and fine congregations to hear him Sunday morning and night.

Rev. George H. McFaden attended Sunday school. He received one on profession of faith at the morning service, and preached to a crowded house at night, and began a protracted meeting. There was one conversion.

At Denby's church Rev. W. R. Crowder reported a good day and pleasant services morning and afternoon.

Rev. C. H. McGhee reported that the meeting at Lambert's Point Methodist church had resulted in good. There were four professions last week and many requests for prayer. The meetings will be continued this week.

Rev. J. N. Latham conducted his usual services at Park View.

Port Norfolk—Rev. Daniel T. Merritt had a fine Sunday school and received three new scholars. He addressed the Rosebud Society at Monumental church in the afternoon, and preached morning and night to good congregations at his own church.

The congregations at Trinity church Sunday were larger than usual, and the services of an exceedingly pleasant character. Rev. George Wesley Jones preached morning and night.

Epworth—Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at 11 A. M. and Rev. Dr. A. Coke Smith at 8 P. M. on "The Reign of the Bramble: A Plea for Civic Righteousness." One member was received on profession of faith.

Rev. Ernest Stevens had his usual congregations at Owens' Memorial. He reported the Sunday school in a growing condition.

Memorial—Rev. W. Asbury Christian preached twice Sunday. At night he had an overflow audience, when he preached on "The Modern Theatre and Its Effect on Character." He took up all of his Conference collections, and will realize the full amount.

Rev. Dr. A. Coke Smith preached at the Ohel Shalom Temple for the Second Presbyterian church Sunday morning and Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at night.

Rev. J. K. Jolliff reported a fine revival in progress at Queen Street Methodist church, and much interest manifested there. There were ten conversions last week.

Rev. D. J. Traynham, of Norfolk Circuit, preached at Oak Grove in the morning and at Jolliff's church in the afternoon.—Virginian-Pilot.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The regular weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers of the city was held this morning. Rev. B. F. Lipscomb, president, presided. Two of our pastors were absent. The usual reports touching the services of yesterday were given. Rev. C. F. Comer is conducting revival services at Ettrick. The monthly session of the Methodist Sunday School Union held yesterday evening at Ettrick, from all accounts, was a most interesting one. Two of our pastors had funeral services to conduct on yesterday. At the Blandford Sunday school yesterday there were two Sunday school workers present as visitors in the person of two young men, who gave interesting and helpful talks to the school. This is a good idea. Let them do so again, and let others follow their example. The revival services have closed at Market Street, and the earnest pastor, Rev. Mr. Hatcher, can take needed rest. It is an open secret that his people will give him a trip in May to Dallas, Tex., to look in on the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to convene there in a few weeks. This is very clever treatment of a worthy minister. Our president, Rev. Mr. Lipscomb, is making arrangements to leave before long for Dallas, Tex., to attend the General Conference as one of the delegates from the Virginia Conference. He has arranged to have his pulpit filled during his absence.—Progress.

STRONG SERMONS

By Dr. Smith and Rev. C. L. Bane for Better City Government.

One of the largest congregations that has ever attended the Cumberland Street Methodist church gathered there Sunday night. Many of those present were attracted by the announcement in Sunday's Virginian-Pilot that the pastor, Rev. C. L. Bane, would preach

(Continued on page 12.)

Talmage's Sermon.

WASHINGTON. While this discourse of Dr. Talmage rebukes arrogance it encourages humanity and shows how the evening of life may be brightened. The text is I Kings xx, 11, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

Harness is the obsolete word for armor. It means harness for the man, not harness for the beast; harness for battle, not harness for the plow. The ancient armor consisted of helmet for the head, breastplate and shield for the heart, greaves for the feet. The text makes a comparison between a man enlisting for some war and a veteran returning, the one putting on his armor and the other putting it off.

Benhadad, the king of Syria, thought he could easily overcome the king of Israel. Indeed, the Syrian was so sure of the victory that he spread an ante-bellum banquet. With thirty-two kings he was celebrating what they were going to do. There were in all thirty-three kings at the carousal, and their condition is described in the Bible, not as convivial or stimulated exaltation, but drunk. Their gilded and bannered pavilions were surrounded by high mettled horses, neighing and champing and hitched to chariots such as kings rode in. Benhadad sends officers over to the king of Israel demanding the surrender of the city, saying, "Thou shalt deliver me thy silver and thy gold and thy wives and thy children," and afterward sends other officers, saying that the palace of the king will be searched and everything Benhadad wants he will take without asking. Then the king of Israel called a council of war, and word is sent back to Benhadad that his unreasonable demand will be resisted. Then Benhadad sends another message to the king of Israel, a message full of arrogance and bravado, practically saying: "We will destroy you utterly. I will grind Samaria into the dust, but there will not be dust enough to make a handful for each one of my troops." Then the king of Israel replied to Benhadad, practically saying: "Let me see you do what you say. You royal braggart, you might better have postponed your banquet until after the battle instead of spreading it before the battle. You huzza too soon. 'Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.'"

Too Much Boasting.

An avalanche of courage and righteousness, the Israelitish army came down on Benhadad and his host. It was a hand to hand fight, each Israelite hewing down a Syrian. Benhadad, on horseback, gets away with some of the cavalry, but is only saved for a worse defeat, in which 100,000 Syrian infantry were slaughtered in one day. Now we see the sarcasm and the epigrammatic power of the message of my text sent by the king of Israel to Benhadad, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

All up and down history we see such too early boasting. Sout, the marshal of France, was so certain that he would conquer that he had a proclamation printed announcing himself king of Portugal and had a grand feast prepared for 4 o'clock that afternoon, but before that hour he fled in ignominious defeat, and Wellington of the conquering host sat down at 4 o'clock at the very banquet the marshal of France had ordered for himself. Charles V. invaded France and was so sure of conquest that he requested Paul Jovius, the historian, to gather together a large amount of paper on which to write the story of his many victories, but disease and famine seized upon his troopers, and he retreated in dismay. So Benhadad's behavior has been copied in all ages of the world. It will be my object, among other lessons, to show that he who puts off the armor, having finished the battle, is more to be congratulated than he who begins.

First, I find encouragement in this subject for the aged who have got through the work and struggle of earthly life. My venerable friends, if you had at twenty-five years of age full appreciation of what you would have to go through in the thirties and the forties and the fifties of your lifetime you would have been appalled. Fortunately the bereavements, the temptations, the persecutions, the hardships, were curtailed from your sight. With more or less fortitude you passed through the crises of pain and sadness and disappointment and fatigue and still live to recount the divine help that sustained you. At twenty or thirty years of your age at the tap of the drum you put on the harness. Now, at sixty or seventy or eighty, you are peacefully putting it off. You would not want to try the battle of life over again. So many of just your temperament and with as good a starting and as fine a parentage and seemingly with as much equipage of character as you had have made complete shipwreck that you would not want again to run the risks. Though you can look back and see many mistakes, the next time you might make worse mistakes. Instead of being depressed over the fact that you are being counted out or omitted in the great undertakings of the church and the world, rejoice that you have a right to hang up your helmet and sheathe your sword and free your hands from the gauntlets and your feet from the boots of mail.

At the Soldiers' home in the suburbs of this city I often admire the peaceful and contented looks of the venerable heroes as they sit under the trees or go in and out the fine abode that our government has appropriately provided for them. They are not longing for other Chapultepecs. They do not want to undertake another South Mountain. Their foot does not ache to get into the stirrup of the cavalryman. They are not longing for the hardtack of the soldiers' breakfast along the Chickahominy. They have no desire for another ride in the ambulance to the field hospital. When the Spanish war broke out, they sometimes wondered if their rheumatic knee would allow them to keep step in a march, and if their sight was good enough to see an advancing foe, and if their ear was alert enough to hear the command "Charge!" But for the most part they are glad that there is no more war for them. So let all of the aged in peace with God, through the blessed Christ, cultivate contentment and thank the Lord their Sedan has been fought and the war is over. "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off."

There are old farmers who cannot do one more day's work. What harvests they raised in 1870! They knew the rotation of crops as well as they know the rotation of the seasons. Under what blistering suns they swung the scythe and the cradle! Through what deep snows they drew the logs or cut their way to the foddering of the cattle! What droughts, what freshets, what insectile invasions, they remember! To clothe and feed and educate the household they went through toils and self sacrifices that the world knew but little about. Rest, aged man! Let the boys do the shoveling and thrashing and cutting and sweating. You have put the harness off, and do not try to put it on again.

There are old mechanics that can no more shove the plane or pound with the hammer or bore with the bit or run up the ladder to the scaffolding. Master mechanics they were or subordinates who wrought faithfully in the work of house or barn or ship building. You have a right to quit. You have finished your task. Be thankful that your work is done.

Faithful Service Remembered.

Then there are aged physicians. What tragedies of pain and accident they have witnessed! How much suffering they have assuaged! How many brave battles they have fought with lancet and cataclysm! How many fevers they cooled! How many broken bones they set! How many paroxysms they quieted! How many anxious days they passed when they knew that human lives depended upon their skill and fidelity! They drove back death from many a cradle.

And there are the old ministers. Once they were foremost in general assemblies and conferences and associations. They have preached in Pentecosts. They have stood by Christian deathbeds and seen Elijahs go up in flaming chariots of glory. The gospel they preached for fifty or sixty years illumines their every feature. They have stopped preaching, for their breath is short, or their nerves are a-jangle, or they lose their thread of discourse or suffer from confusion of ideas. Cheer up, aged dominies and doctors. The Bible says God forgets our sins when we repent of them, but he never forgets faithful services rendered. He remembers that revival where you stood watching the souls that came "as clouds and as doves to the windows." He has indicated by your physical or mental condition that it is time for you to stop. Be content to stop. Your helmet bears the mark of many a battleax; your sword is bent from many a holy struggle; your shield is dented with the thrust of many a spear. Now hang up the armor with gladness.

Unwise Braggadocio.

Again, I learn from Benhadad's behavior the un wisdom of boasting of what one is going to do. Two messages had he sent to the king of Israel, both messages full of insolence and braggadocio. With brimming beaker in hand he is talking with the royal group about what he will do with the spoils of the victory he is going to achieve that afternoon. He takes it for granted that Samaria will surrender. He gives command for the capture of some of the inhabitants of Samaria who are approaching, saying, "Whether they be come out for peace take them alive, or whether they be come out for war take them alive." But behold the fugitive king in frightened retreat before sundown! Better not tell boastfully what you are going to do. Wait until it is done. You do well to lay out your plans, but there are so many mistakes and disappointments in life that you may not be able to carry out your plans, and there is no need of invoking the world's derision and caricature. Napoleon was so sure of conquering England, Scotland and Ireland that he had a medal struck celebrating the conquest, which he never made, and that medal was represented his own crowned head.

Dr. Pendleton and Mr. Saunders were talking in the time of persecution under Queen Mary. Saunders was trembling and afraid, but Pendleton said: "What! Man, there is much more cause for me to fear than you. You are small, and I have a large bodily frame, but you will see the last piece of this flesh consumed to ashes before I ever forsake Jesus Christ and his truth, which I have professed." Not long after Saunders, the faint hearted, gave up his life for Christ's sake, while Pendleton, who had talked so big, played coward and gave up religion when the test came. Wilberforce did not tell what he was going to do with the slave trade, but how much he accomplished is suggested by Lord Brougham's remark concerning Wilberforce after his decease, "He went to heaven with 800,000 broken fetters in his hand."

Do not boast of your moral strength. One of the most brilliant men of the nineteenth century, having temporarily reformed from inebriacy, stood on the platform of Broadway tabernacle, New York, and said, "Were this great globe one crystallite and I were offered the possession of it if I would drink one glass of brandy I would refuse with scorn, and I want no religion to help me." But that same man died at Poughkeepsie a drunken pauper. Better understate than overrate ourselves.

Famous Sentiment Refuted.

My subject is also a refutation of the famous sentiment that God is on the side of the heaviest artillery. From all I can read about this struggle Benhadad spoke the truth when he said, "The gods do so unto me and more also if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that follow me." He was so confident that with his superior numbers he could defeat the king of Israel and capture Samaria that he left the work for a short afternoon. He is at noon in wassail with his royal associates. The battle of Waterloo was not opened until twenty-five minutes of 12 o'clock at noon, but that was because the ground was too wet to move the artillery. Benhadad waits until afternoon because he is overconfident. God is not on the side of the most swords or the most war chariots or the most cannon if they be in the wrong, but on the side of the right. How such a preposterous sentiment as I have mentioned should have gained sway I know not when all history proclaims the opposite. Describing the very next battle in which Benhadad fought and was miserably defeated, the Bible says, "The children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids, but the Syrians filled the country." How insignificant were the unarmed Israelites, half starved and unorganized, compared with Pharaoh's host on foot, on horseback and charioted! But the waves of the Red sea took part in the conflict, parting to let the pursued pass, but coming together to destroy the pursuers. The Midianites and Amalekites were like grasshoppers for multitudes, but 300 men under Gideon came down, their only weapons pitchers and lamps and trumpets, and as they held up the lamps and threw down the pitchers and blew the trumpets the flash of the lights and the blare of the instruments and the crash of the crockery made their enemy fall back in wild terror.

Notice also that my text takes it for granted that you must put on the harness, else how can you take it off? Life is a battle—a thirty years', a forty years' or a sixty years' war. Helmet you must have, for the battleaxes of

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train with Sleeper Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Tourist Car service. Also, Pullman Dining Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)
5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

2:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.
LOCAL FREIGHT.
Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH.

LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.
5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations. Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:00 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent,
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY LINE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California, and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

Schedule in Effect February 24, 1901.

Route.	No. 27.	No. 31
Leave Richmond	12:23 noon	10:40 P M
Arrive Petersburg	1:08 P M	11:30 P M
Arrive Henderson	3:52 P M	2:27 A M
Arrive Durham daily exc. Sunday		8:30 A M
Arrive Raleigh	5:04 P M	3:41 A M
Arrive South'n Pine*	6:57 P M	5:37 A M
Arrive Pinehurst	7:17 P M	*6:10 A M
Arrive Hamlet	7:50 P M	6:30 A M
Arrive Charlotte	10:45 P M	9:51 A M
Arrive Wilmington		12:05 noon
Arrive Columbia	11:20 P M	9:40 A M
Arrive Savannah	2:20 A M	12:10 noon
Arrive Jacksonville	6:30 A M	3:50 P M
Arrive St. Augustine	8:50 A M	5:00 P M
Arrive Tampa	5:00 P M	5:00 P M
Arrive Athens	4:04 A M	2:19 P M
Arrive Atlanta Cen T.	5:30 A M	3:35 P M
Arrive Macon	11:10 A M	7:20 P M
Arrive Montgomery	11:40 A M	9:20 P M
Arrive Mobile	4:12 P M	2:55 A M
Arrive New Orleans	8:30 P M	7:30 A M
Arrive Chattanooga	1:00 P M	12:35 A M
Arrive Nashville	6:55 P M	5:35 A M

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:30 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norfolk, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norfolk with train arriving Henderson 2:40 P. M. and Raleigh 4:22 P. M. daily, and Durham 4:30 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily; No. 44 at 5:10 A. M. and No. 66 at 5:55 P. M.

*Through Sleeping Car from Washington to Pinehurst, every Wednesday and Friday. Passengers from North of Washington can take this car by passing from the New York to the Washington sleeper.

**Connection daily at Southern Pines with all trains for Pinehurst, N. C.—20 minutes by electric cars.

Connections at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East Coast points, and Cuba and Porto Rico. At New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND DAILY:

4:45 A. M., No. 44, from all points South and Southwest.

5:35 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

6:13 P. M., No. 36, from Norfolk, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 44—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Drawing-Room, Sleeping, Compartment, and Observation Cars, and Through Day Coaches between New York and St. Augustine—Dining Cars, serving all meals en route. Also Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Florida and Atlanta Fast Mail. Through Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which Through Pullman Tickets are sold. Finest Day Coaches.

Z. P. SMITH,

District Passenger Agent,

'Phone 405. 836 east Main street.
V. E. M'BEE, R. E. L. BUNCH,

Gen'l Supt. Gen'l Pass. Agent.
Portsmouth, Va.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo. for free examination and advice.

BOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent. Write to C. A. SNOW & CO.

Patent Lawyers, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,
Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing
Lumsden & Son,
Jewellers and Opticians
724 1/2 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign and TRADE MARKS or return FREE. We give the best legal advice, and our charges are reasonable.

PATENTS

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Attorneys,
Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Wash., D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLS and UMBERYARD

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

— PLOW HANDLES.

— OBACCO HOGSHEADS.

— CORN MEAL.

— LAT &amp; WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blackstone, Va.

The Home Circle.

MEMORY.

O the mem'ry, blessed mem'ry,
Of the loved ones we have known,
Who are gathered now forever
'Round our Heavenly Father's throne.

When the storm cloud bursts about us,
When the sunshine seems most sweet,
Mem'ry brings those faces closer
Whom we hope again to meet.

Just some little book they gave us,
Or a word we've heard them say,
All comes back again in mem'ry,
Making light some darksome day.

O the mem'ry, blessed mem'ry,
None can ever take away,
Of the dear ones gone before us
Down the bright and shining way.

Then, O Father, keep and guide us
So that when we, too, shall die,
We shall leave on earth behind us
Some sweet blessed memory.

—Julia Graydon.

Harrisburg, Pa.

AS A FATHER.

A gentleman of some wealth and high social position was taken ill. Being much troubled about the little love he found in his heart for God, he complained bitterly to one of his brethren. This is how he was answered:

"When I leave you, I shall go to my home, and the first thing I expect to do is to call my baby. I expect to place her on my knee, and look down into her sweet eyes, and listen to her charming prattle; and, tired as I am, her presence will rest me, for I love that child with unutterable tenderness. But the fact is, she loves me little.

"If my heart were breaking, it would not disturb her sleep. If my body were racked with excruciating pain, it would not interrupt her play. If I were dead, she would be amused in watching my pale face and closed eyes. If any friends came to remove the corpse to the place of burial, she would probably clap her hands in glee, and in two or three days totally forget her father.

"Besides this, she has never brought me a penny, but has been a constant expense on my hands ever since she was born. Yet, though I am not rich, there is not money enough in the world to buy my baby. How is it? Does she love me, or do I love her? Do I withhold my love until I know she loves me? Am I waiting for her to do something worthy of my love before extending it to her?"

"Oh, I see it!" said the sick man, while the tears ran down his cheeks; "I see it clearly. It is not my love to God, but God's love to me I should be thinking about. And I do love Him now as I never loved Him before."

We think of our littleness, when we should remember our Father's almightiness. We bewail our weak love, when we should be grateful for our Father's great love. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us."

WHEN THE BABY CRIES.

Very few mothers are able to correctly interpret the different sounds made by their little one. The baby may cry because he is hungry. Instead of food he gets patted on the back or carried up and down the room. As this is exactly what the baby doesn't want, he cries harder still, and the nurse announces that he is simply cutting another tooth.

All this is very disappointing to the baby, who has to depend upon his cries to express his wants. It may possibly explain why some youngsters cry so hard and so long when the nurse is doing her very best to soothe him with baby talk and short walks up and down.

Dr. West, a British medical man, has spent many years studying baby cries, and has at last announced that he is able to tell just what each one means. He says that the baby has 50 different cries, and each one has a different meaning.

There are different cries for different ills. After listening for a few moments Dr. West is able to tell whether the pain is in the head, chest or stomach.

The cry of passion is a furious cry.

The cry of sleepiness is a drowsy cry.

The cry of grief is a sobbing cry.

The cry of an infant when roused from sleep is a shrill cry.

The cry of hunger is very characteristic—it is unaccompanied with tears and is a wailing cry.

The cry of teething is a fretful cry.

The cry of earache is short, sharp, piercing and decisive, the head being moved from side to side and the little hand being often put up to the affected side of the head.—Baltimore Sun.

THE BLIND GIRL.

There is a pathetic story of a blind girl, told by Ian Maclaren in the January number of Frank Leslie's:

"If I dinna see"—and she spoke as if this was a matter of doubt, and she was making a concession for argument's sake—"there's naeboddy in the Glen can hear like me. There's no a footstep of a Drumtochty man comes to the door but I ken his name, and there's no voice oot on the road that I canna tell. The birds sing sweeter to me than to onybody else, and I can hear them cheeping to one another in the bushes before they go to sleep. And the flowers smell sweeter to me—the roses and the carnations and the bonny moss rose—and I judge that the oat-cake and milk taste the richer because I dinna see them. Na, na, ye're no to think that I've been ill-treated by my God, for if He didna give me ae thing, He gave me mony things instead.

"And mind ye, it's no as if I'd seen once and lost my sight; that micht ha' been a trial, and my faith micht have failed. I've lost naething; my life has been all getting."

LIKE DAISIES BEFORE THE SCYTHE, baby lives are destroyed in summer by cholera infantum. The attack of the disease is sudden, its progress is sometimes terribly rapid. Mothers who have given their children Perry Davis' Painkiller in water with a few drops of brandy added can tell how this treatment has checked the diarrhoea and vomiting, and put the little patient out of danger. 25 and 50 cents.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

(Continued from Page 9.)

a special sermon on "The Evils in Norfolk." The popular divine took as his theme, "The Lawbreaker's Demand to Keep Possession of the City," and selected as the foundation of his discourse, "Let us alone, what have we to do with thee, Jesus of Nazareth," the words uttered by the "unclean spirit" ere he was cast out of the man by Christ. After dwelling upon the great mission of Christ to bring the world to righteousness and a true knowledge of God and His great purpose in man's creation, he turned his attention to the vicious element of the community, and he characterized their attitude as opposed to all that is good and moral, and as ever ready to give the city over to the worst forms of vice and immorality. He spoke of the terrible effects of gambling and of the liquor traffic, and said they were a menace to society, to our homes and to the best interests of the community. Mr. Bane cited several instances where young men who had been raised under the best religious training had been decoyed by the gambler into their places, which had resulted ultimately in their ruin by sending them to the State prison. Mr. Bane announced that he would continue the subject next Sunday night.

Dr. A. Coke Smith preached a powerful sermon to a large congregation at Epworth church Sunday night, taking as his theme "The Reign of the Bramble: A Plea for Civic Righteousness." He represented the "bramble" as the evil element that is now dominating the city for its ruin. He declared that it was the duty of all good citizens to rescue the affairs of the government from the hands of the "bramble"—the politician—and turn them over to the solid and trustworthy element of the community. The Doctor did not fail to point out many of the evils that arise from certain men of influence and good standing lending their aid to the purposes of the very worst politicians. He closed his discourse by urging a discontinuance of the reign of the "bramble."—Virginian-Pilot.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Easter in Washington was celebrated in all the churches with special services, in which flowers and music bore a prominent part. The day dawned warm and clear, and there was a consequent display of Easter finery on the streets before and after the morning services, though sudden showers in the afternoon must have spoiled many a new spring toilet. The President attended the services at the modest little Grace Reformed Church on Fifteenth street, where he has worshipped ever since he was elected to the Vice-Presidency. The interior of the edifice was profusely decorated with Easter lilies and other flowers symbolic of the day, many of them sent from the White House conservatories. All of the pews were filled and the aisles crowded, chiefly with out-of-town people, eager to catch a glimpse of Mr. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt, with Ethel, Kermit and Archibald, attended St. John's church, on Sixteenth street, just across Lafayette Square from the White House. After the heavy thunder shower of the early afternoon, the President went alone for his usual long Sunday walk, and did not return until nearly sunset. He counts a great deal on these walks as "bracers" to carry him through the onerous duties of the week.

Dr. F. M. Bristol, of the Metropolitan M. E. church, who preached an Easter sermon, preceded his remarks by a touching reference to the late President McKinley, who attended the Easter services of last year, whom he spoke of as "the beloved, murdered, martyred President and Christian gentleman, whose life had been a constant guide to thousands, and a beacon light for all to follow." Dr. Bristol took his text from Revelation 1: 18: 'I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of the grave and of death.' He said in part: "The universal joy of this Easter morning reveals to us what man is most seriously and profoundly thinking about. This mystery of death, which is but one of the many mysteries of our strange existence, excites the mind to its most intense inquiry and speculation. This fact and the doctrine of the resurrection of Jesus Christ awakens thought to its most exalted conceptions and illumines the imagination with the glory of heavenly visions. What other theme has ever so moved the universal heart of humanity as the resurrection of Jesus Christ. What other event in all this world's history has for the whole race a more glorious significance?"

Dr. R. H. McKim, whose Easter sermon was on "The Power of the Resurrection," said: "The resurrection is the keystone of the arch of Christian faith. Had it not been for the triumph of Christ over the grave the whole basis of Christianity would never have existed. That fact established the Messiahship of Christ. Take the life of Paul and see how the power of the resurrection influenced him. Paul turned from his hosts of friends and admirers, turned his back against a career that could lead only to immense earthly glory, and took up the great work of redeeming men, because he had felt the wonderful power of the Son of Man burning within him, a power that had been established by Christ's triumph over the grave. And the constant theme of Paul's ministry was the resurrection and what it meant to the world."

Bishop Satterlee's Easter discourse was on "The Power of Endless Life," his text from Hebrews 7: 16. After citing the case of Columbus and his discovery of the new world after many men had sailed across the Atlantic never to return, the Bishop said: "We turn to a higher being. The whole human race gazes on that most wondrous man. God told of the land beyond the sea of death; He told of the light to come as a certainty; he said to the wondering, scoffing multitudes that he would go to that land and return to them. They jeered. They nailed Him to the cross. They pierced His heart with a spear. They wanted to be sure He was dead. The multitude went to the Roman Governor and said that what Jesus had said could not be true. The tomb, where the body lay, was closed by a great stone. Extra precaution was taken by sealing the entrance to the sepulchre with the great seal of the country. Guards were set to watch the stone. His disciples had forgotten His prophecy. How well His enemies remembered it. The moment arrived. The stone was rolled away, and Christ came out. At His shining figure the guards fled. The stone was rolled away by a power from within, and the whole world gazes on the form from the sepulchre—the one man of the whole earth who set sail on the sea of death and returned. The life to come was known. It is fixed by historical facts."

The Y. M. C. A. of Washington has been holding, during the winter, a series of meetings for men in one of the large theatres of the city, which have been addressed by eminent spiritual advisers from all over the world. That these services have been accomplishing a great good is shown by their popularity and by the rapid strides in membership made by the local organization. The Easter meeting was addressed by W. R. Moody, son of the famous evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. The son possesses a great deal of the magnetism of the father, and is at present engaged in fostering the many evangelical enterprises inaugurated by the latter during his busy lifetime. The address was brilliant and forceful, and the special music was appropriate to the day. At the conclusion of the services there was an earnest talk with those who cared to remain for it, and a number of the audience professed Christianity at that time.

Apropos of the famous evangelist is the following history of a world-wide famous hymn, as told in a recent sermon by Dr. W. W. Curry—the song of the Ninety and Nine: "One day while Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey were travelling from England to Scotland, Mr. Sankey bought a newspaper, in which he discovered some verses that attracted his attention. He showed them to Mr. Moody, who did not pay much attention to them. He cut them out and pasted them in his note book. A few weeks later, Mr. Moody, at the close of a revival sermon in Scotland, asked Mr. Sankey to sing something appropriate. Mr. Sankey said he couldn't think of anything, and having sang the Twenty-third Psalm three times, he did not care to repeat it. Then he remembered the verses. He took out his note book. He did not have an idea of a tune, but made up his mind to go ahead and trust to the Lord for the air. He arose before the great audience, ignorant of how he would begin to sing the hymn. Without a second's hesitation, he started in the key of A, and went through the first verse. Here, again, he met a difficulty. Would he be able to do it again? He started the second verse, and through to the fifth. At the end of the fifth verse there were tears in Mr. Moody's eyes, and leaning over, he asked Mr. Sankey where he had discovered the hymn. "That is the hymn you would not listen to the other day on the train," replied Mr. Sankey. From that time on the hymn has grown in popularity. Mr. Sankey placed it immediately in his collection, and it is now sung by every Christian congregation in the world.

A most unique settlement of the Boer war has been proposed by a Missouri correspondent of a Washington paper. I quote the following from his letter: "Here is one thing that we could do: Propose to England that the United States will at its own cost induce the Boers of the Orange Free State and Transvaal Republic to cease fighting, bring them to the United States, and settle them together in some one State or Territory, giving each head of a family 160 acres of land and a transferable warrant for 160 more, with free transportation to the place chosen for the people and their belongings. This shall include also all prisoners of war at St. Helena and elsewhere, with rations for and until they can get returns from their own labors. In consideration of this England shall cede and relinquish to the United States all rights of every kind whatsoever in Canada, the West Indies, and elsewhere in North and South America, the following provinces to enter the Union as States as soon as they prepare constitutions: Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, and the part of British Colombia lying south of the lower point of Alaska."

The Methodists are preparing to make the centennial celebration of the establishment of that denomination in the District of Columbia a memorable one. The principal exercises are to be held in Trinity M. E. church, which is the direct successor, through years of eventful history, of the first Methodist church established at the national capital, in 1802.

Mr. H. B. Moulton, of this city, is the temporary chairman of the Federation of Men's Clubs, an organization that has been formed for the purpose of increasing the attendance of men at churches. Speaking of this organization, Mr. Moulton said: "Men's clubs are being organized in the various Protestant churches in all parts of the country, because there is a deplorable dearth of men to fill the various offices in the different churches, such as Sunday school teachers, class leaders, and other positions. A central organization has been formed, and members of this body go out among the other churches to organize clubs. By forming men's clubs in all parts of the country, and in all Protestant churches, we will endeavor to bring the men into the churches in greater numbers." The object of this organization is so good that it deserves to succeed.

Rev. S. M. Newman, of the First Congregational church, delivered an interesting illustrated lecture on the history of the Bible and its manuscripts and versions this week. He spoke of the Alexandrine manuscript of the Bible, which was written in the fifth century, which is kept in a glass case in the British Museum, London, and is seldom touched. He compared a page of it with a page of the Vatican manuscript, showing that where capital letters were used in the Alexandrine manuscript there were none in the Vatican manuscript. He said it was only about the middle of the fifth century that a tendency was shown to make some sort of a division by the use of capitals, while it was not until 1248 that chapters were used, and 1551, or after the discovery of America, that a division was made by verses. The Alexandrine manuscript was presented to King Charles I. of England, and kept in the royal archives until 1753, when it was transferred to the British Museum, where it is now and is likely to remain.

Why worry about what you will do to-morrow or next year? God planned that all out for you from the beginning. You or I can't change it if we would. Never fear; as long as He sees best for you to dwell on this earth, just as surely will there be a place for you. So take heart of His love, and don't worry.

VERY LOW RATES TO THE NORTH-WEST MARCH 1ST TO APRIL 30, 1902.

The Norfolk and Western Railway will sell tickets to Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Coast Points at exceeding low rates from all stations. It is possible rates to the West will never be so cheap again; choice of three routes. Write for rates and schedules, say to what point you are going and your nearest station to this line. See any Agent N. & W. R'y or W. B. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,

Gen. Pass. Agt., Trav. Pass. Agt.,
Roanoke, Va.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, DALLAS, TEXAS, MAY 7TH, JUNE 7TH, 1902.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway begs to announce one fare plus $2 for the round trip from all points on its lines to Dallas and return. Tickets to be on sale May 3d, 4th, 5th, with return limit June 9th, except that by deposit of tickets with joint agent at Dallas on or before May 20th, and on payment of 50 cents, an extension to June 30th may be obtained.

The Southern Railway offers the choice of routes to Dallas, but the trip must be made in both directions over same route—through Asheville (Land of the Sky) and Memphis; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Shreveport; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis, or through Atlanta, Montgomery and New Orleans.

For detail information call on or write any agent of the Southern Railway, or to C. W. WESTBURY,
D. P. A., Richmond, Va.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Federation Woman's Clubs, Los Angeles, Cal., May 1st to 8th.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

VERY LOW RATES TO CALIFORNIA VIA THE SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway offers special Colonists rates of $47.50 from Richmond to San Francisco and all other California points. Tickets sold daily until April 30, 1902. The Seaboard offers choice of routes going either via Atlanta and New Orleans or via Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville and Memphis.

For further information, apply to

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.

Z. P. Smith, District Passenger Agent, 1006 East Main street. 'Phone, 405.

"CO-FRACTIONS."

This little well-printed and well-bound book of forty-six pages, 16mo, contains and elaborates a new and valuable discovery in mathematics. It is an addition to science; it presents what was never before known or published; its methods are short and easy; in many problems the solution is briefer than the statement; a very large number of problems can be solved by these methods; it handles problems in percentage, arithmetical and geometrical progression, simple and compound interest, loss and gain, stocks and bonds, and a great variety of analytical questions. Teachers should teach it, students should study it, business men should use it, and mathematical text-makers should introduce its methods into their books.

We present the following testimonials:

Professor Edmund Longley, A. M., now retired, but for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, Virginia, and a brilliant mathematician, writes: "This goes just to thank you for the copy sent me of your 'Co-Fractions,' with the attendant personal note. Pardon me for directly expressing my admiration of the vigorous and acute brain work that evolved the work."

Professor Charles E. Vawter, LL.D., for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, and now president of the Miller School, Albemarle county, Va., says: "I have read with most pleasing interest the work on 'Co-Fractions,' by my old friend, Professor R. N. Price. Every one who teaches arithmetic should read it. It presents in a new, concise, skillful, and ingenious way, facts of arithmetic that all should know. It will widen the view and pull many a plodder out of the ruts."

The book sells at 25 cents, postpaid, or $2.40 per dozen, by freight, express, or post, at expense of the seller. Order of R. N. Price, Morristown, Tenn.

(Continued from page 10.)

skepticism and agnosticism are aimed at your head. Every possible effort will be made to make you think wrong. The young man who gets his head filled with wrong notions about God, about Christ, about the soul, about the great beyond, is already captured. Put on the helmet, the helmet well adjusted under the chin. Think right, and you will act right. Yes, breastplate for heart. That is the most important part to be defended. That decides what you love and what you hate, what you hope for and what you despise. That decides earthly happiness and eternal destiny.

Beware of Hidden Foes.

Young man, see that you have on a complete armor. All looks bright now, and it seems as if you could march right on without opposition or attack, but be not deceived. There are hidden foes ready to halt you on your way. The same cup that Benhadad drank out of just before his defeat will be offered to effect your defeat. His intoxicated brain saw victory when there was nothing but rout and ruin. What work Benhadad's cup made for Benhadad's army! What shipwrecks on the sea, what disasters on the land, caused by inflaming liquids put upon the tongue to set seething the brain! How many kings of thought and influence, with crowns brighter than the one Benhadad wore, have by strong drink been put into flight as base as that in which Benhadad rode! "Give them to me," says the demon of inebriacy. "Give them to me; hand them down—the brightest legislators of the land. I will thicken their tongue; I will bloat their cheek; I will stagger their step; I will damn their soul. Hand them down to me—the physician out of his laboratory, the attorney from the courtroom, the minister of the gospel from the altars of God. Hand them down to me, the queens of the drawing room, and I will disgrace their names and blast their homes and throw them down farther than Jezebel fell to the dogs that crunched her carcass."

We hold our breath in horror as once in awhile we hear of some one, either by accident or suicide, going over Niagara falls, but the tides, the depths, the awful surges of intemperance are every hour of every day rushing scores of immortals down into unfathomed abyss. Suicides by the hundreds of thousands! Suicides by the million! Beware of the cup out of which Benhadad drank personal and national demolition!

Yes, you must have full armor. There are temptations to an impure life all the time multiplying and intensifying. Read in private and discussed afterward by the refined and elegant in parlors are books poisoned from lid to lid with impurities. Loose characters in the novel applauded by rhetorical pens and proprieties of life caricatured as prudery and infidelity of behavior put in a way to excite sympathy and half approval. My wonder is not that so many go astray, but my wonder is that ten times as many are not debauched. There are influences at work which, if unarrested, will turn our cities into Sodoms and Gomorrah ready for the hail and fire and brimstone of God's indignation.

Oh, yes, you need the harness on until God tells you to take it off. In olden time it was leathern armor or chain armor or ribbed armor, fashioned in ancient foundry, but no one can give you the outfit you need except God, who is master of this world and the infernal world, from which ascend the mightiest hostilities. Lay hold of God. Nothing but the arm of Omnipotence is strong enough for the tempted.

Strength in the Gospel Armor.

Young man, put on the entire gospel outfit. If you have come from the country to live in the city, imitate the example of a young man who arrived in New York on Saturday night, intending the following Monday to enter his place of employment. On Sunday morning, carrying out the good advice before leaving his country home, he went to church. Standing at the door, he was abashed as the beauty and fashion and wealth swept through the doors of the sanctuary, and he dared not go in. As he was about turning to go away a gentleman said, "Have you a seat, young man?" "No, sir." "Do you belong to the city?" "No, sir." "Where is your home?" "In the country." "How long have you been in the city?" "I came in last night." "What are you going to do here?" "I hope to go into business tomorrow." "That is right. You have begun well, young man. Never forsake the God of your fathers. Come, I will give you a seat in my pew." The next morning the young man presented his letter in business circles. "What do you want, young man?" said the Scotch merchant. "I want to get credit on some leather, upper and sole." "Have you references?" "I think I can get references. My father has friends here." "Young man, did I not see you yesterday in Mr. Lenox's pew?" "I do not know, sir. I was at church, and a kind gentleman asked me to sit in his pew." "Yes, young man, that was Robert Lenox. I will trust any one that Mr. Lenox invites into his pew. You need not trouble yourself about references. When these goods are gone, come and get more." That young man became an eminent merchant and, more than that, a Christian merchant, and he attributed all his success to that first Sabbath in the city. Young man just arrived, put yourself under good influences your first day in town. There hangs your helmet. Take it down. There is your breastplate. Adjust it. There is all the harness for safety and triumph. Put it on.

Also see in my subject the folly of underestimating the enemy. That was Benhadad's fatal mistake. He could whip them before sundown. He wanted less than half a day to capture Samaria and make the king of Israel capitulate. But what he thought was so easy turned out to be the impossible. Better overestimate than underestimate the other side. We who are trying to make the world what it ought to be contend not with humunculi. We wrestle not with striplings. We have a whole army of antagonists trying to halt the King of God and overthrow the cause of righteousness. If we secure the victory, it will be a struggle as fierce as when Darius and Alexander grappled each other at Arbela, as when Joan of Arc rode triumphant at Orleans, as when the Russians met the Swedes at Poltava, as when Marlborough commanded the allied armies at Blenheim. Those were fights for earthly crowns and dominions, but the fight that now goes on between all the allied armies of heaven and all the allied armies of hell is to settle whether God or Satan is to have possession of this planet.

God accepts obedience without emotion, but cannot accept emotion without obedience.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

ANNUAL MEETING GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS., MAY 14-17, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Jackson and return. Tickets on sale May 12th 13th, and 14th, return limit May 30, 1902.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.*R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENOER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.
DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Our Main and Branch Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,
PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SWEET, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO., OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

D. R. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All Prescriptions compounded by experience Druggists

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry,
of Petersburg.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO., RICHMOND, VA.

It Will Pay You !

TO SEND A POSTAL CARD FOR OUR PRICES ON
Cane Mills, Cider Mills,
Buggies and Harness.

—In Fact—

Everything in the Hardware and Implement Lines
WE HAVE THE GOODS AND PRICES TO SUIT.
Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, — VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company,

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS.

...FOR TOBACCO...

Bellefonte,
4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Hard Cash,
2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Standard,
2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Alliance,
2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

FOR CORN AND COTTON,

Highland,
1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 2.

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is $15.20,	but it actually runs $16.54
Alliance	" 15.20,	" " " 17.71
Hard Cash	" 16.70,	" " " 18.96
Bellefonte	" 21.20,	" " " 23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,
Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 17.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., MAY 1, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

POSTSCRIPT TO OPEN LETTER.

It has now been over two months since the Open Letter on the "War Claim" was published. I have received a great number of letters from prominent delegates to the General Conference, from brethren in my own Conference, and have read a great many articles discussing various phases of the question. I have purposely refrained from making any further statement until now. The General Conference convenes next week, and I desire to say a few things before the meeting.

I thought I expressed myself plainly, but it seems that I did not stress some points sufficiently. My opinion as to what is best to be done, and therefore what I would like to see done, has never changed. (1) I think the conduct of Stahlman and the conduct of the agents should be condemned and repudiated, and that both of the agents should be dismissed. (2) I think the Book Committee should be condemned for making such a contract, for failing to condemn Stahlman and the agents at the last General Conference, for failing to do so since the last General Conference, and for their attempt to defend their conduct in their letters to the Church. I think that none of them should be re-elected. (3) I think that every dollar ought to be paid back into the United States treasury. I cannot say that I am sure that the money would never have been paid but for the deceptive work of Stahlman and of Barbee and Smith. I believe that it was paid sooner because of that work, but I also believe that it would have been paid in the end, without any such work. But I believe that it would have been far better never to have gotten the money than to have gotten it under such circumstances, and that having obtained it under such circumstances, it should all be returned with a clear statement that the reputation and character of the Church is priceless, and that money is of no importance when honor is involved, in even the slightest degree. And I should desire it to be returned with the statement that we decline ever to receive it again, for I want the world to know that we are not giving it back expecting to have it returned to us again. To return it, and immediately to have the government to return it to us, will simply subject us to the charge of hypocrisy in the eyes of the world, of going through the form of return, knowing that we would lose nothing, but would gain a short-lived separation for honesty. If it were given back by us, and was not returned to us, then we would be ridiculed as having been fooled and caught in a trap. If the money should be returned without a positive statement that we would not receive it again, I believe that we would be accused of "playing to the galleries," and that we would utterly fail to convey the great lesson which we have a chance to convey to the world. It has even been said by senators who desire us to pay it back, that it will be given back to us within a few days, and men will shrug their shoulders and say, "They knew that they would get it back. What a stir about nothing." If we expect to prove to the money-loving world that we mean anything by the return of the money, we must return it and refuse ever to touch it again. (4) Suit should be entered against Stahlman to secure the return of the money, and judgment should be obtained, if possible, even if we cannot recover a penny from his estate.

The four above-mentioned points represent the views I hold on the great question. They were all clearly stated in my "open letter," and I believe that such action is best for the Church. But I did not elaborate those points in my "open letter," because the reasons for such action had been given by others, as well as myself, a number of times. The fact, however, that I did not elaborate those points, but devoted the greater part of the "Open Letter" to another method of settling the question of the money, seems to have caused some to think that I had personally changed my opinion, and no longer thought the money ought to be given back to the government. This is a mistake. In that letter I said that I "felt obliged to stand for either one of two propositions in reference to the money: (1) Either all of the money—$288,000—should be returned to the United States Government, etc. (2), or the Conference should take such action as will carry out the purpose of the Senate in the passage of the bill, and as will restore to the treasury of the House $95,000, the amount paid to Stahlman contrary to the expressed intention of the Senate, and contrary to the statements of Stahlman, and of our agents, Barbee and Smith." I put as my first method the return of the money to the government. But I did not enter into a discussion of that, because it was a simple proposition, which had been often discussed, and if it was decided to pay it back, the money lacking could be borrowed and bonds issued to be returned as the Conference might elect.

But some have been surprised that, holding the opinion expressed above, I should have presented and discussed at such length another method of disposing of the question of "What shall we do with the money?" Some have written to me, and some have said to me that I should not have presented the second proposition until it was clear that the first could not prevail. I thought that matter over with care, and I became convinced that both methods should be before the delegates and before the Church at the same time. I prefer the first method, and shall be greatly rejoiced if, after consultation, the Conference will agree to adopt it. I think it ought to adopt it, because I believe that it will teach a greater lesson to our people, to our children, and to the great money-loving world about us. But I have talked and read a great deal about this question, and with men whom I believe to be as conscientious as myself, and as anxious to do what is right. They condemn the agents and the Book Committee, but they do not think that it is right to give back the money, which, they say, belongs to us, and which would be returned to us at once by Congress if it were given back. They have heard all the arguments for giving back the money, and they are still unconvinced that we should follow that course, and many of them have declared that they will not vote for it, and some of them have declared that they will get out an injunction to prevent such action from being taken if the Conference should vote to do so. The delegates, therefore, who censure the conduct of the agents and of the Book Committee are not agreed as to the best course to be followed about the money. And this is not surprising. There is only one question as to the conduct of the agents and Book Committee: Was it right or wrong? That question must be answered "Yes" or "No." The moral issue is clearly defined, and there can be no compromise and no yielding on a clearly-defined moral issue. But "What shall be done with the money?" is a question which may be answered in several ways; the moral issue is not so clearly defined as to prevent the question of expediency from coming in. For example, I think the money should be returned, with a statement that we will never receive it again. I do not think it immoral to return the money without that statement, but I do think it very inexpedient, and I think it would be likely to do harm. Another brother thinks that we should turn over to the government $187,200, all that came into our hands. He thinks that we are not responsible for any except that over which we have control. Another brother thinks that the money is clearly ours; that the Senate intended to give it to us; that the Senate is sorry we did not get it all, and so are we, and that, having condemned the conduct which deprived us of part of the money, we should express to the Senate our regret that our agents prevented us from getting what they intended we should have.

These are simply illustrations. They show how much more involved this question is than is the question of the conduct of the agents, and how judgment comes in. These views and seeing how divided we were, and how unlikely it was that we would agree, I determined to see whether I could find a plan, different from those one my judgment and conscience both agreed upon, which plan would meet the demands of my conscience, even if it were not the best plan according to my judgment. I cannot support any plan which does not satisfy conscience, but I may yield my judgment to that of others in a matter of expediency. What does conscience demand for me was the issue. Is the demand made by conscience of such a nature that it can be presented as a basis for agreement among those whose judgment does not agree?

What damage was done by the conduct of our agents? (1) The cause of truth was injured and our reputation as a Christian Church was injured. This, the greatest wrong, must be repaired by condemnation of their conduct. (2) The purpose of the Senate in reference to the money was defeated, and the beneficiaries were deprived of their rights. How is this damage to be repaired? By finding out the purpose of the Senate, and by carrying that purpose out, at the same time seeing to it that the beneficiaries suffer no harm. How can the purpose of the Senate be discovered? This is not a question of morals, but it is a question of fact. The record shows what the apparent purpose of the Senate was. It was to appropriate $288,000 to the Publishing House, especially for the benefit of the superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers, and the Senate was

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1909, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"Mr. President," said the judge, with a good natured smile, "I have been a college boy myself. I don't intend to make a speech on this occasion."

"But you are," sung out the voice that had interrupted the first time.

"That's all of it," replied the chairman pleasantly. "The judges award the prize in this contest to John W. Wilson."

And then pandemonium broke loose among the students as the judge walked up to Wilson and handed him the envelope containing three crisp $10 bills. Even Edward, in the first moment of disappointment, could not help thinking of how much he could do with $30 in the way of new books or a suit of clothes that he needed very much.

"I forgot to tell you, Mr. Blake, that I promised to give up the Sunday study."

He choked down his feelings and was among the first to shake hands with his rival as the audience noisily dispersed, the members of the two societies trying to tear down each other's flags and finally winding up the evening's excitement with a free for all flag contest at the foot of the chapel steps outside.

The president warmly congratulated both speakers.

"After all, Blake, you did splendidly. You are improving in your delivery."

"Do you think so?" Edward was a little pleased at the president's sincere praise.

"Of course you're more or less disappointed right now," added the president, keenly reading Edward's feelings, "but winning the prize isn't the main thing in a debate. The main thing is to say something that ought to be said and say it as if you meant it and wanted others to believe as you do."

Edward took it quickly; and afterward remembered the president's words. But he was really too much disappointed to be helped much by it now. He was going off the platform by way of the rear exit when Freeda, who had come up to the edge of the platform with Miss Seton, called to him:

"Ned, won't you go over with us?"

Edward somewhat reluctantly turned and came down the platform steps and joined them.

"I think you did splendidly!" cried Miss Seton, who was an enthusiastic girl, with fine brown eyes and irregular features. "If I'd been the judges, I would have given the reward to you."

"So would I," added Freeda warmly. She was almost as impulsive as her roommate, although she had a good deal of the Blake family characteristic of reserve.

Somehow Edward began to feel a little better. When they went out, he awkwardly went along by Miss Seton, while Freeda, by the side of her roommate, continued to discuss the decision.

"I believe it was because you put in that quotation from Judge Brewer," she said decidedly.

"Why, I thought that was one of the best parts of my argument. It was the best written part, anyway," said Edward, with a short laugh.

"Well, but, Ned, it was a little too long, don't you think? And then it struck me"—Freeda spoke with less assurance—"that possibly the quotation did not exactly fit in with your argument as to the injustice of the war. If the question had been on expansion, it would have been more appropriate."

Edward felt surprised.

"What have you been doing? Reading up on politics?"

"He thinks we girls don't do anything but gossip about the boys and try to say smart things about one another," Freeda observed to Ida.

"We are not quite so frivolous as you imagine, Mr. Blake," said Miss Seton. "We have lately clubbed together and subscribed for a daily paper, and it is read by turn at mealtime. We're improving our minds seriously, thanks to Freeda and Miss Channing."

"I'm glad to hear it. Do you enjoy it?" asked Edward, somewhat solemnly.

"I don't relish it very much with my meals," she replied, laughing. "I'd rather talk about football any time."

"Would you?" Edward asked vaguely, and then, not thinking of anything else to say, he lapsed into his usual silence. Freeda and Miss Seton commented on the events of the evening until the ladies' hall was reached.

Edward had said good night and turned to go when Miss Seton called after him. He came back again. Freeda had started up the steps of the hall and was half way to the top.

"I forgot to tell you, Mr. Blake," said Ida in a low voice, "that I promised Freeda to give up the Sunday study after this. She said you would give it up if I would."

Edward was embarrassed. "Why, of course—I did promise. I'll give it up all right."

"That's all," Miss Seton said and then turned and ran up the steps.

Edward stood awkwardly looking at her until she vanished with Freeda into the hall. He slowly went back to his own room, and when there he went over all the events of the evening.

He could not conceal from himself that he was deeply disappointed at the decision of the judges. He had been very confident of success. He did not believe that he had been overconfident. Somehow he could not help feeling rather bitter toward the judges. The marking of the judges had been given him as he was going out, and he was rated five points below Wilson in delivery. But, even allowing a good deal to his opponent on account of his additional experience, still Edward stubbornly protested to himself that the judges were, even if unconsciously, prejudiced against him. He tried with some honesty to put this judgment out of his mind, but when he finally went to bed he was unable to do so, and it was the last thought he had that persisted in staying with him.

When he awoke, the same thought possessed him anew. He even said out loud as he walked the floor, according to his custom since Willis went away: "I'll never enter another contest. There's no justice in it. If the names were all written on slips and thrown into a hat and the first one drawn out was given first place, it would be fairer." He even took up the literary work of the paper during the week that followed with great reluctance and distaste. The judges' decision seemed to have disheartened him. How is this, Edward Blake, college student? Are you setting the standard for your mental effort by what you can win out of it in the way of rewards? Is that your final goal of development—the beating of some one else?

However, he was too well balanced naturally to make an altogether foolish judgment. The next day he felt somewhat ashamed of his feeling, and even went so far as to go out of his way to say something unusually pleasant to Wilson concerning the incidents of the debate. Wilson was good enough to say somewhat cordially: "Fact is, Blake, you deserved much higher marks. I don't feel as if it was anything but luck gave the decision to me." This remark did not comfort Edward much, seeing that it was not luck that he had been criticizing, but the failure of the judges to appreciate a really good thing when they heard it.

He began work again on his studies before the week was out, ambitious at least in that direction, and when another Saturday came he had almost recovered his equanimity.

It was his regular evening for calling at the hall to see Freeda, and he went over, taking with him a copy of the last college paper, which had come out the day before. He wanted to show her the article he had had reprinted, from the magazine that had accepted his first effort. He had secured permission to reprint it, and he knew Freeda would share in the pleasure of looking it over in the college paper.

When he went into the parlor, Freeda was already there, waiting for him. She seemed to be unusually excited over something; but she sat down and looked over the article in the college journal, and praised it highly, to Edward's great pleasure. They were still talking about it, when Miss Seton came in.

She at once went over to the corner where they were sitting, and joined in the conversation.

"Did you know we had started a literary club, here in the hall?" Miss Seton asked, as Freeda turned over the leaves of the college paper and made some brief comment on its general appearance.

"Freeda told me you were thinking of something of the sort," replied Edward, politely enough, but with more condescension than Miss Seton liked.

"Thinking of it! We've organized one and it's been going a month. We have a paper of our own called The Inkstand."

"I should think The Typewriter would be more appropriate to these modern times," said Edward.

"We use pens over here. They are more literary than typewriters. See the ink on my fingers? Doesn't that look like an author?"

"Ida can write the most beautiful verses. Ned. You ought to see some of them."

"I'm not a professional writer, like Freeda," said Miss Seton, coloring. "She writes for the papers—the real papers, out in the world. I mean. You ought to see the article she sent away two months ago. It was as good as anything ever printed in Hope College Journal."

"What was it about, Freeda?" asked Edward politely. He was exceedingly skeptical of a girl's ability to do any literary work worth while.

"I'll go up stairs and bring it down—if you would like to see it?" asked Freeda, with a significant warning look at Ida.

She went out and Edward seized the opportunity to ask Miss Seton a word about the Sunday study.

"Did Freeda persuade you to give it up?" he asked, and it was unusual for him to ask such a question.

"Yes, Freeda and the president. Why?"

"Oh, nothing," replied Edward, somewhat confused. He had not expected to be asked why.

"Do a good many of the girls study on Sunday?" he ventured to ask.

"Oh, yes; Sunday is a hard day to get through. I always feel glad when it's over. Don't you?"

"Sometimes," replied Edward. He felt alarmed in the presence of this impulsive young woman, who always asked a question at the end of a statement.

"What do you do on Sunday?" He ventured another question because he did not know what else to say.

"Oh, I go to church in the morning, and then dinner and then a nap and then a little walk, perhaps, or I write a letter or read, and then the vesper service and then tea, and sometimes go down town, if Miss Channing feels like it and there is an unusual service anywhere. That's my regular routine on Sunday. What do you do?"

But just then Freeda entered, and Edward did not try to answer. She handed to Edward quietly, but with a sparkle in her eye, a paper containing an article marked in blue pencil.

"That's my article right there," she said as Edward stared at the paper.

"But this is printed," stammered Edward.

"Well, that's what I say. It's been accepted and paid for, Mr. High and Mighty, and I have the check to show for it," said Freeda, smiling, while Miss Seton looked much amused at Edward's bewilderment.

"Really?"

"Really. Want to see it?" Freeda took out of her purse a check for $5 bearing the name of the firm that published the paper.

Edward took it and read it silently; then he turned a beaming face on his sister.

(To be continued.)

The glory is not in the task, but in the doing it for Him.—Jean Ingelow.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH THE WAR CLAIM SCANDAL?

The straw has been well threshed. It is time now to sift the grain. The question at least for us in Virginia is no longer what mistakes and wrongs have been committed, but how shall we best repair the damage that has been done to the Church of God?

Let us grant the contention of the Book Agents and the Book Committee—viz., that Barbee and Smith did not intend to deceive the Senate. We can afford to waive that point, and grant Dr. Barbee and Bro. Smith credit for intention to do right. But this does not alter the case. It stands, then, thus: The Senate was deceived and voted the money under a misapprehension. Can the Church of God afford to keep money (even a just debt) obtained through falsehood (Stahlman's) and evasion, disingenuousness, and statements made with mental reservation (Barbee and Smith's)? and does the Church believe it advisable to keep men in high position who have confessed to such peculiar and inadequate views of truth as have our Agents?

Some say let us officially, as a Church, lament and condemn the conduct of our officers and keep the money their crookedness has brought us. God forbid! What an attitude for the Church of God—to lament and condemn a sin and keep in its pocket the worldly profit of that sin!

Others say, "Whatever action is taken at Dallas, let us pray and work for peace above all things." We have not so learned Christ. As we see His will it is: Peace if possible to the very last limit of patient investigation and brotherly forbearance, but leagues and leagues above peace let us put purity and right. Our decision must not be, "Let us have peace at all hazards," but at all hazards even to the falling of the stars, let us do what is right. The error of Rome, with all its fearful results, has been peace within the Church at all hazards, a caring more for the organization of the Church than for the great immutable principles of truth and right. Sometimes peace and right coincide, and at other times they are the diameter of the poles apart. But where they regrettably conflict, let us say a lamented farewell to peace and do right at any cost.

Another solution, Mr. Editor, is that presented by you in your recent "Open Letter to the Delegates to the General Conference." Upon this you invite comment. The position of the "Open Letter" is confessedly a compromise position. It begins with a desire expressed to suggest some line of action upon which all who disapprove of the conduct of our Church authorities in this matter may unite. This would be legitimate ground if the issue involved was simply a question of policy. But many of us believe, and you among us, Mr. Editor, I know, consider this a question of highest equity.

Moreover, the estimate of the situation in the "Open Letter" is an incomplete view of the case, and the solution there suggested but a partial remedy.

In that letter you at first mention the suggestion that the cure for our trouble is to return all the $288,000 to the United States Senate and condemn and dismiss our officials who have so greatly erred. But you soon leave this, and take up another proposition—namely, to condemn and dismiss the errant officials and raise and pay to our superannuates' fund the $95,000 of Stahlman's fee. And the burden of the "Open Letter" is to make good this position as advisable.

This solution is partial, because it is based upon the supposition that our Church is on trial only before the opinion of the United States Senate. But your solution does not even satisfy the Senate. You quote two Senators, Clay and Lodge, as accepting it. But since your "Open Letter" Senators Hoar and Vest declare it is an inadequate remedy, and that unless all the money is returned resolutions will be offered in the Senate asking the Church to return it. Alack a day when the United States Senate or any other secular organization has to exhort the Church of God to do right and live up to its high profession.

We do not know what will satisfy the Senate, for the expressions of the four Senators quoted above are personal opinions. The Senate has not said officially what will satisfy its idea of what is right.

But another bar before which we stand on trial is the opinion of the world. Our reputation as a Church is at stake. A great cloud is hanging over our good name. Only by a supreme effort and the strictest adherence to the highest principles, even at a cost to ourselves and pain to those involved in error, can we save our reputation. Our Lord, through His Apostle, commands us to "abstain from all appearance of evil," and the only effective way to rebuke a scoffing world and silence the gainsayers is to turn back the whole amount and wash our hands of the whole unclean transaction. Anything less is compromise and worldly wisdom, and not the highest moral ground for God's Church to stand upon.

The equities in this case are very nice, and it is easy to raise dust from several quarters and confuse the main issue. We must not go up these side streams or we will soon find ourselves stranded in the marsh of expediency or indecision. The only solution, when a soul finds itself entangled in the snare of evil, is to retrace its steps to the point of departure. This we must do as a Church. We are entangled in the snare. We cannot decide the nice points that arise in this case. But one thing we can do, and we must do, and that is to retrace our steps and put ourselves where we were before all this trouble came upon us. How can we do that? Only by turning back the whole $288,000 to the United States Senate. Then our hands will be clean, and we can look the whole world in the face. And it may be added, if we do this, Southern Methodist stock will leap to the topmost figure, and all who scoff to-day will admire and sing our praises round the earth.

But far above reputation is character, just as far as equity is above policy. As a Church, we are on trial before the bar of God's eternal prin-ple of right. Is it right to obtain money and keep it by a violation of the ethical code for which we as a Church stand? Does the fact that my neighbor owes me a just debt make it right for me to break into his house and steal that much money from him? Can it be right for the Church of God, the custodian of morality on earth, to obtain anything by deception or to hold on to it when the deception has come to light? Who believes for an instant that the Saviour, if on earth, would touch a penny of that $288,000? Read Isaiah 5: 18-25.

You and I and many others have said this question will never be settled until it is settled right. So I say now again. Do not, then, I pray you, alter this and say now, "Let us settle it in the way that most delegates will vote for." Do not put forward an offer of compromise before the battle is joined.

Oh, for a leader in the General Conference to blow a bugle blast on the highest note and rally the Church of God to her duty in this her hour of supreme opportunity and supreme peril!

I cannot find words to express the aching pain that would fill my heart or the deep shame that would settle upon my soul, to hear that our Church, in representative body at Dallas, had failed to take the highest ground on this question. I will not believe she will fail in this crisis.

What is that highest ground? Severe as is all surgery and painful as are all divine cures of great errors, it is this: to put the honor of the Church of God above all personal feelings and sympathy and worldly gain.

(1) Reaffirm our belief in the justness of our claim against the United States Government.

(2) Deprecate and abhor the conduct of Stahlman.

(3) Lament and disown, as a Church, the conduct of Barbee and Smith.

(4) Lament and disown even more the conduct of the Book Committee, in so far as they departed from a recital of the bare facts in the case and went into an attempted palliation of the conduct of the Agents, and this deliberately and after much thought, when the Agents might have had their views of truth distorted under sudden and great pressure.

(5) Exhort Stahlman (you cannot compel him), poor creature, self-confessed liar that he is, that for the honor of the Church of God and for the sake of his own soul, he disgorge his ill-gotten gains. "He will not." Very well. Then let us pray for him, for he will have a fearful account to answer at the bar of God. And let us remember with alarm and shame and thankfulness at our escape that we, as a Church, through our officials, have been closely connected with his sin.

(6) Provide for the raising of the $288,000, and tender the whole amount back to the United States Senate. "The Senate cannot receive it." Then we can at least follow Judas a little further than we have done already through the man who has acted for us, and cast the money down at their feet and come away. Then will our skirts be clean and the honor of God's Church saved. Do not re-elect either Book Agents or any of the Book Committee who attempted to palliate the Book Agents' offence.

Then, after earnest prayer for all concerned, and with deep sympathy for all those who have erred in any way, either early or late in this affair and in all its history and discussion, let us with chastened hearts, rejoicing that grace much more abounds over sinning the doxology as we have never sang it before. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

R. H. BENNETT.

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

There is something in the very word "home," that thrills the heart with ecstasy. A young man, who was an exile far away from home in a great business city, was one day at his accustomed work in an office when he was aroused from the lethargy which had seized him by the sweet voice of a beggar child singing for a penny. One of the many songs she sung was "Home Sweet Home," and she sang it so pathetically and sweetly that every soul ceased work and became an earnest listener. He paid her a dime and resumed his work, and seemingly in him no change was wrought, but his whole soul had been shaken. The words of the song long lingered in his ears and caused him to think of by-gone days when he, too, had a home, which he had thoughtlessly left seeking a more profitable position in life. He could not work, his heart was as lead, and he thought an end of his mortal existence would be far more comforting than the life he was living. It was about 3:30 in the afternoon, but he quit work and went over to his boarding place. He ascended the steps, entered his room and threw himself in deep emotion upon his bed. His homesickness, grief and despair burst forth in passionate sobs. He remained in his room struggling with his emotions and thinking over the past, until thoroughly exhausted he fell asleep. In his dreams he was taken back to his old home, the home of his boyhood days. He played there as in infancy with his little brothers and sisters in the back pebbled yard the childish games in childish glee, which he played there many years ago. They played until the mother rang the dinner bell, and the all went noisily into the dining-room each striving to reach the table first. He saw his mother's care-worn face as she poured tea, and his father's as he tried to be jovial and joke with the little ones, but they thought not of the lines of care stamped so clearly on their parents' faces, but as soon as the meal is over all returned gleefully to their play. Soon this vision passed and another took its place. He was a man, and was at home on a visit. He visited once again the home of his childhood. He visited the meadow, the creek, the pond, the woods, and all places which were sacred with his childish presence. In walking through the woods his heart was touched by seeing a little pile of ill-shaped rocks childishly cemented together, which was formerly part of a saw mill which he had helped to build in his childhood. There, lying near the great dilapidated mill, was a rusty tin cu-which he used in dipping water from a small mud hole, so-called well. The little iron bar, which served so faithfully to be a spade, was also lying near. To the left was a pile of sand, which, though sunk and settled, was just as he had left it many years ago. The entire scene was so natural that his heart throbbed, his eyes filled with tears, and he, pondering, slowly returned to the house.

The beams of the morning sun awoke him, and alas! he awoke to find it all a dream. He quickly arose and dressed himself, then went down to the office as usual, but he could not keep the words of the song and the dream from his mind. Now and then a tear would gather in his eyes and trickle down his manly cheeks as he thought of the old saw mill, the rusty tin cup, or perhaps of the decaying mill, which he dug so long ago with his own chubby hands. He could not work. He went to the lady with whom he lodged, and told her he would be off a few days, and the next morn he took for home. Good resolutions were made to be kept, and the words of the sacred song, "Home, Sweet Home," sung by a homeless waif, had saved an erring boy and made a man of a hopeless wretch.

SALLIE F. ZEHMER.

DR. J. M. BUCKLEY IN PETERSBURG.

Mr. Editor,—The lecture delivered in this city at the hall of the Y.M.C.A. last Tuesday night by Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the New York Advocate, fully met expectations, which were high, for the Doctor's reputation is known far and near. The theme of the lecture was "Peculiarities of Great Orators," and truly did the speaker handle it with the skill of a master. As I listened to the great amount of information the lecturer gave us concerning the characteristics, style, appearance, etc., of the masters of oratory, ancient and modern, I wondered where the gifted speaker obtained so much knowledge of his subject. From Demosthenes and Paul down to Webster, Clay, Choate and Spurgeon, Beecher, Talmage, Storrs and John P. Durbin, he traversed the centuries, giving in chaste, strong and eloquent language the peculiarities of the world's great orators. He made these masters stand before you as if in living, moving pantomime they ascended the rostrum and spoke their great thoughts and gave place to others. His tribute to Paul's oratorical powers, I believe, a just and well-deserved one. Martin Luther and Philip Melancthon, so different in temperament, in style and manners, yet so gifted in the pulpit, were the very opposites in peculiarities, we were told. A great many of the modern orators in England and the United States Dr. Buckley has heard. His allusions to English and French orators were very interesting and instructive. His remarks concerning Chas. H. Spurgeon gave a fine insight into the appearance of the man as well as into the characteristics of his wonderful preacher. I had read some of his sermons, and from a boy, of course, have been reading about him, but the lecturer gave me a better idea of him than ever I had before.

To tell Virginians about Patrick Henry was, it may be, as Dr. Buckley said, like carrying coal to New Castle, but he did tell us a great deal about this unrivalled orator, concerning whom the lecturer has studied a great deal. Lincoln, Douglas, Wendell Phillips, A. H. Stephens, Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, J. C. Calhoun, and others, under Dr. Buckley's graphic touches, seem to live again, and what is remarkable, as well known as they are in history, were presented in new light. Of course, with such a wide field to go over as the lecturer had, it was impossible to note the peculiarities of all the world's orators, but I was surprised that (if I remember correctly) no allusions were made to Whitefield or Punslow, Bascom, Olin and Summerfield. From Dr. Buckley's estimates in this grand lecture one would put down as the world's greatest orators Demosthenes, Paul, Spurgeon, Masillon and Patrick Henry.

In this matter, however, there is great diversity of opinion, and it is, of course, a matter that is hard to decide. The chaste, pure, wholesome humor with which the lecture abounded gave it a delightful flavor. It was a great treat to the audience, who listened to it with rapt attention. E. P. P.

Petersburg, Va., April 17, 1902.

FROM CHASE CITY.

Mr. Editor.—I know you are interested in all missionary work, and I want to write you about our auxiliary to the W. F. M. Society of Centenary church, Chase City charge. It was organized by Mrs. Bacon, October, 1900. We have an active auxiliary, the average attendance is excellent; there has been a gain of one to four new members at every monthly meeting since I got here. The dues are paid promptly, and it seems a joy and privilege to our women to give their time and means to this cause. The mite boxes were distributed in February, and opened April 7th, and they contained $12, with more to follow. Every member present was happy over the result. This will be used for the "Virginia School" at Soochow, China, where "our own" Ella Coffey has charge. It was decided, by a unanimous vote, to hold district meeting for Farmville district here in July. We hope to have a meeting that will increase the good work already begun. All the interests of the church keep pace with woman's work. Our Sunday school is one of the best I have ever known. The grown people take such deep, cheerful part in it. These are high-toned Christian Methodists, prompt to do their duty, and take pleasure in giving to worthy enterprises. We are soon to have a new parsonage adjoining our new church, which was dedicated last year. The membership have a commendable pride to raise all necessary funds among themselves. They have shown us great kindness in many ways, especially during sickness in our family. Come to see us; we will be glad to have you in our home at any time. Sincerely,

MRS. R. A. COMPTON.

No duty is too small to embrace the sublimest principles.—Ran's Horn.

FROM BROTHER KILBY.

II.

While commenting on revivals, very naturally the question comes up, are revivals on the decline? If the question refers to revivals such as were held many years ago, I answer yes. Although I am not an old man, I can see very great changes in revivals since I was a boy, and have not seen one of the old fashioned kind for many a day; but if the question is asked are conversions on the decline, I answer no. It is quite certain that the number of additions to all the churches is and has been on the increase all the time. I have given considerable thought to the revival question, and am free to say that at first was disposed to take a pessimistic view of the subject, but have long since gotten over that feeling. Why is it that modern revivals, except occasionally here and there, are almost entirely devoid of demonstration and attended with meagre results? This is perhaps a big question, and one not easily answered, but the chief solution in my opinion is found in the temperament of the people. Humanity has been undergoing changes, and the conditions surrounding the present intensely practical business age is calculated to eradicate the emotional from our natures, hence I doubt if we will again see such manifestations as we have witnessed in the past, nor do I think that the establishment of Christ's kingdom depends on the return of the old-time revivals. It will be necessary in the future for our revival services to be conducted in a more business-like manner, and thereby meet the changed conditions. This statement may be somewhat surprising, but I think it can be shown that very business-like methods were pursued long before Methodism was ever dreamed of.

Suppose we go back to the days of Moses, and here we will find where the children of Israel were bitten by serpents, that Moses was commanded to make a brazen serpent and lift it upon a pole, so that those who were bitten had only to look at it and be healed. This was plain, simple and business-like. No command to bow down and weep or agonize for deliverance. Reduced to a nut shell, it was a "life for a look." This method is endorsed in the New Testament, "and as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." Take another illustration from the New Testament, "Jesus was walking by the sea of Galilee, and He saw Simon and Andrew fishing with nets, and He said, 'Come ye after Me, and I will make you to become fishers of men,' and straightway they forsook their nets and followed Him." This is the whole simple story, and did you ever see anything plainer or more business-like? Christ used the very occupation of the men as an illustration, so they could not fail to understand and actually made a play on the word fishers by saying He would make them fishers of men. Christ went along a little farther and repeated the call to James and John, who were mending their nets, and they at once "went after Him." There wasn't any to do about it, and Christ didn't require them to bow down and cry aloud or moan for acceptance, but simply said, follow Me. If a man will follow Jesus and obey His commands, he cannot fail to be a Christian. The Gospel plan has often been mystified, and as the people sit and listen to the many things told them they must do before they are saved, they are led to believe that a wonderful undefinable, superhuman something must take place within before making attempt to lead a new life, and as this indescribable thing don't take place they do not come at all. Suppose a man had a glorious scheme for making money and making people happy, and he was to bring it before business men for their acceptance in the manner in which the Gospel is usually presented, what would a sensible, practical man think of him? Practical men want a practical Gospel presented in a rational way, and when so presented I believe it will win. When I was a child I heard many invitations given, but somehow I did not feel moved to accept, because I did not understand, and was looking for something which I did not have. When I grew older, I took a common sense view of the matter, and deliberately did what I saw was my duty in the premises. It was my intention to offer a few suggestions, hoping that in some way they might help to meet the issue, but this letter is long enough, so Bro. Cannon, with your kind permission, I will come again.

A REPLY TO BROTHER L. C. KILBY.

Mr. Editor,—I cite you before the tribunal of the Church to answer to the charge of violating one the rules of the Church. I refer to that one which forbids all "Uncharitable or unprofitable conversation, particularly speaking evil of magistrates or ministers." And the specifications are:

1. You criticise their plan of co-operation in conducting revival services, by saying, "Swapping the ministers around is probably a good plan, but, as a whole, I do not see any advantage in the co-operative plan."

2. "By the way, the first prayer at all our Sunday services is much longer than necessary. Some of our preachers specify and particularize almost ad infinitum. Why not split some of these prayers in the middle and save half for next Sunday?"

3. In the revival services, you say: "One night the services that commenced at a quarter to 8 ended at half past 8, and at that hour the preacher arose and preached fifty-five minutes"—but you did not say who opened the services, leaving it to be understood that it was the work of the "preacher."

4. "On another occasion one of the preachers was called to pray, after the sermon, and he preached on his knees for fifteen minutes."

5. "On another occasion, at twenty-five minutes to 10 o'clock, when all the penitents at the altar had been converted, and all was done that could be accomplished for the evening, and the congregation should have been dismissed at once, a preacher arose and treated his hearers to a sixteen minute exhortation."

(Continued on page 18.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 11

Text of the Lesson, Acts xii, 1-19.
Memory Verses, 5-7—(Golden Text, Ps. cxlv, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

1, 2 Now, about that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church, and he killed James, the brother of John, with the sword.

From the time that the devil, the murderer and liar (John viii, 44), put it into the heart of Cain to kill Abel he has ever shown his hatred of God and the people of God by using his worst weapon, death (Heb. ii, 14), and that even against the Son of God Himself. It was a good day for James, for he was instantly with the Lord in the enjoyment of the very far better.

3-5. And because he saw it pleased the Jews he proceeded further to take Peter also.

Being Passover time, he kept Peter in prison under the care of four companies of soldiers, intending after that season to kill him also to still further please the Jews—some of the same Jews, no doubt, who were pleased to crucify the Lord Jesus and stone Stephen and all the while profess to be doing God service. Yet God lives, the only living and true God, and all power is His, and He permits these things to be, and He is not discouraged, and the kingdoms of this world shall yet be the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ (Rev. xi, 15). We can do what the church did for Peter, earnestly and unceasingly cry unto God and be ready to lay down our lives for Christ.

6. Peter was sleeping between two soldiers bound with two chains.

A double guard, a strong prison, chains, gates, and, as far as human vision could see, death for Peter on the morrow, yet Peter slept, and doubtless quietly, for he was in Christ—and Christ in God. The wall of fire was round about him, and with him all was well whether he remained in the mortal body or not (Col. iii, 3; Zech. ii, 5, 8; Isa. iii, 10). It is grand to see God and not circumstances nor people; to see circumstances and people only through God and be still and know that He is God (Ps. xlv, 10; Rom. viii, 28, 29).

7-9. And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison.

Before Peter could realize it his chains were off, his sandals were on, his garment about him, and he was following the angel out of the prison, the soldiers still soundly sleeping, but Peter thought it was all a beautiful vision which God had granted him. How great and glorious is the ministry of angels who minister unto the heirs of salvation! (Heb. i, 14.)

10, 11. When Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety that the Lord hath sent His angel and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

On they went past the first watch and the second, and the iron gate opened of its own accord—perhaps other angels swung it open at the approach of the angel followed by Peter—and still on they went through one street, well away from the prison, before the angel left Peter. Then, being left alone and finding himself in the night out on a street of the city, he began to realize that it was no dream, but that he was actually a free man by the mighty power of an angel of God.

12. He came to the house of Mary, the mother of John, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together.

or prayer.

This he did as soon as, having come to himself, he considered the matter. He knew just where to go, for on a previous occasion when he and John had been released from prison and from the power of the rulers, it is written that "being let go they went to their own company" (Acts iv, 23).

13-15. Thou art mad. It is his angel.

What strange words from a company of praying believers when they are told that their prayers are answered and Peter is at the door knocking for admission. Rhoda was so glad that she forgot to open the door for him, and they were so amazed that they could not believe her. We might not wonder to have the world count the believer mad (Isa. lix, 15, margin; Hos. ix, 7; John x, 20), but for believers, and such as these, to count each other mad is more strange. May we not be so slow to act upon Jer. xxxiii, 3, or to live in Ps. lxii, 5.

16, 17. Go shew these things unto James and to the brethren.

Peter continued knocking, the only thing he could do, for doors did not open to him as prison gates to the angel, and in due time they opened to him and were astonished to see him. He, quieting them, told them all that the Lord had done for him and bade them tell James and the others. This is the James of chapter xv, 13, who seems to have been president of the council at Jerusalem James the brother of John having been slain (verse 2). Every redeemed soul has been delivered from prison and death far worse than any Herod could afflict with, and how gladly we should tell of the deliverance God has wrought for us (Ps. xl, 1-3), but how few seem glad to tell it to His glory that He may be magnified.

18, 19. Herod's soldiers put to death, and Herod himself dying such an awful death (verse 23), while Peter was delivered from their hands, reminds us of that morning when Daniel came forth from the den of lions, but his enemies were put into the same den never to come forth. It makes us think of the glorious morning of our Lord's appearing (Ps. xlix, 14; xxx, 5; xlv, 5, margin; cxix, 6, etc.) for the deliverance of His people and of the unbelievers for whom there shall be no morning, but only the outer darkness forever (Isa. viii, 20, R. V.).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 4, "Prayer a Necessity"—Text, Matt. xxvi, 36-46.

"He went a little farther and fell on His face and prayed."

It was in Gethsemane. The full moon rode high in the heavens, lighting the slopes of the Mount of Olives, with its villas, gardens and tents of pilgrims who had come to the great Passover feast. The temple on Mount Moriah, across the Kedron valley to the west, rose in terrace after terrace of sunny whiteness, with its towers and pinnacles glittering with gold in the moonlight, a dream of oriental splendor.

The Master had eaten with his disciples the last supper, in which He had instituted a new sacrament of holy communion in bread and wine.

Judas had left the company to seek the chief priests and complete the plot for the betrayal of his Master.

Jesus and the eleven after the supper had left the city by the eastern gate and sought a favorite place of retirement under the shade of trees in an olive grove on the western slopes of the Mount of Olives. He clearly saw that the end was near. All the malice and hatred of Pharisees, Sadducees and Herodians were combining for His death. To one of ordinary sensibilities such a situation must have been full of inexpressible horror. How much greater anguish one of such tenderness of soul and spiritual delicacy as He had must have felt as the blackness of the whole situation rolled in upon Him!

Conscious of His Sonship with the Eternal Father and the full grasp of the spiritual truth of man's capability of sonship also to God, knowing all that rejection of their true relation to God must bring to men, yearning for them with fathomless love and earnestness and fully realizing that, in spite of all His works of mercy to the bodies of men, His appeals to their sense of duty, His demonstration of divine truth, those whom He had made every effort to win to righteousness were now with quenchless hatred conspiring for His death, all this burst over Him with power which unaided human nature could not withstand.

The soul was sorrowful, exceeding sorrowful, even to the point of deathly exhaustion.

The body has such intimate relations to the soul that the condition of one produces similar conditions in the other. The body was "very heavy."

Not sleep, but prayer, was His refuge. How many times in His life had He found in the night season on mountain tops, far from men, spiritual restoration by communion with the Father, which He needed for His work with men! Now He seeks His Father's aid. No other source of strength is to be found. This never fails. No one but Himself can ever know the full depth of the horror which filled His soul. He shrank from the bitter agony which racked soul and body and which hung over Him with deeper doom yet to come. "Father, let it pass if it can be Thy will." "Thy will be done." He conquers. He finds the rest of perfect confidence, the peace of trustful obedience. His submission is absolute acquiescence in the Father's will. No more fear, no faltering. The Father leads and holds His hand.

To every one for all time this is the lesson of supreme value. Here is prayer touching the depths of human need. Do you pray as Jesus did?

What Religion Is.

Religion is spirit permeating and controlling the world about. When it fails to control, it ceases to be. We are all living for some one thing. What that one thing is determines the character of our lives. Profession is not so much what one pretends to do as what he does. By this standard God will judge mankind. The supreme purpose of every life is its real service. Jesus approaches every man along the line of his favorite pleasure—the student among his books, the merchant amid his goods, the farmer on his farm. "These," He says, "are yours, but lovest thou Me more than these?" We may love them and ought to. The accent is upon the word "more." Our answer to that question anticipates the judgment.—Presbyterian Journal.

Broad Sympathy.

All the saints belong to the whole church of Christ, and that man robs himself of his inheritance who allows denominational jealousies or fears to govern the range of his sympathies. The streets of the city of God are exceedingly broad. On them is room for the reconciliation of ancient enmities.—John E. McFadyen in "The Divine Pursuit."

Habit.

Habit is a mighty force and must either tend toward that which is good or that which is evil. It rests with us whether it shall be one of our best friends or one of our worst enemies.—Christian Intelligencer.

His Choosing.

If He had let me take the pleasant way
 Whereto my steps were bent,
 The path where birds sing in the boughs
 all day
 Shaded and well content,

I had not found beyond the leagues of sand,
 Toll worn, the mountain crest
 From which mine eyes look over to the land
 Wherein shall be my rest.

If He had let me slumber as I craved,
 Pillowed in grasses deep Beside the stream whose murmuring waters lay
 The silver coasts of sleep,

I had not heard His footsteps drawing nigh
 Across the lonely place;
 Unknown, unloved, they would have passed me by Nor I have seen His face.

—Christian Endeavor Story.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 11, "Annual Review"—Text, II Cor. xiii, 1, 2, 3; Zech. iv, 6.

"Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith. Prove your own selves."

The anniversary of the founding of the League naturally leads to a review of the progress made in these years since May 12, 1889, when in the little room in Cleveland, O., the Epworth League came into being. The gain in numbers has been beyond all expectation. Much was anticipated, but none could foresee the proportions to which the movement should attain. Who then could have believed the possibility of such great gatherings as the international conventions have been?

It is well to have a brief survey of the field and consider how far extended our forces are. Alaska and Hawaii, Japan, China and Korea, all have their chapters. The host in India is a great one. Africa in many places, South America, Mexico, all are mission fields. In Europe from Italy to Norway and Sweden and the islands of the West Indies are organized for work in the League.

But numbers are not the most important consideration in the service of Christ. The power lies in the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Not wealth or talent is a matter of highest value. Our aim is to foster and develop intelligent piety among our young people. We do need scholarship. We need more knowledge of the Bible and all the good things which are open to human learning. Our people need to be growing more and more intelligent. There is no premium on ignorance, for "ignorance is not the mother of devotion," but of superstition. Bishop E. O. Haven used to say, "Christianity is learning and piety." We have got beyond the place where the two are supposed to be in opposition. But in all the getting of learning we must steadily hold in view the fact that it is valueless unless consecrated fully to the service of Jesus Christ. It may be very harmful indeed. If all the powers of soul and body are united in healthy devotion to God, if one honestly means to do and be what God desires, then the more knowledge he gets, up to the measure of his ability to use it well, the better it will be. The same is true of money. These things can be helps or hindrances, wings or weights, depending on the way they are attached to us. What we can use well it is well to have. Beyond that we are burdened and hindered. Our aim should be the highest possible efficiency in God's service. This does not mean any more to one who is to be a minister or a deaconess than to one who is to be a laborer in shop, store, mill, mine or farm. Each of us is to be in league with the Holy Spirit. Our work every day is to do faithfully the task for that day in home, school, street and workshop. In the doing of the ordinary routine task we make character. We shape ourselves and mold our destinies. That is the way Jesus did His life work. Few can be prominently learned or rich in great degree. Very few ought to be. There is a place for us. Let us find it and fit into it and fill it. Let us know all we ought to know, and get all we ought to get, and be strong enough to stop then and not weaken ourselves with straining for things beyond us. Above all things and in all getting let us get the wisdom of complete union with Jesus in spirit. "What with them have we to do?"

One Day of Life.

Neither a blind scramble for what we can get for as long as we are able to stand it nor a snatched fleeting moment torn from its proper connection, but a calm adoption of the Creator's own natural selection of one day of life and after that another! Something of all life present each day; each day with a completeness which may fairly express the motive and method of life as a whole. The gently returning dawn bringing with its renewal of physical light renewal also of the deep streams of the light of inner life. Opening as all life does in wonder—a wonder that, as the mist upon the hills dissolves in ascending radiance, rises from the heart in aspirations of trust and hope. Every faculty and every highest aspiration and all one's best thoughts and noblest instincts will have a place to plant themselves in each such day. Gleams and peeps of the vast infinite world over and around and about us will reach us better through the medium of that one day than through years of disarranged, hurrying, nervous, scattered existence. Such a day will be worth living even in the rush and ceaseless turmoil of a superficial, restless age.—Christian Register.

The Christian Athlete.

The Christian athlete, "valiant for the truth upon the earth," is made such through faithfulness in inward conflicts with his soul's enemies, while fighting the good fight of faith; casting down not human antagonists, but "imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ." So through inward strivings for masteries and striving lawfully he learns how to put on the whole armor of God, the hope of salvation for a helmet, truth for his girdle, righteousness for a breastplate, the spirit and word of God for his sword, faith for his shield, and then not always that he may fight, but (a still greater valor) that he may be equally strong to stand.—Friend.

Do Your Duty.

It is a great deal easier to do that which God gives us to do, no matter how hard it is, than to face the responsibility of not doing it. We have abundant assurance that we shall receive all the strength we need to perform any duty God allots to us.—J. R. Miller.

Whoever loves in us our beauty of soul loves us truly.—St. Ambrose.

Balsams from the Northern Wood are in Piny-Balsam, the certain cure for coughs.

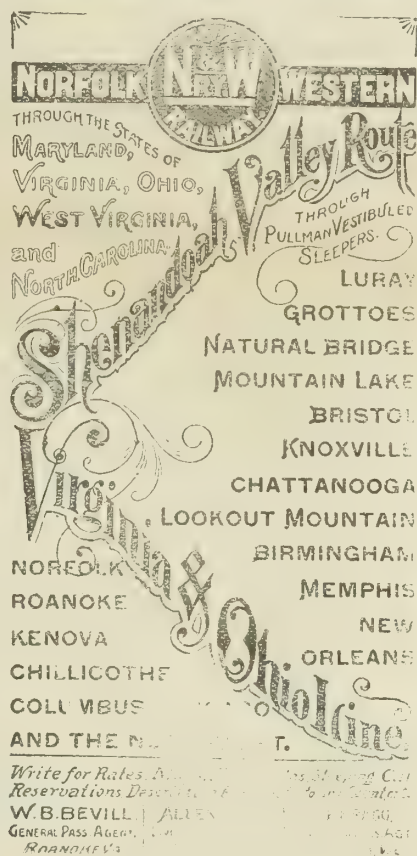

One secret of a sweet and happy Christian life is learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think of life as a whole, running on for years. We cannot carry this load until we are three-score and ten. We cannot fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us all at one time; it comes only a day at a time.

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—by a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. Has no taste or odor. Is air tight and acid proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each can.

Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK & WESTERN VALLEY ROUTE

THROUGH THE STATES OF MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.

THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULED SLEEPERS.

LURAY GROTTOES
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS
CHILLICOTHE
COLLINGSWOOD
AND THE NEW YORK CITY

Write for Rates, Maps, and Reservations. Descriptive Literature and Circulars. W.B. BEVILL, ALLEN, & CO., GENERAL PASS AGENTS, ROANOKE, VA.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS, UP-TO-DATE FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

The Union Central

LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va. Blackstone, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, HEADACHE, STIFF NECK, STIFF MUSCLES, STIFF JOINTS, STIFF KNEES, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, PAIN IN THE BACK, PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS, PAIN IN THE SIDE, CORNS AND BUNIONS.

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

CWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.

Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—SECOND ROUND.

Market Street, February 23d, morning.

Ettrick, February 23d, night.

Prince George, Mt. Sinai, March 1st, 2d, morning.

Blandford, March 2d, night.

Greensville, Forest chapel, March 8th, 9th, morning.

Sussex, Centenary, March 9th, evening; 10th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Smith's Grove, March 15th, 16th, morning.

West Street, March 16th, night.

Surry, Carsley's, March 22d, 23d, morning.

Wakefield, Waverly, March 23d, night; 24th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Zion, March 29th, 30th, morning.

South Hill, Pleasant Grove, March 30th, evening; 31st, morning.

West Lunenburg, Olive Branch, April 4th, morning (Friday).

Lunenburg, Providence, 5th, 6th, morning.

West Brunswick, Macedonia, April 6th, evening; 7th, morning.

Brunswick, Pleasant Grove, April 11th, morning (Friday).

South Brunswick, Bethany, April 12th, 13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Canaan, April 13th, evening; 14th, morning.

Nottoway, April 19th, 20th, morning.

Blackstone Station, April 20th, night; 21st, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Trinity, April 26th, 27th, morning.

Matoacca, April 27th, 28th, night.

Dinwiddie, Ocran, May 3d, 4th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Stedd Memorial, May 11th, 11 A. M.

Cabell Street, May 11th, at night.

Mt. Vernon, May 18th, 11 A. M.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.
Boydton, May 28th, at night.
Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 7th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

POSTSCRIPT TO OPEN LETTER.

(Continued from 1st page.)

unwilling that more than $5,000 of this amount should go for attorney's fees. Whether the Senate had a right to limit the fees is not the question for us here. I will mention that matter later on. The Senate has declared that but for the deception practiced by the Agents they would have amended the bill and limited the fees. There is no reason to doubt that declaration on their part. But to be doubly sure, I went to Washington to see Senators who knew the facts, and I saw them, not to find out from them what the Church should do on a great moral question, but to find out what they thought the Senate intended to do. I especially sought out Senator Lodge, because he offered the amendment limiting the fees, and he could say what he aimed to do by that amendment. I did not intend to submit any distinctly moral issues to the Senate for settlement, but the Senate alone knows what it meant to do. My investigation satisfied me as to the purpose of the Senate, and also that the deception did not cause the Senate to pass the bill, but that it caused the bill to be passed without an amendment limiting the fees to $5,000. What ought we therefore to do? Why, we should assume the responsibility for the results of our Agents' conduct, and see that the purpose of the Senate is carried out. Suppose this bill had carried an appropriation for ten particular superannuated preachers, by name, and the conduct of our Agents deprived them of $95,000, what would have been our duty? We would have been called upon to carry out the purpose of the Senate and get $95,000 to pay to those men. Just so justice, equity demands that we get $95,000 and make good the purpose of the Senate, that $283,000 should go into the treasury of the House. If it can be gotten back from Stahlman, good and well. I favor a thorough investigation of that matter, and a suit, even if we get no money back. But we should not depend upon that. We should get positive pledges from reliable parties, covering the $95,000, to be paid in case of failure of such a suit.

Bro. DeShazo thinks it a fatal objection to this plan that we seem to do a sort of penance to ourselves, and that there would be no merit in it. Were it proposed to take this money out of a fund of the House already in existence or to bond the House to raise the money and simply transfer money from one page on the ledger to another I could see some reason for this criticism and objection. But that is not proposed. The proposition is to ask for a vicarious offering by individual members of the Church to make good the fund lost by the conduct of the Agents. If this is objectionable on the ground of being penance to ourselves, then what is to be said of the Son of God, the second person in the Trinity, offering Himself up as a propitiation for our sins? If Bro. DeShazo gave $10 to such a fund, would it not be $10 more than he would give to the "House," and would it not be a vicarious offering for Barbee and Smith? The giving of $95,000 by individual members of the Church would not be called the Church giving to itself, but it would be regarded as a proof of our sincerity, and of our desire to meet our responsibility for the conduct of our Agents. I agree with Bro. Sawyer, that I should not like to help give this $95,000 simply to go into the House treasury. I should want the whole fund definitely set apart as a fund for the benefit of our superannuates, widows and orphans. And I should want this because I believe that Congress thought it was to be used in that way. The great burden of the speeches was that it would help the poor preachers, and that had more effect than any other argument. But some one says, "They had nothing to do with that. Our claim was just, and it should have been paid upon its merits as a just claim." Well, we hold that, and the Southern Senators who pressed the bill held that position. But many of the Republican Senators, whose votes were absolutely necessary for the passage of the bill, voted for it with the distinct understanding that they did not think the claim had any standing in law, but they voted for it as a matter of comity. They held the position that the law of war is, that "enemy's country makes enemy's property," and that an invading army has a right to use any property of any kind in an enemy's country if it is needed by the army in carrying on the war. They agreed, however, that they would make an exception in the case of colleges, churches and benevolent or charitable institutions, when it was shown that the money was to be used to carry on religious or benevolent work. The following, taken from the report of the committee, gives the view of Senator Teller, the chairman of the committee, who has been in the Senate for about twenty-five years, and one of the leading representatives of the Northern and Western Senators:

Mr. Teller: Many of us who voted for the bill did not think that it was a claim at all against the Government, but we felt that we were doing a thing which we felt we could afford to do for a charitable institution. It was stated by some members of the committee when we voted to report the bill that they did not vote for the report on the ground that the claim was a legal one at all, but that inasmuch as we had adopted the rule of paying such claims in the case of colleges and schools we would apply the rule in this case to the book concern, which we considered (especially those of us who were brought up in the Methodist Church) to be a charity, inasmuch as the proceeds went to the support of supernumerary ministers.

Senator Pasco: So far as I am personally concerned, I agreed to the report because I believed in the justice of the claim, but I referred also to a class of Senators who would support it on other grounds, and we were very glad to get the support of those Senators. Without that support it would have been a difficult matter to pass the bill. They were influential and were strong and positive in their views, and we hailed the support which they gave us.

Mr. Teller: I do not know that I would have voted against the claim, but I might have voted for some revision of the fee, inasmuch as I did not regard it as a legal claim, but a gratuity; and I voted to report the bill with the distinct understanding that it was a gratuity and not a legal claim. I stood upon the report made twenty years ago as a legal proposition, that the Church had no legal claim.

Now, as to whether we agree with this position of these Senators or not, the fact remains that they held that position, and the bill would not have been passed if they had opposed it. This being so, it is easy to see that these men felt that they had the right to see to it that the money they voted to the Church went directly, practically untouched, to the Church, and especially for the help of superannuates. The purpose of the Senate, then, is clear. They wanted all the money to go to the "House," and we should either see that that is done or we should return all of the money.

My position, therefore, is that we should meet together at the General Conference without any concealed or hidden plans on this subject. We should carefully discuss all the plans. I shall favor the return of all the money, accompanied with a statement that the Church will never receive it again. I believe that will be best for the Church and best for the cause of Christ throughout the world. No question can ever be raised if we do that. But if a majority of the delegates will not agree to that plan, then I shall advocate the second plan, and will vote for it, and after having done my best to carry the first plan, I will vote for the second plan with a clear conscience as a plan which is just and honorable, although not so well calculated in my judgment to relieve the Church of all criticism from those who will not investigate facts for themselves. I prefer to let my views be known on both plans in advance. I could not urge the adoption of the first plan with all my power, and then, if that were defeated, I bring out a second plan and advocate that with earnestness as a plan I had held in reserve. I want to be understood, in the beginning, as believing that either plan will satisfy my conscience, but that my judgment joins with my conscience in affirming the first to be the best plan the Church can adopt. I do not think that this is putting forth a compromise before the battle is joined, but I think it is a fair statement of two propositions, either of which I hold to be just and honorable, a statement of my own preference for the first, but an opinion that it will be difficult to get a majority to agree to that; and, in the event that does fail, a call to all who censure the Agents to join upon the second plan as an honorable basis. It may not be strategy or generalship to say that I want a certain plan adopted but in case I cannot get that I will take another. I am not a strategist, and in this matter I think it is better to say openly just what one thinks and what one will do. I believe more satisfactory results will be reached by a careful examination of all plans before the adoption of any, and therefore I have presented both.

In conclusion, let us remember that it is of great importance that we do not allow ourselves to forget the logical order. The great question is, "Did the Agents deceive the United States Senate?" That must take precedence over all other questions. That question answered, and the Agents condemned and dismissed, both of them, we have a proper starting point from which we can proceed logically to correct conclusions in the other matters.

May the great Head of the Church lead us to a glorious issue out of all our trouble.

J. C., Jr.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

BY R. N. PRICE.

It would be a good thing if the General Conference would open with this prayer: "Lord, help us to be honest, if we lose money by it!" If it would kill the "giraffe" system by requiring transfers to be dismissed and received by Conference action. If it would repeal the law that causes the local preacher (who has no charge of his own) to feel that he is trespassing when he makes an appointment to preach in a vacant church, school-house, private residence, or on a vacant lot, unless he has a permit, either actual or tacit, from some Southern Methodist preacher who happens to have a charge in the vicinity; a law that does not allow a local preacher to call sinners to repentance though supposed to be in imminent danger of an endless hell, except by the grace of some little lord spiritual, even though he do it in a field, vacant lot, vacant house, or even private residence to which he may have been invited by the proprietor. He may attempt to preach in some neglected quarter where pastors seldom or never go, yet some preacher who preaches not far away can issue an injunction. The object of this law was to stop the mouths of holiness evangelists; but it should have been entitled a law to kill the local ministry. The pastoral ministry have work enough of their own to do, without going outside of their dioceses; and they cannot be wholly silenced by injunction. But the local preacher can preach nowhere except on pre-empted ground, and ground that may any hour be forbidden ground. If pastors should see fit to conspire to silence any particular local preacher, it can be effectually done by injunction, without any legal procedure—without judge or jury. The law gives a pastor jurisdiction not only over his church and church-house, but over other church-houses, of his own and of other denominations; over vacant lots, school-houses, court-houses, and the private dwellings of his own people, and even of people of other churches or no church. This law unnecessarily abridges the liberties of the local preacher, and robs him of his manhood. It might be made an instrument of tyranny. It augments the power of the travelling ministry, already too great, when compared with that of the local ministry.

It would be a good thing if the General Conference would enact a law giving the local ministry power to elect their own representatives in the Annual and General Conferences; and the travelling ministry in the General Conference—the law-making body.

It would not be a bad thing if local preachers were made eligible to the various connectional offices of the Church; why not? What have they done to be disfranchised? Why, in the Commonwealth of Israel, should there be a large class of good citizens who are ineligible to the chief offices?

Would it not be a good thing if the General Conference should make the office of presiding elder elective by Conference action? Would it not be a good thing to limit the term of the office of Bishop to (say) eight years? Would it not be a good thing to make the Bishop's cabinet authoritative, and to consist of the presiding elders and an equal number of local preachers and laymen elected by the Conference? And would it not be a good thing to require a majority vote of the cabinet to make any appointment, the Bishop to have the casting vote in case of a tie?

Would it not be a good thing to make better provision for the support of worn-out preachers and the widows and orphans of those who have died in the work? Should not this collection have the preference over all other collections? The pinching poverty of our worn-out preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers would make angels weep.

Would it not be a bad thing to elect a man to the bishopric who is not deeply pious? to elect a man who is impulsive, partisan, and lopsided? to elect a man of inferior mind and culture? to elect a man who is not a good judge of law? to elect a man simply because he seldom laughs, but has a large supply of mock dignity? to elect a man simply because he is wealthy or of an aristocratic family?

Would it not be a bad thing to elect a man to the bishopric or any other connectional office who is not in favor of returning to the government the money obtained under false pretenses?

Would it not be a bad thing to elect a man to the bishopric who seeks the office?

Would it not be a bad thing to elect a man to the bishopric who is un-Wesleyan and non-Methodistic in his ideas of Church government?

Some men (one at least) who put himself on record in the Publishing House claim by voting to censure the Midland Methodist for its stand on the method of securing the claim, and who has since become an editor of a Conference paper, has been known recently to argue very earnestly in private to show that the agents deceived the Senate, and that the money should be returned to the government. This man ought to be stopped; for he is not calculated to promote peace and harmony in the Church, and he ought to remember that a very wise man has said, "The Methodist Church intends to protect ministers against whom no just word of reproach can be uttered."

About this Publishing House matter, I find a variety of feeling: One man says the General Conference ought to do something to set the Church right in the eyes of the world; but what that something is that deponent saith not. Another says the agents did right; the money is ours, and no action should be taken. Another says the General Conference will reverse all that bad action of the agents; and the matter will be adjusted honorably. Another (and his tribe is numerous) says, "I have no idea the General Conference is going to return one cent of that money. I have no confidence in the wisdom of the Bishops or of the General Conference; they will use some pretext for holding on to the lucre." Another says, "The money can't be returned. It belongs to the Conference claimants; and if an attempt is made to return it, an injunction will be asked for." This last suggestion is all buncombe. There's nothing in it. I do not agree with the man that has no confidence in the General Conference and in the Bishops. I shall expect them to act like gentlemen and Christians, till they surprise me by doing otherwise. Bear in mind that a legitimate discussion of the question of the claim and the manner of securing it does not bear directly on the personal character of Dr. Barbee and of Mr. Smith. Such discussion bears only on their official character. The General Conference has no jurisdiction over their moral character at all; it has only to do with their official action. Admit that their intentions were good, that they only made a mistake, that they are good men; that does not exonerate the Church. The Senate was deceived, and deceived by our agents; therefore deceived by the Church, unless she disavows the acts of her agents and undoes the whole thing. What the agents did, they may have done in haste and under peculiar pressure; if so, this fact goes far towards excusing them personally; but the Church has had four years to reflect; and if she endorses by action the hasty mistake, the unintentional deception (so to speak), she becomes a deliberate deceiver. If she retains the money, which are ill-gotten gains, she does so deliberately, and is accessory to the crime after the fact.

My suggestion is: Reverse the hasty action of the agents by the deliberate action of the General Conference; repudiate the methods by which the Senate was induced to vote for the appropriation; tender the money to the government—the last cent of it. That will set us right with ourselves, with our fellow-men, and with God.

God reigns.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

Often our trials act as a thorn hedge to keep us in the good pasture; but our prosperity is a gap through which we go astray.—C. H. Spurgeon.

WASHINGTON. In this Dr. Talmage's first discourse for the new year he speaks words of encouragement to all the timid and doubting. The text is Exodus xii, 2, "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you."

The last month of the old year has passed out of sight, and the first month of the new year has arrived. The midnight gate last Wednesday opened, and January entered. She deserves a better name, for she is called after Janus, the heathen deity who, they supposed, presided over doors and so might be expected to preside at the opening of the year. This month was of old called the wolf month because, through the severity of its weather, the hungry wolves came down seeking food and devouring human life. In the missals of the middle ages January was represented as attired in white, suggestive of the snow, and blowing the fingers, as though suffering from the cold, and having a bundle of wood under the arm, suggestive of the warmth that must be kindled.

Yes, January is the open door of the year, and through that door will come what long processions, some of them bearing palm leaves and some myrtle, others with garlands of wheat and others with cypress and mistletoe. They are coming, and nothing can keep them back—the events of a twelvemonth. It will, I think, be one of the greatest years of all time. It will abound with blessing and disaster. National and international controversies of momentous import will be settled. Year of coronation and dethronement, year that will settle Cuban and Porto Rican and Philippine and South African and Chinese destinies. The tamest year for many a decade past has dug its millions of graves and reared its millions of marriage altars.

We can expect greater events in this year than ever before, for the world's population has so vastly increased there are so many more than in any other year to laugh and weep and triumph and perish. The mightier wheels of mechanism have such wider sweep. The fires are kindled in furnaces not seven times but seventy times heated. The velocities whirling through the air and sailing the seas and tunneling the mountains will make unprecedented demonstration. Would to God that before the now opening year has closed the earth might cease to tremble with the last cannonade and the heavens cease to be lighted up with any more conflagration of homesteads and the foundries that make swords be turned into blacksmith shops for making plowshares.

Grasp Present Opportunities.

The front door of a stupendous year has opened. Before many of you there will be twelve months of opportunity for making the world better or worse, happier or more miserable. Let us pray that it may be a year that will indicate the speedy redemption of the hemisphere. Would to God that this might be the year in which the three great instruments now chiefly used for secular purposes might be put to their mightiest use in the world's evangelization—the telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph! Electrically has such potent tongue, such strong arm, such swift wing, such lightning foot, that it occurs to me that it may be the angel that St. John saw and heard in apocalyptic vision when he started back and cried out, "I saw another angel flying in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people." They were tongues of fire that sat on the heads of the disciples at the Pentecost, and why not the world called to God by tongue of electric fire? Prepare your batteries and make ready to put upon the wires the world wide message of "whosoever will."

Furthermore, this month of January has the greatest height and depth of cold. The rivers are bound in crystal chains. The fountains that made highest leap in the summer parks now toss not one jet, for every drop would be a frozen tear. The sleds crunch through the hard snow. Warmest attire the wardrobe can afford is put on that we may defend ourselves against the fury of the elements. Hardest of all the months for the poor, let it be the season of greatest generosity on the part of the prosperous. How much a scuffle of coal or a pair of shoes or a coat or a shawl may do in assuagement of suffering between the 1st of January and the 1st of February God only knows. Seated by our warm registers or wrapped in furs which make us independent of the cutting January blast, let us not forget the fireless hearth and the thin garments and the hacking cough and the rheumatic twinge of those who through destitution find life in winter an agony. Suppose each one of us take under charge one poverty stricken household or one disabled man or one invalid woman. On our way home from such a charity, though the wind may be howling and the night tempestuous, I should not wonder if we could hear a voice that was heard on Galilee and at the gates of Nain and by the pool of Bethesda saying, "Inasmuch as ye did it to them, ye did it to me."

Victories of the Frost.

Oh, the might of the cold! The arctic and antarctic invading the temperate zone! The victories of the frost—as when the Thames in 1205 became firm as any bridge and the inhabitants crossed and recrossed on the ice and booths and places of temporary amusement were built on the hardened surface; as when many years ago New York harbor was paved with ice so that the people passed on foot to the adjoining islands. But the full story of the cold will never be known. The lips which would have told it were frozen and the fingers that would have written it were benumbed. Only here and there a fact appears. In 1691 the cold was so terrific that the wolves entered Vienna. In 1468 it was so cold that wine was cut with hatchets and distributed among the soldiers. In 1234 a whole forest was killed by the cold at Ravenna. In 763 the Black sea was frozen over. As we go further back the frosts are mightier, but as we come further down the frosts lessen. The worst severities have been halted, and the snows have lost their depths, and the thermometers announce less terrific falls of temperature, and the time will come when the year will be one long summer of foliage and bloom. While the world's moral condition will be reformed, the worst climates will be corrected. You could not have a millennium with a January blast possible.

Behold, also, as it is possible in no other month of the year, the wondrous anatomy of the trees in January, the leaves of the last year all gone and not so much as a bud of a new botanical wardrobe appearing, the trees standing with arms stretched toward heaven, one of the greatest evidences of the wisdom and the power of the Creator. The leaves appear only once and then die, but these great arms are stretched up toward heaven in silent prayer for scores of years, now mailed with ice, now robed in snow or bowing to the God of the tempests as he passes in the midnight hurricane. In July the trees stand glorifying the earth; in January they stand defying the winter. Under the same tree the child plays with his toy and, growing up to manhood, sits under it in sentimental or philosophic mood and, having passed on to old age, rests himself under its shade. In these January days the trees seem to say: "The leaves that rustled their music in the last summer are dead and gone, but the leaves that will adorn this uncovered brow and these bare arms shall have as much beauty and glory as their predecessors. Only wait. There are beautiful and lovely things to come in my tree life, as there are beautiful and lovely things to come in your life, O human spectator." Oh, the tree! Only the Almighty and the Infinite could have made one. Gothic architecture was suggested by it. But for the arch of its bough and the pointing of its branches the St. Chapelle of Paris and other specimens of Gothic arch would never have been lifted. No wonder the world has taken from it many styles of suggestiveness—the laurel for the victor, the willow for the sorrowing, the aspen for the trembling, the cypress for the burial! But, unlike ourselves, they cannot change their place and so stand watching all that passes. Some of them are solemn monuments of the centuries. Thank God for trees, their beauty, their shelter, their interlacing branches—not only for the trees in June time coronation, but in January privation of everything but graceful structure! Let the iconoclastic ax not be lifted against them. "Woodman, spare that tree."

The Increasing Daylight.

Behold also in this January month the increasing daylight. Last month the sun went down at 4:30, but in this month the days are getting longer. The sunrise and the sunset are farther apart. Sunlight instead of artificial light, and there is for our dear old battered earth growing light. "The day-spring from on high hath visited us." We shall have more light for the home, more light for the church, more light for the nation, more light for the world—light of intelligence, light of comfort, light of rescue, light of evangelization, light from the face of God, light from the throne. But, you say, the light increases so slowly, each day of this January only one minute longer than its predecessor, the sun setting the 1st day of January at 4 o'clock and 43 minutes, the sun setting the 2d day of January at 4 o'clock and 44 minutes, the 3d day of this month the sun setting at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes, the 4th day of January the sun setting at 4 o'clock and 46 minutes. This evening it will set at 4 o'clock and 47 minutes. The day enlarges very little, and the reign of sunlight is not much increased, but do not despise the minute of increasing light each day of this January, and do not despise the fact that more light is coming for the church and the world, though it come slowly. As we are now in this season gradually going toward the longest day of next summer, so our world is moving forward toward the long day of emancipation and Christly dominion. It may now in the state and the church and the world be January cold, but we are on the way to July harvests and September orchards.

Do not read your almanac backward. Do not go out and ask the trees hung with icicles by January storm whether they will ever again blossom in May and leaf in June. We are moving toward the world's redemption. The frozen tears will melt, the river of gladness will resume its flow, the crocus will come up at the edge of the snowbank, the morning star will open the door for the day, and the armies of the world will "ground arms" all around the world. The January of frost will be abolished, and the balm and radiance of a divine atmosphere will fill the nations. If you do not see it and hear it for yourself, I think at the utmost your grandchildren will see and hear it. The heavens will take part in the conflict between righteousness and sin, and that will settle it and settle it aright, and settle it forever.

In this very month of January, 1642, two months after a great battle had been fought between the army of the king and the army of parliament, shepherds and travelers between 1 and 1 o'clock at night heard the battle repeated in the skies—the sound of drums, the clash of arms, the groans of dying men and then the withdrawal of the scene into complete silence. These shepherds and travelers repeated in the neighboring towns what they heard, and large numbers of people, expecting that all was a deception, went out on the following night and they heard the same uproar and tumult in the heavens—the two armies in battle. The king, hearing of this seeming combat in the heavens, sent ambassadors to inquire into the mystery. In the night they also heard the conflict and came back to the king and took solemn oath as to this mysterious occurrence.

Whether those shepherds and travelers and ambassadors of the king were in delusion I cannot say, but this I know—that the forces of God and the forces of Satan are now in combat, the heavens as well as the earth in struggle as to who shall win this world for blessedness or woe, and, as the armies of God are mightier than the armies of Satan, we know who will triumph, and we have a right to shout the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. The King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the God of Joshua and Havelock, lead in the conflict. I have no fear about the tremendous issue. My only fear is that we will not be found in the ranks and fully armed to do our part in this campaign of the eternities.

Again, I remark that the month of January has seen many of the most stupendous events in the world's history and a rocking of cradles and the digging of graves that have affected nations. In this month American independence was declared, followed by Lexington and Bunker Hill and Monmouth and Valley Forge and Yorktown. January saw the proclamation that abolished American slavery. Though at the time there were two mighty opinions and they were exactly opposed—those who liked the document and those who disliked it—there is but one opinion now, and if it were put to vote in all the states of the south, "Shall slavery be reinstated?" there would be an overwhelming vote of "No!" The pen with which the document was signed and the inkstand that contained the ink are relics as sacred and valuable as the original Declaration of Independence, with all its erasures and interlineations. The institution which for seventy or eighty

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

3:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH.

LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:50 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,

District Passenger Agent,

920 east Main street,

Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICKE,

General Passenger Agent.

C. H. ACKERT,

General Manager,

Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAR. 2, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:30 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
3:00 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	3:34 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	6:20 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	6:40 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
8:50 A. M.	4:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	9:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
	(Eastern Time.)
1:05 A. M.	8:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
	(Central Time.)
4:40 A. M.	12:05 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
7:52 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Ar. Brunswick.
9:25 A. M.	3:40 P. M.—Ar. Fernandina.
9:05 A. M.	3:50 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	5:10 P. M.—Ar. St. Augustine.
3:15 P. M.	10:00 P. M.—Ar. Tallahassee.
1:48 P. M.	12:10 A. M.—Ar. Ocala.
5:10 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Ar. Orlando.
5:40 P. M.	5:00 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
7:15 P. M.	6:00 A. M.—Ar. Port Tampa.
10:50 P. M.	8:10 A. M.—Ar. Miami.

Train No. 25 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Drawing-Room, Observation and Compartment Sleeping Cars between New York and St. Augustine. Pullman Dining Cars between New York and Richmond and between Hamlet and St. Augustine. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington and between Richmond and St. Augustine. Pullman Sleeping Cars (tri-weekly) between Washington and Pinehurst. Pullman Sleeping Cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa and between Jacksonville and Orlando. Also, through Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe Cars between Hamlet and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor Cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest Day Coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo, for free examination and advice.

BOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent.

Write to C. A. SNOW & CO.
Patent Lawyers. WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,
Watches,
Jewelry.

Fine Repairing
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing
Lumsden & Son,
Jewellers and Opticians.

708 N. 1st Street Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign and TRADE MARKS of every EX-TIRE attention's test. Send model, sketch or photo and we send on IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

PATENTS

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Lawyers,
Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLS
and
UMBER YARD

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

— PLOW HANDLES —

— OILACCO HOGSHEADS. —

— CORN MEAL —

— SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES. —

Farmville M'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blackstone, Va.

Religious News.

A VERY SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL.

Every night last week large congregations attended the series of revival meetings in progress at Wright Memorial M. E. church, Rev. George H. McFaden, pastor, and at each service unusual interest was manifest, several professions of faith encouraging the pastor, Rev. Mr. McFaden, and the earnest ambassador of the Divine Master, the Rev. A. L. Franklin, who is preaching nightly the Gospel in its simplest and most effective form.

Sunday was the brightest day of all, from a point of view of religious fervor and the saving of souls, eight claiming the knowledge of the promise: "Come unto Me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

The Rev. A. L. Franklin talked to the Sunday school scholars in the morning, and as a result of the touching and impressive story of the cross five professions of faith in the Master, and at the service at 11 o'clock, when a large number heard him, there were several requests for the prayers of the pastor and other Christians.

At 3:30 o'clock "Excuses" was the subject the reverend gentleman used in an admirable address to men, which made a profound impression, and will yield abundantly in fruit.

The evening service, at 7:45, was one long to be remembered by those who were fortunate to gain admittance, the sacred edifice being filled to overflowing before the hour for service had arrived. As in other meetings, the sermon was a powerful one, bringing three to the throne of grace and causing several to ask for prayers.

Twenty professions is the work that has been done for the Lord in Wright Memorial church during the last week, and the meetings will go on all this week, the Rev. Mr. Franklin filling the pulpit each night.—Landmark.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Methodist preachers' meeting of the city was held as usual this morning, with Rev. B. F. Lipscomb, president, in the chair, and Rev. S. C. Hatcher making the opening prayer.

The usual reports of the previous day's work in the churches were made by the pastors present.

Rev. L. C. Moore, the Matoaca pastor, failed to put in an appearance, and Rev. George E. Booker was absent on account of a lecture engagement in Dinwiddie county.

Rev. Mr. Comer, the Ettrick pastor, is conducting a revival service at his church this week, which has been in progress for some time. A number of the pastors will aid in the services this week.

We note that a number of children were reported as having been baptized and good collections for the Conference assessments taken in some of the churches. The pastors present were looking well, and the best of spirits prevailed. As usual, themes of interest to our church were discussed. In some minor things changes do not portend evil. Present-day surroundings demand these changes sometimes in non-essentials, but the outlook is promising when wisdom and earnest piety have right of way. Pastors here have a grip on the blessed promises, and hearty optimism is the result. Through the pastor's glasses the best side of humanity is often seen. The weekly meeting brings us all in such close touch that the best elements of our nature are stirred. The exuberance of spirits, the merry laugh tells that the soul within is turned to higher, nobler endeavor. Youthful opportunities, practical Christianity, a living brotherhood among men are dominant thoughts as we look out on the spiritual horizon.—"Secretary," in Progress.

MINISTERS MEET.

The regular weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers of this city and vicinity was held yesterday at Epworth church at the usual hour. The attendance was large, and the session unusually short.

The order of the day, the discussion of the Publishing House matter, that has caused such a stir in the Church, was laid on the table.

Some visiting ministers were present, among them Rev. A. L. Franklin, of Danville circuit, and Rev. W. J. Maybee, who has charge of an orphans' home in Richmond.

The session was presided over by the Rev. W. R. Proctor, the president, who called on the Rev. J. B. Merritt to make the opening prayer.

Reports of the work during the past week were made as follows:

The Rev. Ernest Stevens had a fairly good day at Owens' Memorial. The morning congregation was better than usual, and, conditions considered, was good at night. The Sunday school is improving.

The chaplain of the Seamen's Bethel, the Rev. J. B. Merritt, stated that he is getting along well.

The Rev. G. H. Lambeth had a large Sunday school at LeKies Memorial. He preached at two services.

The Rev. George Wesley Jones had a good day at Trinity.

The Rev. N. H. Smith reported a pleasant day at Oaklette and Bethel.

The Rev. J. W. Crider preached for the Rev. C. H. McGhee at Lambert's Point at night.

The Rev. D. B. Austin had good congregations and schools at Haygood Memorial and Lynnhaven.

The Rev. E. H. Rawlings conducted the usual services at Monumental. The Rev. W. P. Jordan conducted the mid-week meeting.

The Rev. C. L. Bane said that the Rev. Dr. W. J. Maybee preached at Cumberland Street at the morning hour and he conducted the services at night. The Sunday school was well attended, but at the Epworth League meeting the attendance was small.

The Rev. E. T. Dadmun preached at Centenary to the usual congregations.

The Rev. D. T. Merritt had a very large Sunday school at Port Norfolk. In five classes all were present. In one class all have been present for six consecutive Sundays. Several new scholars were enrolled. Mr. Merritt conducted the usual preaching services.

The Rev. H. C. Cheatham conducted all the services at Huntersville. The Sunday school was very fine.

The Rev. W. Asbury Christian reported a good day at Memorial. The presiding elder, the Rev. W. C. Vaden, preached in the morning and Mr. Christian at night. Mr. Christian preached at the First Presbyterian church in the morning. The bazaar recently conducted by the young ladies of the church netted $743.

The Rev. Dr. J. P. Barrett held the usual services at the Christian Memorial Temple. There was one profession of faith and one was added to the church.

The Rev. J. P. Woodward reported that the Rev. Dr. A. Coke Smith preached morning and night to the usual fine congregations at Epworth.

The Rev. L. J. Phaup had a pleasant day at South Princess Anne charge, preaching at Charity church morning and night, and at Beech Grove in the afternoon.

The Rev. C. H. McGhee reported an excellent Sunday school at Lambert's Point, there being several additions. The congregations were good, there being two conversions at the morning service. The Rev. J. W. Crider preached at night. The revival services have closed, there being fourteen conversions.

The Rev. W. T. Green had a good school and good congregations at Central. He received one on profession of faith and one by certificate. He also preached at Cottage Place in the afternoon.

The Rev. J. K. Jolliff reported that the revival services continue at Queen Street, with encouraging results. The congregations have been very good.

The Rev. W. R. Proctor had a good day at McKendree, the services being held in the lecture-room. The auditorium is being decorated.

The Rev. G. H. McFaden is in the midst of a fine revival meeting at Wright Memorial, being assisted by the Rev. A. L. Franklin, of the Danville circuit. Mr. Franklin preached four times on Sunday, and will preach each night this week. There have been twenty professions of faith and many requests for prayer.

The Rev. A. L. Franklin said that the work on the Danville circuit is moving along.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. L. J. Phaup.—Landmark.

CANADIAN STATISTICS OF RELIGION.

Recent census reports show that the religious population of the Dominion of Canada aggregates 5,371,051 souls, of whom 3,142,054 are Protestants and 2,228,997 are Catholics.

Canadian Protestants are subdivided into various denominational bodies as follows: Methodists, 916,862; Presbyterians, 842,301; Episcopalians, 680,316; and Baptists, 292,486, each being credited with large gains during the past decade. Universalists and Unitarians have steadily lost ground, while Congregationalists have gained only by the merest increment. Salvation Army statistics show heavy losses, having dropped from 13,949 in 1891 to 10,307 in 1901.

This inventory of creeds shows that our brethren on the other side of the Great Lakes do not differ materially from us in religious affiliations and beliefs, but are essentially one with us.—Constitution.

A HOPEFUL MOVEMENT.

WHAT GEORGIA COUNTIES ARE DOING TO IMPROVE THEIR SCHOOLS.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Georgia some months ago offered to supplement the funds that were raised by any county in the State to establish model rural schools. Nearly twenty counties have already responded and the first of these schools has been opened in Madison county, with three well trained teachers.

In addition to the common school subjects, cooking, school gardening, and various handicrafts will be taught. and a school library, a mothers' club and a fortnightly institute will be organized.

President E. C. Branson, of the Georgia State Normal has recently organized one of these schools eight miles from the railroad. He states that the community of 200 people raised nearly $1,000 for this school. "We have a three-roomed school house," he writes, "weather-boarded and equipped with modern furniture. We are building an adjunct for cooking and shop work. We opened the school yesterday with eighty-six pupils, and every father and mother in a radius of five miles was here."

There is hopeful progress in Palestine. The Missionary Review of the World says: "The railway from Joppa to Jerusalem, at first an experiment, has been put upon a paying basis, and other lines which will connect it with points of interest up and down the valley of the Jordan have been projected, or are actually in course of building. In Jerusalem, there are now electric lights, telephones, phonographs, sanitary plumbing, modern stores, houses built, and, in short, most of the comforts of civilized life. Trolley lines are talked of to connect Jerusalem with Bethany, Bethlehem, the Lake of Galilee, Samaria, Jericho, Nazareth, and other places made familiar through Bible history.—Ram's Horn.

Dr. Joseph Parker, who is now in his seventy-second year, continues to preach three times a week to large congregations at the City Temple, London but he declines all outside work, chiefly because he has been suffering from heart trouble. The symptoms at present are not serious, but he has received a warning that he cannot ignore. He has lost little of his freshness and nerve, and even daring. On January 2d, reviving an earlier practice, he sent out from the City Temple pulpit New Year messages to King Edward, President Roosevelt, and other notabilities.

The Buddhists are so impressed with the value of medical mission work that they have bought a piece of land in Hakodate, and are going to build a large hospital for the poor; they propose to make no charge for attendance.

A REPLY TO BROTHER L. C. KILBY.
(Continued from page 5.)

6. "Another night, at a late hour, those who did not attend the meetings were lectured for not coming. Of course not a single one of them was present to hear it, but the faithful ones had to sit still and listen to it all the same."

Now, I do not intend to comment on these specifications—not at this time—and I hope it will not become necessary for me to do so at all. But some of us would like to know why a layman should rise up and publish these things to the outside world, and thereby bring the actions of our ministers into disrepute. You will please arise and explain yourself. You say that you have "another phase of this question which I wish to discuss." Please don't do it until you settle what you have already said. With kindly feelings toward you, I am as ever,

Yours truly JOHN OF KENT.
N. B.—The Editor has my name.
Norfolk, Va.

ONLY A MODEST SUGGESTION.

Mr. Editor,—I see from last Recorder that you propose to give some attention to the "Mann Bill" in next issue. My deep interest in the matter led me to make direct inquiry of a member of the Legislature about the bill. His reply was, "It died in the committee room." Now, this strikes me as a very grave injustice somewhere, and excites the suspicion that somebody's rights were seriously disregarded. If the rights of all the parties concerned could thus be ignored by a committee, and the right of that fact go unchallenged, then where is the glory of living under a democratic government?

Fraternally, W. E. ALLEN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in His wise providence, has removed from our midst by death Sister M. J. West, the mother of the wives of our co-laborers, Bros. J. S. Wallace and J. T. Routten, therefore be it resolved by the "Methodist preachers of Danville":

1. That we extend to the bereaved families, especially to the daughters, our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the God of love, who doeth all things well, and who has promised to be a very present help in the time of trouble.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the families, and a copy be sent to the Richmond Christian Advocate and the Methodist Recorder, and the Danville Methodist for publication.

Signed, S. J. BATTEN,
Secretary.

Danville, Va., April 21, 1902.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Virginia Conference Orphanage will be held at the residence of Col. John P. Branch, Richmond, Va., Tuesday, May 6th, at 10 A. M.

J. T. MASTIN,
Secretary.

In this life there is but one sure happiness—to live for others.—Leo Tolstoi.

EDUCATION IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The geography formerly used in the Filipino schools devoted one page out of two hundred to the United States, and described that country as "one of millionaires, advertisements and eccentricities." Just now one of the eccentricities consists in giving the Filipino children real education. The superintendent of public education in the Philippines, Mr. Fred. W. Atkinson, writes in the Outlook:

"The majority of the school children come from ignorant homes, where there are none of the accessories and means of culture. A small but important class of Filipinos, those who possess wealth and culture, while not opposing popular education, favor plans for higher education. On the other hand, the masses, for whom elementary education is intended, are ever in danger of misprizing its benefits. Fine words are heard from local presidents, but with many their deeds prove that their words serve only to conceal their thoughts.

"In spite of these and other difficulties, all the superintendents and the great majority of the American teachers are enthusiastic and optimistic as to the ultimate outcome. A progressive spirit is being aroused in a considerable number of Filipino teachers, who are given, wherever there is an American teacher, daily instruction in English and in methods of teaching; and vacation normal courses are also being conducted. Modern text-books and other school supplies, including furniture, are being distributed in large quantities. The American teachers are doing something to improve the appearance and hygienic conditions of schools and grounds, and by this means, and by inviting parents to the schools on days of public exercises, are arousing local pride and interest. While there are exceptions, yet local co-operation is forthcoming.

"Almost without exception, the teachers are satisfied, enthusiastic, and intensely interested in their work. They are willing to submit to minor discomforts, and are repaid by the satisfaction of feeling that they, in close contact, are the ones who exercise direct influence in enlightening the Filipino mind, hitherto untrained and groping in darkness. As a friend, prominent in Massachusetts educational circles, said: 'Teaching in the Philippines is the grandest kind of missionary work.'

According to reports from Commander Tilley, U. S. N., who is in charge at Tutuila, Samoa, the United States is still under the humiliating necessity of depending for all education and religious training among the natives on the London Missionary Society, which for seventy years has been maintaining missionary stations and schools at Pago-Pago and other points in the Samoan Archipelago. It is true that one of the religious societies in the United States might relieve the London Missionary Society of the responsibility, but it would scarcely be practicable to change the teachers, with whom the natives are well acquainted, and who understand the language and the character of their pupils. It would be much better, says Commander Tilley, for the Government of the United States to pay the salaries of the present missionaries and retain them in the work which they have done so successfully. Commander Tilley commends the work of the London missionaries in the highest terms, saying that, "through long years of experience the missionaries have learned how to deal with the natives and understand their peculiar natures much better than strangers." The natives, old and young, have absolute confidence in them. Their system is inexpensive, and works well.

THE VERSATILE KATE FIELD.

Even as a child, while living in Italy with her mother, Kate Field possessed a personality which drew attention, and for many years before her return to her native country she was referred to in the artistic circles of Boston and New York as a singularly gifted creature. As a matter of fact she was unquestionably handicapped through life by that most fascinating of intellectual perversities—versatility. A charming sketch of this brilliant and generally beloved woman, from the pen of Dr. S. R. Elliott, appears in the April Delineator, accompanied by some rare portraits.

"I STOOD IN A DRAUGHT with my coat off and caught this wretched cold," says the sufferer. He need not pay a heavy penalty if he follow his act of folly with an act of wisdom. Soak the feet in hot water with a few teaspoonsful of Perry Davis' Painkiller in it. Take a teaspoonful of Painkiller in hot sweetened water at bed time and be thankful for so simple and speedy a way to break up a cold. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, DALLAS, TEXAS, MAY 7TH, JUNE 7TH, 1902.

For the above occasion the Southern Railway begs to announce one fare plus $2 for the round trip from all points on its lines to Dallas and return. Tickets to be on sale May 3d, 4th, 5th, with return limit June 9th, except that by deposit of tickets with joint agent at Dallas on or before May 20th, and on payment of 50 cents, an extension to June 30th may be obtained.

The Southern Railway offers the choice of routes to Dallas, but the trip must be made in both directions over same route—through Asheville (Land of the Sky) and Memphis; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Shreveport; through Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis, or through Atlanta, Montgomery and New Orleans.

For detail information call on or write any agent of the Southern Railway, or to . C. W. WESTBURY,

D. P. A., Richmond, Va.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Federation Woman's Clubs, Los Angeles, Cal., May 1st to 8th.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

ANNUAL MEETING GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS., MAY 14-17, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Jackson and return. Tickets on sale May 12th 13th, and 14th, return limit May 30, 1902.

"CO-FRACTIONS."

This little well-printed and well-bound book of forty-six pages, 16mo, contains and elaborates a new and valuable discovery in mathematics. It is an addition to science; it presents what was never before known or published; its methods are short and easy; in many problems the solution is briefer than the statement; a very large number of problems can be solved by these methods; it handles problems in percentage, arithmetical and geometrical progression, simple and compound interest, loss and gain, stocks and bonds, and a great variety of analytical questions. Teachers should teach it, students should study it, business men should use it, and mathematical text-makers should introduce its methods into their books.

We present the following testimonials:

Professor Edmund Longley, A. M., now retired, but for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, Virginia, and a brilliant mathematician, writes: "This goes just to thank you for the copy sent me of your 'Co-Fractions,' with the attendant personal note. Pardon me for directly expressing my admiration of the vigorous and acute brain work that evolved the work."

Professor Charles E. Vawter, LL.D., for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, and now president of the Miller School, Albemarle county, Va., says: "I have read with most pleasing interest the work on 'Co-Fractions,' by my old friend, Professor R. N. Price. Every one who teaches arithmetic should read it. It presents in a new, concise, skillful, and ingenious way, facts of arithmetic that all should know. It will widen the view and pull many a plodder out of the ruts."

The book sells at 25 cents, postpaid, or $2.40 per dozen, by freight, express, or post, at expense of the seller. Order of R. N. Price, Morristown, Tenn.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO., OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

◎◎

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

◎◎

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

◎◎

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

◎◎

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by experience since Druggists

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line
—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE, STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
RICHMOND, VA.

It Will Pay You!

TO SEND A POSTAL CARD FOR OUR PRICES ON
Cane Mills, Cider Mills,
Buggies and Harness.

—In Fact—

Everything in the Hardware and Implement Lines
WE HAVE THE GOODS AND PRICES TO SUIT.
Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, — VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company,

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

...FOR TOBACCO...

Bellefonte,

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3

Standard,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

Alliance,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

FOR CORN AND COTTON,

Highland,

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 3

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is $15.20,	but it actually runs $16.54
Alliance	" 15.20,	" " " 17.71
Hard Cash	" 16.70,	" " " 18.96
Bellefonte	" 21.20,	" " " 23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10 NO. 18.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., MAY 8, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

During the next few weeks the Editor expects to be absent at the General Conference. All communications should be addressed as usual to Blackstone. They will receive attention.

NEXT ISSUE.

The next issue of the Recorder will be an orphanage number. Our readers will doubtless expect some news from the General Conference, but there is not much done on the floor of the Conference the first week, and so beyond an editorial letter on the General Conference, the whole number will be given up to the orphanage.

"NO ADMITTANCE."

The Editor of the Recorder will not be surprised at any action which may be taken by the editor of the Nashville Advocate since one of his recent performances.

At the last session of the Virginia Conference, the Editor of the Recorder united with Bros. Christian and Young in a memorial on the subject of organizing a deaconess movement in the Church. As he was one of the signers of the memorial, and as the memorial was adopted, and as he was elected as a delegate to the General Conference, and as the Virginia Conference is one of the largest Conferences in the Church, he thought that an expression of views in the "Church" organ would be in place. So he wrote a short article of less than one column, and about March 6th sent it to Dr. Hoss, the editor of the Nashville Advocate. As he had not asked to use any of the space in the "Church" organ for some time, he thought that as a representative of certain views he was entitled to a hearing. Nothing was heard from Dr. Hoss, and the article did not appear. The latter part of March, however, Dr. Hoss took up three columns of the "Church" organ in giving forth his own views on the subject. Two or three weeks later on he published an article on the deaconess question, written evidently after his editorial was written, and consequently received by him several weeks after he received the article of the Editor of the Recorder. Seeing, therefore, that it was not for lack of space, but for lack of inclination, that Dr. Hoss had not published the article, the Editor of the Recorder wrote requesting the return of the article. After a few days he received a letter from Mrs. E. E. Hoss, stating that the article had been misplaced, and therefore could not be returned. In the last issue of the Advocate there was an editorial note that owing to lack of space some articles on the deaconess question could not be published.

The above facts may be given whatever explanation Dr. Hoss desires, but the editor of the Recorder says the only explanation consistent with the facts is that there is "NO ADMITTANCE" to the Editor of the Recorder into the columns of the so-called "Church" organ, but in reality the "Hoss" organ. No exception could be taken to the tone and spirit of the article. It was short. If Dr. Hoss had written such an article for the Recorder it would have been published, if all the editorial had been omitted. Under all the circumstances, no consideration would have prevented the publication of such an article. It simply shows to what lengths prejudice will carry a man. "No admittance" is written over every column of the Nashville Advocate to any article bearing the signature of James Cannon, Jr. As the face and voice of the bearer of that name seemed to arouse his prejudice and destroy his judgment at the last session of the Virginia Conference, so the name signed to an article seems to produce the same effect. The editor of the Recorder has no anger in his heart to the editor of the Nashville Advocate—nothing but pity, that he should allow his prejudice to destroy his judgment. It is clear, however, that such a man as Dr. Hoss, notwithstanding his fine qualities in other respects, is not a proper man to hold any general office of the Church. His prejudices totally disqualify him.

That our readers may judge, the article rejected by Dr. Hoss is given here:

THE DEACONESS QUESTION.

W. A. Christian, W. J. Young, and this writer, at the last session of the Virginia Conference, offered a memorial to the General Conference, asking that body "to take such steps as may be necessary to establish an order of deaconesses in our Church." A similar memorial was offered by some of the other Conferences, and it has provoked considerable discussion as to the methods to be employed. The most of this discussion seems to be on the question of setting apart to the office. Shall they be ordained, or set apart by any special formula?

The idea in the mind of this writer at the time he signed the memorial offered in our Conference was not to establish a new department of Church work among us. He believes that we have, at the present, departments enough; indeed, the pastors, who are expected to bear upon their hearts all these various causes, feel that there are too many divisions already. For the present, at least, it looks as if this work could be managed by the Missionary Societies of the women. By very slight changes in their constitution, both the Foreign and Home Missionary Societies could provide for the deaconess work in their respective fields. The Foreign Missionary Society does its work through the "agency of female missionaries, teachers, physicians, and Bible readers," and all of these are "subject to the appointing power of the Bishop." Simply add the word "deaconess" to the above agencies, and the work is authorized in the foreign field. The Home Missionary Society has a very broad platform in its second article. The latter part of the paragraph reads: "In providing religious instruction for the neglected and the destitute; and in otherwise aiding the cause of Christ." There will be no difficulty in amending this paragraph so as to include the work of the deaconess. All questions as to special dress, special methods, special fields, etc., could be left to these two societies to decide. No question of ordination need be agitated, but women can be secured to give their time to this special work.

JAMES CANNON, JR.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

BY R. N. PRICE.

The following dispatch to the dailies is dated Chicago, April 25:

"If the clergy of the Methodist Episcopal Church expect to keep their young men and women in the fold they must do away with the old restrictions against card playing, dancing and attendance at the theatres. If they are not allowed to follow the dictates of their conscience, they will attend churches where they will be allowed to do so, or they will not attend church at all."

This, in substance, was the declaration set forth at a dinner at the Union League club, attended by sixty-five prominent Methodist ministers and laymen of Chicago. The proposition received general discussion, in which Bishop J. W. Hamilton, L. D. Condee and Robert Quale took leading parts.

The restrictions mentioned are seldom enforced anywhere North or South, least of all, I would suppose, in Chicago. If these restrictions have kept anybody out of the church or put anybody out of the church for many long years I have not heard of it. Yet it must be conceded that the very existence of regulations on the statute books against worldliness has a tendency to restrain the more conscientious of the membership. Laws have a moral as well as a legal force. They have an educative influence. For this reason, if for no other, they should not be abolished. They furnish backing for sermons against worldliness. The act of abolishing these regulations would be construed into positive license. The flood gates would be opened, and worldliness would grow apace in the Church, until all demarkation between the Church and the world would be obliterated.

That coterie of preachers and laymen in Chicago are not true friends of the Church. They ought to know that revolutions never go backward: the friends of license are not going to stop at card playing, dancing and theatres; they will not be satisfied with license in regard to these things. Having conquered this ground, they will proceed to further conquests. They demand the right to have wine suppers, to take their drams regularly, to swear when angry—in a word, to do just like other sinners. The line has to be drawn somewhere, and for God's sake let us draw it on paper, if no where else.

If the General Conference had washed its dirty linen in the back yard four years ago, it would not have to wash it in the front yard now. But that is where the washing ought to be done now, to let the world know that it has been washed.

I have just read the articles in your paper from "Old Foggy" and the Rev. F. M. Edwards with approval. These men have a discerning conscience, and I trust they will find themselves among the honest majority. I am looking for something decent from the General Conference. The manipulation by which the matter was sloughed over at Baltimore was no credit to the Church.

It appears that the Rev. James Burrow, who was honored with the place from which I was ejected by the Stahlman influence, has claimed that in 1898 he introduced a resolution into Holstein Conference saying the Agents had made a mistake; that is true. Now he claims that the resolution was laid on the table because the Conference wanted no further agitation. Dr. Frank Richardson replies that he and others voted to table it because it was too weak; he was not willing to name the thing a mistake. The fact is, it was

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip, Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1902, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"Good for you!" he said heartily. "I never thought you could do it. Why, I know several of the fellows who have tried to get into this paper and have had everything rejected so far."

Freeda was delighted. Then she said demurely:

"You owe me a dollar besides."

"I owe you a dollar! How's that?"

"Why, do you forget you promised to print all the articles we had accepted in The College Journal and give us a dollar apiece for them?"

"Did I say I would do that?"

"You certainly did."

"Then, of course, I'll pay it. But I had no idea I would ever have to."

But it was Miss Seton's turn now.

"You owe me a dollar, too," she said, while both girls laughed at the look that came over Edward's face. "I had some verses printed in an eastern paper last week, and I belong to the girls' literary society."

"I'd like to see them," said Edward suspiciously. He had his doubts concerning Miss Seton's statement.

"Of course," she replied, still laughing, as she went out of the parlor.

While she was gone Edward looked over Freeda's article. He was surprised to note the interest that attached to it. There were no pretensions at fine writing, and probably that is the reason the editor accepted it. The article was an account of one winter's experience, when Freeda had paid all her personal expenses in the way of dress and books, etc., by a little experiment in poultry raising. The article happened to fit in exactly with a series that the corresponding editor had been running on "How Country Girls Can Profitably Spend a Winter." The amount paid for the article was nominal, and Freeda frankly said that she did not believe she could write anything else that would be accepted, but "That's my article right there," she said nevertheless she did not conceal her satisfaction at her first success and Edward, among whose faults was not jealousy, was just as much pleased as she was.

"Did you know that Miss Seton had had any verses printed?" he asked cautiously.

"I knew she had sent on some verses to the Wayne Sentinel—that's her uncle's paper in New York. Yes; she showed me the verses last night."

Edward was silent, as Miss Seton suddenly appeared.

"There, Mr. Skeptic, are the verses! Look and believe!"

Edward took the paper and looked sharply at the place indicated. The paper was a local sheet, printed in a country town. The name of the editor was given as Mark Seton. The verses were printed in a corner, in the first column, and the name at the bottom of them was signed "I. Hope."

"Yes, that's my nom de plume. Isn't it a good one? 'I' for Ida and 'Hope' for the college. And every time I send in anything to an editor he can read my wish in my signature: 'I hope' you will accept and pay. Don't you think it ought to move editors and publishers, that mute, silent appeal?"

She laughed again, and Freeda joined in her statement.

"He sent me 50 cents in postage stamps," said Miss Seton, laughing. Edward looked incredulous.

"Indeed he did, Ned. I saw his letter," said Freeda, coming to Ida's rescue.

"Uncle is queer in many ways. But I'm sure he wouldn't print my verses just on account of relationship."

"Are you sure?" asked Edward, reading the verses. He began reciting them aloud, and Miss Seton interrupted the reading by suddenly snatching the paper away from him.

"It makes no difference, sir," she said, holding the paper behind her and still laughing at his apparent astonishment over the whole affair. "The promise you made Freeda was $1 apiece to any of us who had an article accepted and paid for. There was nothing said about the kind of paper, or who owned it, or the price paid, was there, Freeda?"

"No, not a thing."

"I didn't say anything about verses, though," said Edward, trying to be bold.

"Fie, Ned! That isn't like you, trying to get out on a technicality!"

"Anyhow, it seems to me like imposing on me to make me pay $1 for 50 cent poetry. Paid for in postage stamps at that!"

"Poetry has gone up since I wrote that. There's a trust been formed in Hope, and we're going to buy out all the little poets among the boys," said Miss Seton, smiling.

"I don't believe in trusts, and I shall fight this one," replied Edward, grinning. "I'll pay the dollar all right. It will serve you right to print the verses in The College Journal and make people read them."

"I'm sure it won't hurt them any more than the reading of your article in yesterday's issue. Miss Field had a sick headache after reading it, and I heard of several other girls who were unable to attend afternoon classes on account of it," she retorted.

Edward did not reply to this thrust, which was in keeping with the conversational habits of many of the girls in the hall.

"I might as well pay now," he said soberly as he rose to go. He gave each of the girls a dollar, and they accepted with merry thanks.

When he had gone out, Miss Seton sobered down quite suddenly.

"Do you think I hurt his feelings by what I said about his article?" she asked rather slowly and eyed Freeda thoughtfully.

"Of course not. Ned understood your nonsense."

"I don't think he did," replied Miss Seton positively. "He takes most everything seriously."

"But he isn't slow in that sense," said Freeda, somewhat sharply for her.

"Maybe not, but he is very serious about most everything. When I told him the other night that I had given up the Sunday study, he looked as solemn as if something dreadful had happened. It would kill me to take everything as seriously as that."

"There's no danger of your dying suddenly, Ida," said Freeda as they went out of the parlor.

"And still," persisted Ida as if trying to defend her own lack of seriousness, "I don't object to it in other people. I like your brother a good deal better than the chattering, grinning kind, like Willis Preston. I think there is something very nice in your brother's sober face."

Freeda did not reply to this frank admission, and, after staying in the hall to chat with some newcomers a little while, she went up stairs. As she went into her room she wondered for the first time how she would feel if Ida and her brother should begin to like each other. It was only a momentary thought. The life of the students at Hope college was remarkably free from any foolish, sentimental or harmful lovemaking. The students had their social meetings frequently; they were constantly seeing one another in chapel, in the classroom and library and on the grounds, and, in general, there was a healthy, natural atmosphere about the relations that existed between them that was the best possible argument for the co-educational idea, so far as this particular part of it was concerned. Perhaps President Royce expressed the truth about it best when he said once, in answer to a question put to him by a visiting stranger who was unfamiliar with the student life of America: "The fact is, there is no more lovemaking among the boys and girls in our co-educational schools than there is among the same boys and girls as they meet in one another's home outside of college. And the fact is, also, that most of them are too busy with the regular work of the college course to contract engagements or to act in anyway so as to interfere seriously with the purpose for which they are here. The association of the students in the college is based upon healthy, natural, frank associations, exactly the same that exist in any circle of neighborhood families in a Christian community of the United States where boys and girls grow up together without restraint and in a freedom which is seldom abused."

While all this was emphatically true, so true that only once or twice in the history of the college had anything happened that even the enemies of a coeducational idea could quote against it, at the same time the president knew that, with several hundred students together in the institution, it would be very remarkable if some of them did not occasionally find a warm friendship or acquaintance ripening into something more serious. But it is safe to say that he was thoroughly surprised that winter at an event which opened his eyes to one side of the student life as he had never seen it before.

It was fully three months after the debate, and Edward was developing in many ways with a rapidity that he himself was not conscious of. His naturally slow, dogged, somewhat phlegmatic temperament was changing under the influences of his training. His mind was more alert, his faculties becoming more ripe in their powers, his acquisitive faculties growing in capacity as well as in active perception. With all this he had developed even further yet, if possible, the qualities of obstinate determination, and his real love for the truth was no less mingled with his consciousness of moral uprightness. He was apparently no nearer a positive decision as to the personal Christian life. His satisfaction with himself was as strong as ever. If the result of the debate had humbled his intellectual pride at the time, his moral pride had not been touched or lessened.

It was therefore an event to him of far-reaching seriousness when, late in the spring, he began slowly, but none the less surely, to realize that he was thinking a good deal more about Miss Seton than about his college work. He had never cared for girls, and now that he began to think of this one he was troubled about it. The change in him was gradual. He had met her with Freeda, naturally, oftener than he met the other girls. He liked her bright, almost impertinent, remarks even when they were directed against himself.

Edward greeted the visitor warmly.

(To be continued.)

Protestants have grown sufficiently strong in Cuba to hold the first General Conference. This Conference has just been held in Cienfuegos on February 18th, 19th, and 20th, and was attended by one or more representatives of general missionary societies from this country. Every Protestant interest on the island sent delegates. These are the Baptists, North and South, the Methodists, North and South, the Presbyterians, North, the Episcopalians, the Disciples of Christ, the Friends, the Congregationalists and the Lutherans. Matters of vital interest to all, as literature, comity, attitude toward Roman Catholics, education and missions, were on the programme for discussion.—Ram's Horn.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH.—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✦ ✦ THREE COURSES. ✦ ✦

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications.

GENERAL BOARD WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

The proceedings of this Board, which met in Richmond April 18th-23d, have been detailed in the daily papers and in the Richmond Christian Advocate. An account of the routine of work will not be attempted here, but an effort will be made to treat of the departments and their enterprises.

CUBAN WORK—SCHOOLS.

Ruth Hargrove Seminary, Key West.—This has primary, intermediate grammar, and academic courses. A certificate of graduation from it will admit the student to Emory College. This year, for the first time, there will be a graduating class—six in number. Like all growing institutions, it has many needs. The superintendent asked for $4,432 for the expenses of the coming year. The grade of work done by the pupils rises each year. In addition to the other class work, the teachers conduct two Sunday schools, an Epworth League, and a missionary society, and do a great deal of house-to-house visiting among the Cuban families.

Wolfe Mission School, Ybor City, established 1892.—During the past year this school has suffered by the strike of the Cuban cigarmakers. The manufacturers were determined to break the union, the Cubans vowed they would return to Cuba rather than yield, and thousands of them did return. Those who stay, suffered for food and shelter. Only Wolfe Mission held its own through the strike. Now the school is in once more. Two native Bible women are at work, and a weekly prayer-meeting is held in a Cuban home.

West Temple Mission, established 1892, Miss Emelina Valdez in charge.—This school also suffered from the prolonged strike. There is a missionary society and Epworth League, to each of which all the children belong.

Total number of teachers in the schools, 14; scholars, 403. Total appropriation needed, $6,099.

PACIFIC COAST WORK—ORGANIZED 1897.

Japanese Schools at San Francisco, Alameda and Oakland, Cal.—The boys are employed all day, so the teaching is done at night. The pupils attend regularly and study faithfully. The Japanese merchants approve the enterprise. Of course every boy wishes to learn English. One superintendent says: "Our course is varied according to the needs and desire of pupils. Generally the demand is for English, ranging from first readers to Macaulay's Essays. Frequently, however, we have pupils who want help in arithmetic and grammar, and occasionally those who want help in some text-books bearing upon the special line of life-work for which the student is preparing."

There is always a Bible lesson, the Bible in Japanese being referred to if the student cannot understand the English. There is always a Sunday evening meeting, called Sunday school, to which the pupils often bring friends, who cannot attend the classes of the week. For this meeting, and for other work, a pastor speaking Japanese is needed.

The teaching of the classes is done by public school teachers, who give their services for a small sum per month. Nine hundred and ten dollars were appropriated for salaries and rents, and $1,000 per year for the pastor to the mission, if one can be found.

Chinese Mission School, Los Angeles.—During last summer so many Chinese were deported, so few came in, and those who were in the city were so disturbed, that the school almost failed for want of material to work upon. Since then an afternoon school has been opened, with good results. There is a mission society of twenty-seven members in the school. One educated Chinaman, converted to Christianity by the teaching in the mission, has returned to China to teach his new religion to his own people. One evening during the Chinese new year a student took the teacher out to "see the sights." In one house she saw eight gorgeously dressed little slave girls, in a corner awaiting the orders of their keeper. Two little girls of eight years old were exposed for sale at another time by their parents, and were bought by Christian people for $40 each, and placed in school under the supervision of the missionary teacher. Three hundred and eighty dollars were appropriated to the school at Los Angeles.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

Sue Bennett Memorial School, London, Ky.—Enrollment to April 1st, 239. In attendance during fall term, 131; during winter term, 225; entered on scholarships, 7; assisted from student's loan fund, 5; received tuition in return for services, 5; received from fees and room rents, $3,250. The pupilage is smaller than last year, but the income is larger because more of the students are in the academic department, in which the fees are higher.

An outbreak of small-pox in the town frightened away a number of students. The faculty consists of a principal and eight teachers. The school ranks with a good city high school. The teaching is thorough, and every effort is made to develop Christian character in the student. A large majority of the students are teachers of mountain schools, and the course at London fits them to stand well in county examinations. Two thousand dollars and fees were appropriated for the support of the London school this year.

Flat Top Coal Mines, W. Va.—Established November, 1901. The West Virginia coal mining district is very densely populated. The "operations" are close together, and the whole district is lighted by electricity. The miners work long hours and make good wages. When a boy can make money so rapidly the great temptation to his father is to take him from school and put him in the mines. The miners do not need material help, but they do need to learn to save their income and to be taught that there are other things at least as big as a dollar. Neither do they save the best there is in their children, allowing them to work early and late in the mines. It seems like the story of the western mines retold; life, physical, mental or spiritual, is held of little account, the dollar is paramount. The presiding elder of the district in which most of the operations are located is greatly interested in the effort to help the miners. The operators themselves have helped in all ways that they could. A missionary is located at Eckman, and can also reach Keystone and Norwood. She visits the miners' families in their homes, gathers their children into Sunday schools, and has founded one or two night schools. The miners could afford to pay a fee for the teaching of their children at night, but it is very difficult to get the children to attend; those who work all day are tired, and only a few know that mental culture is worth striving for. They must be made to wish for knowledge before they will even come to school. The two young women missionaries are making headway slowly, and the managers of the enterprise are not at all discouraged.

RESCUE WORK.

Ann Browder Cunningham Mission Home and Training School, Dallas, Texas.—Established 1893. This is a home and school for girls rescued from infamous lives. They are taught the domestic arts, a hall especially designed for that purpose being now nearly finished. They learn cooking, laundry work and sewing, including a course in dressmaking for those adapted to it. The teacher of dressmaking prepared herself by a course of training at a ladies' tailoring school in St. Louis, and the work turned out by the girls under her direction is the best. The income last year from cooking, laundry and dressmaking was $510. The girls are encouraged to read good literature, and there are afternoon classes for those who must have more scholastic training. An effort is made to develop the Christian life in each one. One hundred and one girls were inmates of the home during the year; only one was dismissed and returned to her evil ways. It is hoped that the industries may be so developed as to render the home largely self-supporting. The report says: "The girls are kept busy washing, ironing, quilting, cooking, general sewing, housework, sawing wood, and so on." There is not room for all the girls who would enter and learn a respectable means of support. Too much cannot be said in commendation of this common sense method of teaching the better way. Money appropriated to the home, $3,976.

CITY MISSIONS.

The Board has missions in Nashville, Kansas City, Atlanta, Macon, New Orleans, Fort Worth, Portsmouth, Va., Houston, and in Norfolk. Nashville has a settlement house with two young women in it; they conduct a kindergarten and various clubs and classes in the evening for older children. The work is growing rapidly, because so many good women are ready to help the missionaries. Atlanta has a kindergarten and day nursery in seven rooms of a large building upon a factory lot. The missionary can be helpful to the people in many ways; here, too, the women of the city help in the work, and much more can be done than if they thought their service rendered when they had listened to the monthly report of the missionary. Macon, Ga., has a Door of Hope, in which girls are sheltered until a safe home can be found for them. New Orleans has a city mission in an old-fashioned dwelling on Tchoupitoulas street. It is not called a settlement, but it is such, for the missionary makes it a daily lesson of cleanliness and peace to all come. She has sewing classes for little girls and there are frequent prayer-meetings in the chapel. In Fort Worth work is among the very poor of the river bottoms. It consists largely of friendly visiting, Bible reading and teaching. Portsmouth mission work chiefly in sewing schools and visiting. The sewing school organized by the missionary has been supplemented by one founded by the Home Mission Society of one of the churches. Norfolk has a small settlement, with sewing and basket classes, evening entertainments, and a weekly prayer-meeting. The missionary now lives near the mission, and finds her influence with the people greatly increased by being resident among them.

The form of the mission work varies with the needs of the field. It is always stronger and more helpful to the people concerned when the people of the local churches are willing to give something of themselves as well as their money to it.

The Board spent a large proportion of its time listening to reports from people in actual city mission service, and in considering methods of work.

It will be observed that there are schools in four departments—the urban, Pacific Coast, mountain, and rescue work; the idea is growing that some way or other these schools must be included in a department of education. No definite plan was proposed but the matter of putting them all under the general supervision of some man who should not be employed by any one of them was thoroughly considered, and there is little doubt that before many years have passed that will all be overlooked and systematized by a sort of chancellor. Almost every department of the work of the Board is in the condition of a strong and rapidly growing boy, goodly to look upon, promising and—awkward. The development has been so rapid that it could not be healthy and be otherwise. The membership has the good sense to give the enterprises room to grow, and not to hamper any of them by hard and fast rules.

A year ago a fund was begun to build a hall of domestic arts at the Institute, Atlanta. The $5,000 needed is almost all in, and the building will be put up this summer. The Board appropriated $1,000 for furnishings and $1,000 for the salaries of teachers.

During last year the general treasurer received from all sources a total of $50,383.39, and came to the annual meeting with a balance of over $50,000 to the credit of the Board. More than $31,000 was at the disposal of the finance committee; $20,329.76 were received from the membership dues alone.

The Mission Board is a body of so many wise and cultured women, representing every Conference in the Methodist Church, South. Most of them, in so many capacities, have watched over the Home Mission work from its beginning until now. The Southern woman is not supposed to be independent in her thinking, least of all if she belongs to a church society; these are Church women and Southern women, too, most independent in thought, and lady with pointed speech.

On Friday evening, in Broad-Street church, stereopticon pictures of the various enterprises, and the workers, were shown and explained by Mrs. MacDonald.

On Sunday evening Dr. Baldwin, of North Carolina, discussed some aspects of the factory problem in the South. He has studied the matter for some time, and has many interesting facts at his command. The factory questions came up for discussion in the board meetings, and received grave attention. All seemed to feel the need of a better understanding of present conditions.

On Monday evening Dr. Graham Taylor spoke on "The Social Incarnation." He explained how his attention had first been attracted to the degraded of Chicago, and how deeply he had thought upon their condition for two years, deciding at last that he ought to move to the river district, and help them by being their good neighbor. He gave a thrilling history of his experiences, from the day his little daughter saw a mother throw a brick at her child, to the day just past, when the men he and his friends have taught and helped up made an honest election possible in the ward. It is said that when Dr. Taylor rented the ramshackle, rat-haunted old building which housed the first Chicago Commons, his landlord, a nearby saloon keeper, asked him what he meant to do with it. "I mean to live in it with my family," replied this knight of the twentieth century. "I've heard of such things," the man said reverently, "but never expected to see them." Now there are eighteen people in residence, and a large waiting list. Wealthy people are glad to pay their own expenses for the privilege of living with and learning from this teacher of the Christ incarnate, whom some others, spiritually near-sighted, are pleased to call heretic.

Tuesday night was given up to a business meeting, and on Wednesday afternoon the Board adjourned.

"Too much cannot be said in praise of the generous hospitality of the ladies of Richmond; if they left unturned any one whose turnings would have given additional pleasure, we none of us knew it. The weather was also all that could be wished; the week's work was done without the slightest jar or unpleasantness. If the Richmond women are tired, they should also be happy, for they have given great pleasure to many people.

M. C. FAVILLE.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONS.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Virginia Conference convened at Blackstone on April 24th, closing 25th.

We were met at the depot by a committee of ladies and gentlemen, who kindly conducted us to our homes, where a most cordial greeting awaited us. We at once felt the influence of Christian hospitality, and realized that the annual meeting of the previous year had not made a mistake in coming at Blackstone.

The meeting was called to order at 10 A. M. by the president, Mrs. W. J. Young. After appropriate devotional exercises the roll was called. Five Conference officers, six district secretaries, and twenty-one delegates answered to their names. The body was welcomed to Blackstone by the pastor, Rev. George F. Green and Miss Blackwell, of the Institute. Miss Butcher, of Petersburg responded in a graceful and happy manner. Business was then taken up.

A communication from Rev. James Cannon was read, expressing regret at his unavoidable absence, which was much regretted by all, and a resolution to that effect was unanimously adopted by the body.

The corresponding secretary's report showed an increase of three new Auxiliaries and a net gain of 222 members. The treasurer reported upwards of $1,000 gain over last year. Most of the Auxiliaries reported good work for the year. Some had done exceedingly well, which fact greatly encouraged us all. We are growing slowly, and we believe surely.

Rev. J. T. Mastin, financial agent of the Orphanage, spoke to us in the interest of that greatly needed work in our Conference. Our hearts go out after the fatherless and motherless in our midst. But, my sisters, we must not stop here; it is not the orphan only that needs your help. There are hundreds of boys and girls in the sound of our church bells who are growing up with no religious training whatever. How to reach these is the burden on our hearts. We must do something, as the next generation will be largely more Church going.

It was our pleasure to have with us Mrs. R. N. McDowell, of Nashville, who is our general secretary. Her timely advice and explanations greatly aided us. Dr. W. W. Lear, of Richmond, preached our annual sermon, taking Rom. 16: 1 as his text. His remarks were full of encouragement, showing from God's own word that woman was filling her rightful place in rescuing the perishing and otherwise aiding in the betterment of humanity.

Our Norfolk and Portsmouth City Mission Boards have been organized, and the work grows. Two city missionaries have been employed. Good reports were also given by the ladies connected with the Methodist Institute in Richmond.

Friday afternoon the twelfth annual meeting closed with a prayer offered by the president, and that sweet old hymn, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

We shall always carry with us tender and loving memories of the meeting at Blackstone.

CALLIE DERLANCY.

FROM BROTHER KILBY.

No. III.

In view of what has been said in my previous letters, some one might ask if I favored giving up revival services, I answer, no, never. Every preacher ought at least once a year hold a series of meetings, and whether there are any conversions or not, they can but result in good to the Church in many ways; but for the sake of the cause, let the meetings be conducted in the best and most attractive manner. First of all, let the preacher arrange for the singing with a leader in charge, and let all the members of his choir, together with others from Sunday school and congregation who can sing be specially invited to take seats around the instrument, so that the singing may go with a snap. Poor singing will kill the meetings. Next, have a time to begin and a time to close, and don't, under any circumstances, wear the people out by allowing the meetings to drag. I know you cannot establish an iron-clad rule, so if there should be a great outpouring of the spirit and penitents continue to come, then keep the meeting up all night, if necessary, as there will be something to stay for, but I refer to the usual ordinary kind of meetings. Again, don't allow any one to talk the meetings to death; thirty minutes is long enough for the average revival sermons, perhaps twenty-five minutes would be better. Finish up the first part of the meeting in a reasonable time and extend the invitation at an early hour as possible, for then the real results are accomplished. What is the use of tiring the people before the best part of the meeting begins? If they are conducted somewhat as outlined above, the people will go away pleased and profited and will most likely tell some one the next day of the good time they had, and induce others to come; on the other hand, if they are bored, they will say nothing in its favor, and perhaps stay away themselves.

I shall never forget what occurred one night in the old Granby-Street M. E. church about twelve years ago while a series of meetings were being held. A fine looking, strange gentleman, past middle age, appeared one night at the meeting, and at the close he made himself known as Mr. Smith, being one of the Smith Bros., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., manufacturers of a celebrated brand of cough drops. He proved to be a genial, warm-hearted Christian gentleman, and after having prayed on several occasions, the preacher in charge asked him to make a talk, which he did for about fifteen minutes. He took as his text "As Moses lifted up the rod in the wilderness," etc., and made the most practical, common sense talk it was ever my pleasure to hear, and at the close he extended a kind invitation. Immediately several middle aged business men went forward, followed by a number of other persons, and the meeting that night was a grand success. I have often thought if we could have more talks of that character, greater results would follow. So much for the meetings, but that is not all. Let the minister at least once a quarter ask the Sunday school teachers to furnish him with the names and addresses of every unconverted member of their classes. Then visit them at once, take a kindly interest in them, and in every way make himself agreeable; perhaps it would be best to say nothing on the first round about their salvation, but call again soon, ask them to join a class, train, indoctrinate, and gradually lead them into the church. It might be well to have two classes, one for adults and one for younger persons. Next, let him extend a warm and cordial invitation to all persons in his congregation who are not members of any church to come and shake hands with him after service, making the invitation so pressing that no one can fail to see that he is in earnest. Be sure to have some one by him to take down the names and addresses as he shakes their hands. Perhaps some may not come; well, have some slips printed and distributed in the seats and ask all who do not care to come, to sign one of the slips and leave it with the ushers as they pass out. Repeat this as often as necessary. I throw out these suggestions, but perhaps there may be a better way to get at them; if so, adopt the better way by all means. Now, having obtained the names, proceed as he did with the Sunday school scholars.

I steadfastly believe that the minister who honestly and persistently carries out these simple suggestions will be able to show at the end of the Conference year a large number of members received on profession of faith, and they will be members who are likely to stick; besides, he will find that the people thus visited will be greatly pleased because of the attention shown them. If a plan something like this is adopted it will doubtless bring in more members than can be secured by revival efforts.

Now, in conclusion, let me say that these thoughts have been buzzing in my head for many days, and somehow I could not get rid of them until I decided to write them down, so I have followed this pressure that came upon me from somewhere, and give them for what they are worth, with the hope that some good may be the outcome, and with the kindest greeting for my brethren of the ministry, whom I hold in high esteem.

THE SUPPLY DEPARTMENT OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

In the Methodist Church there are more than a thousand charges where the salaries of the preachers range from one hundred dollars to three hundred dollars. Many of the pastors of these charges have families, and a knowledge of these inadequate conditions led the good women of the Woman's Home Mission Society to establish a "Supply Department," by which these meagre salaries might be supplemented. Through the wisely directed efforts of the superintendent, assisted by the presiding elders, the name of every man in each Conference needing help can be secured. A blank asking for specific information concerning the family, number of children, their sex and age, is sent to the mother. When this is returned the superintendent sends to some willing Auxiliary, and under the supervision of one or two wise-headed women the box is carefully and quietly made up and sent out. The value of supplies thus sent out since the creation of this department twelve years ago is $44,921. Hundreds would have suffered and endured in silence but for this ministry of immediate relief. Mrs. J. H. Yarbrough, of Nashville, Tenn., has been the superintendent of this department since its creation. She is the youngest daughter of the late Dr. J. B. McFerrin, of sacred memory, and, like her father, is gifted in mind and heart.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 18.

Text of the Lesson. Acts xiii. 1-12.
Memory Verses. 2, 3—Golden Text.
Matt. xxviii. 19—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

1. Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers.

Then follow the names of Barnabas and three others and Saul. Barnabas and Saul, having continued a whole year at Antioch teaching much people, were afterward sent to Jerusalem with the offering for the needy brethren in Judaea (xi. 26-30). In due time they returned, having fulfilled their mission and brought with them John Mark, son of Mary, Barnabas' sister, at whose house the prayer meeting had been held on behalf of Peter (chapter xii, 12, 25; Col. iv, 10).

2. As they ministered to the Lord and fasted the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

To stand before God and serve Him and minister unto Him (II Chron. xxix, 11) should be the attitude and daily life of every Christian, the most ordinary work of the daily routine done to His glory (I Cor. x, 31). As Barnabas and Saul lived this consecrated life, with fasting, giving more attention to the soul than the body, the Holy Spirit calls them to a special work which He has for them (Eph. ii, 10). There is Wash. rest in allowing God to manage us night.

East Hal. when they had fasted and prayed 25th. their hands on them they sent South Boston indulgence of the body in 12. not consistent with a holy life. That which is sufficient for health God will bless. But the health of the soul—communion with God, a delight in His will and readiness to do it, filled with His Spirit for His service—if this is earnestly desired it will be ours (Ps. cxlv, 19), and we shall be channels whereby God reveals Himself.

4. So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia, and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

Like Moses leading Israel or building the tabernacle, or like David giving Solomon the plans for the temple, or like Noah building the ark, they have no say in the matter, but are wholly under the guidance and control of the Holy Spirit.

5. And when they were at Salamis they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews.

Salamis was at the end of Cyprus nearest to Seleucia, while Paphos of the next verse was at the western end. Their mission was by the word of God in the power of the Spirit to proclaim the good news concerning Jesus Christ, and at once they set about it, their regular custom being to begin with the Jews (Rom. i, 16; Acts iii, 26; xiii, 46).

6. And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus.

The devil has his servants everywhere, and they are not idle. If the servants of Christ were as busy sowing the good seed as the devil's servants are busy sowing tares, how much more quickly the gospel might be given to every creature!

7. The deputy of the country called for Barnabas and Saul and desired to hear the word of God. It is restful to know that where God wants His message proclaimed He will give an open door when no one can shut (Rev. iii, 8).

8. But Elymas the sorcerer withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

A preacher should know that if there is no resistance to his preaching it may be because the devil fears no harm to his kingdom from it, and he should consider and see if he is preaching that which God bids him in the power of the Holy Spirit.

9. Then Saul (who also is called Paul), filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him.

Here is a face to face encounter between a servant of Christ and a servant of Satan. Paul, filled with the Holy Ghost, reminds us that we are commanded to be filled with the Spirit (Eph. v, 18), and we should expect it to be always so with us, saying as Mary said, "Be it unto me according to Thy word" (Luke i, 38). This is the first time that Saul is called Paul, and it is interesting to notice that the deputy's name is Paulus.

10. O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

So Peter was enabled by the Spirit to read the hearts of Ananias and Sapphira (chapter v, 3, 9). Thus plainly Jesus spoke to the self righteous Jews, telling them that they were of their father the devil (John viii, 44). Some would say that this was not very liberal, but God gives no permission to be liberal with the devil or his doctrines.

11. And now behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season.

Immediately it came to pass as Paul by the Spirit said, and he sought for some one to lead him by the hand. His outward condition was now a sign of the condition of his soul; he was doubly blind.

12. Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

The sorcerer had probably surprised him by some wonderful things, but he had never seen anything like this. If we would commend Christ to others, it must be by such manifestation of His power in us as will make it clear that He is greater than Satan, that His joys are greater than those the world can give and that a life with Him is truly excellent.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 18, "Practical Consecration."

Text, Rom. xii, 1-21.

"That ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

Practical consecration must be based on real confidence, and that confidence must be in God as knowing what is good for us and as willing and working the good for us. Such trust does not come by chance, but by continued thinking, a sort of reasoning with oneself. There is a great deal of actual distrust of God among those who profess to love and serve Him. There is hesitation to take up a specified work or do a certain duty. Sometimes this shrinking arises from timidity, self distrust, but often it is from disguised indolence and a preference for ease. The suggested course seems disagreeable, and this weighs more than the fact of duty. What is needed then is to resolutely face the thing and find out if it ought to be done. No need of disguising or sugar coating the disagreeable part. Let that be clearly viewed and estimated at its full value. Then balance all the matters and let the value of right, duty, truth, have full weight.

Is there some cowardice in the matter? Is there preference of self before the approval of God?

Let the full force of God's love bear upon the heart. He knows what is good for us. He does guide safely. It is safe only to follow His guidance. We ought to commit all our ways to Him. As we hold our hearts close to His word and feel the power of the Holy Spirit as He applies it clearly to our needs we find the will to follow as He leads.

How full of practical suggestions is this Scripture lesson. It has meaning for every one.

First we need to learn that we are not all alike. Each differs from others, but all are needed to make the perfect body and perform the needed work. That fact realized will keep us from either pride or discouragement as we discover that we are unlike others and cannot do as they do. It will keep us from fault-finding and undue independence and aloofness from those with whom we should have companionship. We all are one body, so we all should work together or we will never get anywhere. And I must do my work well or I shall hinder all the rest. Do it not for their praise, but for the sake of Jesus, whether any one else appreciates it or not. In doing it I should love simply, transparently and not in make believe fashion. That never means that I am to love a wrong thing or be friendly toward a bad thing. Love means a deep detestation of all falsity and evil and a whole souled sticking to the true and good. It is wholesome and clean and has no fellowship with tricks and subterfuges.

Practical consecration will take a back seat for self in order to let another take the better place. It will push another into honor rather than crowd him out to put self in. It is hopeful when things look black. It hangs on even when it hurts to hang on and helps when it costs heavy. It feels kindly to others. It honestly feels genuine kindness when they act meanly and try to injure. It shares joy and sorrow and feels with others and is not afraid or ashamed of such feelings. It makes manhood and womanhood genuinely noble and beautiful.

Tuned to Finer Issues.

Our spirits may always be tuned to finer issues. There is a kindly influence above and around us that always awaits the receptive soul. It has been felt in all ages by the rarest spirits. The poets have felt it; artists have felt it; the good have always felt it and named it with some angelic name. The heroic have been turned toward it. It has been known and recognized and has been unknown and unrecognized. It has always been breaking in upon the best order of souls and noble leaders of men with a more open and rare sensibility. It has been an inspiration and help to countless souls as they have struggled with the vicissitudes and have felt the burden of this unintelligible world. What shall we call it? What more significant name than that of the Divine Spirit, moving on the hearts of men to bring them into ultimate harmony with God, and thus to realize the great ends of a final and universal redemption?—Universalist Leader.

Prayer.

We ask for peace, O God!
Thy children ask Thy peace;
Not what the world calls rest,
That toil and care should cease.
That through bright sunny hours
Calm life should flee away
And tranquil night should fade
In shining day.
It is not for such peace that we would

We ask for peace, O God!
Yet not to stand secure,
Girt round with iron pride,
Contented to endure;
Crushing the gentle strings
That human hearts should know;
Untouched by others' joys
Or others' woe.
Thou, O dear Lord, wilt never let us so!

We ask Thy peace, O God,
Through storm and fear and strife
To light and guide us on Through a long, struggling life,
While no success or gain
Shall cheer the desperate fight
Or nerve what the world calls
Our wasted might,
Yet pressing through the darkness
the light.

It is Thine own, O God,
Who toil while others sleep;
Who sow, with living care,
What other hands shall reap;
They lean on Thee, entranced
In calm and perfect rest;
Give us that peace, O Lord,
Divine and blest,
Thou keepest for those hearts
love Thee best.
—"The Changed Cross"

DRINK AND BUSINESS

WORLD OF COMMERCE AROUSED HARMFUL EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL

So Declares the President of the National W. C. T. U. In Annual Report—Vast Revolution In Insurance Methods.

The report of the president of National Woman's Christian Temperance union, which was read at the cent annual convention at Fort Worth, Tex., contained many striking features. Among other things the report said:

The business world is aroused never before in regard to the harmful effects of drinking and smoking and the financial loss caused thereby. Increasing number of railroads are placing a ban upon these habits certainly encouraging to reformers now appears in the printed rules some of the great roads that the use of intoxicants by employees while duty is prohibited, their habitual or the frequenting of places where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal of employees and that use of tobacco by employees while duty in or about passenger station on passenger cars is prohibited.

The marked revolution in life insurance methods is worth noting. There was a time when special premiums were demanded of total abstainers the assumption that they were not healthy, were not as likely to live were drinkers. Now not only in country, but in Great Britain, there are companies which issue policies to total abstainers in separate sections that if they really do live longer temperance people claim, they will a larger share in the profits, and it already been proved that the risk of total abstainers are the superior large per cent.

The declarations of medical experts on alcohol also furnish great encouragement to the temperance reformer who has long and imploringly looked for co-operation and help from this influential source.

At the Vienna congress celebrated physicians, some of them connected with insane asylums and inebriate institutions, agreed that from a medical standpoint alcohol is not a stimulant, is not a food, is not even the best sort of a stimulant.

Plato's philosophy expressed in following declaration is true to-day, viz, "That the citizen cannot be happy without equitable legislation existing in the city, that the best erned city, the one which furnishes the best home for men, is that city in which all the citizens rejoice or are made sad by the same things and that the sum of misery is attained when the same things work to the profit of some and to the misery of others."

We of the white ribbon army know there is nothing which produces so much misery for multitudes and so much profit for others—looking at the profit from the short sighted human standpoint—as does the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquor, and we confidently believe the only way to overthrow the liquor traffic is through state and national prohibition.

QUAINT SIGNBOARDS.

Some Odd Inscriptions Relating to Temperance Public Houses.

In the course of his contributions on temperance topics to a London contemporary a leading temperance advocate quotes the following quaint descriptions on temperance signboards.

The signboard, he writes, has long played a prominent part in the trade of the publican. Temperance caterers have not done much in this direction. In the early days of the "public house without the drink" the following lines were frequently met with:

A public house without the drink,
Where men may read and smoke and think,
Then sober home return!

A temperance house in a Surrey village exhibits the following:

Wear traveler, step within;
No temptation here to sin.
Wholesome viands here are sold,
Quite refreshing, hot and cold,
Tea and coffee, water clear,
Lemonade and ginger beer,
Books and papers you will find
To cheer and elevate the mind.

A Railroad Official's Wisdom.

Strictures on the drinking man, especially in the railroad business, are growing every year, and the man of convivial habits is having his field of usefulness narrowed very materially. All great railroad systems have stringent rules against employees, especially trainmen, drinking intoxicating liquors during working hours, and now one road has come to the front and declared against its employees using liquor at any time or any place. W. A. Edwards, superintendent of the eastern division of the Chicago Great Western railroad, with headquarters at Dubuque, Ia., has issued an order prohibiting the men under his charge from using liquor at any time or place.

What Beer Drinking Does.

In appearance, says The Scientific American, the beer drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, a severe cold or a shock to the body or mind will commonly provoke acute disease, ending fatally. Compared with inebriates who use different kinds of alcohol, he is more incurable and more generally diseased.

Teaching Temperance to Children.

Every state in the Union but one has adopted scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, so that these great truths are taught to about 16,000,000 children.

Many Swiss Die From Drink.

It is said that in Switzerland every tenth death is caused by excessive drinking.

Whoever loves in us our beauty of soul loves us truly.—St. Ambrose.

I Know One Sure Remedy
for an obstinate cold. Its name is Pyral-Balm.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of
PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE
Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package.
Sold everywhere.
STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK & WESTERN
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, AND
NORTH CAROLINA.
Shenandoah Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE
SLEEPERS.
LURAY GROTTOES
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS
NORFOLK
ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLUMBUS
AND THE NORTHWEST.
Write for Rates, Maps, Time Tables, Sleeping Car
Reservations, Descriptions, Pamphlets to any Agent for W.B. BEVILL, ALLEN, E. F. BRAGG,
GENERAL PASS AGENTS, DIVISION PASSENGER & TRAVELING PASS AGT
ROANOKE, VA. CHILLICOTHE, VA. CHILLICOTHE, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.
Capital, $57,000; Surplus, $15,500.
W. H. MANN,
President.
J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.
JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.
GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.
Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All Prescriptions compounded by experienced Druggists

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than ..... 4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 ..... 3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory.
policies with them.

H.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the north side of the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va. Blackstone, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE.

STIFF NECK,

STIFF MUSCLES,

STIFF JOINTS,

STIFF KNEES,

SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,

PAIN IN THE BACK,

PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,

PAIN IN THE SIDE,

CORNS AND BUNIONS,

For

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY
METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.

Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Sledd Memorial, May 11th, 11 A. M.
Cabell Street, May 11th, at night.
Mt. Vernon, May 18th, 11 A. M.
Kington Street, May 18th, at ifax, Concord, May 24th,

May 25th, at night.

Loydton, May 28th, at night.
Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st,
June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30
P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June
5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June
7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.
Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville,
June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.
Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.
Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.
Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.
Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July
26th, 27th.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

West-Street, May 4th, night.
Washington-Street, May 11th, morning.

Wesley, May 11th, night.
Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.
High-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blanford, May 25th, night.
Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Re- corder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of
ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year.
The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Record- er,

The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder
and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-
15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d,
morning.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-
29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night;
7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July
12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th,
afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July
18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-
20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th,
morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th,
afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-
10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August
10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

Many of the misfits and failures in both the spiritual and the material of life are due to doing the right thing—but just a little too soon or a little too late.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

(Continued from 1st page.)

tabled almost unanimously. I analyze the vote, as follows:

1. Numbers were not willing to condemn the Agents at all, believing, with Dr. Lafferty, that Dr. Barbee was a minister "against whom no just word of reproach could be uttered."

2. Some said by vote you have condemned the Midland Methodist for agitation, why then agitate?

3. Others said by vote the resolution is not strong enough; a spade should be called a spade. As to a number of side influences, it is not proper now to speak. Holstein Conference ought to have put itself on record as denouncing the methods that were used to keep the Senate from knowing that a game of champerly was being played; and that a lobbyist was to get the meagre little sum of $100,800 for his pious services.

I have sufficient confidence in the piety of the Church and the honesty of the General Conference to cause me to believe that the fraud will be denounced and the money returned.

I have no axe to grind. I have everything to lose at present and nothing to gain by agitation, but I am ready to lose all, even life itself, in the cause of righteousness.

My handwriting is very bad, and the fewest printers can print a whole article of mine accurately. Permit me to reconstruct two of the "granules" of your issue of April 24th. They were intended to read:

"Men often indulge in a bad spirit in a good cause. This is burning strange incense to the Lord."

"Verily, the sycophant and truckling rascal has his reward; but his success is only bloat."

The immense attendance at the Confederate reunion in Dallas, Texas., estimated at one hundred and twenty-five thousand delegates and visitors, is an indication of the spirit of the South.
It means that we are not ashamed of the record we made in the war of the States; that we still honor the lost cause; that we are not ashamed of having fought for the principles of the Constitution—the compact under which the Union was formed, and without which it would not have been formed.

But that such a meeting could be held in the United States without molestation is evidence that we live in a free country; such an assemblage would have been prohibited in Russia.
I am proud of living in a country where the people are king.

REV. LEROY M. LEE, D. D.—A SHORT SKETCH.

BY REV. CHAS. H. BOGGS.

Amongst the men "who wrought well and nobly for the upbuilding of Methodism in Virginia there was no more powerful factor than Rev. Leroy M.
Lee D. D., who laid his life and splendid talents upon the altar of Christ.
As a preacher, he had few, if any, equals in the Virginia Conference.
Bishop George F. Pierce said on one occasion he "thought Dr. Lee the greatest preacher in Southern Methodism."

His exposition of the Scriptures were beautiful and clear in their simplicity.
Many souls, led to Christ through his instrumentality, have greeted him in heaven. Frequently souls were happily converted in the congregation

while he was delivering his message.
As the editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate for many years, he was easily "primus inter pares," and exerted an influence greater than any weekly journal of the Church. He stood for the support and defence of "the faith once delivered to the saints," as held by the M. E. Church, South, and woe to the man who dared assail his Church, either in its polity or doctrines. As a controversialist, Dr. Lee was without a peer in the Virginia Conference, and perhaps in our entire Church.

He wrote several books—"Advice to Young Converts," "The Life and Times of Jepee Lee," "The Great Supper Not Calvinistic," etc. If his editorials could be properly compiled they would make an interesting volume. Although he might be termed a self-made man, his writing was correct and clear his style elevated and pure. He told me that he never rewrote nor corrected his manuscript; that the life of his uncle—Jepee Lee—when being printed, the proofs being submitted to him for correction, were returned to the printer without any change.

In private and social life he was genial and captivating. Many a home was gladdened and benefited by his visits. He loved children, and was the true friend of young preachers, their advocate and counsellor. "We never shall see his like again."

THE CHILDREN CANNOT WAIT.

The children of to-day will be our men and women of to-morrow. Their opportunity for gaining knowledge is fast fleeting. Once it is gone, it will be gone forever. They can't wait. What we do for them must be done quickly.
The hope of Virginia rests and must rest upon the education of her young people, says the Fredericksburg, Va., Free Lance. Education is the only means of elevating and broadening the individual. The constant elevating of the individual through the process of education is the only means by which we can hope to elevate and expand the business and social interests of our State. The day has passed when to simply know something about the "three R's" will suffice. The world is moving rapidly. Times are constantly changing and with these changes come increasing demands for knowledge.
Neglect the education of the young today, and we seriously handicap them for the life to-morrow.

The Southern Farm Magazine is entirely correct when it says: "Now and then an invention in education is offered. It is at first supposed to be something entirely new. Investigation, however, shows that it offers no chance of reform, which must begin by placing the best teachers, and, consequently, the most expensive teachers, in the primary grades."

There is no solution of the problem of right education except through competent teachers, men and women of good sense, strong characters, culture and refinement. And the best of these must be placed in the schools where the masses of children are—in the primary schools. Cost money? Of course it will. But what else is our money for except for the good of our children?

Religious News.

REVIVAL AT WRIGHT MEMORIAL.

Sunday was an eventful day in the history of Wright Memorial church. The revival fire which has been burning upon the altars of this church broke out afresh in the Sunday school, and eight scholars consecrated hearts and lives to Jesus Christ.

At the morning service the pastor, Rev. G. H. McFaden, baptized twenty-two and received into church membership thirty-two members.

There was one profession at this service, and many requests for the prayer of God's people.

At the evening service the church was taxed to its utmost seating capacity, many being unable to gain admittance. Nine new members were received during the day. At this service Rev. A. L. Franklin preached with great power, and as a result fourteen precious souls came forward and found peace in Jesus the Saviour. Many heads of families were converted. It was a touching scene when husband and wife and daughter knelt together at the altar.

The meeting will continue through the week. Rev. Mr. Franklin, who is assisting the pastor, is a gifted and eloquent divine, and has before him a bright future.—Landmark.

LAID TO REST.

The funeral of Rev. H. C. Cheatham at Cumberland Street Methodist church Sunday afternoon was attended by a vast concourse of the friends of the deceased minister. Seventeen of the active ministers of the Virginia Conference in this city and section occupied seats in the pulpit and chancel.

The services at the church were conducted by Rev. C. L. Bane, Rev. W. R. Proctor, Rev. J. K. Jolliff, Rev. Ernest Stevens, and Rev. John W. Crider. Rev. Dr. S. S. Lambeth, a life-long friend of Mr. Cheatham, having entered the ministry with him, and Rev. C. L. Bane delivered beautiful and eloquent tributes on his life work and character. During the service the following selections were rendered by the choir: "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord," "Servant of God, Well Done;" solo, "Some Sweet Day, Bye and Bye," and solo and chorus, "We'll Never Say Good-bye in Heaven," led by Mrs. Dr. Farmer. The casket was literally covered with the most beautiful flowers. The interment was in Elmwood Cemetery, the following members officiating at the grave: Rev. C. W. Cain, Rev. C. H. McGhee, Rev. J. B. Merritt, and Rev. C. L. Bane. Following were the pallbearers: Rev. R. H. Bennett, Rev. W. Asbury Christian, W. W. Vicar, Frank Dusch, William F. Gregory, James E. Whitehurst, L. L. Hodges, and Captain M. J. Vellines.—Virginian-Pilot.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

In the absence of the president of the Methodist Preachers' meeting of the city, Rev. Mr. Lipscomb, who has gone to Dallas, Texas, as a delegate to the General Conference, Rev. Mr. Guyer, vice-president, presided, and the opening prayer was made by Rev. E. P. Parham.

Rev. Mr. Comer gave an interesting account of the revival in progress at his church in Ettrick. Up to date over thirty additions have been made to the church membership there. The services continue this week.

From the other churches represented the usual reports were made. The spirit of brotherly love and mutual helpfulness is conspicuous here among our pastors. Yesterday a number of the brethren aided each other in the different churches. The work here continues to be encouraging and the pastors are happy and cheerful at the outlook. The absence of Revs. B. F. Lipscomb and S. C. Hatcher this morning was marked. They will attend the General Conference in Dallas, Texas. Some interesting things were said touching preaching and texts, etc. It was remarked on that the present day style of preaching differs from that of olden days, but the Gospel has not lost its power over men. Plainness and simplicity in style and practical manner in presentation makes it win its way to men's hearts to-day.

A pleasant meeting and one that was helpful was held this morning.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

The president, Rev. W. R. Proctor, presided at the Methodist preachers' meeting yesterday morning. Prayer was made by Rev. A. F. Franklin, of the Danville district, preacher in charge of the Danville circuit.

The most interesting feature of the meeting was the memorial services held in honor of the late Rev. H. C. Cheatham, an honored member of the association.

This was preceded by the reading of the following preamble and resolutions by Rev. W. Asbury Christian, which were adopted by a rising vote:

"Again we have been called to stand by the open grave of a member of this body, and again do we come to honor the memory of our departed brother. Last Monday he was with us, to-day he is gone. But in the death of Henry Clay Cheatham we recognize the hand of God, for He touched and he slept. But we do not sorrow as those who have no hope; our hope is great, for we believe he is absent from the body, but present with the Lord. The Gospel of the Son of God gives us our assurance for the future. Our sorrow comes from the sundering of humanities; our comfort comes from the remembrance of the life that was lived among us. Brother Cheatham was a man of great faith, and from this emanated those strong traits of character that made his influence felt wherever he went. Unwavering in his faith in the 'Truth' and its final triumph, he was unwavering in his devotion to what he conceived to be true. In the departure of our brother, a brave man has left us, a devoted Christian has been transplanted, and a great preacher and faithful minister has finished his work. He wore the white flower of a blameless life through all this tract of years, but we cherish his memory and hold in honor his name.

"As a further expression of our appreciation and love, we present these resolutions:

"First. That we extend to the family of our brother our heartfelt sympathies, and pray that grace of God in our Lord Jesus Christ will comfort and sustain them.

"Second. That we request the Norfolk papers and the Church papers to publish this paper, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and that it be recorded upon our records.

"Third. That we appoint 11 o'clock to-day as the time for this preachers' meeting to hold a memorial service in honor of Brother Cheatham."

The hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung, and prayer was offered by Rev. W. P. Jordan.

Rev. J. B. Merritt spoke feelingly of Mr. Cheatham, saying that no truer or better man had ever lived; that he served the Church and his calling faithfully.

Rev. W. Asbury Christian spoke of his long knowledge and early association with the deceased, and said that the preciousness of his memory will never fade or grow old with him. Mr. Christian here related a touching incident which occurred at the funeral of his mother when he was only twelve years old, which occurred at Centenary Methodist church, Lynchburg, at which Mr. Cheatham officiated. He said that he was a man of great faith, and he shaped his whole life upon that faith. Whatever he conceived to be right he stood courageously for, even if it were at a personal loss or discomfort to himself. He was a preacher of great ability, and his holy, consecrated life and triumphant death has left a lasting influence for good upon the Church.

Eulogistic remarks on the character and life work of Mr. Cheatham of a most touching character were made by Revs. Daniel T. Merritt, George H. McFaden, John W. Crider, E. H. Rawlings, R. H. Bennett, Ernest Stevens, C. H. McGhee, George Wesley Jones and E. T. Dadmun, all of whom bore testimony to his faithful life as a Christian and his great ability as an expounder of the Word of God. A number of appropriate hymns were rendered during the most impressive service.

At the regular business meeting the following churches submitted brief reports through their several pastors:

Rev. C. W. Cain assisted Rev. E. H. Rawlings in the communion service Sunday at Monumental church and worshipped at the Court Street Presbyterian church at night.

Rev. C. L. Bane preached to the usual large congregation at Cumberland Street church and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to a large number of communicants, being assisted by Revs. J. W. Crider, C. W. Pettit, and Rev. Mr. Wray. He received two members by certificate and had one conversion at night.

Rev. J. W. Crider preached at Huntersville at night. He said that the church is deeply grieved on account of the death of their pastor and gave visible signs of their sorrow at the service. He said they were greatly endeared to Mr. Cheatham, and the members are desirous of getting a young man to serve the church for the remainder of the Conference year, so as to be able to divide a portion of the salary with the family of Mr. Cheatham.

At Owens' Memorial Rev. Ernest Stevens held the usual services morning and night.

Rev. A. W. Sharpe, of West End church, Hampton, was present. He reported a good year on his charge.

Rev. E. H. Rawlings received six new members at Monumental church.

Rev. N. R. Smith had a pleasant day at Oaklette. He received three new scholars in the Sunday school.

Rev. George W. Jones had very large congregations at Trinity and very pleasant services.

Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at Epworth morning and night Sunday and received three new members by certificate.

Rev. J. N. Latham, at Park Place, and Rev. W. Asbury Christian, at Memorial, had interesting services. The latter preached on "The Marriage Relations" at night.

Rev. W. T. Green reported a fine Sunday school at Central church. He preached to a large congregation in the morning, spoke at the Y. M. C. A. in the afternoon, and preached at Gilmer-ton at night. He received four members at Central church—two on profession of faith and two by certificate.

At Lambert's Point Rev. C. H. McGhee received six members on profession of faith, baptized two adults and one infant.

At Queen Street church Rev. J. K. Jolliff received three members on profession of faith and one by certificate.

McKendree—Rev. W. R. Proctor had large congregation to hear him and received four new members by certificate.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

That prayer of an unhappy queen: "Oh, keep me innocent! Make others great!" that prayer of a great saint: "Give me, O Lord, a noble heart, which nothing earthly can drag down!" that prayer of a sinful yet saintly king: "Teach me to do the thing that pleaseth Thee, for Thou art my God. Let Thy loving spirit lead me into the land of righteousness"—those are among the best prayers I know.—Canon Farrar.

WASHINGTON. In this subject Dr. Talmage puts a glow of gladness and triumph upon passages of life that are usually thought to be somewhat gloomy; text, Zechariah xiv, 7, "At evening time it shall be light."

While "night" in all languages is the symbol for gloom and suffering, it is often really cheerful, bright and impressive. I speak not of such nights as come down with no star pouring light from above or silvered wave tossing up light from beneath—murky, hurrying, portentous, but such as you often see when the pomp and magnificence of heaven turn out on night parade, and it seems as though the song which the morning stars began so long ago were chiming yet among the constellations and the sons of God were shouting for joy. Such nights the sailor blesses from the fore-castle, and the trapper on vast prairie, and the belated traveler by the roadside, and the soldier from the tent, earthly hosts gazing upon heavenly and shepherds guarding their flocks afield, while angel hands above them set the silver bells a-ringing. "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace; good will toward men."

What a solemn and glorious thing is night in the wilderness! Night among the mountains! Night on the ocean! Fragrant night among tropical groves! Flashing night amid arctic severities! Calm night on Roman campagna! Awful night among the cordilleras! Glorious night mid sea after a tempest! Thank God for the night! The moon and the stars which rule it are light-houses on the coast toward which I hope we are all sailing, and blind mariners are we if, with so many beaming, burning, flaming glories to guide us, we cannot find our way into the harbor.

My text may well suggest that, as the natural evening is often luminous, so it shall be light in the evening of our sorrows, of old age, of the world's history, of the Christian life. "At eventime it shall be light."

When the Sun Sets.

This prophecy will be fulfilled in the evening of Christian sorrow. For a long time it is broad daylight. The sun rides high. Innumerable activities go ahead with a thousand feet and work with a thousand arms, and the pickax struck a mine, and the battery made a discovery, and the investment yielded its 20 per cent, and the book came to its twentieth edition, and the farm quadrupled in value, and sudden fortune hoisted to high position, and children were praised, and friends without number swarmed into the family hive, and prosperity sang in the music and stepped in the dance and glowed in the wine and ate at the banquet, and all the gods of music and ease and gratification gathered around this Jupiter holding in his hands so many thunderbolts of power. But every sun must set, and the brightest day must have its twilight. Suddenly the sky was overcast. The fountain dried up. The song hushed. The wolf broke into the family fold and carried off the best lamb. A deep howl of woe came crashing down through the joyous symphonies. A one rough twang of the hand or disaster the harpstrings all broke. Down went the strong business firm! Away went long established credit! Up flew a flock of calumnies! The new book would not sell! A patent could not be secured for the invention! Stocks sank like lead! The insurance company exploded! "How much," says the sheriff, "will you bid for this piano? How much for this library? How much for this family picture? How much? Will you let it go at less than half price? Going—going—gone!"

Will the grace of God hold one up in such circumstances? What has become of the great multitude of God's children who have been pounded of the flail and crushed under the wheel and trampled under the hoof? Did they lie down in the dust, weeping, wailing and gnashing their teeth? Did they when they were afflicted like Job curse God and want to die? When the rod of fatherly chastisement struck them, did they strike back? Because they found one bitter cup on the table of God's supply, did they upset the whole table? Did they kneel down at their empty money vault and say, "All my treasures are gone?" Did they stand by the grave of their dead, saying, "There never will be a resurrection?"

Did they bemoan their thwarted plans and say, "The stocks are down; would God I were dead?" Did the night of their disaster come upon them moonless, starless, dank and howling, smothering and choking their life out? No, no! At eventide it was light. The swift promises overtook them. The eternal constellations, from their circuit about God's throne, poured down an infinite luster. Under their shining the billows of trouble took on crests and plumes of gold and jasper and amethyst and flame. All the trees of life rustled in the midsummer of God's love. The night blooming assurances of Christ's sympathy filled all the atmosphere with heaven. The soul at every step seemed to start up from its feet bright winged joys, warbling heavenward. "It is good that I have been afflicted!" cried David. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away!" exclaims Job. "Sorrowful, yet always rejoicing," says St. Paul. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes!" exclaims John in apocalyptic vision. At eventime it was light. Light from the cross! Light from the promises! Light from the throne! Streaming, joyous, outgushing, everlasting light!

The Glory of Old Age.

Again, the text shall find fulfillment in the time of old age. It is a grand thing to be young, to have the sight clear and the hearing acute and the step elastic and all our pulses marching on to the drumming of a stout heart. Midlife and old age will be denied many of us, but youth—we all know what that is. Those wrinkles were not always on your brow; that snow was not always on your head; that brawny muscle did not always bunch your arm; you have not always worn spectacles. Grave and dignified as you now are, you once went coasting down the hillside or threw off your hat for the race or sent the ball flying sky high. But youth will not always last. It stays only long enough to give us exuberant spirits and broad shoulders for burden carrying and an arm with which to battle our way through difficulties. Life's path, if you follow it long enough, will come under frowning crag and cross trembling causeway. Blessed old age, if you let it come naturally! You cannot hide it. You may try to cover the wrinkles, but you cannot cover the wrinkles. If the time has come for you to be old, be not ashamed to be old. The grandest things in all the universe are old—old mountains, old rivers, old seas, old stars and an old eternity. Then do not be ashamed to be old unless you are older than the mountains and older than the stars.

How men and women will lie! They say they are forty, but they are sixty. They say they are twenty, but they are thirty. They say they are sixty, but they are eighty. Glorious old age if found in the way of righteousness! How beautiful the old age of Jacob, leaning on the top of his staff; of John Quincy Adams, falling with the harness on; of Washington Irving, sitting, pen in hand, amid the scenes himself had made classical; of John Angell James, to the last proclaiming the gospel to the masses of Birmingham; of Theodore Frelinghuysen, down to feebleness and emaciation devoting his illustrious faculties to the kingdom of God. At eventide it was light!

See that you do honor to the aged. A philosopher stood at the corner of the street day after day, saying to the passersby: "You will be an old man; you will be an old man. You will be an old woman; you will be an old woman." People thought that he was crazy. I do not think that he was. Smooth the way for that mother's feet; they have not many more steps to take. Steady those tottering limbs; they will soon be at rest. Plow not up that face with any more wrinkles; trouble and care have marked it full enough. Thrust no thorn into that old heart; it will soon cease to beat. "The eye that mocketh its father and refuseth to obey its mother the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it." The bright morning and hot noonday of life have passed with many. It is 4 o'clock, 5 o'clock, 6 o'clock! The shadows fall longer and thicker and faster. Seven o'clock, 8 o'clock! The sun has dipped below the horizon; the warmth has gone out of the air. Nine o'clock, 10 o'clock! The heavy dews are falling; the activities of life's day are all hushed; it is time to go to bed. Eleven o'clock, 12 o'clock! The patriarch sleeps the blessed sleep, the cool sleep, the long sleep. Heaven's messengers of light have kindled bonfires of victory all over the heavens. At eventime it is light. Light.

The Latter Day of the Church.

Again, my text shall find fulfillment in the latter day of the church. Only a few missionaries, a few churches, a few good men, compared with the institutions leprous and putrified. It is early yet in the history of everything good. Civilization and Christianity are just getting out of the cradle. The light of martyr stakes, flashing up and down the sky, is but the flaming of the morning, but when the evening of the world shall come, glory to God's conquering truth, it shall be light. War's sword clanging back in the scabbard; intemperance buried under ten thousand broken decanters; the world's impurity turning its brow heavenward for the benediction, "Blessed are the pure in heart;" the last vestige of selfishness submerged in heaven descending charities and China worshipping Dr. Abee's Saviour; all India believing in Henry Martyn's Bible; aboriginal superstition acknowledging David Brainerd's piety; human bondage delivered through Thomas Clarkson's Christianity; vagrancy coming back from its pollution at the call of Elizabeth Fry's Redeemer; the mountains coming down; the valleys going up; "holiness" inscribed on horse's bell, and silkworm's thread, and brown thrasher's wing, and shell's tinge, and manufacturer's shuttle, and chemist's laboratory, and king's scepter, and nation's Magna Charta. Not a hospital, for there are no wounds; not an asylum, for there are no criminals; not a prison, for there are no criminals; not an almshouse, for there are no paupers; not a tear, for there are no sorrows. The long dirge of earth's lamentation has ended in the triumphal march of redeemed empires, the forests harping it on vine strung branches, the water chanting it among the gorges, the thunders drumming it among the hills, the ocean giving forth with its organs, trade winds touching the keys and Euroclydon foot on the pedal.

I want to see John Howard when the last prisoner is reformed; I want to see Florence Nightingale when the last saber wound has stopped hurting; I want to see William Penn when the last Indian has been civilized; I want to see John Huss when the last flame of persecution has been extinguished. I want to see John Bunyan after the last pilgrim has come to the gate of the celestial city—above all, I want to see Jesus after the last saint has his throne and has begun to sing his triumph.

You have watched the calmness and the glory of the evening hour. The laborers have come from the field; the heavens are glowing with an indescribable effulgence, as though the sun in departing had forgotten to shut the gate after it. All the beauty of clouds and leaf swims in the lake. For a star in the sky, a star in the water; heaven above and heaven beneath. Not a leaf rustling or a bee humming or a grasshopper chirping. Silence in the meadow, silence among the hills. Thus bright and beautiful shall be the evening of the world. The heats of earthly conflict are cool; the glory of heaven fills all the scene with love, joy and peace. At eventime it is light—light!

Fulfillment at the End.

Finally, my text shall find fulfillment at the end of the Christian's life. You know how short a winter's day is and how little work you can do. Now, my friends, life is a short winter's day. The sun rises at 8 and sets at 4. The birth angel and the death angel fly only a little way apart. Baptism and burial are near together. With one hand the mother rocks the cradle and with the other she touches a grave.

I went into the house of one of my parishioners on Thanksgiving day. The little child of the household was bright and glad, and with it I bounded up and down the hall. Christmas day came, and the light of that household had perished. We stood, with black book, reading over the grave, "Ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

But I hurl away this darkness. I cannot have you weep. Thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory at eventime it shall be light! I have seen many Christians die. I never saw any of them die in darkness. What if the billows of death do rise above our girdle, who does not love to bathe? What though other lights do go out in the blast, what do we want of them when all the gates of glory swing open before us and from a myriad voices, a myriad harps, a myriad thrones, a myriad palaces there dashes upon us "Hosanna! Hosanna!" Throw back the shutters and let the sun in," said dying Scoville McCullum, one of my Sabbath school boys. "Throw back the shutters and let the sun in." You can see Paul putting on robes and wings of ascension as he exclaims: "I have fought the good fight! I have finished my course. I have kept the faith!"

Hugh McKail went to one side of the scaffold of martyrdom and cried "Farewell sun, moon and stars! Farewell all earthly delights!" then went to the other side of the scaffold and cried

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 55. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

5:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

3:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Lester Manor with stage for Walkerton and Tappahannock Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:50 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.
S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent.
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,
TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and
Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAR. 2, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:20 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
3:00 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	3:34 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	6:20 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	6:40 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
8:50 A. M.	4:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	9:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
1:05 A. M.	8:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
4:40 A. M.	12:05 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
7:52 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Ar. Brunswick.
9:25 A. M.	3:40 P. M.—Ar. Fernandina.
9:05 A. M.	3:50 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	5:10 P. M.—Ar. St. Augustine.
3:15 P. M.	10:00 P. M.—Ar. Tallahassee.
1:48 P. M.	12:10 A. M.—Ar. Ocala.
5:10 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Ar. Orlando.
5:40 P. M.	5:00 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
7:15 P. M.	6:0 A. M.—Ar. Port Tampa.
10:50 P. M.	8:10 A. M.—Ar. Miami.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:25 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Drawing-Room, Observation and Compartment Sleeping Cars between New York and St. Augustine. Pullman Dining Cars between New York and Richmond and between Hamlet and St. Augustine. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington and between Richmond and St. Augustine. Pullman Sleeping Cars (tri-weekly) between Washington and Pinehurst. Pullman Sleeping Cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa and between Jacksonville and Orlando. Also, through Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe Cars between Hamlet and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor Cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest Day Coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

YOU CAN PATENT

anything you invent or improve; also get CAVEAT, TRADE-MARK, COPYRIGHT or DESIGN PROTECTION. Send model, sketch, or photo. for free examination and advice.

BOOK ON PATENTS FREE. No Atty's fee before patent.

Write to C. A. SNOW & CO.
Patent Lawyers, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,
Watches,

Fine Repairing. Jewelry.
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing

Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

721 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW, PLANING MILLS
and UMBERYARD.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.
—
PLOW HANDLES.
—
TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.
—
CORN MEAL,
—
SLAT & WIRE FENCES

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

DR BRIGGS ON EPHRAIM AND DR. PALMORE.

Dr. C. H. Briggs, in the Nashville Advocate of February 27th, not being satisfied with wiping up the earth with Ephraim, the hen-pecked husband of a W. C. T. U., for giving his views of the W. C. T. U., and telling what he and his Sally Ann seen and heard at Conference, proceeds to demolish Dr. Palmore for publishing Ephraim's article, and for publishing the fact that his children by adoption, his New Century Knights, voted him second to Washington as their ideal of manhood. As to Dr. Briggs' charge against Dr. Palmore of infallibility, I find in the Minutes of the Southwest Missouri Conference of 1895, that the committee on books and periodicals adopted the report of the editorial committee, which is in part as follows: "After careful and prayerful investigation of the editorial management, and a full statement of the objections thereto, and Bro. Palmore's answer, we find ourselves in deeper sympathy with the editor in his efforts to meet the wants of this critical age, and we are well assured that it is utterly impossible to make a paper that would exactly suit every faction that may arise in the Church, but we do hereby express our confidence in the sincerity and integrity of Dr. Palmore in his effort to make the St. Louis Advocate the ideal religious paper."

As to the charge that the St. Louis Advocate is no longer a true exponent of missionary Methodism, the Minutes of 1899 show that the minority report of the committee on books and periodicals was substituted for the majority report, and adopted by a yea and nay vote of 81 to 54. This minority report recognizes the St. Louis Advocate as the organ of the Conference, and the principal medium through which the Church news is conveyed, and Dr. Briggs was the man who made the motion to lay the minority report on the table, which motion was lost. Furthermore, at our last annual Conference Dr. Palmore was the only clerical delegate to the General Conference that was elected on the first ballot. As to Dr. Briggs' so-called sneering screeds, I am personally acquainted with many of them, and the most of the others by reputation, and as far as I am informed they are the peers of Dr. Prichett and Judge Rich. The action of these three Conferences indicate very plainly that Dr. Briggs has made charges that he cannot prove. Admitting that free discussion is unknown in the columns of the St. Louis Advocate, and that the paper has degenerated into a personal organ of the editor, if I am correctly informed, Dr. Hoss is a close second to Dr. Palmore, if he is not actually and rightfully entitled to first honors, and Dr. Hoss does not owe his position as editor to the fact that he invested $22,500 in the paper, but to the choice of his brethren—and, in fact, I have seen it stated that the Nashville Advocate had lost six (6,000) thousand subscribers since Dr. Hoss took possession of the editorial chair, and that this loss was largely, if not entirely, caused by the arbitrary position taken and the course pursued by Dr. Hoss in the cases of Drs. Kelley, Steel and Barbee. While Ephraim may possibly have had a diseased and depraved imagination, and his article may not be impervious to criticisms, a careful reading of Ephraim's and Dr. Briggs' articles ought to convince and satisfy any unbiased and unprejudiced reader, that if Dr. Briggs did not possess a diseased and depraved imagination, there was a vicious, malicious, unchristian spirit and feeling indicated, if not actually expressed in Dr. Briggs' article that is not found in Ephraim's. My platform is, no more Bishops at present; give each presiding elder from 35 to 40 appointments; make presiding elders ineligible for more than four years' service in eight consecutive years; an unconditional tender of the money to Congress; elect new Book Agents, Book Committee, and editor of Nashville Advocate; against retiring Bishops on full salary; a thorough and exhaustive examination of the Publishing House business, books, properties, and interests in all of its branches and dependencies, giving the actual cash value of all assets. Such an examination and a report of the facts to General Conference is absolutely necessary to enable General Conference to act intelligently and advisedly in the premises.

WM. J. CATRON.

Neosho, Mo.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Senate Committee on Post-Offices may be said to be sitting as a jury to determine whether a man that gets under the influence of intoxicants is fit to be a postmaster. The President has, in effect, recently decided both ways, in the case of the same man, whose case is now before the Senate committee. Several months ago the President re-appointed Mr. J. W. Mullen postmaster at Charlotte, N. C. Before the Senate acted upon his nomination Mr. Mullen came to Washington, and it was said, became intoxicated—he says he only took a few "social drinks." The matter was brought to the President's attention, and he withdrew the nomination from the Senate. Then a delegation of Mullen's friends came to Washington and succeeded in getting the President to again send the nomination to the Senate. That stirred up the temperance people of North Carolina, and they began to send protests to Washington against the confirmation of the nomination, and Senator Simmons, of that State, laid the protests before the President and the Senate committee. There the matter stands, but the verdict is looked forward to with interest.

Another Washington minister has attacked the growing practice of social entertainments on the Sabbath, and more must follow, unless they are willing to remain silent while the influence of the Church is being steadily undermined by these entertainments, which many who were at first shocked by are now regarding with tolerance, and in which the number of participants are all the time increasing. Dr. Alfred Harding, pastor of St. Paul's P. E. church, intends to be one of the active fighters of this insidious evil. In a sermon, the text from the words of Christ, "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me," he unsparingly denounced the hypocrisy that prevails among the society people of Washington and all our large cities, who pretend to be Christians, and said particularly of those of the national capital: "There is no more beautiful witness for Christ than the example of a simple Christian life. What witness is there for Christ in the example set to-day by the fashionable set of the national capital, who claim to be followers of God, and yet hold their dinner parties and wine suppers on the Sabbath day? They utterly set at naught the commandments of God regarding the keeping sacred of His day, and make those in their employ perform unnecessary duties. They carry on their work and pleasures as though there were no Sunday. As the world looks at these people will it see in their lives anything that witnesses for Christ? Surely there is a swift condemnation and a terrible punishment in store for these people."

The Reform Bureau has filed a certificate of incorporation in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia. The incorporators are Rev. F. D. Power, Rev. A. S. Fiske, and Rev. Wilbur T. Crafts. The bureau will be governed by a board of seven directors, who shall hold office for life, and the following are named as directors: L. T. Yoder, J. J. Porter, J. W. Houston, L. A. Connor, A. H. Ames, and the incorporators. The object of the bureau is to promote those Christian reforms on which the churches sociologically agree, while theologically differing, such as the defence of the Sabbath and of purity, the suppression of gambling, intemperance, political corruption, and the substitution of arbitration and conciliation for both industrial and international law.

Mr. E. G. Blodgett, of Atlanta, Ga., who is visiting Washington, thinks his city has a model law for the regulation of the liquor traffic. Speaking of it, he said: "Atlanta has the best regulated traffic in spirituous liquors of any city of its size, I should say, in the United States. In the first place, saloons are restricted to the business area of the city, and as the tax is $1,000 a year, the places are in the hands of a set of men who are interested in maintaining orderly establishments. They cannot open their houses before 6 o'clock in the morning, and must close promptly at 10 at night. There is no such thing as selling drinks on Sunday. The saloon keepers obey the law to the letter because a second conviction means the sure revocation of their license."

Mr. D. J. Roberts, foreman of a division of the Government Printing Office, in the course of a conversation about the late Dr. Talmage, said: "There are some who have expressed a doubt as to the sincerity, the true Christian spirit, of the late Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, but some years ago I had ample proof of both. In 1890 I was chairman of the committee on entertainment of a teacher's institute being held at Osage City, Kan., and had secured the services of Dr. Talmage as a lecturer. It chanced that the night before the doctor's arrival there had been an attempted burglary in the little city, then consisting of 5,000 or 6,000 inhabitants, in which a dozen or more shots were exchanged between the burglar and the citizen whose house was being robbed. There was a lamp burning dimly in the room, and when the citizen's wife woke her husband, saying, 'There is a man in the house!' he began shooting. The first shot extinguished the light. The only shot that took effect desperately wounded the burglar in the groin, though six bullets perforated the pillows of the bed. The wounded burglar was carried off to jail. Dr. Talmage arrived the evening before his lecture, and about 10 o'clock I asked him if he would like to go and see the wounded prisoner. He assented, and we went to the jail. The prisoner would give no name but 'Jim.' 'Here's Dr. Talmage, Jim,' said I, 'and he wants to know your name.' 'Jim,' said the prisoner; 'that's enough.' 'Would you like to have the Doctor pray for you?' I asked. 'Yes,' he said, and then turning to Dr. Talmage, he added, 'I know you, Doctor; I've heard you preach in Brooklyn often.' The Doctor knelt and prayed fervently for the prisoner for fifteen minutes or more, and later we returned to the hotel. The next morning I went again to the hotel about 8 o'clock and asked if Dr. Talmage had yet arisen. 'He has just retired,' said the hotel clerk. 'After you left last night he went back again to the jail and stayed with that burglar until 7 o'clock this morning.' I was satisfied that none but a true Christian who believed what he taught would thus sacrifice a night's rest to succor and console an unknown criminal. After his engagement with us the Doctor went on to Winfield, Kan., where he had another lecture engagement. On his return, as the train stopped at our little city, the Doctor leaned out of the car window and asked a youngster: 'My boy, did the burglar die?' 'Yes, sir,' answered the boy, and then added, 'Say, mister, was that your brother?'

Rev. George Buckler, of this city, told this story of his acquaintance with Dr. Talmage, which shows a characteristic side of the man: "A few months ago I held a series of interdenominational evangelistic services in two of our local theatres, and I wanted Dr. Talmage to preach the initial sermon. I had never met him then, and the stories I had heard of the big prices he demanded for his preaching recurred to me, and it was not without some misgiving that I went to see him. But the recent reception of Prince Henry of Prussia to our American shores was not more royal than that accorded the obscure local preacher in the palatial study of this ambassador of the King of kings. He was very kind. He was more than kind; he was pleased with my plan, and he agreed to preach the opening sermon. When I broached the subject of pay for his services his genial countenance assumed an expression, half of pain and half of amusement, and then followed a bit of colloquy I shall never forget. 'Why, my boy, I wouldn't accept a penny. I don't take money for preaching the Gospel.' And then I began to get a glimpse of this great heart. It was my turn now to become amused at the ridiculous stories I had heard concerning this man. He was so kind, so good, so genial and affable, and placed me so much at home with him that I asked: 'Well, Doctor, where do you get your money, then?' He laughed good-naturedly and said: 'I lecture, and I am paid for lecturing, and paid well. Then I have an income from my paper and from other sources. But I take no pay for preaching.'

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, professor of English literature at Princeton University, and for nearly twenty years pastor of the famous old Brick Presbyterian church, of New York city, who has been in Washington in connection with the work of the Revision Committee, preached this week at the Church of the Covenant to the largest congregation ever gathered in that edifice. His theme was Resurrection, and his text St. Paul's words to the Colossians: "If thou, then, be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God."

Representative Greene, of Massachusetts, thus spoke his sentiments recently to several acquaintances at the Capitol: "If two glasses were put before me, one holding champagne, the other holding poison, and I were forced to drink, I believe I should choose the latter; thus strongly do I feel on the drink question. When I was first elected mayor of Fall River I went to one of our prominent clubs. 'A cocktail for you, Mayor?' said one of my friends soon after I entered. 'No,' I answered. 'What, our mayor will not drink?' he retorted. 'No,' I reiterated. Ten years afterward I saw the same man again. His eyes were bloodshot, his nerves were unstrung, and his hand shook so badly that he could hardly have lifted a glass to his lips. It was one of the best temperance lectures I ever heard. I can't understand how men enjoy drinking at dinner. It disqualifies them for enjoyment of the feast and for the programme of intelligence that follows."

A bill has been introduced in the United States Senate to close all places of business on Sunday, except those of necessity. Under this classification every industry would come to a full stop excepting those of public utility, such as gas companies, electric lighting and power companies and street cars, and private enterprises, except eating houses, apothecaries for the sale of medicines, undertaking establishments, or places kept for charity or necessity in general would be closed. It would put a stop to the Sunday trade in flowers, candies, soda water, and to the early open hours of groceries and other places of domestic supply. There are arguments pro and con in regard to the new bill, but the general consensus of opinion is that such a law would make Washington a model Sabbath city and a good example to the rest of the country. At the present time it is better in respect to Sunday closing than other cities of its size, and almost as careful in this regard as the more strict of the Canadian cities, where Sunday observance has its best exemplifications.

The National Reform Bureau is doing its best to get the bill passed, and there are strong hopes of success. One of the arguments against it is that it will close up the small meat and grocery shops which keep open a few hours on Sunday morning to supply the wants of the wage earners who get their weekly pay on Saturday night; but if it does this there is apt to be a good result, for besides giving the trades people a rest it will probably result in a renewed effort on the part of the wives of the wage earners to see that the Sunday marketing is done on Saturday night before the wage is spent for liquor, as is often the case, leaving but little for the Sunday morning store purchasers.

The proposed change has met with the heartiest approval among the labor element, and several of the local unions have endorsed the bill. The local cigar makers' union has unqualifiedly come out in favor of the legislation, and will do all in its power to make the law an assured fact, although it might be supposed that they would be opposed to it as it would cut off the Sunday sale of cigars—a large item to the trade. The street car men are in favor of a suggested change which will give them more rest on Sunday by a revision of the schedules so that there will not be so many cars in service.

There is much that might be said in regard to the enforcement of the law for Sunday closing as practiced in other cities as compared to Washington. In some cities the only law that is enforced is that relating to Sunday liquor, and in New York the work of the reformers is being stultified by the way the police, who are not in sympathy with the movement, are making the reform obnoxious. They take pains to close up all the small stores and to make the whole matter one of the greatest inconveniences to the poorer voter, while they are equally particular to let the rich man in his club have all the license that he wants on Sunday as on any other day. This results in a class prejudice, and the real voter of the city, when he gets a chance, will go against the reform element if only to get even with the upper class that has its own way, and which, when it comes to voting, does not control anything at all. Boston is also going through the same regime, and her Sunday "blue laws" are being enforced with a view to making them distasteful. For example, last Sunday no shaving was permitted, even in a man's hotel room, no cigar, candy or fruit could be secured, no dentistry work done, and no pictures taken, and in all of these cases it was the poor but earnest voter who was struck at, so that the inconvenience he suffers will make him vote to change it. The edict has already gone forth in Boston that next Sunday the liverymen will not be allowed to hire horses or vehicles for any purpose.

Washington, on the other hand, has no strictly voting class, as there is no suffrage here whatever, and the law will be tempered with justice and equity in its enforcement, making of the national capital the ideal Sunday city of the country.

Lady (scolding small boy who has been robbing a bird's nest): "O, you cruel boy, to take those eggs from the nest! Think of the poor little mother bird, and—"

Boy: "The mother bird's dead!"

Lady: "How do you know that?"

SIXTY YEARS OF POPULARITY is the record of Painkiller (Perry Davis'), but the shops are full of imitations made to sell upon the great reputation of the genuine; be cautious, therefore, when you ask for a bottle to see that you get the genuine. An unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis.

If I ever feel like envying any one, it is not the world-famous author, but some serene, devout soul, who has made the life of Christ his own, and whose will is the divine will.—J. G. Whittier.

OF ALL HOT WEATHER ENEMIES of humanity cholera is the worst. Treatment to be effective must be prompt. When vomiting, purging and sweat announce that the disease is present, combat it with Perry Davis' Painkiller. All bowel troubles, like diarrhoea, cholera morbus and dysentery are overcome by Painkiller. It is equally health-promoting in all climates.

SOUTHERN STUDENT CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A., JUNE 14-23; ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF Y. W. C. A., JUNE 13-23, 1902, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Asheville, N. C., and return. Tickets on sale June 13th-14th, with return limit June 25th.

SUMMER SCHOOL, KNOXVILLE, TENN., JUNE 19TH-JULY 30TH, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Knoxville and return. Tickets on sale June 16th, 17th, and 18th, 29th, and 30th, and July 11th, 12th, and 13th, with return limit August 15th.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare for the round trip, plus $2 membership fee. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, inclusive, with return limit July 6, 1902, except by depositing tickets and upon payment of 50 cents an extension to September 10th may be obtained.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST CLASS,
UP-TO-DATE
FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Federation Woman's Clubs, Los Angeles, Cal., May 1st to 8th.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

ANNUAL MEETING GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS., MAY 14-17, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Jackson and return. Tickets on sale May 12th 13th, and 14th, return limit May 30, 1902.

"CO-FRACTIONS."

This little well-printed and well-bound book of forty-six pages, 16mo, contains and elaborates a new and valuable discovery in mathematics. It is an addition to science; it presents what was never before known or published; its methods are short and easy; in many problems the solution is briefer than the statement; a very large number of problems can be solved by these methods; it handles problems in percentage, arithmetical and geometrical progression, simple and compound interest, loss and gain, stocks and bonds, and a great variety of analytical questions. Teachers should teach it, students should study it, business men should use it, and mathematical text-makers should introduce its methods into their books.

We present the following testimonials:

Professor Edmund Longley, A. M., now retired, but for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, Virginia, and a brilliant mathematician, writes: "This goes just to thank you for the copy sent me of your 'Co-Fractions,' with the attendant personal note. Pardon me for directly expressing my admiration of the vigorous and acute brain work that evolved the work."

Professor Charles E. Vawter, LL.D., for many years professor of mathematics in Emory and Henry College, and now president of the Miller School, Albemarle county, Va., says: "I have read with most pleasing interest the work on 'Co-Fractions,' by my old friend, Professor R. N. Price. Every one who teaches arithmetic should read it. It presents in a new, concise, skillful, and ingenious way, facts of arithmetic that all should know. It will widen the view and pull many a plodder out of the ruts."

The book sells at 25 cents, postpaid, or $2.40 per dozen, by freight, express, or post, at expense of the seller. Order of R. N. Price, Morristown, Tenn.

(Continued from page 10.)

"Welcome, God and Father! Welcome, sweet Jesus Christ, the Mediator of the covenant! Welcome, death! Welcome, glory!" A minister of Christ in Philadelphia, dying, said in his last moments, "I move into the light!" They did not go down doubting and fearing and shivering, but their battlecry rang through all the caverns of the sepulcher and was echoed back from all the thrones of heaven. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Sing, my soul, of joys to come.

I saw a beautiful being wandering up and down the earth. She touched the aged, and they became young; she touched the poor, and they became rich. I said, "Who is this beautiful being wandering up and down the earth?" They told me that her name was Death. What a strange thrill of joy when the palsied Christian begins to use his arm again, when the blind Christian begins to see again, when the deaf Christian begins to hear again, when the poor pilgrim puts his feet on such pavement and joins in such company and has a free seat in such a great temple! Hungry men no more to hunger, thirsty men no more to thirst, weeping men no more to weep, dying men no more to die. Gather up all sweet words, all jubilant expressions, all rapturous exclamations; bring them to me, and I will pour upon them this stupendous theme of the soul's disenthralment! Oh, the joy of the spirit as it shall mount up toward the throne of God, shouting: "Free! Free!" Your eye has gazed upon the garniture of earth and heaven, but eye hath not seen it; your ear has caught harmonies uncounted and indescribable—caught them from harp's trill and bird's carol and waterfall's dash and ocean's doxology—but ear hath not heard it. How did those blessed ones get up into the light? What hammer knocked off their chains? What loom wove their robes of light? Who gave them wings? Ah, eternity is not long enough to tell it, seraphim have not capacity enough to realize it—the marvels of redeeming love! Let the palms wave; let the crowns glitter; let the anthems ascend; let the trees of Lebanon clap their hands—they cannot tell the half of it. Archangel before the throne, thou failest! Sing on, praise on, ye hosts of the glorified, and if with your scepters you cannot reach it and with your songs you cannot express it then let all the myriads of the saved unite in the exclamation: "Jesus! Jesus! Jesus!"

The Light of Eventide.

There will be a password at the gate of heaven. A great multitude come up and knock at the gate. The gatekeeper says, "The password." They say, "We have no password. We were great on earth, and now we come up to be great in heaven." A voice from within answers, "I never knew you." Another group come up to the gate of heaven and knock. The gatekeeper says, "The password." They say, "We have no password. We did a great many noble things on earth. We endowed colleges and took care of the poor." The voice from within says, "I never knew you." Another group come up to the gate of heaven and knock. The gatekeeper says, "The password." They answer, "We were wanderers from God and deserve to die, but we heard the voice of Jesus"—"Aye, aye," says the gatekeeper, "that is the password! Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates, and let these people come in." They go in and surround the throne, jubilant forever!

Ah, do you wonder that the last hours of the Christian on earth are illuminated by thoughts of the coming glory? Light in the evening. The medicines may be bitter. The pain may be sharp. The parting may be heartrending. Yet light in the evening. As all the stars of the night sink their anchors of pearl in lake and river and sea so the waves of Jordan shall be illuminated with the down flashing of the glory to come. The dying soul looks up at the constellations. "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" "The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

Close the eyes of the departed one; earth would seem tame to its enchanted vision. Fold the hands; life's work is ended. Veil the face; it has been transfigured.

Mr. Toplady in his dying hour said, "Light." Coming nearer the expiring moment, he exclaimed with illuminated countenance, "Light!" In the last instant of his breathing he lifted up his hands and cried: "Light! Light!"

Thank God for light in the evening! [Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

Mrs. Cleveland's Democracy.

A lady who knew Mrs. Cleveland quite well met her at the Grand Central station in New York recently fairly laden down with parcels.

"You look like a real old fashioned Santa Claus," she said to Mrs. Cleveland.

"Oh, no, not quite that," was the reply, "for I have no toys in my parcels. They are filled with fruit that I am taking out to where I am staying, because they are very fond of these particular things, and they can't be had out there."

When Mrs. Cleveland left the train, her friend thought that she would give pleasure to the brakeman by telling him that he had "entertained an angel unawares."

So she said, "Did you see that lady on the platform with all those parcels?"

"Yes," said he. "What of her?"

"That's Mrs. Cleveland." The man refused to believe her. He could not believe that the wife of the ex-president, almost struggling with parcels, would be traveling alone in an ordinary day coach. Such simple democracy passed his belief.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Story of a Fad.

A good fad story is told by himself of Louis Wain, the painter of cats. This artist says he doesn't care much for the talent which he exercises with so much ease. What he has been strongly attracted to at various times are music, science and gem collecting. Fortunately the last hobby, instead of ruining the artist, as it only too readily might have done, inspired him to greater efforts in the direction of his real work.

"It became necessary," he says, "to work very hard at them (drawing of cats) to make the money to get the gems I wanted to buy, for I saw a quick and ready fortune was to be made out of precious stones when well matched and paired, and week after week I speculated and carried home my treasures, and week after week my cats developed with more character and vim, and gradually I recovered all my interest in my drawing until at last a bad bargain in gems made me put them aside altogether as a bad gamble and throw myself into my cats for good and all, having well learned my life's lesson and realized the value of a hobby as an incentive to work only."

He who would contented be Little slights must never see; Putting self in second place Yields a wealth of gentle grace Nothing else can ever give.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."

—Western Christian Advocate.

"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."

—Central Christian Advocate.

"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."

—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."

—Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."

—Methodist Magazine and Review.

"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."

—Richmond Christian Advocate.

"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."

—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."

—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."

—St. Louis Globe-Dem.

"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."

—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."

—Bishop C. C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."

—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."

—Bishop J. F. Hurst.

"It ranks with the best."

—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."

—Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land."

—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

This old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. MCCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured by Dr. David's Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing and pleasant. Dr. David's Cough Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

... FOR TOBACCO. ...

Bellefonte

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to

Standard

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

Alliance

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is $15.20,	but it actually runs $16.54
Alliance	" 15.20,	" " " 17.71
Hard Cash	" 16.70,	" " " 18.96
Bellefonte	" 21.20,	" " " 23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN ## METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 10.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., MAY 15, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

For the information of brethren who may take subscriptions in their congregations for the Orphanage during the month of June, I give the instructions of the Executive Committee under which I prosecute my work:

VIRGINIA CONFERENCE ORPHANAGE.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Virginia Conference Orphanage, held in Richmond, the following was approved, with the recommendation that the plan herein suggested be adopted wherever practicable.

We wish it to be known that the Virginia Conference Orphanage is to be a great institution, in which little children that are friendless shall find a Christian home, be educated and taught some useful employment, so that at the age of eighteen years or earlier, they may go out into the world prepared for the battle of life.

There can be no worthier object of charity than to aid the homeless suffering children that cry out to us in their sorrow.

The Orphanage is to be located in the City of Richmond. Therefore, Richmond should lead the Methodists of Virginia in their contributions. People everywhere will measure the value of this Institution by what Richmond is willing to give. The Methodists of Virginia are waiting to do something great in this work of helping the helpless. The trustees have determined to undertake to raise $200,000 for the Orphanage. Richmond must lead with a subscription of $20,000. This should be exclusive of site. We suggest the following plan of work:

1. That the Financial Agent, Rev. J. T. Mastin, visit and present the claims of the Orphanage to, and organize societies in, every congregation in the Virginia Conference; that the officers of these societies be a president, a vice-president, if desired, a secretary and treasurer; that the object of these societies be (1) to look after the interests of the Orphanage in the community in which they work; (2) to keep a roll of the needy children in the community, and to report to the Executive Committee of the Orphanage any who need a home; that the membership of these societies be composed of all who contribute to the Orphanage.

2. That an effort be made to secure a contribution from every member and friend of the Methodist Church in the bounds of the Virginia Conference.

3. That we ask our subscribers to pay cash whenever convenient. This would greatly aid the Trustees, as it is desired to begin building at once, and it has been determined not to go into debt. When this is not convenient, let all subscriptions of $25 or more be closed by notes at, say, six, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months, without interest, if agreeable to subscribers, and subscription of less than $25 be paid in, say, monthly installments through envelopes, running through the period of two years.

4. That a central organization be formed in every city and county, com-will make sacrifices in order that they may attend unto it. A canvass in the interest of the now lonely one rarely finds a deaf ear.

But does an eleemosynary institution appeal to the business man? The man of business activity is ever ready to listen to projects which promise present profit. But the man of affairs, moved by far-seeing sagacity, must find full assurance of a rich harvest for any investment he may make. In the establishment and maintenance of an orphanage he finds this assurance strong arm of support, which will bear them over the quicksands to be found in all communiaies, and they soon grow to be consumers, and thus create demand for the varios products found in the stores of the proprietors of the warehouses, whose stock must be unloaded upon the people to reap a profit. Many of our best business men were orphans, left without fortune or relatives in whom was reliance. The wives of some of our best business men were trained in orphanages and live to testify to the Heaven-sent blessing which saved them from the bosom of destruction. Passing over the possibility of his own progeny being cast upon the charities of the humane, the business man cannot fail to foresee the grand possibilities which must result from such an organized effort as will be realized in the establishment and maintenance of the Virginia Conference Orphanage, thus converting from the destiny of vagrancy creatures who become not only ornaments to society, and who take an active part in making the wheels go round, but they bear upon their brows the imprint of the finger of the Almighty.

Business men, down with the dust, and thus lend unto the Lord.

AUGUSTUS WRIGHT.

Petersburg, Va.

IN ONE YEAR WE SPEND

For Foreign Missions ...	$ 5,000,000
For Church Work .....	100,000,000
For Amusements .....	400,000,000
For Jewelry and Plate ..	700,000,000
For Tobacco .....	800,000,000
For Liquor .....	1,400,000,000

—Epworth Era.

[Read that, and as one of the 90,000 Methodists of the Virginia Conference say I will give a part—just a small part—of what I spend each year for amusements or luxury to help the homeless children of Virginia. Stop! Determine now what the per cent. shall be.]

More dear in the sight of God and His angels than any other conquest is the conquest of self, which each man with the help of heaven can secure for himself.—A. P. Stanley.

“Oh, burdened with the weight of sin,
And worn with many a care,
Here drop thy load, the sunrise road
Is open at thy prayer.
Return, return to Bethlehem,
The angels wait thee there!”

THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING,

Which will be paid for by the Methodists of “The Cities by the Sea” and surrounding Counties - Cost, $22,000.

posed of the officers of the several local organizations.

J. W. BLEDSOE.

Chairman Executive Committee, Virginia Conference Orphanage.

W. B. BEAUCHAMP, Secretary.

Please forward all subscriptions and money to me by July 1st. My address is Station B, Richmond, Va.

J. T. MASTIN, Financial Agent.

THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE ORPHANAGE FROM THE STAND-POINT OF A BUSINESS MAN.

As to the universal popularity of the claims of such a charity there can be but one opinion. The cry of the orphan is always heard and men and women in the proposed amelioration of a condition which is always present in any community.

The man of means hesitates to embark his capital where there may be occasion to read the riot act. He finds his encouragement in making his bed where good order reigns, where the folks love their neighbors as themselves, and where they make men and women of worth and character out of the waifs who would otherwise float on the surface of the occasion until, in the very swim of unkempt destiny, they sink to the bottom of degradation, and utter despair. Extend to them the hand of friendship, lend to them the

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1899, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

There was a habit among the girls in Hope college that winter of saying smart things about one another and a fashion for epigrammatic flings at the teachers and things in general that was not commendable. A few girls, like Freeda, never indulged in the habit. "It is not wit; it is a kind of whiplash talk that stings afterward," she would say. And yet even Edward, who was the poorest kind of talker himself, found himself attempting the same style of repartee whenever he met Freeda's roommate. She answered him, but, more than that, interested him in her. She had a serious side to her character that appealed to him. She had a shelf next to his in the laboratory, being one of the few girls taking a full course in chemistry, and very often during their experiments on test problems Edward would find occasion to help her. He was an expert in laboratory work, having kept up his practice through the preceding summer. He was planning to be a doctor, and Miss Seton more than once declared her intention to study for the degree of M. D.

"I don't want to teach or go into music or any of those things," she used to say. "I want a profession that calls for nerve and has some discoveries possible in it."

Edward Blake did not reason very profoundly over the facts, as they became more and more facts, while the term drew to its close and commencement was near. But that is not saying that he did not know what the facts were. And it is true of him that, being of the character he was, he was disturbed more deeply than he cared to confess. For the first time in his life he experienced a feeling that threatened to interrupt his other ambitions. He had always sneered quietly, all to himself, at the few men in college who had danced attendance on the girls in such a way as to be noticeable. He began to realize that he was drifting along into, if not the same category, a position where he had never been before.

He was sitting at his table one evening thinking of the whole matter, with his books open around him and his mind restless over the fact of his increasing thought of another person who had silently grown thus to demand a place there, when he was startled by a knock at the door. He had not heard any one come up stairs, and he had been so occupied that he had not expected or been prepared for an interruption.

He went to the door and saw President Royce standing there with a lady. "Blake, this is Mrs. Preston, Willis' mother," said the president as they came in.

Edward greeted the visitor warmly. Mrs. Preston's face was serious as she returned the greeting. As she sat down Edward knew from her manner that she had some news of Willis that must be of grave importance. He waited for it with genuine interest, his own affairs for the time being forgotten at the sight of this sad faced woman, whose history was only partly known to him.

CHAPTER IX.

"I am on my way to San Francisco to see Willis," Mrs. Preston began, looking at Edward earnestly, "and I could not resist the inclination to come to Raynor on the way and see you."

"On your way to see Willis?" Edward exclaimed in great surprise. "Why, I did not know he had come home."

"He was badly wounded in an engagement shortly after that one of which he wrote you. He may lose an arm. He is to be sent home on one of the hospital transports that is expected in San Francisco in about two weeks. The time of its arrival is uncertain. I am going on, so as to be with him as soon as he arrives."

Mrs. Preston looked earnestly at Edward, who returned her look gravely. Her face bore marks of severe suffering.

"When he wrote last, he confessed that he was sick of the campaign and would be glad to come back to Hope college again. That is partly what I came to see you for. I want you to continue to room with Willis. He said in his letter that he didn't think you would care to. It will relieve me of a great source of anxiety to know that you are together."

"I am sure I am willing to do what I can to serve you, Mrs. Preston," Edward said, in a low voice. He was troubled a little at the possibility of Willis' coming back, partly on Freeda's account and partly on his own.

"You will promise me to do all in your power to help Willis, won't you?" Mrs. Preston asked anxiously.

"Yes, madam, I"—Edward hesitated a little. "I am afraid you exaggerate my influence over him. I do not have much in some directions."

"I am sure you are more of a help to him than you realize," Mrs. Preston replied eagerly. "Willis thinks everything of you and thinks you are nearly perfect."

"Of course I will do all I can," replied Edward, looking at the president and remembering what had been said in the little talk about the Christian life compared with morality.

"I feel quite sure, Mrs. Preston," said the president cordially, "that Mr. Blake will help your son in every way possible."

Mrs. Preston looked and spoke her thanks, and in answer to several questions from Edward she described as well as she could the facts concerning Willis as they had been forwarded to her by the regiment.

"I don't think that even the loss of his arm will prevent his coming back here next fall. For one thing I am glad. I rejoice that he has had enough even of the fun and glory of war. Evidently his wound has sickened him of it."

Mrs. Preston remained a little longer and then rose to go. She wanted to call upon two of Willis' society friends to whom he had sent messages, and, as they roomed on the floor above, the president went up and introduced her to them and then came down to Edward's room again. Edward was surprised when he heard him say that there was a matter he would like to talk over with him.

He sat down a little way from Blake and looked at him earnestly, yet with a slight movement of uncertainty at first that was new to Edward. When it passed away, the president faced him with the strong, open look that was so characteristic of him. The first thing he said revealed to Edward the fact that the president more than guessed at the trouble he was having over the feeling he was beginning to experience for Miss Seton.

"Blake, I want to question you frankly about your studies. For the last two months I have noted a very serious falling off in your efforts. What is the matter? Are you working too hard at other things? What are you doing in addition to your paper route?"

Edward told him in a low voice and with an embarrassment that was so evident that even a stranger would have seen it.

"What are your plans for the summer?" the president asked abruptly. Edward was surprised.

"I haven't made any yet. I suppose I shall do as I did last year—remain here and carry my paper and do anything else I can get to add to my income."

The president was silent a moment, still looking at Edward keenly.

"It's a disappointment to me, Blake, that you have dropped down in your studies. You don't seem to be interested in them as you used to be. Tell me, my boy, honestly now, are you keeping something back from me that I have any right to know? I'm not a priest, and I'm not asking you to sit in confessional"—the president said it with a smile that made Edward feel easier—"but I am genuinely interested in your welfare, and I want to help you if you are in need, as perhaps you are, of a little wholesome, kindly counsel. Of course you needn't confide in me unless you want to, and then you won't do it anyway. I am 20 years older than you and have seen a little more of the world than you have. Are you willing that I should ask a few questions? I think I know about your present trouble, and I cannot help feeling that it is a part of my business to help you."

"No, sir; I don't mind if you ask the questions," replied Edward, feeling a little startled at the president's last sentence and at the same time experiencing a feeling almost of relief at what was coming.

"How old are you, Blake?"

"I'll be 21 next August."

"What are you planning to do in the world?"

"Well, sir, I have always thought I would be a doctor. My mother's father was a doctor, and mother has often expressed a wish that I go into the same profession."

"It's a noble profession. You are taking special chemistry this year with that in view?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have two more years in Hope college and then a three years' medical course?"

"Yes, sir, if I can go right on. I may have to do something one year to make my way."

"Of course you are figuring on all this in case you don't lose your health or break down or in case your mother does not need you on the farm?"

"Yes, sir; I've thought of that some," replied Edward, beginning to wonder some at the president's questions and still expecting something different.

"You've been ambitious to get on in your studies here, which are preparatory to your life work, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir; I've tried to do my best."

"But lately, my boy, you don't seem so interested. Aren't you well?"

"Yes, sir; I'm well enough," said Edward, in a low voice, anticipating the next question.

"Tell me now, Blake, frankly, are you beginning to think a good deal of one of the young ladies, a good deal more than you ever did before? Is that what's the trouble with you?"

"Would you call it 'trouble,' sir?" asked Edward, with an unexpected gleam of humor that surprised the president at first. But Edward was really relieved that at last the subject had been broached.

"That depends," replied the president gravely. "I do not know, of course, how far your feelings have gone. A feeling so strong as to render you unfit for the business that brings you to college would be trouble, would it not?"

"Yes, sir; I suppose it would," Edward answered again in a very low voice. There was not another man on earth that he would have confided in with such a matter except President Royce, and even with him it was embarrassing work.

"Are you willing to tell me, Blake, if your feelings—let us call it 'love'—for this girl are clear to you? Do you understand them?"

"I never was in love with anybody before," Edward answered slowly, and the president almost smiled at the way he said it.

"Does the young lady?"

The president stopped purposely, and Edward colored deeply.

"No, sir; I am sure she doesn't care anything in particular for me."

"Have you ever said anything to her?"

"No, sir, but I've looked it, I guess," replied Edward, with his usual straightforward desire to tell the whole truth and keep back nothing.

Again the president was tempted to smile, but he did not because he plainly saw that the affair was very serious for Edward.

"What do you think I ought to advise you, Blake?" the president asked after a pause.

Edward was plainly confused by the question and could not think of anything to answer.

"Do you think you ought to go on as you have begun and allow yourself to fall in love with this girl if it is going to embarrass your plans for your life work?"

"I don't know. Can I help it, sir? Do you advise me to keep away from her entirely?"

"No," replied the president very quietly. And the reply came as a great surprise to Edward. But the president understood human nature better than the student knew it, and he was face to face with a problem now that was a part of a young man's life, and a serious part of it. According to the way the problem was met and answered might depend the young man's whole career not only in college, but all through his life.

(To be continued.)

Be useful where thou livest, that they may both want and wish thy pleasing presence still. Kindness, good parts, great places are the way to compass this. Find out men's want and will and meet them there.—George Herbert.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✻ ✻ THREE COURSES. ✻ ✻

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

During the next few weeks the Editor expects to be absent at the General Conference. All communications should be addressed as usual to Blackstone. They will receive attention.

NEAT SUM STARTS ENDOWMENT OF VIRGINIA METHODIST OR- PHANAGE.

A Friend, Whose Name is Withheld,
Gives $1,500 as the Foundation—
Many Thousands Given for Building Purposes.

The foundation for the permanent endowment of the Methodist Orphanage has been laid.

The announcement comes that $1,500 have been subscribed specifically for this fund, the income from which will be used exclusively for the maintenance of the institution.

Rev. J. T. Mastin, the financial secretary, who secured this neat sum, says he is bound over to secrecy as to the name of the donor.

Another announcement, coming, regarding the support of the institution, is to the effect that the Rosebud Societies of the State are contemplating raising $1,000 a year. An active canvass of the entire State will be made during June especially for the building fund of the Orphanage, which promises to become the peculiar pet of the Methodist denomination.

ITS FUTURE ASSURED.

The future of the Virginia Methodist Conference Orphanage is assured. The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees in this city on Monday brought out that fact with great clearness. No one fears now that the great and humane undertaking will be other than a creditable and helpful success. Indeed, that has never been seriously doubted, but few hoped that so much would be accomplished in so short a time. Or few, even, of its most enthusiastic friends, had any idea that the response of the Methodist people of the State would be so prompt and generous.

The annual meeting of the trustees was for some reason not generally known and this is the first report of the meeting that has been printed.

The meeting was held at the handsome residence of Mr. John P. Branch, on west Franklin street. Those present were Messrs E. H. Rawlins, W. H. Vincent, J. T. Mastin, J. P. Branch, C. W. Hardwicke, John L. Roper, S. S. Lambeth, of Norfolk; P. T. Barrow, of Danville; Joseph W. Shackelford, of Bedford City; W. B. Beauchamp, J. Wiley Bledsoe, I. N. Vaughan, and J. W. Bradbury.

ANNUAL OFFICERS CHOSEN.

The following officers for the ensuing year were chosen. Dr. Bledsoe resigning the presidency of the board to accept the position of superintendent of the institution: President, E. H. Rawlins; vice-president, W. H. Vincent; secretary, J. T. Mastin; treasurer, J. P. Branch; auditor, C. W. Hardwicke; attorney, S. S. Lambert; executive committee, J. P. Branch, J. T. Mastin, L. B. Betty, W. H. Vincent, J. P. Pettyjohn, C. W. Hardwicke, and John L. Roper.

Miss Rosa Shepherd, of Buena Vista, was chosen teacher for the Orphanage, and Mrs. Betty Lee, of Danville, matron.

Miss Shepherd was for six years a teacher at the Miller School, of Albemarle, and is regarded as one of the best teachers of children in the State. She is a sister of Judge Shepherd, of Buena Vista. Mrs. Lee is also a lady of wide experience in her line. She was formerly Miss Fitzgerald, of Nashville, and her family is well known in this city.

MANY THOUSANDS GIVEN.

The most interesting features of the meeting were the reports of the treasurer, Mr. Branch, and the financial secretary, Rev. Mr. Mastin. These reports showed that for the building and support of the Orphanage $36,000 had been collected, and $22,000 more subscribed. Some of this amount, making $58,000 altogether, can be used for erecting the buildings of the Orphanage, and some must be used for the support of the Orphanage. The first sum for the endowment of the Orphanage has already been subscribed. It is $1,500. All the money promised the institution is due by January 1, 1903. The present plan of the institution is to have two cottages and the administration building. The cottages will be completed by July 1st. Each cottage is to cost $7,500. One is given by Mr. John P. Branch, and the other by Mr. W. H. Vincent, of Capron, Va. The administration building is to cost about $22,000, and will be completed as soon as the money for it can be gotten. The contractor is still at work on this structure. The roof is being put on. All matters regarding building are in the hands of a local committee, Mr. Hardwicke chairman.

It is expected that the Orphanage will become a real fact early in July. Already seven children have been actually received by the institution. They were found in actual and dire want by Mr. Mastin, and are now being kept at the following places against the opening of Humane Association, this city; one in the institution: Two in the Female Society of Salem, Va., and four in the City Orphanage of Danville.

Each cottage will accommodate thirty children, and more than enough applications have already been received to fill one cottage to overflowing.

They have come from almost every section of the State, partly as follows: Richmond, Manchester, Norfolk, Staunton, Salem, Orange, Southampton, Chesterfield and Norfolk county.

A PLAINTIVE APPEAL—READ IT.

The following letter was forwarded to the president of the Board of Directors of the Danville Orphanage, with request that the children be taken until the Virginia Conference Orphanage could provide a home for these homeless little ones. The doors of the Orphanage here were thrown open to four of these little ones. If there be any doubt in the mind of any one regarding the need of such an institution in our city or Conference, let them read the letter below, which was not written for publication:

Salem, Va.

Rev. J. T. Mastin:

Dear Brother,—Your letter came in due time and was highly appreciated—perhaps more than is in my power to express—and unless you had passed through an experience similar to that which led to our writing to you, you would not understand all your letter means to us. First, it was hopeful, and made me feel that "He who had not where to lay His head" was not left without a witness on earth. Second, it breathed the spirit of the Master, and made us feel there was still hope for the hopeless and the homeless.

Now, let me define our position and purpose in writing to you:

We are only a little handful of women without large means; but God has wonderfully led us in our home mission work—as a minister in Oklahoma Territory expressed it when he received our Christmas box, "It looked rather as if it had been prayed down than gotten up." Yes, what has been done was done through the Spirit's leading and the power of prayer. So we come to you with this prayer, that God may give us wisdom so to lay this appeal before you that it may touch your heart and bring a response that shall be for His glory. About four weeks ago a poor though godly colored woman found at our depot five little helpless children, ranging in ages from a beautiful six months' baby boy to a girl aged eleven. They had come in on the midnight train and had been there about eighteen hours. It was time to close the depot, and this colored woman, with all the motherly instincts of her nature aroused, gathered the helpless babe to her bosom and took three of them to her humble cabin, and has cared for them ever since as a mother. A neighbor sheltered the two others. They were total strangers; had drifted here from the mining regions of Virginia; the mother had died of typhoid fever about two months ago; the father and several of the children had been ill for weeks with the disease, and as soon (and even before they were really able to travel) had drifted here. I think the father was almost crazed from illness, destitution and bereavement. Be it as it may, they are here; and the Father's eye, that marks even the sparrow, is upon them and upon us.

In such a case as this, my brother, "what will we do with Jesus"? How will we hold Him up to make Him real to these little motherless, helpless and destitute children?

Oh, how pitiful this case is in all its bearings is beyond my power to describe. They are nice-looking (even pretty) children. One of the number took the little three-year-old girl and was combing her hair, when, in the sweetest of baby accent, she said: "My hair hasn't been combed since my mamma died."

We are women, and our hearts are stirred beyond the power of words to express, and we, with our limited means, are doing for them what we can—to provide food and clothing for them (for their destitution was pitiful)—but they need more than it is in our power to do for them. They need a home and home training, where they may be reared for the glory of Him who created them and by whose providence they have been brought to our doors.

It is touching to see their devotion to the good colored woman who is devoted to them, and who has washed their clothing and keeps them so clean and has given a mother's care and love to these homeless little waifs.

We wrote to the Sue Bennett Memorial School, London, Ky., regarding their helpless condition, and asked they could take them. Theirs was a school, and of course they could do nothing for them. We wrote to the Greenville Orphanage, Tenn. They could take none outside of Holston Conference. Then, almost in despair, I seemed to direct us to write to you, and He who put it into my heart to write to you gives me faith to believe you will not be unmoved by our plea. I put it on higher ground—by His will—"for their angels do always behold the face of my Father."

Brother Mastin, we are only women we cannot build a cottage (it is beyond our means), neither can we furnish one, but what we can do we will do willingly, so gladly and so prayerfully for we are a band of praying women and "hitherto God has wonderfully helped us." We can make bed quilts, clothing, can get up or "pray down" boxes of clothing and other articles we can from time to time send as much money as the Father prospers us, so far as we can be a blessing to and to them if you can take these homeless little ones under your protection and care and train them for time and eternity. It would give us an interest in you and the work which you represent which would be as sweet as bands of Divine love.

There was something, and is something, about the children even in their destitution that speaks well for dead mother and the helpless father.

And now that I have, though poorly tried to give you some idea of their pitiful condition—housed in the cabin of a poor colored woman (though she is of God's elect), and have made this appeal to you in their behalf—yet I would add one more with all the earnestness of my soul: Don't turn from them; don't refuse them a resting-place—"the inn." They are pilgrims of a hard and the way is rough for their feet. If you have children look at their faces; think of what home and shelter of your strong arms around them, then upon your knees talk to Father about these, whose only shelter is the cabin of a colored woman. Kneel till you get an answer, and the Spirit directs, do! Then write us, and bring that joy that is in the presence of the angels in heaven. Our kinship to the Son is demonstrated. Who knows but in the providence of the Father this may be an enticement that in due time may arouse the Baltimore Conference to the need of erecting an orphanage.

I will give you the children's names: Bessie, 11 years; Valley, 9; Claude (boy), 7; Alma, 3, and baby Mary, 6 months.

I close with this prayer, that the blessing of Israel's Keeper may on you and your work. Let us hear from you. In Jesus' name

Mrs. A. B. H.

THE SUFFERING CHILDREN.

A little boy died last night in the Retreat for the Sick, and so friendless and homeless was he that the matron of the hospital did not know his name.

Beside the little white corpse lay a corpse of a girl, three years old. They took the body away in the night when she slept, for the little boy was all the world to her, and they were making a fight together against death by starvation.

They have told the child that her comrade has been taken away. This afternoon the boy will be buried—nobody as yet knows where for it seems hard and cruel to put his body in Potter's field.

An investigation by a reporter of the news to-day resulted in the unravelling of a story that is bitterly sad.

DEATH OF THE OLD SOLDIER.

The dead boy's name was Irvin Marshall, and the little girl's name is Apie Jay Samuels. The girl is an aunt of the boy, her oldest sister being his mother. They were picked up emaciated and sick from lack of food and clothes and warmth. They lived together in Charlottesville with the girl's father until a month ago, when he died. The mother gave up the struggle against poverty last winter.

The father of the girl was an old Confederate soldier, helpless in his old age, and absolutely poverty-stricken. The people of the city kept him alive with occasional gifts of food and money. The two children starved gradually.

The Rev. W. J. Maybie, who is at the head of the Children's Home Society, found them and brought them here. He put them immediately to the Retreat. His helping hand came too late for the boy. He lingered until last night.

FIGHT FOR LIFE.

The little girl is making a brave fight if she pulls through she will find a good home ready for her. A Presbyterian minister has asked for the child, and as soon as she has recovered strength he will adopt her.

"I think she will pull through," said Maybie this afternoon. "Her little mother has been a frightful one so far, now, with God's help, she will enter a new life, full of warmth, sunshine, good clothes, and with never the suffering again for want of food."

The poor little aunt is a pitiful picture now. Her arms are like those of an infant. She is but the shadow of a woman, but all that can be done for her is being done, and we hope to see her grow up into a fine woman. I don't think it will be a good scheme to tell her of the boy's death for several days.

Mr. Maybie found that the boy's mother was in trouble over a shooting and ran away from home. His mother could not take care of herself, the little fellow was left with the mother to starve.

The contributors to the Children's Home will defray the expense of burial, but it has not been settled yet where it will be.—Richmond News.

[Reader, pray for the blessing of the Lord upon this effort to save the homeless little ones of our State from death—physical and eternal.]

THE INIQUITY OF THE FATHERS UPON THE CHILDREN.

I have been going through the institutions where I have had the privilege of looking upon the insane people confined there, and I have found out the following:

Many people are insane because of the sins of their parents—results of crime on future generations. At the recent meeting of the Congress of Criminal Anthropology at Geneva, Switzerland, Dr. Legrain, physician-in-chief of the asylum of Ville-Evarard, gave the results of his investigation, which extended over a period of years, and showed how sin, like disease, is transmitted from drunken father to appetite-enslaved son; how in such soil the seeds of crime and madness develop and ripen in the last generation into sterile idiocy and the extinction of the race.

First Generation.—He traced the tions, or families, gave him a total of 17 children; all were mentally unsound and physically stunted; 2 were insane, 4 subject to convulsions, 2 epilepsy, 2 hysteria, 1 meningitis, 3 scrofula.

Summing up the 814 cases found in the 215 families, he found 32.2 per cent. were alcoholics, 60.9 per cent. were degenerates, 13.9 per cent. morally irresponsible, 22.7 per cent. have convulsions, 19 per cent. are incurably insane; 174 disappeared from this world before or almost before having drawn their first breath; 93 cases of tuberculosis, which bring the total of those who died from hereditary alcoholism up to one-third.

There is no fifth generation, for the last line is a microcephalous idiot. Thus Moses was right, as proven by science, when he said, "God visits the iniquities of the parents unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Him." There is no fifth.

Sin is an awful thing. If I could uncover it so that some of you could see it you would shrink back from it as you would shrink back from a man who is a leper.

The Sunday Schools Will Help the Orphanage.

The children that have parents will help the children who have none.

Brother Mastin is planning for a great Orphanage campaign in the Sunday schools of the Conference during the month of June.

It is a happy thought; and June, the month of roses and rosy childhood, is a happy time for it.

And it will succeed. What else could appeal so strongly to the child heart?

course of four generations of drinkers in 215 families. One hundred and sixty-eight families showed unmistakable symptoms of degeneracy; 63 cases of mild insanity; 88 were mentally unsound; 45 at times dangerously insane; many of the children were weaklings and died at an early age, 6 out of 8 in one case, 10 out of 16 in another. These six latter who remained were all feeble-minded and had epileptic fits and were a prey to evil instincts. In 39 families were found convulsions; epilepsy in 52; hysteria in 16; meningitis in 5; 108 families out of the 215 counted one out of every 2 individuals victims of periodical alcoholic delirium; in 106 families of the 215, insanity had developed.

Second Generation.—Ninety-eight observations gave the following: 54 families had one or more members who were imbeciles or idiots; in 23 families there were those who were morally irresponsible, untimely births, extraordinary mortality and hereditary diseases caused the children to die in appalling numbers. At this stage the fathers and mothers had become common drunkards with but 8 exceptions. In 42 families he found chronic cases of convulsions, and epilepsy in 40. In 23 families insanity exists.

Third Generation.—Seven observa-

There are very many people who are insane from overwork. It is the tendency of the times. Permit me to read to you an editorial given in one of our recent papers.—Dr. Chapman.

[This movement to establish the Virginia Conference Orphanage is a movement to put the Church in position to save the children from sin and its awful consequences.]

JUNIOR LEAGUE CRADLE.

Every one is interested now in the success of our Orphanage. A beautiful building is going up near Richmond, with a $4,000 brick cottage on either side of it. Brother Mastin's plan for raising current expenses is about to be tested throughout the Conference. I suppose that every pastoral charge is making great preparations for "Orphanage Day." The big folks will be asked to give their dollars, and they will give them right cheerily, because everybody loves to help the orphans. It is going to be a great pleasure for us grown folks to give some of our money to help those dear little orphan children.

Now, Brother Mastin says: "Our children ought to have a chance to help; because they are children, and they know how children feel." Suppose Brother Mastin carries out his plan of establishing an infant department in the Vincent Cottage—a home for the dear little baby orphans—I wonder if our Junior League would undertake to support that department? Now, children and friends, what do you say? I think I can answer for our Junior League in Capron with both hands up.

We have one of the finest, if not the finest, Junior League in the Conference. Our Juniors have little heads, but big hearts, and they will do their part. Won't you do your part?

Would it not be well for each Junior League to write to Mrs. W. H. Vincent, Capron, Va., and say about how much each is willing to raise during the year to keep this great Orphanage cradle rocking?

Sister Vincent has charge of our Junior League here, and she is known far and near as Aunt Lizzie.

Now, children, write to Aunt Lizzie. You will delight her heart and help the good cause

V. W. BARGAMIN.

CHILD SAVING.

The following paper was written by the Superintendent of Public Charities of the city of Richmond. Mr. Davis, by appointment of the Governor, represented this State in the National Conference of Charities at its meeting in Topeka, Kansas, two years ago, and again in Washington, D. C., last year. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Laurel Industrial School, and of the Children's Home Society of Virginia. He is in better touch with the destitution in our State than any man among us. He is up-to-date on all questions of charity and help.

CHILD SAVING.

Of the many sorrowful experiences that have come to me in my work, none are more pathetic than to see homes broken up prematurely by the sudden death of the bread-winner, or, what is worse than death, the parents immoral and addicted to strong drink, their families in abject poverty, sometimes as many as five or six children, ranging in age from five to twelve years, without any restraint or training.

Family ties are sacred, but in such cases the solidity of homes must be broken up for the unquestioned good of communities, because those children will constitute a part of the men and women of our State in a few years. Society must be protected. But the essential value of the child is its influence for weal or woe, and above all its soul's salvation. The lesson must be early learned that personal interest is best subserved by personal effort. It is the work of the Orphanage to establish or re-establish moral harmony in the soul. Hope is a more potent agent for good than fear, reward than punishment. Self-interest must be awakened, the living soul must be won, dependent and delinquent children must be entrusted to the great religious bodies that have some heart and take an interest in them, and will give some attention to their moral education. As regards dependent children, I do not think you will ever be able in the most scientific charity system to get as much heart in an institution managed by the

(Continued on page 12.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 25.

Text of the Lesson. Acts xiii, 43-52.
Memory Verses. 16, 17—Golden Text,
 Acts xiii, 38—Commentary Prepared
 by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

13. Paul and Barnabas, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

Crossing from Cyprus to the mainland, they arrive at Perga, where John Mark left them and returned to Jerusalem. Thence they journey to Antioch, in Pisidia, and are found in the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and, being invited to speak, Paul begins at the exodus of Israel from Egypt and preaches unto them Jesus and the resurrection and through Him the forgiveness of sins. After the service many asked to hear those words again the next Sabbath, and as they followed Paul and Barnabas they urged them to continue in the grace of God.

44. And the next Sabbath day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

The apostles had no doubt spoken to many through the week, and those who had heard the preceding Sabbath had not been quiet about the wondrous resurrection story and the consequent great redemption so fully and freely proclaimed. It became the talk of the town, and an immense congregation assembled not to hear the wisdom or the oratory of the apostles, but to hear the word of God.

45. But when the Jews saw the multitudes they were filled with envy and spake against those things.

Such manifest working of the Holy Spirit could not but provoke the adversary to envy and blasphemy. Compare Acts v, 33; vii, 54. If none of the religious people of a community is stirred to talk against the preaching, it is an evidence either that he is wonderfully in sympathy with Christ or that the preaching lacks salt (II Tim. iii, 12; Col. iv, 6). There are not many who are willing to endure sound doctrine (II Tim. iv, 3).

46. It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the gentiles.

To the Jew first, then to the gentiles, was the principle acted upon in all apostolic preaching (Acts iii, 26; Rom. i, 16). Man has the power of receiving or putting from him this great gift of everlasting life which God has provided at such infinite cost.

47. I have set thee to be a light of the gentiles that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

Paul's commission was to bear the name of the Lord not only before the children of Israel, but before the gentiles (Acts ix, 15), and he quotes from Isa. xlix, 6, concerning Israel's Messiah, called the Servant of the Lord. While the mystery of the church is not clearly revealed in the Old Testament (Eph. iii, 5, 6), the calling of the gentile nations after Israel shall have been converted is an oft repeated fact, and yet Paul gathers from this passage something concerning his mission to the gentiles.

48. And when the gentiles heard this they were glad and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

The gentiles gave heed to the message, and by receiving the word of the Lord they glorified it and were made glad in Him whom they thus received. In this age not all are given to Christ, but all who are given shall come, and whosoever will may come, with the assurance that none who come will be cast out (John vi, 37; Rev. xxii, 17). This is the time of salvation for the elect church, after which shall come the salvation of all Israel and then of all nations.

49. And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

This is the work and the privilege of every redeemed one, for it is written, "Let him that heareth say come." And if we have received the gospel for ourselves it is not for ourselves only, but we have been intrusted with the message that others through us may hear it also, and to all who have not yet heard we are debtors and should say, "As much as in me is I am ready to give them the gospel" (Rev. xxii, 17; I Thess. ii, 4; Rom. i, 14, 15).

50. But the Jews stirred up the devout and honorable women and the chief men of the city and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas and expelled them out of their coasts.

Was it for this the Spirit sent them forth? Did He know that they would be thus rejected and ill treated? Yes, perfectly did He know it all, and even our Lord Himself told them before He died that they would be put out of the synagogues and killed for His sake, and they must not be offended nor afraid (John xvi, 1, 2; Matt. x, 28).

51. But they shook off the dust of their feet against them and came unto Iconium.

Compare chapter xviii, 6, and see their instructions in Mark vi, 11; Luke ix, 5. It is our glorious privilege to proclaim the glad tidings, to make known the love of God, to offer to all in His name eternal redemption through the blood of Christ, knowing that as we go so in reliance upon the Holy Spirit His word will never return to Him void.

52. And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost.

All that we are called upon to bear for the sake of Christ and His truth should be borne cheerfully, for He has taught us to be exceeding glad and leap for joy under such circumstances (Matt. v, 10-12; Luke vi, 22, 23). We are told that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us; that our afflictions are light compared with His and but for a moment when compared with eternity.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 25.
 "Some Modern Missionary Achievements"—Text, Zech. iv, 6; II Chron. xvi, 9; Ps. cxviii, 23; Matt. xxi, 42—Read Matt. v.

"Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

The last century saw more rapid and striking changes in the modes of life in many lands than any previous age with which we are acquainted. Methods of manufacture and distribution of goods were completely revolutionized. It has been thought that the church of Christ has not kept pace with the great advance in material interests. It is well to give some thought to the changes wrought in the religious aspects of the world by Christianity during the past century and see what advance has been made.

In the first place, the languages of the various sections of the earth have been learned, dictionaries made and the Christian Scriptures translated into them, printed and circulated by the millions of copies. The work of such men as William Carey should be recognized. The men who pioneered as missionaries and laid foundations for our recent great ingathering of converts should never be forgotten, though their work may lack the thrilling interest and dramatic incidents connected with that in other departments. At one time Carey had in progress the translation of the Bible into twenty-six of the oriental languages. Similar labor on a less extensive scale has been done in all parts of the world. Such achievements have not been seen since the early missionary ages of Christianity, if ever before.

Another notable matter is the exploration by missionary effort of all lands of the globe. Geographical knowledge has been more enlarged in this way than in any other. To trace on the map of the world the progress of discovery in the past hundred years is to follow the route of the missionaries' campfires through the lands of darkness. Vast tracts have by these means been opened to civilization.

The emergence of various peoples in widely separated lands, coming from savagery and barbarism to culture and enlightenment, shows the influence of Christian missions. Hawaii owes all its prosperity to this source. Japan, Korea, Fiji and the south Pacific islands and great parts of Africa have felt the thrill of new life in response to evangelizing agencies.

What a change has passed over the spirit of the church in regard to financial matters! Not long since there was little or no interest in the welfare of any people beyond one's immediate vicinity. The salvation of the heathen had scarcely a thought bestowed upon it even in the most active Christian communities. Now the great mass of the followers of Jesus are fully committed to the evangelization of the world. Even the young people give of their means to this end, and Christendom counts her annual contributions for this purpose by the scores of millions of dollars.

The workers have multiplied amazingly. An army of consecrated volunteers, with health, education and consecration, are in training or waiting to go forth. No day of earth ever before looked on such a sight.

The appliances are increased. Everything for cure of bodies and enlightenment of mind and uplift of soul has been pressed into service with holy zeal.

A little while since and one could know the details of most of the mission work of the world. Now it is so multiplied and complex that he can scarcely master the outlines of work in his own denomination.

The Motive Power.

I may not live a little, petty, self centered life, because the love of Christ constraineth me to reach out and realize in my being all that He calls me to be. I may not dwell at ease in my narrow tent, for the love of Christ constraineth me to care for all who feel the weight of sin, the power of temptation, the press of struggle, the pain and bitterness of losses. I may not seek to perfect my own soul just for the joys of timeless heaven, for the love of Christ constraineth me to find my joy in helping to bring the heavenly life into as many lives as possible. I may not wear a gloomy face or lose heart over the trials or evils of the present world, for the love of Christ constraineth me to enter into the joy of service, the victory of faith and the grandeur of life.—Rufus M. Jones.

You Will Never Be Sorry—

For living a white life, for doing your level best, for your faith in humanity, for being kind to the poor, for looking before leaping, for hearing before judging, for being candid and frank, for thinking before speaking.

No Abiding Blessing.

Without Christ and vital fellowship with Him there may be activity enough to churn an ocean and work that can be piled mountain high, and yet an abiding blessing would be with it all Moravian.

An Ancient Inscription.

In the ancient cathedral of Lull, north Germany, there is an old slab bearing the admonitory inscription:

Thus speaketh Christ our Lord to us:
 Ye call Me Master and obey Me not;
 Ye call Me Light and see Me not;
 Ye call Me Way and walk Me not;
 Ye call Me Life and desire Me not;
 Ye call Me Wise and follow Me not;
 Ye call Me Fair and love Me not;
 Ye call Me Itch and ask Me not;
 Ye call Me Eternal and seek Me not;
 Ye call Me Gracious and trust Me not;
 Ye call Me Noble and serve Me not;
 Ye call Me Mighty and honor Me not;
 Ye call Me Just and fear Me not;
 If I condemn you, blame Me not.

—Pennsylvania School Journal

RUSSIAN LIQUOR "REFORM."

Failure of an Attempt to Break the Saloon Habit.

The attempt made by the Russian government to break up the saloon habit and lessen the temptation to drink by forcing consumers to buy their vodka in sealed packages and take home instead of drinking it on premises must be regarded, I think, a failure, says George Kennan in Outlook. The peasants do not take the "mono-polka" home. They drink in the streets.

Official and unofficial reports from parts of European Russia agree in saying that the most noticeable result of the establishment of the government monopoly is the great and alarming increase of street drunkenness and disorder. A peasant now buys a bottle of vodka, carries it away and drinks himself into a state of helplessness or quarrelsome intoxication, perhaps in the street within a hundred yards of government shop.

Members of the Nizhni-Novgorod council, who have recently made study of this disquieting feature of reform, report that an overwhelming majority of consumers in that city drink their vodka in the open streets, fighting, the robbery of women and tempting of boys to drink by group, intoxicated peasants; that the police have to be withdrawn from other parts of the city in order to strengthen force in the vicinity of the government shops, and that the city hospitals are overcrowded as a result of taking peasants who have become ill from exposure to cold or rain while lying drunk out of doors.

Reports of a similar character have come from the provinces of Ufa, Moscow, Tambov, Pultava, Viatka, Saratov and Riazan.

DRINK AMONG WOMEN

Bishop Coleman of Delaware declares the Evil Still Grows.

The Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Delaware, declared in a recent mission address in New Brunswick, N. J., that educated, cultured men are growing more temperate, but that drunkenness is making rapid strides among the women of the so called better classes.

Dr. Coleman made the statement at St. John's Episcopal church, and a profound sensation was occasioned among its aristocratic members. The bishop spoke on "Intemperance." He said: "Of late there has been an improvement as far as men are concerned,

I believe that there is today a growing amount of drunkenness among women in our land. A short while ago I addressed a meeting of leading society women in New York city and made the same statement. Investigation since then has proved it to be literally correct as far as New York city is concerned, and I venture to say it with less trepidation than before that there is an increase in the number of intemperate women.

"I am sorry to say that it appertains to mothers particularly, those who have the care and instruction of our future men and women. It is a sad outlook when mothers are not living in soberness."

A BLOW TO RUM.

Drastic Action Taken by Several Western Railways.

The railroads are drawing total abstinence lines closer about their employees. Heretofore the stringent rule against the use of liquor while on duty has been confined chiefly to those operating trains. Now, says The Union Signal, a universal order has been issued by several of the large western railways prohibiting all intoxicants to all employees while on duty and declaring that the frequenting of liquor places when off duty is sufficient cause for dismissal. This includes the great army in the bridge and building departments, the depots and offices and all the multitudinous branches of the railway system.

If the other large commercial interests of the country would follow suit, we should soon have a temperance campaign of such majestic proportions that saloons would be practically swept from the face of the earth.

A Noteworthy Meeting.

Under the auspices of the ministerial association of Joliet, Ill., a notable temperance mass meeting was held recently. The speakers were bankers, judges, merchants, teachers, railway managers, editors and workingmen. All bore testimony to the need of total abstinence by the man who succeeds in life. Earnest, thoughtful appeals were made for a higher grade of citizenship, which will banish the saloon.

Going Down the Hill.

A year ago his eyes were clear,
He had a cheerful way,
But deep despair was in his air
When I met him yesterday.
He tried at first to smile and jest,
To keep it from me, still
His manner plainly showed that he Was going down the hill.

Through tears he told his bitter tale;
The story's trite and old;
A stumble, and the start was made;
He'd lost his slender hold!
"And, oh," he cried in bitterness,
"It takes a mighty will
To put the brake on when you've once Got started down the hill!"

"I see the ones I love distressed,
I hear them cry for bread,
And when she meets me at the door
Her eyes are wet and red.
I've tried to change the course of things,
I've prayed for succor, still
There seems to be no stopping when You've started down the hill!"

He shambled on, with head low bowed,
He that a year ago
Could overlook the surging crowd,
Now piteous and low!
I watch him stumble through a door—
Alas, as weaklings will—
And lean against a gilded bar
That tilted down the hill.
—S. E. Kiser in Locomotive Engineer.

It is a good deal easier to forget what we ought to know than it is to know what we ought to forget.

Fenn's Balsam Relieves Right Away and makes a speedy end of coughs and colds

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—by a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. It has no taste or odor. It is air tight and acid proof. It is easily applied. Useful in many other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake.

Sold everywhere. Made by
STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY

THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and
NORTH CAROLINA.

Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.

LURAY GROTTOS
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS

NORFOLK
ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLUMBUS
AND THE NORTH WEST.

Write for Rates, Maps, Time Tables, Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptions, etc., to any Agent or to
W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, FRAGG,
GENERAL PASS AGENT, DIVISION OF THE RAILWAY, BLACKSTONE, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

D. R. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All prescriptions compounded by expert class Drugists

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than ..... 4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 ..... 3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,
STIFF MUSCLES,
STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

SCIATICA, LUMBAGO
PAIN IN THE BACK
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS,

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."

"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.

Sample copies to any desired address.

THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE ORPHANAGE.

Near Broad street, less than a mile beyond the western limits of Richmond city, is our Orphanage, destined to be one of the noblest charities of our beloved Church. As we contemplate the sacred purpose for which this institution has been undertaken, our hearts grow warm with hope, and our prayers go up for God's blessing upon it.

We need spend no time wondering why this thing has not been done before; we can best atone for past neglect by consecrated effort now and henceforth. Let none tell us that we are weak—unable to complete so difficult a task. Does it cost too much to save the little ones, fatherless, motherless, hopeless, drifting away to the shores of ruin? Is gold so dear or ease so sweet that the orphan's cry neither opens our purse nor moves our hand to help? Does not the pitiful appeal of helpless children call up the words of the Lord Jesus: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to faith as this! No; we are not weak. It will not cost too much. The burden we have taken up will not be too heavy. It rests to-day upon a sure foundation. The Virginia Conference Orphanage is pillared upon four score and ten thousand brave, true hearts, whose latent fires of love, from the cloud-kissed summits of our mighty hills to the shores of the far blue sea, are kindling into flame. The story of this good work is being told through the land, and the people are making their contributions. The buildings are rapidly going up, and funds to complete them are urgently needed.

But the erection of buildings is not all. That is only preparatory to the accomplishment of the real object of the institution. The enterprise must be perpetuated and supported. It ought to be made an enduring monument of our sincere thanksgiving to Almighty God for His great blessings to Methodism in Virginia. Prompted by love, planted in faith, and fostered by the observe one day in May and one in November of each year for making their regular semi-annual donations in money and in kind to the Orphanage, and that these contributions shall be under the care and management of the local societies, with the supervision of the pastors.

THE ORPHANAGE GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS.

Shakespeare, that consummate master of expression and of human nature, well said:

"The evil that men do lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones."

The evil nature is so dominant in us that we seem more prone to recall the bad than the good of the life of a man.

There are acts, however, that cannot be forgotten, good deeds that men do, which, being ever present with us in the shape of institutions for the amelioration of suffering and the relief of the distressed, serving as monuments,

THE ORPHANAGE BUILDINGS AS THEY

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

"Anybody can tel whether a shoe is well made or not, but when it pinches, not everyone can tell where the trouble is.

one of the least of these, ye did it not to me?"

Had heaven hesitated at the cost of human redemption, the world must have perished. Thank God! "He spared not His own Son, but freely delivered Him up for us all; how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

When great plans for good are laid upon our hearts, it is not the part of Christ's followers to falter. There is a faith so strong that it can grapple with the years ahead and bring future possibilities into present reality; this is "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." May God give our beloved Church such a undying gratitude of tens of thousands of true hearts, it cannot, will not fail. And yet we must try to plan wisely and well. We shall need some general, systematic and continued plan of effort for support. The following suggestions, therefore, are respectfully offered to the Board of Trustees:

1. That steps be taken, as soon as possible, to establish an endowment fund.
2. That the financial agent be authorized to organize in Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, and in churches societies for the support of the Orphanage, providing such constitution and by-laws for the same as may be needed.
3. That our people be requested to testify to the good that is in man. Looking over the whole field of human benevolences, there seems to be nothing nobler, grander, and more Christ-like to do than is now being done by the Methodists of Virginia as an organized body in the founding and the maintaining of a great institution for the care of the fatherless and motherless and homeless and destitute children of the State.

Such a good deed cannot be buried, for it was conceived, projected and is to be supported by the Church of the Living God, which cannot die. There has nothing been done by the Methodist Church in my day, nor I believe during its history, besides the preaching of the Word, which can be compared with the Orphanage for far-reaching and permanent good.

When we think of the resources of the Church, its ample ability to do the work, and that there are hundreds of waifs in our borders, growing up in ignorance and vice, suffering, many of them, even for the very necessities of life, it is absolutely amazing that the movement was not started decades ago.

One has only to talk with Brother Mastin of these dear little ones he is so much interested in, and then to think of one's own, who, alike helpless, have what they need, for his heart to be touched and his eyes to fill with sympathetic tears. Think of a child homeless, friendless, adrift, as a part of the flotsam and jetsam on the sea of life.

Many such Brother Mastin is already in touch with, ready to gather into their home, which is rapidly being prepared for them, a haven of rest, almost heaven to them, comparatively.

Professor Graham Taylor, who is do-of red brick with granite trimmings.

They stand facing the main road, some two hundred yards distant, the Administration building in the centre, and the Branch and Vincent "cottages" on either side. These cottages will accommodate thirty children each, together with attendants. In the Administration building will be located the officers, assembly and school-rooms, etc., besides which there will remain room for lodging children; so that the capacity of the Orphanage, with the completion of these buildings, will be about 120. The rooms are to be large and well ventilated, and will be heated with steam. The land, which, mostly arable, is idle at present, will no doubt be made to produce in time by judicious management no little revenue. Being so near the city, it seems to me that if the right man can be secured, it might be made to pay well if put down in market gardening. This, of course, would require some outlay for labor, implements, etc., the success deures in all these respects, the more enthused I become and the more thankful to God for bringing it about.

It is an important factor to be considered in the solution of the slum problem, which is confronting the larger cities at this time as never before. Worked conjointly and intelligently with the missions established in these localities, the good which will result can only be calculated by Omniscience.

Brethren all over the State, let us rally to the support of our Orphanage. We do not know that some day, through the vicissitudes of fortune, it may be helpful in a trying time to some of our offspring; even if not, there is nothing we can do, as before said, more Christ-like than to save "these little ones."

DR. F. W. STIFF,

Richmond, Va.

***

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

them out of mischief is a very small thing compared with the Leagues as a school for the development of those strong, noble traits of character that really go to make up the life of Christ in the human soul.

The proposition to give each League a special work to do is one full of inspiration and promise. I should feel my heart swell, could I go some day to the splendid building of our Orphanage and see on the door of a room the inscription "Martinsville League Room." And I feel sure there are thousands of our young people that feel as I do about this matter. Deeply as my heart yearns over the children of heathen lands, it cannot forget the wail of the little waifs of our own streets and lanes. Fatherless, motherless, they go down the road to ignorance, vice, and death. We must get our young people to feel for these little breaking hearts. I trust the response to dear "Aunt Liz-zie" (Mrs. Vincent) will be general from all the Conference. The "Stars

WILL APPEAR WHEN COMPLETED.

ing such a great work among the masses, the working people of Chicago, says, "A man is no more a Christian, perpendicularly, toward God than he is one, horizontally, toward his fellow-man." I believe that to be true. Let us never forget that Christ said, Love God and your neighbor.

What can be more neighborly than to succor the waifs of misfortune? I recently had the pleasure to visit with Brother Mastin the beautifully located seventy-five acre farm situated about a mile west of Richmond, on which is being erected, on a commanding elevation, the Orphanage buildings.

These buildings are of noble proportions and of enduring material, being pending more on the management than anything else. It is proposed to erect at some time when the enterprise is well established an industrial plant for the training of the children, so that when they are ready to leave the home and make their way in the world, there will be no difficulty in securing work for them. It is expected that the cottages will be ready to occupy about the 1st of July.

It is a great and noble work, and the more I think of its possibilities for good in the building up of character and body, and the development of the mind of the unfortunate children around us, who, without such aid, would be so handicapped as to be fail-

THE LEAGUE AND THE ORPHANS.

The visit of Brother Mastin to our church was a pleasure and a blessing. He brought before our people the great cause in which he is engaged with a power that came from the presentation of eloquent facts from a warm heart. One thought he deeply impressed on my heart, and that was that the young people of our Leagues now have opened to them in the providence of God a door of usefulness into which they should press most earnestly. Unless the League work shall develop the piety and the liberality of our young people, it will be largely a failure. The League, merely as an institution for coddling our young people and keeping of Bethlehem" will lead many to the Saviour. How many are there of the 72,000 children in the Sunday-school of the Conference that will not be glad to give one little dime a year for poor little homeless ones? It would be a beautiful plan to set a box on the breakfast table, and as we ask God to bless our food, to put in a penny for those that have none. We might then say "God bless the hungry" with new love and a clearer conscience.

What do you say, dears? Can't we all go to work for the little ones?

W. W. ROYALL.

***

"Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."

Talmage Sermon

WASHINGTON. — In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls attention to causes of thanksgiving that are seldom recognized and shows how to cultivate a cheerful spirit; text, Psalms xxxiii, 2, "Sing unto him with a psaltery and an instrument of ten strings."

A musician as well as poet and conqueror and king was David, the author of my text. He first composed the sacred rhythm and then played it upon a harp, striking and plucking the strings with his fingers and thumbs. The harp is the oldest of musical instruments. Jubal invented it, and he was the seventh descendant from Adam. Its music was suggested by the twang of the bowstring. Homer refers to the harp in the "Iliad." It is the most consecrated of all instruments. The flute is more mellow, the bugle more martial, the cornet more incisive, the trumpet more resonant, the organ more mighty, but the harp has a tenderness and sweetness belonging to no other instrument that I know of. It enters into the richest symbolism of the Holy Scriptures. The captives in their sadness "hung their harps upon the willows." The raptures of heaven are represented under the figure of "harpers harping on their harps." We learn from coins and medals that in the Macabean age the harp had only three strings. In other ages it had eight strings. David's harp had ten strings, and when his great soul was afire with the theme his sympathetic voice, accompanied by exquisite vibration of the chords, must have been overpowering.

With as many things to complain about as any man ever had David wrote more anthems than any other man ever wrote. He puts even the frosts and hailstorms and tempests and creeping things and flying fowl and the mountains and the hills and day and night into a chorus. Absalom's plotting and Abithophel's treachery and hosts of antagonists and sleepless nights and a running sore could not hush his psalmody. Indeed, the more his troubles the mightier his sacred poems. The words "praise" and "song" are so often repeated in his psalms that one would think the typesetter's case containing the letters with which those words are spelled would be exhausted.

In my text David calls upon the people to praise the Lord with an instrument of ten strings, like that which he was accustomed to finger. The simple fact is that the most of us, if we praise the Lord at all, play upon one string or two strings or three strings when we ought to take a harp fully chorded and with glad fingers sweep all the strings. Instead of being grateful for here and there a blessing we happen to think of, we ought to rehearse all our blessings so far as we can recall them and obey the injunction of my text to sing unto him with an instrument of ten strings.

Remember Daily Blessings.

Have you ever thanked God for de- lightsome food? What vast multitudes are a-hungered from day to day or are obliged to take food not toothsome or pleasant to the taste! What millions are in struggle for bread! A Confederate soldier went to the front, and his family were on the verge of starvation, but they were kept up by the faith of a child of that household, who, noticing that some supply was sure to come, exclaimed, "Mother, I think God hears when we scrape the bottom of the barrel."

Have you appreciated the fact that on most of your tables are luxuries that do not come to all? Have you realized what varieties of flavor often touch your tongue and how the saccharin and the acid have been afforded your palate? What fruits, what nuts, what meats regale your appetite, while many would be glad to get the crusts and rinds and peelings that fall from your table. For the fine flavors and the luxurious viands you have enjoyed for a lifetime perhaps you have never expressed to God a word of thanksgiving. That is one of the ten strings that you ought to have thrummed in praise to God, but you have never yet put it in vibration.

Have you thanked God for eyesight as originally given to you or, after it was dimmed by age, for the glass that brought the page of the book within the compass of the vision? Have you realized the privation those suffer to whom the day is as black as the night and who never see the face of father or mother or wife or child or friend? Through what painful surgery many have gone to get one glimpse of the light! The yes so delicate and beautiful and useful that one of them is invaluable! And most of us have two of these wonders of divine mechanism. The man of millions of dollars who recently went blind from atrophy of optic nerve would have been willing to give all his millions and become a day laborer if he could have kept off the blindness that gradually crept over his vision.

You may have noticed how Christ's sympathies were stirred for the blind. Ophthalmia has always been prevalent in Palestine, the custom of sleeping on the housetops, exposed to the dew and the flying dust of the dry season, inviting this dreadful disorder. A large percentage of the inhabitants could not tell the difference between 12 o'clock at noon and 12 o'clock at night. We are told of six of Christ's miracles for the cure of these sightless ones, but I suppose they were only specimens of hundreds of restored visions. What a pitiful spectacle Saul of Tarsus, the mighty man, three days led about in physical as well as spiritual darkness, he who afterward made Felix tremble by his eloquence and awed the Athenian philosophers on Mars hill and was the only cool headed man in the Alexandria cornship that went to pieces on the rocks of Miletus, once the mighty persecutor of Saul, afterward the glorious evangelist Paul, for three days not able to take a safe step without guidance!

Two Strings of Gratitude.

Have you ever given thanks for two eyes—media between the soul inside and the world outside, media that no one but the infinite God could create? The eye, the window of our immortal nature, the gate through which all colors march, the picture gallery of the soul! Without the eye this world is a big dungeon. I fear that many of us have never given one hearty expression of gratitude for treasure of sight, the loss of which is the greatest disaster possible unless it be the loss of the mind. Those wondrous seven muscles that turn the eye up or down, to right or left or around. No one but God could have created the retina. If we have ever appreciated what God did when he gave us two eyes, it was when we saw others with obliterated vision. Alas, that only through the privation of others we came to a realization of our own blessing! If you had harp in hand and swept all the strings of gratitude, you would have struck this, which is one of the most dulcet of the ten strings.

Further, notice how many pass through life in silence because the ear refuses to do its office. They never hear music, vocal or instrumental. The thunder that rolls its full diapason through the heavens does not startle the prolonged silence. The air that has for us so many melodies has no sweet sound for them. They live in a quietude that will not be broken until heaven breaks in upon them with its harmonies. The bird voices of the springtime, the chatter of the children, the sublime chant of the sea, the solo of the cantatrice and the melody of the great worshipping assemblies mean nothing to them. Have we devoutly thanked God for these two wonders of our hearing, with which we can now put ourselves under the charm of sweet sound and also carry in our memories the infantile song with which our mothers put us to sleep, and the voices of the great prima donnas like Lind and Patti and Neilson, and the sound of instruments like the violin of the Swedish performer, or the cornet of Arluckle, or the mightiest of all instruments, with the band of Morgan on the keys and his foot on the pedal, or some Sabbath tune like "Coronation," in the acclaim of which you could hear the crowns of heaven coming down at the feet of Jesus? Many of us have never thanked God for this hearing apparatus of the soul. That is one of the ten strings of gratitude that we ought always to thrum after hearing the voice of a loved one or the last strain of an oratorio or the clang of a cathedral tower.

Further, there are many who never recognize how much God gives them when he gives them sleep. Insomnia is a calamity wider known in our land than in any other. By midlife vast multitudes have their nerves so overwrought that slumber has to be coaxed, and many are the victims of chloral and morphine. Sleeplessness is an American disorder. If it has not touched you and you can rest for seven or eight hours without waking—if for that length of time in every twenty-four hours you can be free of all care and worryment and your nerves are retuned and your limbs escape from all fatigue and the rising sun finds you a new man, body, mind and soul—you have an advantage that ought to be put in prayer and song and congratulation. The French financier, almost wealthy enough to purchase a kingdom, but the victim of insomnia, wrote, "No slumber to be bought in any market." He was right. Sleep is a gratuity from him who never sleeps. Oh, the felicities of slumber! Let all who have this real benefaction celebrate it. That is one of the sweetest strings in all the instrument of ten strings.

Further, let us gratefully acknowledge the power of physical locomotion. To be able to go where we wish and all unaided—what a kindness! What multitudes have to call in the aid of cane and crutch and invalid's chair, and their whole life is a hindrance! How hard to get about with lack of strong and healthy and supple limbs! Congratulated ought you all to be if you have the usual physical endowment, and sympathized with ought all those to be who can neither walk nor climb nor enter upon any great activities. That is one of the thousands of reasons why rate war with a complete nation. It takes off with bullet or shell or surgeon's knife the capacity of men to achieve their own livelihood or do the work for which they would otherwise be fully qualified. Brave men, self-sacrificing men, for the rest of their life are put on the limits and strangely suffer in stormy weather from limbs amputated.

Give Thanks For Sound Limbs.

How much of the human family in every century has been cut up by shot to pieces and passed into mutilation! American manhood had hardly recovered from the lacerations of the war of the Revolution when it was called to be carved by the swords and stabbed with the bayonets and blackened with the gunpowder of 1812. Hardly recovered was our American manhood from that when the war with Mexico began its butchery. Hardly was American manhood recovered from that before the civil war took hold of it and dug its grave trench through the north and its grave trench through the south. Hardly was our American manhood recovered from that when the Spanish war came, with its malaria and crowded hospitals. Thank God that now four of the greatest nations are allied in good understanding—the United States, England, Germany and Russia—and if they will do the right thing they can forever stop national and international strife and put an end to wholesale amputation. There are enough accidents in time of peace to keep the race mutilated more than it ever ought to be, and the human family needs all its arms and hands and feet to do the work that God calls it to do.

Further, celebrate on the instrument of ten strings our illumined nights. They spread their tents over us, and some of us hardly go out to look at them. During the nights other worlds come in sight. The author of my text chimed the silver bells in the tower of the midnight heavens, saying, "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers; the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him?" We thank God for the day; we ought also to thank him for the night. Worlds on worlds in sight of the naked eye, but more worlds revealed by telescope. At least one night in his lifetime every man ought to go into astronomical observatory and see what has been done by the great World Builder. Thank God for lunar and stellar illumination!

Further, on the instrument of ten strings celebrate the possession of our reason. A severe stroke upon the head or a sudden calamity or any one of fifty kinds of accident might dethrone our reason and leave us worse off than the brute, for the brute has a substitute for reason in what is called instinct, but a man's brain shattered and he has neither mind nor instinct. The asylums for the insane, though all the time multiplying, are not enough to shelter the demented. Through the cramming system employed in many of the schools of this country there are tens of thousands of children having their brain depleted. Philosophers at ten years of age, astronomers at eleven years of age, geologists at twelve years of age. They will be first on examination day, but last in all matters of useful and successful life. It would be amusing to see how much children are expected to learn and know if they were not connected with the tragedies of damaged intellects which follow. Amid the increasing dementia of the world let us appreciate the goodness of God to us if our mental faculties are in

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

3:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Lester Manor with stage for Walkerton and Tappahannock Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays. 5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:50 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M. Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICKE,
General Passenger Agent,
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAR. 2, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:20 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
3:00 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	3:34 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	6:20 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	6:40 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
8:50 A. M.	4:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	9:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
	(Eastern Time.)
1:05 A. M.	8:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
	(Central Time.)
4:40 A. M.	12:05 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
7:52 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Ar. Brunswick.
9:25 A. M.	3:40 P. M.—Ar. Fernandina.
9:05 A. M.	3:50 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	5:10 P. M.—Ar. St. Augustine.
3:15 P. M.	10:00 P. M.—Ar. Tallahassee.
1:48 P. M.	12:40 A. M.—Ar. Ocala.
5:10 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Ar. Orlando.
5:40 P. M.	5:00 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
7:15 P. M.	6:00 A. M.—Ar. Port Tampa.
10:50 P. M.	8:10 A. M.—Ar. Miami.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Drawing-Room, Observation and Compartment Sleeping Cars between New York and St. Augustine. Pullman Dining Cars between New York and Richmond and between Hamlet and St. Augustine. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington and between Richmond and St. Augustine. Pullman Sleeping Cars (tri-weekly) between Washington and Pinehurst. Pullman Sleeping Cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa and between Jacksonville and Orlando. Also, through Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe Cars between Hamlet and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor Cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest Day Coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

Specially obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure TRADE-MARKS write to

CASNOW & CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,

Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing.

Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing

Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

781 Main Street Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,

Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLSand
UMBERYARD

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

—
PLOW HANDLES.—
TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.—
CORN MEAL.—
SLAT & WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Blacksburg, Va.

CHILD SAVING.

(Continued from page 5.)

city as we have in the great religious institutions of our city and State. The avenues of reformation as found in the various child-saving societies are almost as diversified as the conditions, and no doubt are doing a great deal of good. But what would prove beneficial in one case would fail in another. I believe in many cases to place a child in a home by adoption would prove a failure notwithstanding experience and good judgment on the part of those interested, for it is one thing to place a child in a home, and another thing to have the child properly placed. Financial ability is the negative of the requisites. The moral and religious training is paramount to all. I think we lower the standard of an immortal soul when we preach economy in child saving. We should resolve ourselves into a kindergarten and not only adapt ourselves to the individual needs of the children, but seek to win their love for their betterment. I feel like shouting and do praise the Lord when I hear of a life-boat launching out into the great ocean of want and woe, seeking to ameliorate and to lift up the fallen, and especially to reclaim children. I am greatly pleased to know that the Methodist Orphanage will be built. I pray God it may be a permanent oasis in the lives of the children. Your proposed manual school will, I am sure, prove conducive to the success of the children in life, and what a sweet consolation to know that within its environments they will breathe the atmosphere of morality and Christianity, and be placed where the Child Jesus will pour out His Holy Spirit. Your noble Orphanage will mould the characters of men and women who will help to control the future of our glorious old State, and will largely help to precast its destiny. Who can estimate its value for good? Where will its influence end? It will be a great monument of Methodism. I am glad to know that the Orphanage will not be strictly denominational in the admission of children. May no impediments stand in its way, and my earnest prayer shall be that multiplied scores of children may be reclaimed and trained for usefulness through the medium of this Orphanage and Manual School, and fitted and qualified, not only for this life, but for that eternal home above, where life's battles will cease, and where no homeless children or orphans will ever want.

GEORGE B. DAVIS.

DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES.

What one Consecrated Man Has Accomplished in Orphanage Work in Thirty-five Years.

ADDRESS BY REV. HUGH PRICE HUGHES.

At our last annual meeting the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M. A., said: Although everybody has heard of Dr. Barnardo's Homes very few have realized their very special claims upon us all. Let me in a few sentences mention these. In the first place it must be a matter for congratulation that within the last two years an incorporated Association has been formed, so that this great movement no longer depends upon the life of one man. It is gratifying to think that this charity is now placed on a permanent national basis. Some years ago my friend—and the friend of all—children especially—Mr. Benjamin Waugh—who has specially studied child-life, told me that never in the history even of Christian civilization did any human being in any land establish such an institution, so vast and so many-sided, as Dr. Barnardo's Homes. Have you all realized that within the last year alone these beneficent institutions wholly maintained and educated 7,676 children?

To-day, as we have been reminded, there are in its various houses only 5,400 boys and girls. Blessed fact! It means that the rest have gone out to service, or have been emigrated, and the hundreds of young men and women who have just received prizes from Lord Roberts have been an ocular demonstration to us that after they leave the Homes Dr. Barnardo does not forget them or lose sight of them. He watches them with loving care, and they come back again to receive some acknowledgment of their good conduct. For my own part, as one who is proud of the British Empire, and very hopeful of its future, I especially delight in the emigration aspect of this work. During the last year alone they have sent out 1,013 trained boys and girls to our glorious colonies. However rich the British Empire is, it cannot continue unless we have sober, industrious and virtuous men and women; and the more there are of our own race, speaking our own tongue, in Canada, in Australia, and in South Africa, the better for the future of the British Empire. I believe that no one to-day is contributing so much to the better manhood and womanhood of our great colonies as Dr. Barnardo. Remember that his institutions have already successfully sent out to those colonies 12,604 picked youngsters of whom any nation would be proud. Then, turning to the home aspect of things, not less than 5,890 fresh cases of urgent need have been freely admitted to these Homes in two years. Does everybody realize that they are all admitted "without money and without price"? This is an absolute charity: no payment of any kind is made. They take children one day old, and they take boys and girls in their teens. They admit boys at the most dangerous period of all—from fifteen to nineteen years of age. How vast and how varied this grand charity is! And they also admit dying children. Further, it is still Dr. Barnardo's proud boast that they have never refused a single child since the charity began.

They do more than that—they receive not only those who apply, but they are always at work searching in common lodging-houses and in the vilest slums for destitute waifs. I greatly rejoice that this is a Christian charity. It was the love of Christ in the heart of the founder that started the enterprise. I remember some years ago attending a meeting with my sainted friend, Mr. Spurgeon, at his famous Orphanage, and, in his witty way, referring to those who rejected Christianity, he said: "The God that answereth by orphanages, let Him be God"! There are some persons who are very fond of criticising Christians, and especially poor unfortunate Christian ministers like myself. Where has infidelity or atheism ever produced such a charity as we have seen with our own eyes in the Albert Hall to-day? Thank God for a Christian charity like this! It could not live for a year without Christianity! But I rejoice also with the Bishop of Hereford that it is national in its Christian comprehensiveness. It respects the conscientious convictions of all its poor clients. A Churchman's children are brought up as their father would have brought them up had he lived and done his duty.

I am very grateful to be reminded that within the thirty-five years of its existence the public of this country have contributed toward its maintenance nearly two and a half millions sterling. I am very glad that last year more was contributed than in any previous year, notwithstanding the difficulties from which we have all suffered.

My Lord Duke, the modern conscience has been especially confronted by the modern slum, and I am thankful to say that the modern Christian conscience is troubling itself more and more about that accursed feature of our so-called civilization. Dr. Barnardo is teaching us how to deal with the slum children of our great city. Those of us who have had most to do with the slum-life of London—and I may tell you that some of the worst slums are in the West—are well aware that very little can be done with adult life—with men and women who are saturated with the influence of the slum. But take them early enough, begin with them when they are boys and girls, take them as Dr. Barnardo's Homes are taking them, mould and fashion and Christianize them while they are young, and we have had proof together this day that they may become the most sober, industrious and virtuous citizens of the Empire! So may God bless these National Homes.

HOW DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES ARE SUPPORTED.

Personal Notes must necessarily be very brief this month. I can only, therefore, give a few examples, culled from the correspondence of the year, of the various sources from which splendid and most welcome aid has reached our treasure house. They are bricks which may be regarded as samples of a building erected by the hands of love from all over the world.

"I have been engaged in a business for some years which has not produced satisfactory results," writes a Godalming correspondent, "but, believing it to be the right thing, I have persevered, and now there is some good result." This is evidenced by a "first-fruits" of £39 13s. towards our Emigration fund. £10 from Fareham is described as "Unclaimed dividends, the rightful owner of which cannot, and, I imagine, now never will be found." "G. H. I." an anonymous Birmingham contributor, sends us the welcome gift of £50, "for the furthering of Christ's kingdom amongst the poor children." And from Wales the handsome sum of £333 6s. 8d. represents the practical sympathy of another modest and most generous friend of needy childhood.

Many and varied, indeed, are the sources from which our income is derived. Here, for instance, is a contribution of £6 from the Superintendent of Police at Tadmecaster, accounted for as "proceeds of a cricket match played by my men in aid of your Homes." 8s. 6d. from a sympathizer in Herts was obtained in this novel manner: The sender explains, "Through the summer we had a few Sunday-school treats. I provided visitors with soap and water and towels, and let them come to my house and wash. I made no charge, but passed your box round"! Certainly an instance of how the "littles" can be made telling! On the same lines of multiplication, we have a donation from a Lieccester friend of £2 6s. 8d., no less than £1 12s. 2d. of which is described as having been "raised from one penny". And from Nailsea comes the really remarkable record of £6 16s. 4d., being the outcome of that old-established "Sunday Egg League," which has sent the children so many gifts in years that are by-gone. Perhaps some of our readers, living in the country, will make a note of what the collection of weekly eggs has run up to in the course of a twelve-month!

Our ingenious, clever-fingered friends are always to the fore in records of special efforts on behalf of my bairns. From Shrewsbury, for example, a faithful helper sends a donation of £32, the result of her annual sale of work, "in which," she explains, "the villagers of Cressage, and other kind friends, took such an interest." £30 from Walthamstow is the outcome of "another year's sale of work," on the part of a very practical sympathiser. And from a country village in Yorkshire, with a population of only 570, a gift of £17 is thus accounted for by the kindly sender: "We have a sale of work every two years, and divide the profits between Home and Foreign Missions. * * We look upon yours as a great Home Mission work, and I have therefore great pleasure in sending you the enclosed check." I am devoutly thankful that my readers are beginning to recognize not merely the many-sidedness of our work, but the great underlying fact that we are carrying on a true Christian Mission among our home heathen, and that our great aim is to lead our young people to Christ.

Just four years ago there appeared in Night and Day a notice of the splendid self-denying efforts of the late Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, of Burton-on-Trent, and now it is our privilege to record of this aged saint that she "being dead yet speaketh." For amongst our November gifts came a wonderful assortment of close upon 500 garments, together with a donation of £15 16s. in cash, being the results accomplished by the efforts of the "Charlotte Fisher Working Committee."

In the issue of Night and Day already referred to as containing a notice of the departure of Mrs. Fisher, there appeared also an interesting description of a "basket" sent round to various houses during the season by a friend at Great Yarmouth. And it is indeed refreshing to find that in this quarter also there has been steady perseverance in well-doing. I have received a gift of £18 from the same indefatigable worker, making a total of no less than £177 obtained by means of this perennial "basket."

Apart from the special efforts of Self Denial Week, I have to record some touching items as to self-sacrifice on behalf of "the least of these, His brethren." From Wimbledon, a recent donation of £1 for "God's little ones" is the result of "denying myself a new coat for the winter." A correspondent at Hull accounts for 8s. 5½d. of his donation of £1 4s. as the difference between walking and coaching during a summer tour in Scotland. And here are two tender little notes respecting contributions that have reached us from those who, having known by practical experience the meaning of life's struggle, are anxious to do their part in helping to meet the needs of the largest family on earth. From Wales (how often the Principality figures in our records!) a gift of a guinea is from "a poor man and a widower with eight little children," and from New South Wales, a dear old lady of eighty-seven sends a "widow's mite" of £2, her interest in the children of Waifdom certainly not decreasing with advancing years.

One of my recent gifts was a sum of 2s. sent by a clergyman, who explains that it was given him the other day in the train by a working-man, presumably a navvy, "for any good cause I liked"; and accompanying an enclosure of 2s. 6d. from Bradwell, we read, "I wish I could do more to help in your good work, but I only earn 3s. a week, and so cannot afford much." Good, indeed, would it be for my boys and girls if the Church of Christ were to regulate its views of "much" and "little" according to the standard of those poor who give out of the depths of their own poverty! In this connection I may repeat what I have said in these pages before, that seven out of nine of our donations are received in individual sums of under £1 each! A great many such contributions are massed together in a gift of £10 from Sydenham, as to which the sender says: "Amongst the contributors (to the collecting box) were three poor women who work for their daily bread, each giving a penny a week, and extra pennies if they earn more than usual." Each penny is surely of special value in the eyes of our Lord, who still "stands over against the Treasury" weighing, as only He can do, in the balances of the Sanctuary, the gifts "cast in."

Garden produce we frequently find impressed into the service of our waifs and strays. In addition to the £30 already mentioned as coming from Walthamstow, we have a contribution from the same quarter of £1 12s. 6d., obtained chiefly by a boy sympathiser, "from the sale of garden produce from that allotments in the garden set apart for his sister and himself."

And from Bechuanaland comes a contribution of £2, "proceeds of the sale of flowers from our garden." We fully agree with the sender that this is a larger sum than might reasonably have been expected, "owing to the war and all the trials and worries incident to it." But then, as the writer goes on to explain, "Our garden was not damaged during the Boer occupation. The only injury it sustained was that one season's weeds were allowed to flourish while we were refugees from our homes."

SPECIAL RATES VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following special rates will apply via Southern Railway for special occasions mentioned:

Meeting Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias (colored), Richmond, Va., May 20-22, 1902.—Tickets to be on sale May 18th, 19th, and 20th, with return limit May 25th. Very low rates will apply for the round trip from points within the State.

Annual Convention Virginia Funeral Directors' Association, Richmond, Va., May 21, 1902.—Tickets to be on sale May 19th, 20th, 21st, and 22d, with return limit May 26th. Very low rates will apply for the round trip from all points within the State.

Annual Session Grand Encampment of Virginia, I. O. O. F., Charlottesville, Va., June 10, 1902.—Tickets on sale June 8th, 9th, and 10th, with final limit June 13th. Very low rates will apply for the round trip from all points within Virginia.

Peabody College Summer School, Nashville, Tenn., June 16th-July 28th, 1902.—One fare for the round trip from all points on Southern Railway. Tickets on sale June 12th, 13th, 14th, 27th, 28th, 29th, July 3d, 4th, and 5th, with return limit July 31st, except that by deposit of tickets with joint agent at Nashville on or before July 31st, and upon payment of 50 cents, an extension until September 30th may be secured.

Virginia Conference Epworth League, Danville, Va., June 12-15, 1902.—Tickets to be on sale June 10th, 11th, and 12th, with return limit June 16th. Very low rates for the round trip will apply from points within the State.

Independent Order of Good Samaritans, Lynchburg, Va., June 10-14, 1902.—Tickets on sale June 8th, 9th, and 10th, with return limit June 16th. Very low rates for the round trip from points within the State will apply.

Meeting Daughters of Liberty, Roanoke, Va., May 27, 1902.—Tickets on sale May 26th and 27th, with return limit May 31, 1902. Four (4) cents per mile for the entire round trip will apply from all points within the State.

MEN WILL BE BOYS.—In the excitement of a lively exercise like boat-racing or ball-playing, they will strain their muscles and go home limping and sore. Then they are glad they have Perry Davis' Painkiller on hand to soothe the quivering nerves; to penetrate the muscles with warmth and healing power. It has relieved the pain of two generations of Americans. Large bottles, 25 and 50 cents.

Nothing would surprise some people more than to have their prayers answered.

DAILY SERVICE VIA THE POPULAR YORK RIVER ROUTE BETWEEN RICHMOND AND BALTIMORE, EFFECTIVE MAY 12, 1902.

Leave Richmond daily, except Sunday, 4:30 P. M.; West Point, 5:50 P. M. Arrive Baltimore 8:30 A. M. One night on the beautiful York river and Chesapeake bay. Refreshed by the bracing salt air, you arrive in Baltimore at a convenient hour in the morning. This route is famous for its good service, elegant meals, polite attention, etc. The morning train from Charlotte, Greensboro, Danville, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Chase City, etc., arriving Richmond 3:25 P. M., makes direct connection with this route in same station at Richmond, and at Baltimore connection is made for Philadelphia, New York, and all Eastern and Northern points, including Atlantic City and all Eastern resorts. Low rate excursion tickets are on sale daily at Richmond to Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. This is the favorite of all short water trips.

THE FINEST FABRIC made by human skill is coarse compared with the lining of the bowels. When this tender membrane is irritated we have griping pains, diarrhoea and cholera morbus. Whatever be the cause of the trouble, take Perry Davis' Painkiller according to the directions with each bottle. Travellers in all climates carry Painkiller in their gripsacks. Large bottles, 25 and 50 cents.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

SOUTHERN STUDENT CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A., JUNE 14-23; ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF Y. W. C. A., JUNE 13-23, 1902, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Asheville, N. C., and return. Tickets on sale June 13th-14th, with return limit June 25th.

SUMMER SCHOOL, KNOXVILLE, TENN., JUNE 19TH-JULY 30TH, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Knoxville and return. Tickets on sale June 16th, 17th, and 18th, 28th, 29th, and 30th, and July 11th, 12th, and 13th, with return limit August 15th.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare for the round trip, plus $2 membership fee. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, inclusive, with return limit July 6, 1902, except by depositing tickets and upon payment of 50 cents an extension to September 10th may be obtained.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,
UP-TO-DATE
FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly ly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 to $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

(Continued from page 10.)

equipoise. Voyaging from New Zealand to Australia, a storm swooped upon us, and we saw all around us fragments of ships that had been caught in the same tempest. And how thankful we were, sailing into Sydney harbor, that we had escaped! So that man and that woman whose intellect goes safely through the storms of this life, in which so many have foundered, ought every day and every night employ one of the ten strings in gratitude for that particular mercy.

The Blessing of Friendship.

Another string of this instrument I now touch—friendships, deep and abiding, by which I refer to those people who, when good or bad motive may be ascribed to you, ascribe the good; those concerning whom you do not wonder which side they will take when you are under discussion; those who would more gladly serve you than serve themselves; those to whom you can tell everything without reserve; those who are first in your home by person or by telegram when you have trouble. Oh, what a blessing to have plenty of friends! Aye, if you have only one good friend, you are blessed in that glad possession. With one such friend you can defy the world. But he must be a tried friend. You cannot tell who are your real friends till disasters come. As long as you collect vast dividends and have health, joy and popularity unbounded you will have crowds of seeming friends, but let bankruptcy and invalidism and defamation come, and the number of your friends will be 95 per cent off. If you have been through some great crisis and you have one friend left, thank God and celebrate it on the sweetest harpstring.

"While all this is so," says some one, "there are so many things that others have which I have not." I reply, it is not what we get, but what we are, that decides our happiness. With the bare necessities of life many are unspeakably happy, while others with all the luxuries are impersonations of misery. In the Roman empire there was no man more wretched than the Nero who ruled it. The porticoes of his palace were a mile long. A statue of him in silver and gold 120 feet high stood in the vestibule. The walls of his palace were mother of pearl and ivory. The ceiling was arranged to shower flowers and pour perfumes upon the guests. His wardrobe was so large that he never wore a garment twice. His mules were shod in silver. He fished with hooks of gold. A thousand carriages accompanied him when he traveled. His crown was worth $500,000. He had everything but happiness. That never came. Your heart right, all is right; your heart wrong, all is wrong.

The Gospel of Good Morals.

But we must tighten the cords of our harp and retune it while we celebrate gospel advantages. The highest style of civilization the world has ever seen is American civilization, and it is built out of the gospel of pardon and good morals. That gospel rocked our cradle, and it will epitaph our grave. It soothes our sorrows, brightens our hopes, inspires our courage, forgives our sins and saves our souls. It takes a man who is all wrong and makes him all right. What that gospel has done for you and me is a story that we can never fully tell. What it has done for the world and will yet do for the nations it will take the thousand years of the millennium to celebrate. The grandest churches are yet to be built. The mightiest anthems are yet to be hoisted. The greatest victories are yet to be gained. The most beautiful Madonnas are yet to be painted. The most triumphant processions are yet to march. Oh, what a world this will be when it rotates in its orbit a redeemed planet, girdled with spontaneous harvests and enriched by orchards whose fruits are speckless and redundant, and the last pain will have been banished and the last tear wept and the last groan uttered, and there shall be nothing to hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain! All that and more will come to pass, for "the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

So far I have mentioned nine of the ten strings of the instrument of gratitude. I now come to the tenth and the last. I mention it last that it may be the more memorable—heavenly anticipation. By the grace of God we are going to move into a place so much better than this that on arriving we will wonder that we were for so many years so loath to make the transfer. After we have seen Christ face to face and rejoiced over our departed kindred there are some mighty spirits we will want to meet soon after we pass through the gates. We want to see and will see David, a mightier king in heaven than he ever was on earth, and we will talk with him about psalmody and get from him exactly what he meant when he talked about the instrument of ten strings. We will confront Moses, who will tell of the law giving on rocky Sinai and of his mysterious burial, with no one but God present. We will see Joshua, and he will tell us of the coming down of the walls of Jericho at the blast of the ram's horn and explain to us that miracle—how the sun and moon could stand still without demolition of the planetary system. We will see Ruth and have her tell of the harvest field of Boaz, in which she gleaned for afflicted Naomi. We will see Vashti and hear from her own lips the story of her banishment from the Persian palace by infamous Ahasuerus.

Delights of the Future.

We will see and talk with Daniel, and he will tell us how he saw Belshazzar's banquet hall turned into a slaughter house and how the lions greeted him with loving fawn instead of stroke of cruel paw. We will see and talk with Solomon, whose palaces are gone, but whose inspired epigrams stand out stronger and stronger as the centuries pass. We will see Paul and hear from him how Felix trembled before him and the audience of skeptics on Mars hill were confounded by his sermon on the brotherhood of man, what he saw at Ephesus and Syracuse and Philippi and Rome and how dark was the Mamertine dungeon and how sharp the ax that beheaded him on the road to Ostia. Yea, we will see all the martyrs, the victims of ax and sword and fire and billow. What a thrill of excitement for us when we gaze upon the heroes and heroines who gave their lives for the truth. We will see the gospel proclaimers Chrysostom and Bourdaloue and Whitefield and the Wesleys and John Knox. We will see the great Christian poets Milton and Dante and Watts and Mrs. Hemans and Frances Havergal. Yea, all the departed Christian men and women of whatever age or nation.

Each of us may be sure that if God sends us on stony paths He will provide us with strong shoes, and will not send us out on any journey for which He does not equip us well.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

Christ did not have much to say about death, but He had a great deal to say about life. And very properly so; for when we are prepared to live, then we are also prepared to die.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.
DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Oor. Main and Broad, Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

CAPITAL, $300,000.

Established 1860.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

This old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses; Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE, STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

... FOR TOBACCO ...

Bellefonte,

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3

Standard,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Alliance,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

FOR CORN AND COTTON,

Highland,

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 2.

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is $15.20,	but it actually runs $16.54
Alliance	" 15.20,	" " " 17.71
Hard Cash	" 16.70,	" " " 18.96
Bellefonte	" 21.20,	" " " 23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 19.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., MAY 22, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

*Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.*

BISHOPS ELECTED.

Dallas, Tex., May 22.—Dr. A. Coke Smith, of Virginia, and Dr. E. E. Hoss, of Nashville, Tenn., were to-day elected Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The election of Dr. Hoss came on the first ballot, while Dr. Smith was not a winner until the fourth.

The new Bishops will be ordained Saturday at 3:30 P. M. at the First Methodist church, in this city.

Dr. George B. Winston was elected editor of the Christian Advocate, the official organ of the Church, as successor to Dr. E. E. Hoss. Dr. J. J. Tigert was re-elected book editor of reviews.

GENERAL CONFERENCE LETTER.

Dallas, Tex., May 19, 1902.

Dear Recorder,—By the generosity of the noble-hearted people of my church at Blackstone—and a better no man ever served—a trip to Dallas was made possible. A handsome purse was given me on Sunday, May 4th, and a vacation granted.

I give to the readers of the Recorder the following impressions made upon me by this great body of our great Church:

The personnel of the body is very striking. There are gathered from all parts of our Southern Methodism the leaders; and a finer looking body of men it would be hard to find anywhere.

Perhaps the conservatism of past years does not obtain, yet I dare make the assertion that in no former year was there ever a more loyal, earnest, devout set of men, as are here gathered; men more alert to every interest of the great Church which they represent. In no other body will you find greater strength, more kindness of feeling, and brotherly love. It is truly a benediction to look into the faces of these faithful and fearless men of God.

I miss some of the faces seen at Baltimore four years ago. Some have gone to their eternal reward, while others have been replaced by new faces.

Bishop Wilson, senior bishop, called the Conference to order. After religious services, the addresses of welcome were delivered by Governor Sayer, of Texas, followed by Mayor Benjamin E. Cabrell, Judge E. B. Perkins, and others.

The rules of the last General Conference were adopted, after which the episcopal address was read by Bishop Duncan. This address consumed about an hour and a half in its reading, and then the Conference was fairly launched upon what is to be one of the most momentous sessions in its history.

One fact I have noticed—viz., that the laymen take quite as much interest in all of the discussions as the ministers. This is gratifying. Another fact is also very noticeable—the spirit and temper of all the speeches. They are exceedingly brotherly and kind, as they should be, free from sting or anything that would wound the feelings, the secular press to the contrary notwithstanding. I am out of patience with the manner and tone of the secular press in reporting these great religious gatherings; from a reading of the reports which appear from day to day, one would gather that this and other like bodies were a set of belligerent men, gathered together solely to fight each other, or speak ill of one another. I think the time has come to put a stop to this sort of thing, and to demand a respectful representation of the facts. Men differ even in religious bodies as to methods and means, and they do not hesitate sometimes with spirit to point out the merit or demerit of this or that plan; but while these differences occur, they never forget that they are brethren. And yet they are held up to the gaze of the world by these improper and incorrect reports as saying such and such things, in anger or in a malicious spirit.

I have attended every session of the Conference, and I have read reports as they have appeared in the daily papers, and I do not hesitate to say that none of those which I have read have given absolutely accurate statements. The public demand things sensational, these papers say, and they must satisfy this demand, and this they proceed to do by coloring the statements made, and our people at large are misled, and wrong impressions are made upon their minds.

The Fraternal Messengers' addresses were of a high order. The address of Rev. DeWitt C. Huntington, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was a classic. It was warm with brotherly feeling. I quote the following sentence, with which he closed his speech: "It is sufficient for me to express the conviction that Methodism of this country, and especially of the two leading divisions of Methodism, have very weighty reasons prayerfully to watch the providential; generously to waive the technical; jealously to guard against the prejudicial; devoutly to cultivate the fraternal, and in the name of Jesus Christ, trustfully to accept the inevitable."

Lieutenant-Governor Bates, of Massachusetts, co-representative of the M. E. Church with Dr. Huntington, made a magnificent address, which captivated the great audience.

The Fraternal Messenger from the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Park, made a fine speech, even though he made Demosthenes compel the Roman Senate to acknowledge his ability, and grouped together as the great leaders of Methodism Wesley, Knox, Latimer, etc.

The committees are beginning to bring in their reports, and we look for interesting and lively debates to follow.

The Committee on Itinerancy has reported; there is a majority and a minority report, but both reports recommend the four-year time limit for presiding elders.

The Committee on Episcopacy recommends the election of two (2) Bishops. Who they will be is not now an easy task to forecast.

The one burning question before the Conference is the settlement of the war claim. Like Banquo's ghost, it continually rises up. Two reports have been submitted, and Tuesday morning has been set apart as the order of the day to hear discussions on these reports. No doubt several days will be spent in the discussions before a vote will be taken.

Brother Cannon wrote the minority report, and it is said by competent judges to be one of the strongest papers read before a General Conference. It required more than an hour in its reading, and the Conference sat silent until the last word was uttered. It made a tremendous impression on the whole body. It embodied a history of the whole war claim matter from the very beginning to the present time, and in logical sequence, and by many said to be unanswerable. It has staggered even those who before disagreed with the minority, and has brought to light facts before unknown. It was a master-stroke of genius. But I must close this letter, as it will take up too much space. More anon.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE F. GREENE.

P. S.—Major E. B. Stahlman is here.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

BY REV. R. N. PRICE.

From the character of the telegrams that are flooding the dailies from Dallas, one would imagine that the "Milan lier" had transferred his headquarters to that city. Somebody, no doubt, paid for his work by interested parties, has been busy sending news to the papers, evidently to manufacture public sentiment in favor of certain measures and of certain aspirants.

The first batch of news has created consternation in these parts. An awful fear has come down upon us, lest the great Sanhedrin should fail to take action—first, to repudiate the action of the Book Agents, and secondly, to return every dollar of the damage appropriation. But I hope this fear is premature; and that the Bishops and the General Conference will acquit themselves like men. I am more hopeful than some of my neighbors. I have not lost confidence in the Bishops and in the Church. Certainly, I have not lost confidence in God. The Lord reigns, and I will rejoice, whatever may happen. Justice cannot fail to be done in the long run. As Carlyle says, "It is all justice."

I learn that the episcopal message deplores the small increase in the membership of the Church during the quadrennium. I feel sure that one cause of this decreased increase is the displeasure of God on account of the conduct of our agents in securing the damage appropriation. A presiding elder of the North Georgia Conference said to me some time since, that the conduct of our agents has paralyzed the Church. We will find out, I think, that we cannot serve God and mammon. The question before the General Conference is now, conscience or money? I pray God that spirituality, not commercialism, may prevail; that they will prefer obedience to God to the golden wedge. May God also guide that body in the selection of Bishops and general officers! May every candidate be defeated, and may the offices be thrust upon those of modesty and unselfishness! In thus praying, I have no malice, nothing in my heart but the good of the Church and the glory of God.

The hesitation in the General Conference about appointing a day of fasting and prayer for Divine guidance in the Publishing House affair sounds strange to me. I imagine that the apologists for Barbee and Smith thought that a day of fasting and prayer would be making too serious a matter of it; that it would be equivalent to conceding that a serious wrong had been done, whereas, according to the Book Committee, the agents had acted honestly and honorably; and, according to Lafferty, were men against whom no just word of censure could be uttered.

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1909, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"No," repeated President Royce; "I don't advise you to try to crush out the feeling you have begun to have for this young woman, if it is genuine and you know it is genuine, for I believe that every feeling of love toward any one is always unselfish and ennobling. But if love is unselfish and ennobling it is also not wanting in wisdom. You would not be willing, in case your feeling toward the girl were perfectly right for you to have—you certainly would not be willing to allow it to harm instead of help you or her. Your main business in this college is to prepare yourself for the work of life. To do this you cannot form attachments in such a way as to render you unfit for the purpose that makes this college of any value to you. It is entirely possible for you or any other true, manly student to come to have a wholesome, manly affection for a young woman in the college, just the same as a young man in society outside of a college community, and still go on his way preparing for his life work, not hindered or embarrassed by the fact of his feelings, but rather helped by them. In all frankness, Blake, I myself feel as if, generally, in educational institutions like ours the less said and thought about serious lovmaking the better. The students are here to study, not to court one another, as a rule. But in case of an honest, sincere attachment that comes as naturally to a student as it might come to any other young man anywhere else in the world I do not feel as if my business was to advise him to crush it out. Let him be a man in this experience, as in any other. Now, I want to say honestly, Blake, you have not been a man so far in this matter. You have dropped your interest in your studies; you have let your feelings harm you instead of help you. Am I right about that?"

"Yes, sir; I'm afraid you are," replied Edward in a low tone again.

"Be a man about it, Blake. If your feeling is worth having, if it is not simply a sentimental fancy for a face or a manner, if it is something you ought not to be ashamed of, let it make a better man out of you; a better, not a worse, student; a better, not a worse, child of God."

The president rose as a step came down the stairs, and Mrs. Preston knocked at the door. "If there is anything I can do for you, my boy," said President Royce, going up to Edward and putting a hand on his arm, "you know I am at your service."

"Thank you, sir; you have helped me already," said Edward, and then he opened the door, and Mrs. Preston came in. She simply repeated her message concerning Willis and soon went out with the president.

When they were gone Edward Blake, college student, did some really serious thinking. The president's talk had cleared up the atmosphere a good deal. He was able to see some things more clearly. As he sat by his desk, going over the conversation he had just had with the president, he felt the force of his argument. He was not so much in love, or rather he was not feeling toward Miss Seton in such a way, that he was insensible to any and every form of counsel from another person. He was somewhat surprised at some things the president had said, but he understood his position, on the whole, very clearly, and the more he thought of it the more he respected it.

As he sat by his desk he opened one of the drawers in it, and, after lifting off some papers that lay on the top, he took out a photograph of Miss Seton. It was, to tell the truth, a very poor picture, and, to tell the truth again, Edward had actually taken it out of a book that Ida had left in the parlor of the hall one night while Edward was calling on Freeda. Ida had charged one of the other boys present that evening with taking the picture, never dreaming that Edward Blake, the undemonstrative, had taken it. There was a scrap of Miss Seton's writing with the photograph, that Edward had found in the hall also, and he placed it alongside the photograph and looked gravely at them. Then he put them back in their places in the drawer and shut it up, and after a moment he rose and walked up and down through the room.

The boy was actually at one crisis of his life. There are more crises in every young man's life than he himself is always aware of. But Edward probably realized this one with more or less understanding of its gravity. It is not easy to state just what his final resolve was in so many terms. It is perhaps enough to say that he realized the foolishness of allowing a now and growing passion to spoil his college course, and, even more than that, possibly in the end render the life of another person unhappy, or at least throw an element into it that would hinder its free and natural development.

This much can truly be said for Edward, at this place in his college course. He went out the next day and began his work under different impulses from what he had felt for a long time. He had a conscious feeling of dread at the thought of meeting Miss Seton in the laboratory that afternoon, almost as if she had been present during the president's talk, or at least had been where she could hear it. But he was relieved to find that she was just the same, and he discovered that he was able to meet her and talk with her in a freedom from embarrassment that of late he had not been able to assume. It is not the place here to tell what Edward's whole experience was in the matter, nor how the interview with the president shaped it all for him as the year went on.

It is enough to say that he had the manliness to go on with his studies in his old time spirit of vigor, and if, as the days went on, he found no lessening of his feeling, but perhaps a deepening of it, he realized that the feeling was not spoiling his life. That much he was at least conscious of, and even more in time.

The term had come to an end, and another summer vacation faced him. Freeda went home again, and, as the year before, Edward planned to stay in Raynor and carry his paper. He went home for a few days, just to see the folks, and then came back again to resume his work. The hall was again deserted, and it was lonesome business to keep up the same old life, with the boys gone. The president, too, had gone to Europe on a summer visit to Germany, and there was no secretary's work for Edward to do, as there had been the year before.

He had been back from the farm two weeks and had settled down to a regular routine of vacation work when he began to feel a physical weariness that was new to him. He had been taking his meals with a few of the boys at the club, but they had all left at the end of two weeks, except two or three who were carrying papers, and then Edward had begun to board himself. He bought a small oil stove and experimented more or less with cooking, but did not get on very well. He disliked the business of getting his own meals and only continued it on account of economy.

He woke up one morning with a strange feeling of lassitude, and with great difficulty he got up and cooked some oatmeal and made a cup of coffee. But when he went down to the laboratory, where he had secured permission to continue his chemistry, he dragged himself with difficulty through the forenoon, and when dinner time came he did not feel hungry and lay down on his bed.

He must have lain there two hours in a drowsy condition when some one knocked on his door, and when he called out "Come in!" who should come but Wheaton.

Wheaton roomed and boarded outside of the college buildings, but he carried a paper and was working his way through. Edward had taken a dislike to him and seldom met him and did not really know him. He put him down as pious and knew that he was active in the college Y. M. C. A.

"I was passing through the campus and thought I would just drop up and see you. Most of the fellows have gone from the hall, haven't they?"

"Yes," replied Edward shortly. He was irritated by Wheaton's presence. He had no respect for his scholarship and put him down as something of a goody goody fellow who was a crank on religious things and very narrow minded in his views. What about this, Edward Blake? Who are you, to judge others without knowing the facts?

"Are you sick, Blake?" asked Wheaton kindly as Edward made no move to get up from his recumbent position.

"No; I'm going down town," said Edward briefly as he made an effort to get up. He was somewhat bewildered to find what a tremendous effort it required for him to get on his feet.

"You really are not well?" exclaimed Wheaton, with evident concern.

"I am, too!" retorted Edward, with strange irritation of manner. "I feel a little tired, but I'm all right."

Wheaton looked up as if he thought something was not just right with Edward, but did not venture to speak again about it, and, as Edward continued to pick up his paper bag and get ready to go down town, he asked:

"Going down Main street my way?"

"No; I'm going over the hill," replied Edward briefly. He usually went straight down Main street, but a perverse spirit within him made him dislike the thought of Wheaton's company. "All right," replied Wheaton "Are you sick, Blake?" asked Wheaton, good naturedly. "I'd go rather slow if I were you. It's pretty hot this afternoon."

Edward made no reply, and Wheaton went away. When Edward came out of the cooler recesses of the hall down stairs, it seemed as if the heat was overpowering to him. Still, with the dogged obstinacy that belonged to him, he went down town by the hill road because he said he was going to, although it was nearly a third farther.

When he reached the office, he could hardly stand up. Everything on the streets danced before him. He staggered along with his papers, half blind. How he ever made the rounds with his load he could not have told. Neither did he remember how he climbed the hill again and reeled into his room. He had a dim recollection afterward of dropping on his bed all in a heap, and then darkness fell on him.

When he came to himself again, some one was in the room, sitting by the bed and fanning him. It was very late in the afternoon, and he had a dim notion that perhaps it was another day.

He made a motion as if to rise, and the person sitting by the bed gently prevented him. He was faintly surprised to find how little strength he had.

"I must get up and carry my papers," he managed to say.

"That's all right, Blake. Don't worry about your papers. They're being carried all right."

Edward recognized Wheaton's voice and dimly saw him. Then his mind wandered off in a feverish delirium, and he lost all recollection of his surroundings.

When he came to himself again, a woman was sitting by the side of the bed fanning away the flies. It was afternoon again and very hot.

"Mother, is that you?" Edward whispered.

"Yes, Ned, dear boy," replied his mother, and she leaned over him and kissed his cheek. As she did so a tear fell on his face.

"How long have I been sick, mother?"

"Nearly five weeks, Ned. But don't talk. You are getting better, thank God!"

Then he lay still and gazed vaguely at his mother, a host of questions in his mind, but he was too weak to ask them and soon dozed off again.

When he was at last able to sit up in bed and talked a little he learned by degrees the history of nearly two months. Parts of it affected him a good deal.

(To be continued.)

A purpose in the head and not in the heart does not last long.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH.—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 53, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

THE WAR CLAIM.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY REPORTS.

MAJORITY REPORT.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference M. E. Church, South, in Session at Dallas, Texas, 1902:

Dear Fathers and Brethren,—Your Committee on Publishing Interests submit the following report:

Whereas, the Committee on Publishing Interests have had referred to them various and sundry memorials and papers setting forth the complaints and troubles growing out of the collection of our war claim against the United States Government, which claim was due the Church on account of the occupancy of our Publishing House property by the Federal army during the war between the States, and damage to the property resulting from said occupancy:

And, whereas, our Book Committee entered into a contract with an attorney to go to Washington city and prosecute said claim before the United States Congress, but especially stipulated in said contract, "That nothing should be done in the prosecution of the claim which would even in the slightest degree compromise the good name of the Church, and that rather than compromise the Church, the Book Committee preferred not to have the claim paid":

And, whereas, we have taken the papers and memorials above referred to under consideration and given to them such attention as we have had time and opportunity, we therefore submit the following touching these matters:

Resolved, 1. That we condemn any departure of the attorney of the Book Committee from the explicit instructions given to him by the Book Committee in regard to the collection of our claim against the government, from which instructions he did depart, according to his own statements made to the Senate committee appointed to investigate these matters.

2. That we disapprove any language used by our Book Agents in their telegrams to Senators Pasco and Bate, which, as these Senators state, misled them as to the amount of the fee the attorney was to receive for his services in collecting the claim.

3. That we approve the conditional proposition of our College of Bishops to "take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the Government if the Senate by affirmative action declares that the passage of the bill was due to misleading statements."

4. That, inasmuch as the Senate, after receiving the conditional proposition of the Bishops above referred to, by official action discouraged the return of the money, and since eighty of the present members of the Senate have recently signed a paper addressed to Bishop Candler further discouraging and advising against any effort upon the part of the Church to refund the money; and furthermore, since the Senate has officially declared that the Church is absolutely blameless in the whole transaction, we recommend that this be and is hereby a final and definite settlement of the whole matter.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES M. ROBERTSON,
Chairman

MINORITY REPORT.

We, the undersigned, members of the Committee on Publishing Interests, beg leave to submit the following minority report:

The committee had before it the report of the Book Committee, the report of the Senate Investigating Committee, the Congressional Record of the debate on the Lodge resolution of investigation, and the debate on the passage of the bill, appropriating $288,000 to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the portion of the Episcopal address in reference in the War Claim, the letter of Bishop Candler to Senator Clay, and the reply thereto, and a number of memorials and resolutions. Dr. J. D. Barbee and Mr. E. B. Stahlman also appeared before the committee. After a careful consideration of all the facts brought before the committee, the undersigned respectfully submit the following minority report:

It appears that for more than twenty years preceding 1895 the officials of our Church had tried in vain to secure from Congress payment of the amount claimed to be due to the Church for use and abuse of our Publishing House property during the late civil war. It was not denied by Congress that our property had been used and damaged, and the testimony would seem to indicate that the amount of $288,000 was justly due to the Church. It was not at that time a question of fact, but a question of legality. The facts were not denied by Congress, but the obligation to pay was denied. It was held by a majority of the Senators that the rule, "Enemies' country makes enemies' property," was a sufficient bar to the claim of the Church, and no amount of argument was sufficient to cause these Senators to admit the legality of the claim or to recognize any obligation to pay it. Until this kind of opposition was broken down, arguments as to the justice of the claim were useless. All the argument, therefore, of the Book Committee based upon the justice of the claim, does not touch the real issue involved, nor settle the right claimed by Senators to inquire into the question of the fees to be paid. However much the Book Committee or the Church, for that matter, may dislike to know it, the fact remains that the bill might not have been passed if those who denied the legality of the claim had not voted for it as a "gratuity." There is no doubt of this fact, as is shown by the following statements taken from the report of the Senate Investigating Committee. Senator Stewart said (page 7):

"You understand the considerations on which this bill was passed. The government was under no legal obligation to pay the claim. We made an exception to the rule for educational and charitable institutions, and agreed to pay damages or losses in these cases. We made that exception to the rule of 'enemy country makes enemy property.' In considering what the United States ought to do under these circumstances in favor of the great Church, do you not think that Senators had a right to be informed where the money was going to—whether it was going to be used for church and charitable purposes, or whether it was going to be divided among claim agents."

Senator Teller said (page 62):

"Many of us who voted for the bill did not think that it was a claim at all against the government, but we felt that we were doing a thing which we felt we could afford to do for a charitable institution. It was stated by some members of the committee when we voted to report the bill that they did not vote for the report on the ground that the claim was a legal one at all, but that inasmuch as we had adopted the rule of paying such claims in the case of colleges and schools, we would apply the rule in this case to the Book Concern, which we considered (especially those of us who were brought up in the Methodist Church) to be a charity, inasmuch as the proceeds went to the support of supernumerary ministers."

Senator Pasco: "So far as I am personally concerned, I agreed to the report because I believed in the justice of the claim, but I referred also to a class of Senators who would support it on other grounds, and we were very glad to get the support of those Senators. Without that support it would have been a difficult matter to pass the bill. They were influential and were strong and positive in their views, and we had the support which they gave us."

Senator Teller: "I do not know that I would have voted against the claim, but I might have voted for some revision of the fee, inasmuch as I did not regard it as a legal claim, but a gratuity; and I voted to report the bill with the distinct understanding that it was a gratuity claim. I stood upon the report made twenty years ago as a legal proposition that the Church had no legal claim."

Senator Bacon said (page 146):

"But the point about this claim was this: There were a great many Senators who disputed the fact that it was a strictly legal claim, and who put their support of it only on the ground that it was a restitution to a great charitable institution, which possibly might not have been able to recover it in strict law, and I felt that these Senators were entitled to the utmost frankness."

No one can read these statements made by these Senators, especially the statement of Senators Pasco and Bacon, both of whom themselves voted and worked for the bill, because convinced of its justice, without seeing that a number of Senators voted for the bill in order that they might help to 'restore a great charity,' and that they felt that they had the right to inquire into the question of fees, and that if not satisfied on that point, they would have voted against the bill. Whether they would have had the moral right to have done so, is not the question, but they say they would have done so, and the question for the Church to decide is not the correctness of their attitude in this matter, but whether their votes were influenced by the statements, letters, telegrams of our representatives, Stahlman and Barbee & Smith.

This general statement as to the position of a number of Senators is made at this point because it has a general and very important bearing upon the whole question.

On July 29, 1895, the Book Committee of our Church made a contract with E. B. Stahlman in reference to the collection of this claim, which contract was as follows:

Articles of Agreement Between Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and E. B. Stahlman.

Witness: First. That we, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby give power of attorney to the said E. B. Stahlman to prosecute our claim before the Congress of the United States, for the use and abuse of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the army of the United States during the war between the States from A. D. 1861 to 1865.

Second. We, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby agree that the said E. B. Stahlman shall receive as compensation for his services ten per cent. of whatever sum shall be collected from the United States for liquidation of the aforesaid claim.

Third. It is hereby agreed between Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and E. B. Stahlman, party of the first part, and E. B. Stahlman, party of the second part, that should the Congress of the United States make no appropriation for the liquidation of the aforesaid claim, then, in that case, no compensation shall be paid to the said E. B. Stahlman for his services, from any source whatever, and he shall have no recourse upon us or our successors in office ever.

Fourth. We, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby agree to covenant that this power of attorney herein and hereby conveyed to the aforesaid E. B. Stahlman shall continue in full force and effect until the final adjournment of the fifty-fifth Congress of the United States.

BARBEE & SMITH,
Book Agents, M. E. Church, South,
E. B. STAHLMAN.

July 29, 1895.

Concerning this contract, it is noted: (1) That it was made with a man who, according to Dr. Barbee's testimony before the Senate Investigating Committee, was "expert in matters," "who had been remarkably successful in managing great affairs of legislative bodies" (pages 67-80). It was his reputation as being successful in his work with legislative bodies which called Dr. Barbee's attention to him, and caused Dr. Barbee to see him and to ask him to see the Book Committee.

(2) The written contract did not include all the articles of agreement. There were two conditions not stated in the bond, but which were agreed ally by the parties to the contract: (A) Secrecy. Dr. Barbee said before the Senate Investigating Committee (page 66):

"I do not know that there was any formal definite expression in the contract to the effect that we should keep it secret, but it was mentioned, of course, and it was understood and agreed upon that that was a matter between the Book Agents and the Book Committee and Mr. Stahlman."

(B) Mr. Stahlman was instructed that he was to use no improper means in obtaining the passage of a bill. Dr. Barbee said before the Senate Committee in reply to the following question of Senator Clay:

Senator Clay (page 69): "You did not expect any improper means to be used by him?"

Mr. Barbee: "We made it a condition that none should be used. He was charged by the committee and by all of us that we would rather lose the whole amount than that anything questionable should be done to get it."

Mr. Stahlman said (page 83): "They said to me in the most positive terms which I thought very proper and to which I gave ready consent) that whatever was done with reference to the aim was to be done in such a way as to avoid even a suspicion that anything unclean or unseemly was done to promote the passage of the bill or the attainment of their claim. I said to them, 'In that connection, 'Now, gentlemen, I agree with you. I think that that might by all means be done. Your aim has merit. There is no reason on earth why any improper methods could be resorted to.'"

Senator Fairbanks: "Or any deception?"

Mr. Stahlman: "Or any deception?" The Book Committee say in their report (page 21): "Mr. Stahlman was specially instructed that nothing should be done in the prosecution of the claim which would even in the slightest degree compromise the good name of the Church, and that rather than compromise the Church, the Book Committee preferred not to have the aim paid."

It is difficult to understand how the present and Book Committee could employ any man to act as their agent, who insisted upon keeping the contract a secret, and furthermore the question arose, Why did the Book Committee feel it necessary to make it part of the contract that "no improper means should be used"? Did the contract or arrangement with Dr. R. Abbey include such an agreement? If not, why not? Because there was no probability that any improper means would be used by Dr. Abbey. But we are informed by the Book Committee that they gave the "most explicit instructions that nothing which would compromise the Church in the 'slightest degree' must be done. It is hard to escape the conclusion, that at this point, right in the beginning, the Book Committee and the agents realized the reputation of the man with whom they were dealing, and made the great blunder—to call it nothing worse—of dealing with a man recognized as expert in handling great matters before legislative bodies and of such reputation as to cause them to strive to bind him with the most stringent instructions that he should do nothing to damage the Church. With such conditions written and oral, is the final result of the contract a matter of surprise?

From that time Mr. Stahlman became the duly authorized agent and attorney for our Church, and the Church became responsible for the methods employed by him so far as his methods affected the passage of the bill, until the repudiation of the methods by the Church. The conduct and character of Mr. Stahlman were not in any sense a proper subject for investigation by the committee, except as they affected his contract with the Church, and in so far as being the acts of our agent, who affected the passage of the bill. Did he violate his contract, and did he use improper methods to secure the passage of the bill? After the most careful investigation we are constrained to state that in our opinion he did violate his contract, and did use improper methods to secure the passage of the bill, and that he deliberately misled members of Congress, both in the House and in the Senate. The instances of this in the report of the Senate Investigating Committee are so numerous that reference is simply made to them by name and by page in the Senate Investigating Report: Representatives Gaines (page 118), Sims (page 125), Richardson (page 148), Senators Bacon (page 144), Clay (page 56), Lindsay (page 57), Turley (pages 59-120), Bate (page 133), entire Committee on Claims (page 134), Colonel Baker (pages 89-90). Examples to show the character of his conduct are taken from his own testimony as given in the report before the Senate Investigating Committee. He said to Senator Clay (see page 56):

Mr. Stahlman: "I do not undertake to say that what I said to you was not sufficient to cause you to believe that no fee was to be paid. But I was very guarded in what I said. If I said anything, it was that there was no contract with the Book Agents, and that the money was all to go into the treasury."

Senator Clay: "I cannot give you the exact language, but the inference that I drew from what you said was that there was no contract."

Mr. Stahlman: "I am free to confess that you had a right to draw that inference."

He said to Senator Bacon (page 54): "You can say I have no contract with the Book Agents; and that every dollar of the claim goes into the treasury."

Senator Fairbanks: "Was that statement true?"

Mr. Stahlman: "Yes; it was. My contract was with the Book Committee, although I have since understood that for legal considerations the Book Agents found it necessary to sign the contract themselves. I made the statement for this reason: I did not believe that the Senate of the United States at that juncture could have considered the case upon its merits. I told no falsehood. I concealed some facts. I am free to say that Senator Bacon had a right to assume that there was no contract of any kind. While I was guarded, I was exact in what I said, and I knew that I told no falsehood in saying it. I admit that I concealed some facts."

He said in regard to Senator Turley (page 59):

Mr. Stahlman: "He asked me in regard to it, and I said, 'All I can tell you is, the money is all going to the Church.'"

(To be Continued next week.)

DEW DROPS.

BY G. D. WATSON.

"My speech shall distill as the dew."
—Deut. 32:2.

Hard arguments need soft words.

The darker your trial the brighter you will be after it.

Heresy begins in self-conceit, and not having a teachable spirit.

The Anglo-Saxon word devil is an abbreviation of "do-evil."

Adversity is a rough nurse, but she raises strong and healthy children.

A passion for leadership destroys the fine qualities that make a true leader.

If you look at your own shine you will go into darkness and cease to shine.

The fewer the friends you have the more you will cling to the friendship of God.

The momentum of a word or act is measured by the amount of purpose there is in it.

You can trust the orthodoxy of a man's prayers even though he may preach heresy.

Perfect humility lies at the bottom of much mortification; this is why it is the most costly of all the graces.

We should ask our Father to give us the right prayers as truly as we ask Him to give us our daily bread.

If you are in trouble, give some money to some poor needy servant of God, and see how quick you will get delivered.

Interior holiness in the few, and exterior sin in the many, are both culminating in the closing days of this age.

Many have sorrow, but only a few have sorrow deep enough to break them into boundless humility and charity.

God's work is hindered more by the wrong secret dispositions of his people than by the open wickedness of His enemies.

The very people who do not like for us to testify to the great things God does for us, are always testifying to the great things they do themselves.

There is not a single passage in the New Testament on preparing to meet death, but a great many on preparing for the coming of the Lord.

If you believe God's word about the condition of things you are called a pessimist, but if you believe the devil's lie you are called an optimist.

As a rule the people who deny everlasting punishment for the wicked, have some crookedness in their lives that they are not willing to make right.

Those who serve God in the flesh depend on times and seasons and places, but those who serve Him in the spirit find Him everywhere and in any circumstance.

When the operatic choir and reading a dead ritual are allowed 45 minutes, and the gospel sermon is allowed only 25 minutes, the Holy Spirit takes the insult and stays out doors.

When worldlings and cold professors keep their distance from you because of your entire devotion to Jesus, it is tacit confession of your superiority, just as dogs keep their distance from the lions.

If the new fangled churches that are having arrangements for billiard tables would make arrangements for mourners' benches, they would be more like churches instead of club-houses.

If you have a private religious fad that you think contributes to your holiness, all right, but when you want to impose that fad as a yoke on all other Christians you become a pope, and lose the cream out of your holiness.—Living Words.

These are the words of Wesley, the founder of Methodism, on the liquor traffic:

"All who sell liquors are poisoners-general. They murder His Majesty's subjects by wholesale. Neither do they ever pity or spare. They drive them all to hell like sheep. And what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men?" etc.

To the honor of the Methodist Church it can be truthfully said that she has never been characterized by "divergent views" on this great question, but has, from Wesley's day to the present time, stood in opposition to the liquor traffic. In her official policy on this question she has been courageous and uncompromising without exception.

True, we now and then find an official layman who—for some reason best known to himself—is touchy, and up in arms, the moment anything is mooted against the liquor traffic. Surely, one must be ready to assume a great deal, when he ventures to condemn the whole past history and action of his own church—the combined wisdom of both her ministry and her laity. Is it not the fact that, instead of being a power for good in the church that bears with them, such men are rather a stumbling block and a hindrance? Certainly, it would be much better for such men to help to lead the way along the time-honored lines of Methodism in anything whatever that will curtail and finally abolish the liquor traffic, than to stand up to oppose those who desire to do so, thus shaking the confidence of their fellow-members in their loyalty to the Methodist Church and to the great principles of the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

* * * * *

God's prophet says, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him, and maketh him drunken also," the very thing advocated by means of the licensed saloons and bars, giving his neighbor drink according to law, and making him drunken also. If it be wrong for the individual to do this, it is wrong for a government to sanction it.—Alex Mills in Christian Guardian.

Good habits are not made on birth-days, nor Christian character at the New Year. The workshop of character is every-day life. The uneventful and commonplace hour is where the battle is lost or won.—Matthie D. Babcock.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IX, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 1.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xiv, 8-22.
Memory Verses, 8-10—Golden Text,
1 Tim. ii, 3—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

8-10. A man lame from his birth, having never walked, hears Paul preach the gospel, and, having faith to be healed, Paul commands him to stand upright, which he immediately does, leaping and walking. Such is briefly the story of these three verses. Being expelled from Antioch, in Pisidia, the apostles came to Iconium and, notwithstanding opposition, abode there a long time, speaking boldly in the Lord, who granted signs and wonders to be done by them. They so spake that a great multitude, both of Jews and Greeks, believed, but the opposition became so great that they finally fled to Lystra, where we now find them preaching and healing. They not only preached the gospel, but they lived it in their daily life (1 Thess. ii, 10), and this is always the great need (II Cor. iv, 10, 11).

11, 12. The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men, and they called Barnabas Jupiter and Paul Mercurius.

God had truly come to earth in the likeness of man, for God was in Christ, and Jesus Christ was God manifest in the flesh (II Cor. v, 19; I Tim. iii, 16). But these blind heathen knew nothing of the true God and worshiped many fanciful gods which had no existence. They gave to the servants of God these heathen names, just as the heathen did to Daniel and his friends in Babylon. We must not be offended if people give us false names, for they called Jesus Beelzebub, glutton, wine bibber and told Him he had a devil.

13. Then the priest of Jupiter which was before their city brought oxen and garlands unto the gates and would have done sacrifice with the people.

They were about to worship Paul and Barnabas, believing them to be more than men. It suggests the question as to whether in the lives of most Christians there is anything to cause people to say: "That is not natural. There is something supernatural about that person. That meekness or patience or wisdom or power is of God."

14. They rent their clothes.

Are we as horrified to hear given to us the praise which ought to be given to God only, or are we apt to covet this very thing and love to have it given out that we ourselves are some great people? (Chapter viii, 9.) The Lord Jesus sought neither His own will nor His own glory, but always glorified the Father (John vi, 38; viii, 50; xvii, 4).

15. Turn from these vanities unto the living God which made heaven and earth and the sea and all things that are therein.

With great earnestness did the apostles seek to turn the people's thoughts from themselves to God, as when the angel said to John, "See thou do it not; worship God" (Rev. xxii, 9). The tendency today is to think more of man than of God, and the great trouble is that many men do not feel troubled about it, but love to have it so.

16, 17. Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

Since God placed man on earth He has been trying him in every possible way—in Eden and out of Eden, without law and under law, under grace and the special ministry of the Spirit—and he shall have one trial more under the personal reign of the Lord Jesus.

in due time it shall be fully proved that man apart from God is only failure. In Rom. i, 20, 21, it is made plain that in all ages all are without excuse.

18. With these sayings scarce restrained they the people that they had not done sacrifice to them.

Having seen the impotent man healed through Paul and Barnabas, it was hard to convince them that the work was not done by these men, but by one unseen whom these men represented. The natural man walks by sight, and it is difficult to persuade him that anything is different from what his eyes see. Consider II Cor. iv, 18; v, 7; Heb. xi, 27.

19. Having stoned Paul, they drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

How fickle is man! The servants of the devil had followed Paul and Barnabas from the other cities and were so successful that these people who were ready to worship Paul are now just as ready to stone him, and they did stone him and left him for dead.

20. He rose up and came into the city.

While the disciples, helpless to protect him, stood around his apparently dead body God gave him back to them to their great surprise and joy, for his work was not yet accomplished. It may be that while his enemies were bruising and so ill treating his poor body he was enjoying that of which he tells in II Cor. xii, 1-4, and, having seen the glory, was strengthened for future service.

21. The day after the stoning Paul and Barnabas set forth to Derbe, where they also preached the gospel and made many disciples, and then instead of going on to Paul's home at Tarsus, to which they were now quite near, they turn about, retrace their steps and visit again the very places where they had been so persecuted.

22. Here are great words for us. By His word and Spirit we must be established and continue (Luke viii, 15; John viii, 31; II Chron. xx, 20) and learn to endure patiently for His sake (Jas. i, 12; Rev. ii, 10; John xvi, 33). May the grace of God and the word of God and the kingdom of God be to us what it was to these apostles, and may we be Spirit filled and Christ occupied people, manifestly set apart for Himself, a people for His own possession (Ps. iv, 3; Tit. ii, 14; R. V.).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Prayer For the Week Beginning June 1, "The Purpose of His Coming."
Text, Matt. xviii, 11; John x, 10.

"I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

The Scriptures ever represent man as lost. The purpose of Jesus in coming to earth was to seek and save the lost.

Our experience shows the correctness of the Bible view of the condition of men. None is exempt from sin. Everywhere men have been seeking escape by every possible device. Bodies are diseased. Truth is unknown. Evil and enmity rule the soul. Life is strife and torment. Where is the power to deliver? Who shall show us the way out? Hope of a deliverer in human form has never been entirely lost.

Whoever he be, whenever and wherever he appears his task must be appalling. He can expect little or no co-operation from those he comes to help. Because they have lost the true idea and direction of life and all impulse and relish for the pure and gentle and are diseased in all their nature they will oppose him and resist his efforts to save them. Only as he can make the saved life more attractive than the lost one can there be any expectation that he can reach and lift them.

lost one can there be any expectation that he can reach and lift them.

This is just what Jesus does. His miracles of healing were not intended merely to relieve for the time being the bodily sufferings of those whose diseases He cured. They were signs of His life giving power and purpose. Real health, abounding life, even of the physical nature, lies in the close contact and harmonious working of natural powers under the divine guidance. Disease is always a sign of a break in the circuit, an imperfection which is unnecessary, a derangement of the machinery. It points to wrong in the man's position as related to God and His world. Healing calls attention to the intended condition of man in God's universe and of God's power to secure him and save him and restore him to that right position.

The teaching of Jesus restores the right direction to men's thoughts. His sayings are the miracle ideas of all ages. They are signs of the true philosophy of human and divine life and co-operation. They give the clew to the mystery of existence and reveal the true nature of man. God is more than maker of body and soul, more than preserver and judge and benefactor. He is Father. We are His offspring, hence like Him. Lost because we have willfully denied our origin and nature by preferring the lower elements in our composition, lost because we have made spirit slave to the flesh! Jesus shows us the truth. He not only announces and teaches it, but becomes Truth, and we see in Him its full meaning. He is Son of Man really because He is Son of God, the first and only begotten and the first among many brethren.

More than healer of bodies and restorer of truth Jesus is to us. He saves by reaching the citadel of the soul. Men in slavery to sin can be saved only as they are set free in will to do the right. He shows obedience to the Father's will and law. He learned obedience by the things He suffered and was saved in that He feared. To every one who receives Him He gives the same power to become a son of God. He attracts to Himself as the most admirable of all men. He gives power to all who receive Him and makes them into His image.

Fishing In Many Waters.

Few successful fishermen stay in one place waiting for the fish to come to them. They move about, trying different places. Patience is not all of fishing, by any means. When Jesus said, "I will make you fishers of men," He meant more than "still fishers." He Himself "went about doing good." We lack spiritual enterprise. We wait for people to blunder upon us, and then, if we are not preoccupied or asleep, we try to be of service to them. Does not that account for empty baskets, for fruitless lives? Why not "go about" more, asking: "Whom can I help? Who needs sympathy, encouragement? Whom can I try to catch for my Master? Lord, where wilt Thou have me to go?" So in many an unpromising day shall we count for the kingdom and catch fish in unlikely places.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Faith That Is Worth the Name.

Faith that is worth being called by the name can turn its prayers into promises. The Lord in His promises of answer to prayer has taught us to expect the thing for which we ask. While our weakness leads us to offer many improper petitions and we do not always get the answer we expect, there should not be a failure to expect an answer when we take up the petitions our Lord has taught us to offer. It should not take the mighty arm of Paul to turn "deliver us from evil" into "the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work."—United Presbyterian.

Christianity.

Christianity is not merely a collection of propositions whether ethical, religious, but, rather, the revelation of a Saviour in Jesus of Nazareth. Power and value reside in Him, what He was and is and in what He did and said and in what He is still doing. We can detach the platonic philosophy from Plato without harm to it, but we cannot detach Christianity from Christ, since He Himself is substance and essence of the whole system.—Independent.

As God Sees.

God sees everything as now. Nothing is past, nothing is future to Him. He sees things that are not as though they were and things that shall be though they had been.—Spurgeon.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

God gives to us as we grow to wisdom. —Rev. A. M. Campbell, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

The Test of Love For God.

You can tell how much you love God by the way you love your brethren. —Rev. Dr. Israel Lee, Methodist, Washington.

The Standard of Worth.

Measure your worth by the standard of duty well done, not by the opinion of others. —Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Heaven on Earth.

Men need not necessarily die to go to heaven. Some saints live today in the outskirts of heaven. —Alonzo Monk, Methodist, Atlanta, Ga.

Doors Closed Against Jesus.

The doors of many a church where elaborate ritual and beautiful ceremonial have often been slammed in the face of Jesus. —Rev. Dr. Robert S. M. Arthur, Baptist, New York.

Live In the Present.

The man or the church that lives the past lives to no purpose in the intense days of activity in every department of human life. —Rev. Dr. J. H. Ker, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Manhood Before Money.

Business is carried on as if there were no other interest. While business success is necessary, yet manhood is before money and righteousness higher than gain. —Rev. P. Pinch, Congregationalist, Chicago.

More Education Needed.

What we need more imperative than anything else to offset the influences that work against the maintenance of a deep personal religious interest is education. —Rev. Nicholas Walsh, Catholic, Boston.

Effect of Good Books.

Good books and good papers leave their impress upon the mind and heart like the river upon the land through which it runs. They furnish mental and spiritual pabulum. —Rev. Dr. H. H. Rees, Methodist, Pittsburg.

Representing Jesus Christ.

To stand before the world, before those with whom you associate, as the representative of Jesus is surely a privilege, and to fully represent him you must be as nearly like him as possible. —John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Baptist, New York.

Sin of Parental Ignorance.

Oh, the sin of parental ignorance! It has ruined more homes, slaughtered more lives, bred more diseases, and into life more selfishness and tyranny, more vice and crime than all other causes combined.—Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf, D. D., Philadelphia.

Not as a Theory, but as a Fact.

It is not in theology we are to find out how to be Christians, but it is in God's own word and in the words of Jesus and his interpreters in the Bible. If we study, we find that we must not receive Jesus as a theory, but as a fact.—Rev. Stowell L. Bryant, Methodist, Chicago.

Standing on Firm Foundation.

Lifted up by the spirit out of the world's troubled sea and set securely on the Rock of Ages, the believer cannot be thrown into confusion or be made to feel that the foundations of his life are falling from under.—Rev. Dr. W. S. Fulton, Presbyterian, Pittsburgh.

Teaching the Conscience.

The conscience needs constantly power of revelation, the vision of God. Every man must follow conscience, but every man must see that his conscience is taught of God and is the soul's window opening out on God.—Rev. Dr. M. Burnham, Congregationalist, St. Louis.

Christ the Only Way.

For me the present contains a large possibility of happiness for the frugal, honest poor, and the future holds forth hope for more. Neither rich nor poor can be happy. Each must take his woe to Bethlehem. The Christ is the only way. He says, "Come," and in him alone is there peace.—Archbishop Corrigan, Catholic, New York.

Only Source of Hope.

Have faith—faith in yourselves, faith in your fellow men, faith in God and the Providence that governs the world. In the midst of the changing scenes of life faith in God is the only source of assured hope, the only secret of a true and worthy life, the only key to happiness, the only strength that is secure.—Rev. C. J. Hull, People's Tabernacle, Denver.

Weakness of Spirit.

The evolution of 1,900 years has just begun to teach men the value of gentleness and kindness, to show them that more is to be gained in the long run by the employment of these agencies which make up, I take it, weakness of spirit than by the use or employment of any other force whatsoever.—Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, Episcopalian, Philadelphia.

The Spirit of the Age.

In spite of all adverse tides, surely, but steadily, the commercial spirit has risen until it has become the dominating material force in the world's life of today. The gravest danger of the twentieth century lies in this fact: If these great forces are the servants of men, they will prove a great blessing, but if they dominate every phase of life they will be a curse.—Rev. Robert Bagnall, Independent, New York.

Evil of White Lies.

The great evil of falsifying lies in the small things—in slightly modifying the details to interest or amuse others or to gratify personal vanity. * * * Not only is there untruthfulness in society and in business, but there is more or less of it in religion. There is a good deal of lying in our public prayers. We have all heard preachers and others tell the Lord things we knew were not so.—Rev. Dr. J. L. Jackson, Baptist, Chicago.

While we are passing through the world we have no right to make other people unhappy.

Pray-Balm Stops the Tickling, and quickly stops inflammation in the throat.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of

PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE

Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package.
Sold everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK NEW WESTERN
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and
NORTH CAROLINA.

Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS

LURAY
GROTTOES
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS

NORFOLK ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLUMBUS
AND THE NORTH WEST.

Shenandoah Valley
Virginia
Ohio Line

Write for Rates, Maps, Time Tables, Sleeping Car
Reservations, Descriptions, etc., to any Agent or to
W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, G. L. PRAGG,
GENERAL PASS AGENTS, DIVISION OF PASSENGER SERVICE,
ROANOKE, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus, $15,500.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All prescriptions compounded by express.
Chicago Drugists

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF CINCINNATI, O., CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than ..... 4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 ..... 3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
Blackstone, Va.
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

STIFF MUSCLES,
STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
PAIN IN THE BACK,

Rub well with and use

PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS,

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
MEMPHIS, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.
Boydton, May 28th, at night.

Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.

High-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blandford, May 25th, night.

Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

Wakefield, Rocky Hook, June 14th-15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

FROM HOT TO COLD.—Dysentery is prevalent everywhere in summer, and is due to miasmatic poisons, and begins abruptly with inflammation of the mucous lining of the large bowel. In America the disease is common, but properly treated does not result as seriously as in the tropics. Perry Davis' Painkiller is the best known remedy and the most efficacious in the treatment of dysentery.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

(Continued from 1st page.)

The day of fasting and prayer gives me hope. For if they inquire of the Lord and follow His directions, I am sure they will not keep money secured as that was. A mischievous fellow of the M. E. Church remarked a day or so since that he supposed the Lord would tell them to keep the money. I would call this irony.

Bishop Morrison did the candid thing when he arose in the Conference and declared that certain congressional letters had been annexed to the episcopal message without consulting him. That was a sad development. Morrison is an honest, brave man, and abundantly merits the honors lavished upon him by the Church. I can't say that there was any crookedness in the annexation; I presume not, for the majority of the Episcopal College are men that are incapable of doing a mean thing, although they are not infallible.

It now appears that the Conference will condemn the methods by which the claim was put through the Senate, elect new agents, and a new Book Committee, but hold on to the money. That will not give satisfaction to the better element of the Church. It is not right to condemn the robbers and hold on to the plunder. It has been predicted again and again that some pretext would be trumped up for holding on to the stamps. I am for returning every cent of the money, if we have to sell the Publishing House to do it, and saying we will not receive it again on any terms. That is the only satisfactory atonement that can be made.

The passing of Rear Admiral Sampson leads me to say that he goes down under a cloud. No doubt, his chagrin at the comparative estimate placed upon himself and Admiral Schley in connection with the Santiago sea-fight, hastened his end. In this matter the Administration was for Sampson, but the people were and are for Schley. The ovations which the latter is receiving throughout the sunny South are nothing but the ebullitions of a sense of justice and indignation at the partiality and villainous injustice of the administration. After all, the people are king. But for Sampson, let us drop a tear; and let us remember with gratitude his many valuable services rendered to his country. Peace to his ashes!

The centralizing tendency of the railway systems of the land go to remind us that our people are being crushed by the anaconda of wealth. We are literally in irons. Concentration is power; power is tyranny; and tyranny is death. Nothing will free the people but the horrors of another French revolution. May it not come in our day!

The manner in which the war in the Philippines has been conducted is a disgrace to Republicanism, a disgrace to Protestant Christianity. That war was wholly unnecessary. If we at the start had promised that people independence, as we did the Cubans, there would have been no trouble. The very manhood which causes the Filipinos to struggle for independence shows that they are worthy of it.

Yesterday I performed the funeral rites at Jefferson City, Tenn., of a Confederate soldier—Mr. Musser—originally of Wythe county, Va., who lost an arm in the battle of Drewry's Bluff. The Confederates charged the Federals in their breastworks, took them and all the Federals had there, although at that point the Federals were six to one to the Confederates. Mr. Musser was drawing a pension of eight dollars per month from the State of Tennessee. His lieutenant, who was present, said that there was not a better soldier in the Confederate army; that he obeyed all orders and never complained. He was a soldier of Jesus Christ, and now bivouacs in the immediate presence of his great Captain.

It is to be hoped that when all the facts are known, it will be ascertained that the matter of the destruction of St. Pierre has been exaggerated; but so far the rumors have modified very little.

I have copied from a daily the following disasters in the world's history, showing date, place, and number of lives lost:

February 24, 1879—Pompeii destroyed by eruption of Vesuvius, 2,000.

1137—Catania, in Sicily, overturned by earthquake, 15,000.

1268—Cicilia destroyed by earthquake, 60,000.

December 5, 1456—Earthquake at Naples, 40,000.

February 26, 1531—Earthquake at Lisbon, 30,000.

September, 1693—Earthquake in Sicily buried fifty-four cities and towns and 300 villages; of Catania and its 18,000 inhabitants not a trace remained, 100,000.

February 2, 1703—Jeddo, Japan, destroyed, 200,000.

November 30, 1731—Earthquake at Peking, 100,000.

October 28, 1746—Lima and Callao demolished, 18,000.

September, 1751—Grand Cairo destroyed, 40,000.

June 7, 1755—Kascham, Persia, swallowed up, 40,000.

November 1, 1755—Great earthquake in Spain and Portugal; in eight minutes 50,000 inhabitants in Lisbon perished; cities of Coimbra, Oporto, Braga and St. Ubes wholly overturned.

Spain, Malaga reduced to ruins. One half of Fez, Morocco, destroyed, more than 12,000 Arabs killed; 2,000 houses in Island of Maderi destroyed, 100,000.

February 4, 1797—Whole country between Santa Fe and Panama destroyed, including city of Quito, 40,000.

August 10, 1822—Aleppo destroyed, 20,000.

May 26, 1830—Canton, China, shaken, 6,000.

May 7, 1842—Cape Haytien destroyed, 5,000.

March 2, 1836—Earthquake in Molucca Islands, 3,000.

December 16, 1857—Calabria, Naples destroyed, 10,000.

July 2, 1863—Earthquake partly destroyed Manila, 1,000.

August 13, 1868—Earthquake in Peru and Ecuador, 25,000.

The list could be increased.

The stupendous eruption, May 23, 1883, of the volcano on the island of Krakatoa, in the Straits of Sunda, between Sumatra and Java, is well remembered. Dust and mud were distributed over an enormous area. Nearly the whole island was blown away, and the resulting tidal waves 50 to 60 feet high, swept to death 30,000 people on the shores of neighboring islands, and rolled on, diminishing in height to the North Atlantic and around most of the border of the Pacific. Remarkable solar phenomena resulted. In the United States and in Europe gloriously colored skies before sunrise and after sunset months after the eruption were regarded as due to the dust floating in the atmosphere from the volcanic eruption.

We often speak of terra firma, but it is not very firma after all. Land is regarded in law as real estate, but it is not very real after all. Volcanoes seem to bear out the theory that the body of the earth is a molten mass, with a thin crust on the outside—in other words, the nebular theory, that originally the planets were a thin vapor condensed into worlds; the condensation evolved enormous heat; and, at first, the planets were bodies of liquid fire, incandescent masses, globular lava; that they here gradually cooled down into habitable worlds.

The theory that the earth will eventually be destroyed by fire is not an unreasonable one. A general disturbance of the sea of fire under the earth's crust would break that crust and cause the broken fragments to fall in, and every combustible substance would be reduced to ashes in a few minutes, and all the rocks would be changed to lava. Also the theory that the earth will go on cooling, the crust getting thicker and thicker till all animal and vegetable life is frozen out is plausible.

Worlds have their birth, infancy, youth, maturity, age and decay, and death. This world will die, and probably like the moon be a floating cinder in the solar system; but it will likely be peopled again, but, I hope, by a better race.

Morristown, Tenn., April 14, 1902.

MARY LYON'S DEVOTION.

A beautiful example of Christlikeness and consecration is portrayed in the life of Mary Lyon, of Mount Holyoke Seminary.

How fittingly was it said of her that "She seemed to stand between her pupils and God to assist them in learning His will." "Is it according to the law of love?" was a question she often pressed home to her pupils in the settlement of their difficulties. The Bible had the first place among her textbooks. She said at one time, "Education, property, time, influence, friends, children, brothers, and sisters, all should be devoted to the great object of the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom and the salvation of men."

A few days before her death she said, "There is nothing in the universe I fear but that I shall not know all my duty, or fail to do it."

If God calls a man to work He will be with him in that work, and he will succeed, no matter what the obstacles may be.—Moody.

Religious News.

The regular weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers was held at Epworth church yesterday morning and was called to order by the president, Rev. W. R. Proctor. Prayer was made by Rev. Dr. W. E. Judkins.

A letter was read by the president from Rev. George Wesley Jones, who has organized a Methodist mission Sunday-school at Park Place, calling the attention of the members of the body to the importance and need of a church being erected in that place and to the fact that two lots have been purchased on which there is a balance of $800 due, and asking that steps be taken by the churches in Norfolk to aid in paying off this indebtedness so that the Methodists of Park Place can be in a position to erect a house of worship that will be a credit to the denomination.

The matter was discussed by Rev. Dr. Judkins and Rev. Daniel F. Merritt, showing the needs of expansion along Methodist lines in this new and rapidly growing section of Norfolk and the importance of building a church there at an early day. Dr. Judkins in his remarks cited the rapid growth of Methodism in Brambleton and Atlantic City, where there are large and self-sustaining churches, as an incentive to the church to begin a forward movement in this line in Park Place.

On motion, the president appointed a committee consisting of Rev. Dr. Judkins, Rev. R. H. Bennett, Rev. C. L. Bane, Rev. J. K. Jolliff, and Rev. George Wesley Jones to take up the matter and thoroughly discuss the situation and bring in a report at the next meeting of the body.

Rev. Dr. W. J. Maybee, superintendent of the Children's Home Society, of Virginia, being present, addressed the meeting in the interest of the society, calling attention to the movement now on foot to establish a branch of the society in Norfolk and the general favor it is meeting with here.

CALL OF CHURCHES.

The call of the churches was taken up and reports were heard from the following:

Rev. George H. McFaden reported a full Sunday school at Wright Memorial church, 343 scholars being present. He preached to large congregations, and received six new members on profession of faith, and one by certificate. He also reported seventy-two accessions to the church as a part of the fruits of the recent revival.

Rev. Ernest Stevens preached to the usual congregations at Owens' Memorial church Sunday, and had a good meeting last week, with several conversions.

Rev. C. W. Cain worshipped at Central Sunday morning.

At Park View the pastor, Rev. J. N. Latham, had a good day and received six new scholars in the Sunday school.

Rev. E. H. Rawlins preached morning and night at Monumental and received eight new scholars in the Sunday-school.

Rev. Daniel T. Merritt received several new scholars in the Sunday-school at Port Norfolk and conducted his usual services morning and night.

At Centenary Rev. E. T. Dadmun held Children's Day exercises at 11 A. M. Sunday, which were largely attended. He reported the services to be of a most interesting and profitable character.

Rev. C. L. Bane preached to his usual large congregations at Cumberland street. Rev. Dr. Starr was present at the morning services, but took no part in the exercises. He said the doctor desired to be remembered by the preachers.

At Central church Rev. W. T. Green had a good Sunday-school; conducted the service at 11 A. M., spoke to the Sunbeam Society at South-Street Baptist church in the afternoon and held the annual Children's Day at the evening service at Central.

Rev. W. C. Vaden, presiding elder of the Portsmouth district, preached at Denby's Sunday morning and at Bethel in the afternoon.

Rev. W. Asbury Christian preached morning and night at Memorial, Berkeley.

Rev. C. M. Howard, of the Presbyterian church, preached at Lambert's Point Sunday morning, and the pastor Rev. C. H. McGhee, preached at night. He received one new member by certificate and admitted several new scholars in the Sunday-school.

Rev. W. J. Maybee preached at Epworth Sunday morning and the Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at night to a very large congregation on "The Attitude of Society to the Outcast Woman."

Rev. W. E. Judkins preached at Huntersville Sunday morning and at McKendree at night. He stated that he had appointed Rev. E. K. Odell to take charge of the church at Huntersville until conference.

Rev. J. E. Shenk, of Woodstock, Va., a farmer pastor of the Lutheran church, Norfolk, sent greetings to the body, which were warmly received.

Rev. J. P. Barrett, of the Christian Memorial Temple, had a good Sunday school and good congregations to hear him Sunday.

At McKendree Rev. W. R. Proctor preached at night and received one new member by certificate.—Virginian-Pilot.

METHODIST PREACHERS' MEETING

The attendance at the Methodist Preachers' Meeting this morning was not large. It was interesting, however, and the best of humor prevailed. Presiding Elder Wilson occupied the chair. The opening prayer was made by Rev. Mr. Comer, of Ettrick. From reports a good day's work was done in the churches yesterday. Revival services in progress at Ettrick and Mataoca. At Ettrick the conversions have been considerable and the good work still goes on. The presence and talk of the presiding elder added to the interest of the meeting. Rev. Mr. Booker, owing to an affection of the throat, did not fill his pulpit last night. The coming of the heated term will, it is thought, be seen and felt in attendance upon public worship. The work, however, as planned will go on. Rev. Mr. Thomas at Wesley especially is busy with the building of the new church on hand. Pleasant references were made to the annual meeting of the Methodist Sunday-school Association held yesterday afternoon at Washington-Street church. Familiar faces and forms were missed in our meeting this morning, but Providence permitting we shall greet them again ere long.—Secretary in Index.

The Christian Thought Club was called to order by Rev. E. H. Rawlings, the vice-president. Rev. W. Asbury Christian led in prayer. Rev. J. K. Jolliff was elected secretary. The call for books developed the fact that the members had been reading some choice literature.

Dr. J. C. C. Newton was appointed to read a paper on "The Old Testament as Interpreted by Jesus."

The order of the day was entered into and Rev. R. H. Bennett read a strong and well written and humorous paper on "Evolution and Current Theology."—Virginian-Pilot.

THE HYMNS WE SING.

BY ARTHUR LEWIS TUBBS.

We sing "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love,"
Then flee, as if we feared to test the blessedness thereof.
We scarcely wait the last "Amen" to hurry down the aisle,
Our hearts unloving and our lips but strangers to a smile;
Then, as we pass the portals of the church's sheltering fold,
We sigh, "Alas, it is a shame that Christians are so cold."

We listen to the sermon and admit that it was "fine,"
But leave its truths behind us and hasten home to dine;
We criticise the choir, for we think we have a right;
They're paid to make our music and they ought to give delight.
We feel it is intrusion, often frowns are not a few,
If the usher shows a stranger into our exclusive pew.

Then once again we join to sing "My faith looks up to Thee,"
(And wish our neighbor wouldn't get to wandering from the key;)
Or lift our voices to declare "I love Thy kingdom, Lord,"
(And think it strange some people sing who cannot even "chord.")
For O! how oft the hymns we sing rise not above the roof
Because our thoughts are all below, from love held far aloof.
Come, let us sing the songs we love, and singing, let us pray

That hearts and voices may unite and soar to heaven away.
O! may we firmly grasp the hand, as friend to friend, and feel That Christianity is true and charity is real.
Then shall we learn the lesson sweet and sing with thoughts of love:
"The fellowship of kindred hearts is like to that above."

—Ram's Horn.

Envy nobody, covet nothing worldly, go quietly about your work, and believe that a man may work at an anvil and be as religious as if it were his office to stand at the altar.—William Mountford.

Talmage Sermon

WASHINGTON. From an unusual standpoint Dr. Talmage in this discourse looks at the duties and trials which belong to the different decades of human life; text, Psalm xc, 10, "The days of our years are threescore years and ten."

The seventieth milestone of life is here planted as at the end of the journey. A few go beyond it. Multitudes never reach it. The oldest person of modern times expired at 169 years. A Greek of the name of Stravaside lived to 132 years. An Englishman of the name of Thomas Parr lived 152 years. Before the time of Moses people lived 150 years, and if you go far enough back they lived 900 years. Well, that was necessary, because the story of the world must come down by tradition, and it needed long life safely to transmit the news of the past. If the generations had been short lived, the story would so often have changed lips that it might have got all astray. But after Moses began to write it down and parchment told it from century to century it was not necessary that people live so long in order to authenticate the events of the past. If in our time people lived only twenty-five years, that would not affect history, since it is put in print and is no longer dependent on tradition. Whatever your age, I will today directly address you, and I shall speak to those who are in the twenties, the thirties, the forties, the fifties, the sixties, and to those who are in the seventies and beyond.

First, then, I accost those of you who are in the twenties. You are full of expectation. You are ambitious—that is, if you amount to anything—for some kind of success, commercial or mechanical or professional or literary or agricultural or social or moral. If I find some one in the twenties without any sort of ambition, I feel like saying: "My friend, you have got on the wrong planet. This is not the world for you. You are going to be in the way. Have you made your choice of poorhouses? You will never be able to pay for your cradle. Who is going to settle for your board? There is a mistake about the fact that you were born at all."

Advice to the Twenties.

But, supposing you have ambition, let me say to all the twenties, expect everything through divine manipulation, and then you will get all you want and something better. Are you looking for wealth? Well, remember that God controls the money markets, the harvests, the droughts, the caterpillars, the locusts, the sunshine, the storm, the land, the sea, and you will get wealth. Perhaps not that which is stored up in the banks, in safe deposits, in United States securities, in houses and lands, but your clothing and board and shelter, and that is about all you can appropriate anyhow. You cost the Lord a great deal. To feed and clothe and shelter you for a lifetime requires a big sum of money, and if you get nothing more than the absolute necessities you get an enormous amount of supply.

expect as much as you wish of any kind of success, if you expect it from the Lord you are safe. Depend on any other resource, and you may be badly chagrined, but depend on God and all will be well. It is a good thing in the crisis of life to have a man of large means back you up. It is a great thing to have a moneyed institution stand behind you in your undertaking. But it is a mightier thing to have the God of heaven and earth your coadjutor, and you may have him. I am so glad that I met you while you are in the twenties. You are laying out your plans, and all your life in this world and the next for five hundred million years of your existence will be affected by those plans. It is about 8 o'clock in the morning of your life, and you are just starting out. Which way are you going to start? Oh, the twenties!

"Twenty" is a great word in the Bible. Joseph was sold for twenty pieces of silver; Samson judged Israel twenty years; Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities; the flying roll that Zechariah saw was twenty cubits; when the sailors of the ship on which Paul sailed sounded the Mediterranean sea, it was twenty fathoms. What mighty things have been done in the twenties! Romulus founded Rome when he was twenty; Keats finished life at twenty-five; Lafayette was a world renowned soldier at twenty-three; Oberlin accomplished his chief work at twenty-seven; Bonaparte was victor over Italy at twenty-six; Pitt was prime minister of England at twenty-two; Calvin had completed his immortal "Institutes" by the time he was twenty-six; Grotius was attorney general at twenty-four. Some of the mightiest things for God and eternity have been done in the twenties. As long as you can put the figure 2 before the other figure that helps describe your age I have high hopes about you. Look out for that figure 2. Watch its continuance with as much earnestness as you ever watched anything that promised you salvation or threatened you demolition. What a critical time—the twenties! While they continue you decide your occupation and the principles by which you will be guided; you make your most abiding friendships; you arrange your home life; you fix your habits. Lord God Almighty, for Jesus Christ's sake, have mercy on all the men and women in the twenties!

The Waiting Age.

Next I accost those in the thirties. You are at an age when you find what a tough thing it is to get recognized and established in your occupation or profession. Ten years ago you thought all that was necessary for success was to put on your shutter the sign of physician or dentist or attorney or broker or agent and you would have plenty of business. How many hours you sat and waited for business, and waited in vain, three persons only know—God, your wife and yourself. In commercial life you have not had the promotion and the increase in salary you anticipated, or the place you expected to occupy in the firm has not been vacated. The produce of the farm with which you expected to support yourself and those depending on you and to pay the interest on the mortgage has been far less than you anticipated, or the prices were down, or special expenses for sickness made drafts on your resources that you could not have expected. In some respects the hardest decade of life is the thirties, because the results are generally so far behind the anticipations. It is very rare indeed that a young man does as did the young man one Sunday night when he came to me and said, "I have been so marvelously prospered since I came to this country that I feel as a matter of gratitude that I ought to dedicate myself to God." Nine-tenths of the poetry of life has been knocked out of you since you came into the thirties. Men in the different professions and occupations saw that you were rising, and they must put an estoppel on you or you might somehow stand in the way. They think you must be suppressed. From thirty to forty is an especially hard time for young doctors, young lawyers, young merchants, young farmers, young mechanics, young ministers. The struggle of the thirties is for honest and helpful and remunerative recognition. But few old people know how to treat young people with out patronizing them on the one hand or snubbing them on the other. Oh, the thirties! Joseph stood before Pharaoh at thirty; David was thirty years old when he began to reign; the height of Solomon's temple was thirty cubits; Christ entered upon his active ministry at thirty years of age; Judas sold him for thirty pieces of silver. Oh, the thirties! What a word suggestive of triumph or disaster!

Your decade is the one that will probably afford the greatest opportunity for victory because there is the greatest necessity for struggle. Read the world's history and know what are the thirties for good or bad. Alexander the Great closed his career at thirty-two; Frederick the Great made Europe tremble with his armies at thirty-five; Cortes conquered Mexico at thirty; Grant fought Shiloh and Donelson when thirty-eight; Raphael died at thirty-seven; Luther was the hero of the reformation at thirty-five; Sir Philip Sidney got through by thirty-two. The greatest deeds for God and against him were done within the thirties, and your greatest battles are now and between the time when you cease expressing your age by putting first a figure 2 and the time when you will cease expressing it by putting first a figure 3. As it is the greatest time of the struggle, I adjure you, in God's name and by God's grace, make it the greatest achievement. My prayer is for all those in the tremendous crisis of the thirties. The fact is that by the way you decide the present decade of your history you decide all the following decades.

The Decade of Discovery.

Next I accost the forties. Yours is the decade of discovery. I do not mean the discovery of the outside, but the discovery of yourself. No man knows himself until he is forty. He overestimates or underestimates himself. By that time he has learned what he can do or what he cannot do. He thought he had commercial genius enough to become a millionaire, but now he is satisfied to make a comfortable living. He thought he had rhetorical power that would bring him into the United States senate; now he is content if he can successfully argue a common case before a petit jury. He thought he had medical skill that would make him a Mott or a Grosse or a Willard Parker of a Sims; now he finds his sphere is that of a family physician, prescribing for the ordinary ailments that afflict our race. He was sailing on in a fog and could not take a reckoning, but now it clears up enough to allow him to find out his real latitude and longitude. He has been climbing, but now he has got to the top of the hill, and he takes a long breath. He is half way through the journey at least, and he is in a position to look backward or forward. He has more good sense than he ever had. He knows human nature, for he has been cheated often enough to see the bad side of it and he has met so many gracious and kindly and splendid souls he also knows the good side of it. Now, calm you self. Thank God for the past and liberally set your compass for another voyage. You have chased enough thistledown; you have blown enough soap bubbles; you have seen the unsatisfying nature of all earthly things. Open a new chapter with God and the world. This decade of the forti ought to eclipse all its predecessors in worship, in usefulness and in happiness.

The Reaping Age.

My sermon next accosts the fifties. How queer it looks when in writing your age you make the first of the two figures a 5. This is the decade which shows what the other decades have been. If a young man has sown wheat and he has lived to this time, he reaps the harvest of it in the fifties. If by necessity he was compelled to toil in honest directions he is called to settle up with exacting nature some time during the fifties. Many have so hard in early life that they reaper genarians at fifty. Sciaticas and rheumatism and neuralgias and vertigo and insomnias have their playground in the fifties. A man's hair begins to whiten and, although he may have worn spectacles before, now he needs the optician for No. 14 or No. 12 or No. 10. When he gets a cough and is most cured, he hacks and clears his throat a good while afterward. O, who are in the fifties, think of it! A half century of blessing to be thankful for and a half century subtracted from an existence which, in the most marked cases of longevity, hardly ever reaches a whole century. By this time you ought to be eminent for piety. You have been in so many battles you ought to be a brave soldier. You have made so many voyages you ought to be a good sailor. So long protected and blessed, you ought to have a soul full of doxology. In Bible times in Canaan every fifty years was by God's command a year of jubilee. The people did not work that year. If property had by misfortune gone out of one's possession, on the fiftieth year it came back to him. If he had fooled it away it was returned without a farthing pay. If a man had been enslaved, was in that year emancipated. A trumpet was sounded loud and clear a long, and it was the trumpet of jubilee. They shook hands, they laughed, they congratulated. What a time it was that fiftieth year! And if under the dispensation it was such a glad time under our new and more glorious dispensation let all who have come to the fifties hear the trumpet of jubilee that I now blow. That was the allusion made by Mr. Toplady, the great hymnologist, when he wrote:

Blow ye the trumpet, blow
The gladly solemn sound;
Let all the nations know,
To earth's remotest bound,
The year of jubilee is come;
Return, ye ransomed sinners, home.

Ye who have sold for nought
Your heritage above
Shall have it back unbought,
The gift of Jesus' love.
The year of jubilee has come;
Return, ye ransomed sinners, home.

At Threescore.

My sermon next accosts the sixties. The beginning of that decade is most startling than any other. In his chronological journey the man rides rather smoothly over the figures 2 and 3 and 4 and 5, but the figure 6 gives him a jolt. He says: "It cannot be that I am sixty. Let me examine the old family record. I guess they made a mistake. They got my name down wrong in the roll of births." But, no, the old

(Continued on page 11.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Durham with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 85, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M. (P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

1:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York River landings, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Lester Manor with stage for Walkerton and Tappahannock Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

9:15 A. M., daily from West Point, with connection from Baltimore Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, Wednesdays and Fridays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Steamers leave West Point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5:30 P. M., arriving Baltimore 8:30 A. M.

Steamers call at Almonds, Claybank and Gloucester Point.

C. W. WESTBURY,
District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.
S. H. HARDWICK,
General Passenger Agent.
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,*TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAR. 2, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:20 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
3:00 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	3:34 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	6:20 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	6:40 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
8:50 A. M.	4:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	9:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
	(Eastern Time.)
1:05 A. M.	8:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
	(Central Time.)
4:40 A. M.	12:05 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
7:52 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Ar. Brunswick.
9:25 A. M.	3:40 P. M.—Ar. Fernandina.
9:05 A. M.	3:50 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	5:10 P. M.—Ar. St. Augustine.
3:15 P. M.	10:00 P. M.—Ar. Tallahassee.
1:48 P. M.	12:40 A. M.—Ar. Ocala.
5:10 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Ar. Orlando.
5:40 P. M.	5:00 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
7:15 P. M.	6:40 A. M.—Ar. Port Tampa.
10:50 P. M.	8:10 A. M.—Ar. Miami.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Drawing-Room, Observation and Compartment Sleeping Cars between New York and St. Augustine. Pullman Dining Cars between New York and Richmond and between Hamlet and St. Augustine. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington and between Richmond and St. Augustine. Pullman Sleeping Cars (tri-weekly) between Washington and Pinehurst. Pullman Sleeping Cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa and between Jacksonville and Orlando. Also, through Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe Cars between Hamlet and Atlanta.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-Room Buffet Sleeping Cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping Car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor Cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest Day Coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

Patents, Trademarks, U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure PATENTS and TRADE-MARKS write to

CASNOW & CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON, D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English, etc.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry.
Fine Repairing.
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing
Lumsden & Son,
Jewellers and Opticians
721 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS
and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Lawyers,
Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLSand UMBER YARD

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.
—
PLOW HANDLES.
—
TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.
—
CORN MEAL,
—
SLAT & WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

DENTIST.

CONFERENCE TALK.

Dallas, Texas, May 15.—On Tuesday night last the ladies of Dallas gave a reception to the members of, and visitors to the General Conference in Carnegie Hall. The hall is very large and brilliantly lighted. The Bishops and their wives and a large number of the leading Methodist ladies of the city received. Your correspondent is unable to give any description of the elegant costumes of the ladies. They were elegant indeed, and one could not help thinking what changes have come in Methodist usage in the matter of dress, since the days of the fathers. No doubt some of the old men present—for there are a number of men in the General Conference who have seen more than fifty years of service in the ministry of the church—no doubt some of them may have looked upon this brilliant array as a sign of degeneracy. Yet is it a sign of such?

There is danger "along this line," to use a hackneyed pulpit phrase, but it is not an infallible sign. The facts of history must speak and one must read the full page and not judge by sentences or phrases taken out of their conviction. The amount of money given to the cause for which Christianity stands; the increasing numbers of educational and eleemosynary institutions and their growing endowments; the multitudes who are going as missionaries to heathen lands, prompted by love for Christ and their fellowmen; the heroic conduct of those who have gone to the lands of darkness and given fortune and life for the cause they love; all these things go to show that this is no degenerate age.

Yesterday the fraternal delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. Huntington and Lieutenant-Governor Bates, took their leave of the Conference. This they did in a very happy manner. It will be well to repeat now that these gentlemen have come and gone, that at no former General Conference have the messengers from this church made a more favorable impression. Not only in their public capacity, but in all their private intercourse they captured our people. Your correspondent speaks advisedly as he was made by the Conference Chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence and had as such to be, as it were, the host of these visitors.

It seems a great pity that we should have such delightful quadrennial minglings, one with another, and between these short occasions be, as the two churches are in many places, in such bitter competition. Neither church has taken any steps looking to organic union, and I think such a proposition now would be premature, but both have Committees on Federation. These committees have arranged to have a common hymnal, a common catechism, a common order of service, and to have transfers of ministers from one body to the other. Arrangements are on foot to have a great common publishing house in Shanghai, China, and a petition, or memorial, is before this General Conference looking to the union of all the Methodist bodies in Japan into one common Conference. When hostilities had ceased between the United States and Spain the two churches came to an agreement whereby the Methodist Episcopal Church entered Porto Rico and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, went into Cuba. These are steps in the right direction, and if some rules of comity could be agreed upon as to the work here in our own land, that would prevent competition and waste of funds, it would be in the interest of our common Christianity.

The absorbing question before the Conference still is the Publishing House war claim. No report from the Committee on Publishing Interests has come into the hands of the Conference yet. Major E. B. Stahlman, of Nashville, Tenn., who was the agent of the Book Committee, and who received the 35 per cent. fee for securing the settlement of the claim by the United States Congress, is here and asked a hearing at the hands of the Committee on Publishing Interests. Some, it is understood, opposed his being heard, but one of the members who was, and is most outspoken against Major Stahlman and the measures he used in prosecuting the claim, moved that he be heard, which motion was carried. It is understood that he has not yet completed his speech, and until he does the committee is not likely to bring in a report. It will be Saturday before the matter is before the Conference. It seems to be the general opinion that a majority and a minority report will be brought in. It may be assumed that neither report will fully satisfy the members of the Conference, and a protracted debate, with amendments, substitutes, etc., may be looked for.

The weather in Dallas is very warm and we have had quite a good deal of rain. The water of the city is impregnated with soda, and a large proportion of the delegates have been made very sick by it. Some have ceased drinking it and are buying mineral waters from the drug stores. The proprietors of some Virginia waters could have made a "ten strike" advertisement by sending on here some barrels of good water.

It is yet too early to predict when the Conference will adjourn.—A. C. S., in Norfolk Landmark.

Norfolk, Va., May 16, 1902.

Dear Sir,—Owing to several circumstances, it has been thought best to postpone the meeting of the Virginia Epworth League Conference, which was to have been held at Danville next June. I will, therefore, ask you to withhold the bulletin of announcement which I mailed you a few days ago, and publish the following in its place:

The Executive Committee of the Virginia Epworth League Conference, which was to have been held at Danville June 12th to 15th next, announces that it has been found necessary to postpone the Conference to a later date, notice of which will be given. It is with keen regret that they make this announcement, but owing to the approaching Richmond District Conference, the interest in our General Conference now in session, the sickness of some upon whom the success of the Conference partially depended, and other causes, this action has been thought the proper one to take.

E. T. DADMON, President.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

A new note was struck in reference to the conduct of charity bazaars this week in Washington, when the Rev. Alexander Kent, of the People's church, publicly rebuked the management of the great Masonic fair which had been in progress here for several weeks. He makes the point that all schemes for making money by selling chances, no matter how worthy the object, are essentially wrong, being in one way or another forms of gambling and lottery. His words have caused some consternation and a great deal of earnest thought and consideration, and have also been quoted and commented on all over the country. Some time ago he spoke to me about the plan of the local Young Men's Christian Association for raising the membership of the organization, in which the old members were divided into two camps of friendly rivalry to see which could gain the most members in a given time, the losers to pay by banqueting the winners. He did not find fault with the scheme, but he characterized the public advertising that was used in street cars and newspapers as being a departure from the ideal Christianity, "which vaunteth not itself." He is opposed to having a church or any of its organizations countenance procedures which deviate from the spirit of the Gospels, and maintains that when an act, ethically wrong, receives the sanction of the church, it is apt to be far less rationally dealt with than when it is regarded as being unworthy of adoption by ecclesiastical authority. In his published statement concerning the Masonic fair, Dr. Kent says:

"When churches indulge in fishponds, grab-bags and raffles; when great and influential organizations, such as the Masonic body, composed largely of the legal and commercial talent of the country, organize great gambling enterprises and run them for weeks at a time, offering people 'chances' on building lots, automobiles, carriages, and a host of other things having a value of hundreds of dollars, each at ten to fifty cents a 'chance,' and when the great mass of church-going people flock to such places and spend thousands of dollars in efforts to secure these articles at a thousandth part of their value and when persons disposing of them receive many times their cost, how is it possible to develop any public sentiment against gambling per se?"

"Strictly speaking, no form of business is ethical in which gains on the one side represent losses on the other. When a man's gains are the result of his own productive or creative activity, they enrich his neighbor as well as himself. When they are drawn from the earnings of his neighbors, and no equivalent given, they impoverish both, for they make lean the purse of the one and the soul of the other.

"Of all things considered unethical, there is nothing more radically at variance with the ethics of Jesus than the practice of gambling. It sets the principle of reciprocity and altruism at utter defiance, and treats the royal law with open contempt."

Admiral Dewey recently wrote a letter from Washington that will have a direct bearing on the teaching of temperance among the younger generation. The average small boy looks to the Admiral as the embodiment of all that is heroic, and anything that Dewey does immediately gains his sanction and approval, and awakens in him a desire to "go and do likewise." The pupils of a Sunday school class at Canton, Ohio, took exception to some parts of the temperance lesson by their teacher because, as they said, Dewey and his men had taken liquor while in the famous battle of Manila Bay. The teacher wrote to Admiral Dewey about this, as a large part of her lesson hinged on the use of liquor by the world's leaders, and most of its effect would be lost if the boys carried their point. She received the following reply direct from the Admiral:

"Dear Madam,—I am very glad to have the opportunity of correcting the impression which you say prevails among your Sunday school scholars that the men on my fleet were given liquor every twenty minutes during the battle of Manila Bay.

"As a matter of fact, every participant, from myself down, fought the battle of Manila Bay on coffee alone. The United States laws forbid the taking of liquor aboard ship, except for medicinal uses, and we had no liquor that we could have given the men, even had it been desired to do so.

"Very truly yours,

"GEORGE DEWEY.

***

METHODIST INSTITUTE.

An Ever-Increasing Good Work Going On at the Building.

Though not so much is being written about the Methodist Institute as when it was more novel, there is an ever-increasing good work going on in the large mission building at the corner of Nineteenth and Main streets, of which Rev. George H. Wiley is superintendent.

One of the important additions to the work this winter is the dispensary, where three days in each week for one hour there is a doctor present to treat the sick, and another at hand to prepare the medicines. It is a most praiseworthy thing in the Church Hill Medical Association to take up this work. Mr. J. Thompson Brown is at the head of this movement. Another new and excellent feature is the Mother's Club, Mrs. W. J. Maybee, president. This organization has done much to relieve and carry brightness to the burdened women of that section.

It is not meant to discount anything else, but unquestionably true that beyond all else, the most important and helpful of all the efforts started this winter is the Board of Visitors, a band of forty ladies from a dozen churches, who go in pairs to visit and counsel the people for many blocks about the mission. Mr. Wiley says that nothing else has helped him so much.

On account of the interest of hundreds of well-to-do men and women of the city of all denominations, the building is being furnished in a manner in keeping with all of its needs. A trip through the building reveals that a wonderful work is being carried on by Mr. Wiley and his assistants.

Beginning on the top floor, one finds much of interest. Leaving the ground floor, we will not take the elevator, as it has not begun running yet, but go up four flights of broad stairways, often trod by the first men and women of Virginia, for it was the Jefferson of Richmond sixty years ago. When it was built it was intended to take the place of the first hotel in Richmond. Mr. Wiley insists that "it was intended for its present use, and that the position of the house, the varied sizes in rooms, etc., even to the ball-room, where religious service is now held, is exactly what is needed for his work."

On the top floor, in cool, clean, well-ventilated rooms, are found lodging-rooms, severely plain, but quite enough for those who use them. On the next floor, at the foot of the stairs, is Mrs. Creer's sewing school room, with about two dozen little chairs for the children. The next room is for the boys' military company, where on hooks hang the uniforms and caps of the boys. The guns, swords, drums, etc., are in the corner. The next room is the wardrobe, where articles of all kinds ever worn are kept for the use of the Board of Visitors to distribute to the worthy poor. Across the passage is Mr. Lewis Judkins' night school, with chart and other materials for kindergarten work. Then comes the magazine store-room, where several thousand magazines and papers, given by many friends, are kept to use in the reading-room. Last on this floor is the superintendent's office, with the unique sign at the door: "Life is short; leave when you are through."

On the next floor there are more bedrooms, and a large and very attractive room now being fixed up for a young woman's club for committee meetings.

On the ground floor are the lunch-room, kitchen, chapel-room, reading-room, and dispensary.

Some of the warmest admirers and friends of the mission are outside of its own denomination. The work is not intended to be, nor could it be, in any strict sense, for a particular set.

In the cellar is the place for baths and gymnasium, and nothing is more needed than a set of baths for the hundreds of men who stop at the mission. —Dispatch.

THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, IN ITS EDUCATIONAL ASPECT.

The Woman's Home Mission Society not alone renders that service of love which cares for the poor or rescues the criminal. She has night schools on the Pacific slope for the Chinese and Japanese, and from three hundred to four hundred students have been brought under the supervision of earnest, Christian women who study their needs and meet them as best they can.

For the Cuban children of Florida two day schools are maintained at Tampa, and one large boarding school at Key West. At these schools from four to five hundred children are brought under influences which will make them good citizens when grown.

In London, one of the mountain towns of Southwestern Kentucky, a high-grade training school for teachers and the youth of that section has been in successful operation for six years.

From two to three hundred students are annually enrolled, and of these, from fifty to seventy are normal students, district school teachers, who in their day schools and the Sabbath schools which they organize and conduct, reach a student body of more than three thousand. The majority of this student body are children from the cabin homes and the coal mines that are reached by the Church in no other way.

For the destitute and orphaned children in the mountainous section of East Tennessee, the Home Mission women of Holston Conference have established at Greenville, Tenn., an industrial school and orphanage. In these schools character building is the first aim, and better, truer citizens are being trained for our country and for God.

MRS. DELA H. ROSE.

Editor Recorder,—The following resolutions were adopted by the Hawkins Sunday school, Dinwiddie Circuit, with the request that they be sent to the Southern Methodist Recorder for publication:

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom, has taken from us to Himself our sister, Delia H. Rose, one of our most faithful and exemplary members:

Resolved, 1. That we, members of Hawkins church and Sunday school, bow in submission to His will, believing that our loss is her eternal gain; that absent from the body, she is present with our Lord.

2. That we will pray for her sorrowing loved one, and especially for the little ones left without a mother's care and a mother's love.

3. That these resolutions be sent to the Southern Methodist Recorder for publication. MRS. INDIANA VAUGHAN, MRS. W. F. DOYLE, MRS. G. A. BOESSEAU.

Editor Recorder,—I enclose statement of amount received to date for the home of Sister R. F. Beadles. Please allow space in your columns: Previously acknowledged .....$266 00

W. P. Wright .....	5 00
L. B. Betty .....	5 00
E. H. Rawlings .....	10 00
F. M. Edwards .....	5 00
J. C. Reed .....	5 00
D. B. Austin and wife .....	10 00

$306 00

Very sincerely, W. H. VINCENT.

"Take me, make me what Thou wilt; empty me and fill me; crucify and quicken; prepare me for Thy perfect will, and fit me to receive the indwelling Christ, and to be filled with all the fullness of God."

SELF-PROTECTION demands that you be on the alert to see that you get Painkiller (Perry Davis') when you ask for it; some dealers will try and persuade you to take something else, claimed to be just as good; insist upon getting Painkiller, the remedy which has been the world's family doctor for sixty years; it never fails to stop diarrhea, griping pains in the stomach or bowels, dysentery, etc. Large bottles, 25 and 50 cents.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session. J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

DAILY SERVICE VIA THE POPULAR YORK RIVER ROUTE BETWEEN RICHMOND AND BALTIMORE, EFFECTIVE MAY 12, 1902.

Leave Richmond daily, except Sunday, 4:30 P. M.; West Point, 5:50 P. M. Arrive Baltimore 8:30 A. M. One night on the beautiful York river and Chesapeake bay. Refreshed by the bracing salt air, you arrive in Baltimore at a convenient hour in the morning. This route is famous for its good service, elegant meals, polite attention, etc. The morning train from Charlotte, Greensboro, Danville, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Chase City, etc., arriving Richmond 3:25 P. M., makes direct connection with this route in same station at Richmond, and at Baltimore connection is made for Philadelphia, New York, and all Eastern and Northern points, including Atlantic City and all Eastern resorts. Low rate excursion tickets are on sale daily at Richmond to Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. This is the favorite of all short water trips.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

SOUTHERN STUDENT CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A., JUNE 14-23; ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF Y. W. C. A., JUNE 13-23, 1902, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Asheville, N. C., and return. Tickets on sale June 13th-14th, with return limit June 25th.

SUMMER SCHOOL, KNOXVILLE, TENN., JUNE 19TH-JULY 30TH, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Knoxville and return. Tickets on sale June 16th, 17th, and 18th, 28th, 29th, and 30th, and July 11th, 12th, and 13th, with return limit August 15th.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare for the round trip, plus $2 membership fee. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, inclusive, with return limit July 6, 1902, except by depositing tickets and upon payment of 50 cents an extension to September 10th may be obtained.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS, UP-TO-DATE FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 TO $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

(Continued from page 10.)

brothers or sisters remember the time of his advent, and there is a relative a year older and another relative a year younger, and, sure enough, the fact is established beyond all dispute. Sixty! Now your great-grandfather is the temptation to fold up your memories and quit. You will feel a tendency to reminiscence. If you do not look out, you will begin almost everything with the words, "When I was a boy." But you ought to make these times more memorable for God and the truth than the fifties or the forties or the thirties. You ought to do more during the next ten years than you did in any thirty years of your life because of all the experience you have had. You have committed enough mistakes in life to make you wise above your juniors. Now, under the accumulated light of your past experimenting, go to work for God as never before. When a man in the sixties folds up his energy and feels he has done enough, it is the devil of indolence to which he is surrendering, and God generally takes the man at his word and lets him die right away. His brain, that under the tension of hard work is active, now suddenly shrivels. Men, whether they retire from secular or religious work, generally retire to the grave. No well man has a right to retire. The world was made to work. There remaineth a rest for the people of God, but it is in a sphere beyond the reach of telescopes. The military charge that decided one of the greatest battles of the ages—the battle of Waterloo—was not made until 8 o'clock in the evening, but some of you propose to go into camp at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

At the Harbor Mouth.

My subject next accosts those in the seventies and beyond. My word to them is congratulation. You have got nearly if not quite through. You have safely crossed the sea of life and are about to enter the harbor. You have fought at Gettysburg, and the war is over—here and there a skirmish with the remaining sin of your own heart and the sin of the world, but I guess you are about done. There may be some work for you yet on a small or large scale. Bismarck of Germany vigorous in the eighties. The prime minister of England strong at seventy-two. Haydn composing his oratorio, "The Creation," at seventy years of age. Isocrates doing some of his best work at seventy-four. Plato busy thinking for all succeeding centuries at eighty-one. Noah Webster, after making his world renowned dictionary, hard at work until eighty-five years old. Rev. Daniel Waldo praying in my pulpit at one hundred years of age. Humboldt producing the immortal "Cosmos" at seventy-six years. William Blake at sixty-seven learning Italian so as to read Dante in the original. Lord Cockburn at eighty-seven writing his best treatise. John Wesley stirring great audiences at eighty-five. William C. Bryant, without spectacles, reading in my house "Thanatopsis" at eighty-three years of age. Christian men and women in all departments serving God after becoming septuagenarians and octogenarians and nonagenarians prove that there are possibilities of work for the aged, but I think you who are passed the seventies are near being through.

How do you feel about it? You ought to be jubilant, because life is a tremendous struggle, and if you have got through respectably and usefully you ought to feel like people toward the close of a summer day seated on the rocks watching the sunset at Bar Harbor or Cape May or Lookout mountain. I am glad to say that most old Christians are cheerful. Daniel Webster visited John Adams a short time before his death and found him in very infirm health. He said to Mr. Adams: "I am glad to see you. I hope you are getting along pretty well." The reply was: "Ah, sir, quite the contrary. I find I am a poor tenant, occupying a house much shattered by time. It sways and trembles with every wind, and what is worse, sir, the landlord, as near as I can make out, does not intend to make any repairs."

An aged woman sent to her physician and told him of her ailments, and the doctor said: "What would you have me do, madam? I cannot make you young again." She replied: "I know that, doctor. What I want you to do is to help me to grow old a little longer." The young have their troubles before them; the old have their troubles behind them. You have got about all out of this earth that there is in it. Be glad that you, an aged servant of God, are going to try another life and amid better surroundings. Stop looking back and look ahead. O ye in the seventies and the eighties and the nineties, your best days are yet to come, your grandest associations are yet to be formed, your best eyesight is yet to be kindled, your best hearing is yet to be awakened, your greatest speed is yet to be traveled, your gladdest song is yet to be sung. The most of your friends have gone over the border, and you are going to join them very soon. They are waiting for you; they are watching the golden shore to see you land; they are watching the shining gate to see you come through; they are standing by the throne to see you mount. What a glad hour when you drop the staff and take the scepter, when you quit the stiffened joints and become an immortal athlete! But hear, hear; a remark pertinent to all people, whether in the twenties, the thirties, the forties, the fifties, the sixties, the seventies or beyond.

The Need of All Ages.

What we all need is to take the supernatural into our lives. Do not let us depend on brain and muscle and nerve. We want a mighty supply of the supernatural. We want with us a divine force mightier than the waters and the tempests, and when the Lord took two steps on bestormed Galilee, putting one foot on the winds and the other on the waves, he proved himself mightier than hurricane and billow. We want with us a divine force greater than the fires, and when the Lord cooled Nebuchadnezzar's furnace until Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego did not even have to fan themselves he proved himself mightier than the fire. We want a divine force stronger than wild beast, and when the Lord made Daniel a lion tamer he proved himself stronger than the wrath of the jungles. There are so many diseases in the world we want with us a divine Physician capable of combating ailments, and our Lord when on earth showed what he could do with catalepsy and paralysis and ophthalmia and dementia. Oh, take this supernatural into all your lives! How to get it? Just as you get anything you want—by application.

If life is a day-dream death will be a terrible night of reality.

The new dignity that comes to human life by regarding it in its true relation to the divine is a significant factor in its transformation. It lifts it from selfishness to service, from the passivity of desiring to be helped to the noble activity of desiring to help.—Selected.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENOER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.
DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $300,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.

"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.

"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.

"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.

"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.

"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.

"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

J. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

Our old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses; Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

...FOR TOBACCO.

Bellefonte

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to

Standard

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

Alliance

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 20.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., MAY 29, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

Bishop Duncan will preside for the first time successively over the Virginia Conference.

The editor begs pardon of the brethren who have sent articles during his absence. They will appear later. Bro.
By sent a reply some time ago to John of Kent, which should have appeared already.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The editor had intended to give the General Conference matters in this issue, but on his return found that through a misunderstanding of his discussion the minority report was not printed in the last issue of the Recorder, and so the full report is printed in this issue. We also print the action of the Conference on the War Claim. The elections resulted in the choice of Dr. James Atkins as day school editor; Dr. H. M. Du-cane as Epworth League secretary;
R. J. Bigham as senior Book Agent,
D. M. Smith as junior Book Agent,
J. D. Hammond as Secretary of Education, Dr. P. H. Whisner as Secretary of Church Extension, Dr. W. R.
Beth as Missionary Secretary, and the Mission Board elected Dr. Seth as Assistant Missionary and Secretary.

A PERSONAL STATEMENT.

I regret exceedingly that it is necessary for me to say anything about the irregularity at the close of the General Conference. I declined to say anything to the reporter there, and I understood young Mr. Hoss and Dr. Hoss did the same. But as reports have been sent to the papers, and as these reports are inaccurate, I make the following statement of the facts as they occurred to the best of my knowledge and be-

Immediately after the benediction was announced, and just as I was about to pick up my papers from the table, I felt some one at my right hand, turning, saw the young man, whom I had understood to be Dr. Hoss' standing by me. He held out to me the front page of the Southern Methodist Recorder, dated May 8th, and said that he wanted an explanation of the article. I said to him: "Young man, I have no explanation to make to you of that article." He said: "You have printed my mother's name in your paper, and I demand an explanation." I said: "Yes, your mother's name is in the paper, but it is used in an entirely proper and respectful way."

He said: "You accuse my father of falsehood." I said: "I shall not discuss these matters with you." He said:
"I have been watching you for some time, and you have been writing about my father and must stop it." I said:
"Young man, I have no idea of discussing such matters with you. If there are any matters of disagreement between your father and myself, I will talk them over with him, but I shall not do so with a young man like you."
I then turned to pick up my papers.
He grasped me by the arm, and said that if I wrote any more such articles he would hold me personally responsible, and at the same time he struck at me, but merely grazed my face. I was so astonished at his action that I had not time to straighten up before Messrs.
E. G. Moseley, of Danville; W. W.
Vicar, of Norfolk; W. R. Webb, of Tennessee, and E. C. Reeves, of Tennessee, all of whom were standing close by, pressed in, just as he struck at me again. This second attempt would probably have reached me fully, but for the diversion of the aim by the other gentlemen. As it was it reached the side of my cheek, but without force, and was not felt thirty seconds afterward. I turned to my chair, picked up my papers, and left the hall, as if nothing had happened. The young man, so I understood, went at once from the hall by another door.

I am entirely willing to bear the responsibility for anything I write, but not for what I do not write. If I know the meaning of words, there was nothing in the Recorder that reflected in any way upon Mrs. Hoss, and as the reports in the papers do not give the words of the article, I give the paragraph in which her name occurs.

On March 6th I sent a short article on the Deaconess question to Dr. Hoss.
Although the subject was discussed after that time by Dr. Hoss, and other articles written after mine were published, mine was not published, and so, about April 20th I wrote requesting the return of the article. (I now quote from the article of March 8th):

"After a few days he received a letter from Mrs. E. E. Hoss, stating that the article had been misplaced, and therefore could not be returned.
In the last issue of the Advocate there was an editorial note, that, owing to lack of space, some articles on the Deaconess question could not be published."

This is the only reference to Mrs.
Hoss in the article, and her name is simply used in a statement of fact that I had received a letter that the article had been misplaced. If Dr.
Hoss, or his son, or his secretary had written the letter, the statement of fact would have been made as to who wrote the letter. But there has never been any question raised as to the loss of the article. I never doubted that, nor did the article intimate any doubt as to its loss. I wrote the article to show that I had sent an article on the Dea-coness question to Dr. Hoss, and that it was not published, and that it looked as if "no admittance" was written over the columns of the Nashville Advocate to any article, no matter how short, or on what subject, if the name of James Cannon, Jr., was signed to the article. I deny that there was any reference to Mrs. Hoss in the article that was not entirely respectful, or which involved anything more than a simple statement of undisputed fact.

I myself attributed the conduct of the young man, in view of his other language at the time, to his general excitement and dissatisfaction at the sharp issues which had arisen between his father and myself during the last four years, and I regarded his action as that of an immature person so overcome by his feelings as to be unable to rightly appreciate the full significance of his act. I did not hold the father responsible for the act of his son.

The above is of a strictly personal nature, but in view of the fact that reports were sent to various papers that the minority report of the Committee on Publishing Interests was a document of such a character as to subject those who wrote it, and any who might print it to a suit for libel, and in view of the fact that the undersigned wrote the greater part of that report, and supported it and voted for it, and as eight out of twelve of the Virginia Conference delegation supported and voted for it, I believe your readers would welcome a statement of the facts in that case also.

The report was presented on Saturday morning, and was read by the undersigned. It required somewhat over an hour to read it. There was no interruption during the reading, as there surely would have been, if any unparliamentary language had been used in

(Continued on page 3.)

THE WAR CLAIM.

MINORITY REPORT.

We, the undersigned, members of the Committee on Publishing Interests, beg leave to submit the following minority report:

The committee had before it the report of the Book Committee, the report of the Senate Investigating Committee, the Congressional Record of the debate on the Lodge resolution of investigation, and the debate on the passage of the bill, appropriating $288,- 000 to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the portion of the Episcopal address in reference in the War Claim, the letter of Bishop Candler to Senator
Clay, and the reply thereto, and a number of memorials and resolutions. Dr.
J. D. Barbee and Mr. E. B. Stahlman also appeared before the committee.
After a careful consideration of all the facts brought before the committee, the undersigned respectfully submit the following minority report:

It appears that for more than twenty years preceding 1895 the officials of our Church had tried in vain to secure from Congress payment of the amount claimed to be due to the Church for use and abuse of our Publishing House property during the late civil war. It was not denied by Congress that our property had been used and damaged, and the testimony would seem to indicate that the amount of $288,000 was justly due to the Church.
It was not at that time a question of fact, but a question of legality. The facts were not denied by Congress, but the obligation to pay was denied. It was held by a majority of the Senators that the rule, "Enemies' country makes enemies' property," was a sufficient bar to the claim of the Church, and no amount of argument was sufficient to cause these Senators to admit the legality of the claim or to recognize any obligation to pay it. Until this kind of opposition was broken down, arguments as to the justice of the claim were useless. All the argument, therefore, of the Book Committee based upon the justice of the claim, does not touch the real issue involved, nor settle the right claimed by Senators to inquire into the question of the fees to be paid. However much the Book Committee or the Church, for that matter, may dislike to know it, the fact remains that the bill might not have been passed if those who denied the legality of the claim had not voted for it as a "gratuity." There is no doubt of this fact, as is shown by

(Continued on page 4.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1922, BY U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"Mr. Wheaton has been like a son to me," Mrs. Blake said when Edward was able to hear. "He sent for me as soon as the doctor declared your case dangerous. You have had typhoid, Ned, and have been very sick. At one time we feared."

"Was it so bad as that?"

"It certainly was. I don't know what I should have done if Mr. Wheaton."

"Has Wheaton been carrying my papers?"

"Yes. He said your route was convenient for him to handle, and he has been doing that and his own too. He has collected every Monday and given me the money each week. And, besides that, Ned, he has sat here with you forenoons and insisted on relieving me a good many nights. He's a splendid Christian boy, and I feel proud to think you have won such a college friend," said Mrs. Blake innocently.

Edward did some hard thinking. His dislike for Wheaton had been caused by two things mainly. One was Wheaton's habit of going around with a Bible under his arm and talking religion so much; the other was his poor scholarship, which seemed to Edward inexcusable. And yet, he now asked himself, is it any worse to carry a Bible around under one's arm than to puff cigarette smoke into people's faces, as half the smart boys in Hope were in the habit of doing? And when it came to scholarship was Wheaton to blame if his mental ability was of a second rate order?

"Mr. Wheaton told me," continued Mrs. Blake timidly, "that he has been praying for your recovery and hopes you will become a professing Christian."

Edward felt uneasy. He wished that his mother had not said anything about that. Of course, he said to himself, he felt grateful to Wheaton for the way he had acted. It had been an unselfish, noble thing for him to do. But he disliked Wheaton's praying over him and talking about his Christian life. And yet why not, Edward Blake, moral stickler for truth and righteousness? Is it so common a thing that one man should have an earnest solicitude for another man's eternal welfare that it can be carelessly or even impatiently treated, as you seem to treat this feeling of another soul for your soul?

There was a long silence in the room. Mrs. Blake did not know anything about Edward's thoughts or experiences along the line of a personal Christian life. He had never written her anything about it, and the two had seldom talked about it. Edward had always avoided the matter.

"How are the folks at home?" Edward asked as Mrs. Blake rose to arrange some medicine.

"They are all well. Freeda has managed matters beautifully in my absence. She wanted to come on here and help, but it was not necessary. Miss Seton has spent a part of the summer at the home, and Freeda has enjoyed her company. She has taken hold and helped Freeda and Aunt Sarah wonderfully. You would think she was born on a farm instead of in a city. Freeda wrote you several letters to read when you were able. I was to give them to you one at a time, one a day, as you grew stronger.

"Give me one of them now, mother."

"I don't know. You have talked a good deal. Aren't you tired?"

Edward protested that he was not, and his mother let him have the first letter. During that week he enjoyed reading the letters one a day. They were written in Freeda's brightest style and gave accounts of the happenings on the farm. In several of the later letters Ida joined with Freeda in hoping that Edward would speedily recover and sent her regards to him.

It was during the week of his recovery that Edward had a little interview with Wheaton which was not altogether satisfactory to either of them.

Wheaton came in one forenoon, and Mrs. Blake went into the little bedroom to lie down awhile.

"I'm awfully thankful to you, Wheaton, for your kindness during my sickness, about the paper route and all that. Mother has told me. I won't forget it."

Wheaton looked somewhat haggard; but he was naturally thin and somewhat consumptive in general appearance.

"That's all right, Blake. I was right here and haven't had much to do this summer. You would have done the same for me."

"Do you think so?"

"Of course I do. Why not?" asked Wheaton, who was not one of the thin skinned students and complacently took any quantity of snubbing and scorn from the smart set in college. Or perhaps his real anxiety for the souls of other men made him indifferent to their slights. Edward could never quite make up his mind which of the two was more probable.

"Mother says I've been really very ill," said Edward, just to say something. Wheaton was a poor talker when it came to general topics of everyday interest.

"Yes," said Wheaton gravely, "you came very near going into the other world." He paused, and then added solemnly: "I wondered a good many times, Blake, if you were ready to go. I wondered if you had accepted Christ as a Saviour."

Edward shut his lips, and kept still. Wheaton went on.

"Were you ready to go before the judgment seat of Christ, Blake?"

Edward felt an unreasonable wave of anger go over him. And yet this other man had perhaps saved his life.

"I try to live a good life. I don't feel afraid of dying," he said shortly.

"But the personal acceptance of Christ as a Saviour is a different thing from that," persisted Wheaton, who sometimes unwisely argued in the face of apparent opposition. And yet is even a little unwise zeal as bad as a good deal of proud indifference?

"I don't feel able to talk about it to day," said Edward, as he closed his eyes and pretended to be in need of rest.

"Pardon me," said Wheaton quickly. "Let me pray for you, Blake. I want to see you a Christian."

Edward did not reply to him, and he sat quietly reading the rest of the time, until Mrs. Blake came in again, and then went away. Edward had a little twinge of remorse afterward as he went over the interview. He had been unnecessarily short in his replies to Wheaton. At the same time his moral standard seemed sufficient to him. His thought of Wheaton, however, was necessarily more just, and there was a respect for him that might on better acquaintance possibly deepen into friendship of a certain kind. The only difficulty in that was the strong prejudice that Edward still held toward Wheaton's habit of speaking so often about his Christian faith. And yet, why not, Edward Blake? Is it a thing to rouse your anger or the scorn of half the smart set in college when a student talks as much about his Christian faith and life as you talk about football and war and amusements? Are these things more important as conversation than the subjects Mr. Wheaton finds worth while? May it not be possible that the judgment of eternity will reverse your judgment of the man who wanted to talk so much about the other world?

When college opened again in the fall, Edward had fairly recovered, although he was still weak and wholly unable to go on the football team. This was a great disappointment to him, because matters were getting into better shape from an athletic point of view, and he was, in spite of all drawbacks, a great lover of the sport, and had planned to enter into it under new conditions.

His enforced withdrawal from the football practice and play started his mind in another direction, and he began to ask himself if there was not some plan of general athletic training that would include practically the whole college.

The president stopped one day as he was passing through the hall and had a little chat with Edward. That was a few days after the fall term opened, and Edward was feeling rather blue over the prospect and still somewhat depressed owing to his physical weakness.

"Well, you're getting on all right, Blake, now? Sorry I was away all summer. You had a severe illness?"

"Yes, sir. I'm getting on as fast as I could expect. I am not able to do much in athletics this year."

"Tell you what, Blake. There is a chance for some good, honest work to be done along the line of general revival of athletics for the average student. Now, football does not engage more than two dozen men for a small part of the year, and they are the ruggedest, stockiest men of all. Baseball takes a few more, perhaps, but after we have counted out the football and baseball men the great majority of the students have no regular incentive to do average athletic work. Why can't you and a few others in the junior class organize something to give the whole college an interest in physical sports? Arrange a field day and get every man in college to take some part. Have foot races and jumping and pole vaulting and things that any average man can enter into with some enthusiasm. What the college needs is a general shaking up on athletics. The average student who cannot play either football or baseball has got into the habit of simply looking on at those who do play, and consequently he is not developing own physical powers as he ought."

"I'll think of it, sir," replied Edward with some interest. And as the term went on he became more interested and finally, with the help of other members of the association, he actually organized a plan of athletics to fitted the needs of the average student rather than the capacities of the professional athlete. The whole plan as it worked out, was a relief to his own personal disappointment in the matter of football and worked excellent results for the student body.

Meanwhile he was anticipating Willis' return with some uneasiness. During the summer he had been at home with his mother. Her prediction concerning the loss of Willis' arm came true, and he was wearing an empty sleeve. The arm had been amputated on board the hospital ship. His illness had kept him in San Francisco awhile, and from there his mother had written Edward. It was one of several other letters written during the summer that Edward had not been able to answer on account of his own illness.

"Willis fully plans to come back to college next fall," Mrs. Preston wrote. "and, of course, I cannot bear to think of his going in with any one else in the room. Your influence over him has always been good. There is no telling what you can do for him. I am sure you will do your best. The army has not helped Willis any. If anything, he is more reckless than before. Of course he has lost a whole year of college and will have to drop out of his old class, for he can never make the studies. Help him all you can. I will not cease to pray for you."

Edward read the letter gravely, to tell the truth, he was rather surprised that Willis was coming back, so much on Freeda's account as on his own. He had come to have a liking for a room all by himself. The thought of sharing it with some one else was distasteful to him. He could not

A woman was sitting by the side of a bed, fanning away the flies. She got Willis' generosity, however. Mrs. Preston's appeal touched him closely. So, on the whole, he was ready to welcome Willis and do his best with him.

(To be continued.)

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hays will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates: Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. S. C. Hays, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH.—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✻ ✻ THREE COURSES. ✻ ✻

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

MINORITY REPORT

(Continued from 1st page.)

the following statements taken from the report of the Senate Investigating Committee. Senator Stewart said (page 7):

"You understand the considerations on which this bill was passed. The government was under no legal obligation to pay the claim. We made an exception to the rule for educational and charitable institutions, and agreed to pay damages or losses in those cases. We made that exception to the rule of 'enemy country makes enemy property.' In considering what the United States ought to do under these circumstances in favor of the great Church, do you not think that Senators had a right to be informed where the money was going to—whether it was going to be used for church and charitable purposes, or whether it was going to be divided among claim agents."

Senator Teller said (page 62):

"Many of us who voted for the bill did not think that it was a claim at all against the government, but we felt that we were doing a thing which we felt we could afford to do for a charitable institution. It was stated by some members of the committee when we voted to report the bill that they did not vote for the report on the ground that the claim was a legal one at all, but that inasmuch as we had by the rule of paying such ~~When~~ case of colleges and a Bible would apply the rule in ~~ligion~~ the Book Concern, which poor ~~at~~ (especially those of us who were brought up in the Methodist Church) to be a charity, inasmuch as the proceeds went to the support of supernumerary ministers."

Senator Pasco: "So far as I am personally concerned, I agreed to the report because I believed in the justice of the claim, but I referred also to a class of Senators who would support it on other grounds, and we were very glad to get the support of those Senators. Without that support it would have been a difficult matter to pass the bill. They were influential and were strong and positive in their views, and we hailed the support which they gave us."

Senator Teller: "I do not know that I would have voted against the claim, but I might have voted for some revision of the fee, inasmuch as I did not regard it as a legal claim, but a gratuity; and I voted to report the bill with the distinct understanding that it was a gratuity claim. I stood upon the report made twenty years ago as a legal proposition that the Church had no legal claim."

Senator Bacon said (page 146):

"But the point about this claim was this: There were a great many Senators who disputed the fact that it was a strictly legal claim, and who put their support of it only on the ground that it was a restitution to a great charitable institution, which possibly might not have been able to recover it in strict law, and I felt that these Senators were entitled to the utmost frankness."

No one can read these statements made by these Senators, especially the statement of Senators Pasco and Bacon, both of whom themselves voted and worked for the bill, because convinced of its justice, without seeing that a number of Senators voted for the bill in order that they might help to 'restore a great charity,' and that they felt that they had the right to inquire into the question of fees, and that if not satisfied on that point, they would have voted against the bill. Whether they would have had the moral right to have done so, is not the question, but they say they would have done so, and the question for the Church to decide is not the correctness of their attitude in this matter, but whether their votes were influenced by the statements, letters and telegrams of our representatives, Mr. Stahlman and Barbee & Smith.

This general statement as to the position of a number of Senators is made at this point because it has a general and very important bearing upon the whole question.

On July 29, 1895, the Book Committee of our Church made a contract with E. B. Stahlman in reference to the collection of this claim, which contract was as follows:

Articles of Agreement Between Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and E. B. Stahlman.

Witness: First. That we, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby give power of attorney to the said E. B. Stahlman to prosecute our claim before the Congress of the United States, for the use and abuse of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the armies of the United States during the war between the States from A. D. 1861 to 1865.

Second. We, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby agree that the said E. B. Stahlman shall receive as compensation for his services 25 per cent. of whatever sum shall be collected from the United States for the liquidation of the aforesaid claim.

Third. It is hereby agreed between Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, party of the first part, and E. B. Stahlman, party of the second part, that should the Congress of the United States make no appropriation for the liquidation of the aforesaid claim, then, in that case, no compensation shall be paid to the said E. B. Stahlman for his services, from any source whatever, and he shall have no recourse upon us or our successors in office forever.

Fourth. We, Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do hereby agree and covenant that this power of attorney herein and hereby conveyed to the aforesaid E. B. Stahlman shall continue in full force and effect until the final adjournment of the fifty-fifth Congress of the United States.

BARBEE & SMITH.

Book Agents, M. E. Church, South.

E. B. STAHLMAN.

July 29, 1895.

Concerning this contract it is to be noted: (1) That it was made with a man who, according to Dr. Barbee's testimony before the Senate Investigating Committee, was "expert in such matters," "who had been remarkably successful in managing great affairs in legislative bodies" (pages 67-80). It was his reputation as being successful in his work with legislative bodies, which called Dr. Barbee's attention to him, and caused Dr. Barbee to seek an interview with him and to ask him to see the Book Committee.

(2) The written contract did not include all the articles of agreement. There were two conditions not stated in the bond, but which were agreed to morally by the parties to the contract:

(A) Secrecy. Dr. Barbee said before the Senate Investigating Committee (page 66):

"I do not know that there was any formal definite expression in the contract to the effect that we should keep it secret, but it was mentioned, of course, and it was understood and agreed upon that that was a matter between the Book Agents and the Book Committee and Mr. Stahlman."

(B) Mr. Stahlman was instructed that he was to use no improper means in obtaining the passage of a bill. Dr. Barbee said before the Senate Committee in reply to the following question of Senator Clay:

Senator Clay (page 69): "You did not expect any improper means to be used by him?"

Mr. Barbee: "We made it a condition that none should be used. He was charged by the committee and by all of us that we would rather lose the whole amount than that anything questionable should be done to get it."

Mr. Stahlman said (page 83): "They said to me in the most positive terms (which I thought very proper and to which I gave ready consent) that whatever was done with reference to the claim was to be done in such a way as to avoid even a suspicion that anything unclean or unseemly was done to promote the passage of the bill or the payment of their claim. I said to them in that connection, 'Now, gentlemen, I agree with you. I think that that ought by all means to be done. Your claim has merit. There is no reason on earth why any improper methods should be resorted to.'"

Senator Fairbanks: "Or any deception?"

Mr. Stahlman: "Or any deception"

The Book Committee say in their report (page 21): "Mr. Stahlman was especially instructed that nothing should be done in the prosecution of the claim which would even in the slightest degree compromise the good name of the Church, and that rather than compromise the Church, the Book Committee preferred not to have the claim paid."

It is difficult to understand how the agent and Book Committee could employ any man to act as their agent, who insisted upon keeping the contract a secret, and furthermore the question arose, Why did the Book Committee feel it necessary to make it part of the contract that "no improper means should be used"? Did the contract or arrangement with Dr. R. Abbey include such an agreement? If not, why not? Because there was no probability that any improper means would be used by Dr. Abbey. But we are informed by the Book Committee that they gave the "most explicit instructions that nothing which would compromise the Church in the 'slightest degree' must be done. It is hard to escape the conclusion, that at this point, right in the beginning, the Book Committee and the agents realized the reputation of the man with whom they were dealing, and made the great blunder—to call it nothing worse—of dealing with a man recognized as expert in handling great matters before legislative bodies and of such reputation as to cause them to strive to bind him with the most stringent instructions that he should do nothing to damage the Church. With such conditions written and oral, is the final result of the contract a matter of surprise?"

From that time Mr. Stahlman became the duly authorized agent and attorney for our Church, and the Church became responsible for the methods employed by him so far as his methods affected the passage of the bill, until the repudiation of the methods by the Church. The conduct and character of Mr. Stahlman were not in any sense a proper subject for investigation by the committee, except as they affected his contract with the Church, and in so far as being the acts of our agent, they affected the passage of the bill. Did he violate his contract, and did he use improper methods to secure the passage of the bill? After the most careful investigation we are constrained to state that in our opinion he did violate his contract, and did use improper methods to secure the passage of the bill, and that he deliberately misled members of Congress, both in the House and in the Senate. The instances of this in the report of the Senate Investigating Committee are so numerous that reference is simply made to them by name and by page in the Senate Investigating Report: Representatives Gaines (page 118), Sims (page 125), Richardson (page 148), Senators Bacon (page 144), Clay (page 56), Lindsay (page 57), Turley (pages 59-120), Bate (page 133), entire Committee on Claims (page 134), Colonel Baker (pages 89-90). Examples to show the character of his conduct are taken from his own testimony as given in the report before the Senate Investigating Committee. He said to Senator Clay (see page 56):

Mr. Stahlman: "I do not undertake to say that what I said to you was not sufficient to cause you to believe that no fee was to be paid. But I was very guarded in what I said. If I said anything, it was that there was no contract with the Book Agents, and that the money was all to go into the treasury."

Senator Clay: "I cannot give you the exact language, but the inference that I drew from what you said was that there was no contract."

Mr. Stahlman: "I am free to confess that you had a right to draw that inference."

He said to Senator Bacon (page 54): "You can say I have no contract with the Book Agents; and that every dollar of the claim goes into the treasury."

Senator Fairbanks: "Was that statement true?"

Mr. Stahlman: "Yes; it was. My contract was with the Book Committee, although I have since understood that for legal considerations the Book Agents found it necessary to sign the contract themselves. I made the statement for this reason: I did not believe that the Senate of the United States at that juncture could have considered the case upon its merits. I told no falsehood. I concealed some facts. I am free to say that Senator Bacon had a right to assume that there was no contract of any kind. While I was guarded, I was exact in what I said, and I knew that I told no falsehood in saying it. I admit that I concealed some facts."

He said in regard to Senator Turley (page 59):

Mr. Stahlman: "He asked me in regard to it, and I said, 'All I can tell you is, the money is all going to the Church.'"

Senator Fairbanks: "Then you misrepresented the matter to Senator Turley?"

Mr. Stahlman: "Senator Turley had a right to assume that there were no attorney's fees to me. I kept the fact from him because I did not think it was any of his business."

He said in regard to Senator Lindsay (page 57):

Mr. Stahlman: "Senator Lindsay had a perfect right to assume that there were no attorney's fees to be paid, except possibly the fee of an attorney in Washington. I think I said that an attorney had been employed in Washington."

Senator Fairbanks: "But that no fee was coming to you."

Mr. Stahlman: "He had a perfect right to assume that. I said to him substantially what I said to Senator Bacon."

These examples are all taken from his own testimony as given in the Senate report, and convict him of repeated violation of his contract. Nor did his improper methods stop there, but he also prepared and suggested letters and telegrams for Barbee & Smith, which were calculated to mislead and did mislead, and so grossly violated his contract with the Book Committee. Having considered the contract of our secret agent, Mr. Stahlman, it is necessary to take up the conduct of our known and avowed agents, Barbee & Smith.

Officially, the Agents are not as responsible as the Book Committee for the contract employing Mr. Stahlman, but morally they are, and whatever blame attached for the making of the contract, they must share with the Book Committee. The testimony in reference to them is cumulative, and must be taken up step by step to show their progress to the culmination, in the sending of the telegrams on March 7th. It appears to us that the explanation of the conduct of the Book Agents lies in the fact that they allowed Mr. Stahlman to give entire direction to their course. They placed themselves in his hands to be used by him to aid in carrying out his plans. He prepared documents. They signed them. He not only concealed the fact of his contract, but he represented himself as a friend and member of the Church, and as being animated by no pecuniary consideration, but solely by his love for the welfare of Zion. He called upon the Book Agents to help him to produce this false impression, and consciously or unconsciously they did so. In all of the letters of which we have any record, he was not referred to as an agent or attorney, the term which would ordinarily be used, but he was referred to in such language as to lead the person seeking information to the conclusion that he did not bear any pecuniary relation to the collection of the claim. From this standpoint let us view the letters and telegrams of the Agents throughout the case.

On December 31st, 1895, a circular letter was sent to the Bishops. In this letter the following sentence appears in reference to Mr. Stahlman. "The foregoing methods are suggested by a brother who is rendering valuable aid in connection with this claim." This sentence produces a very different impression upon the mind of the readers from the impression which would have been produced had the word "Agent" or "Attorney" been used instead of the words "a brother who is rendering valuable aid in connection with this claim."

On March 13th, 1897, a letter was written to Hon. John Wesley Gaines, a member of Congress for Nashville, Tenn., in which Mr. Stahlman was spoken of in the following language: "Mr. Stahlman, who in connection with a large number of other matters, has been giving our matters some attention, will be in Washington again within the next few days, and he will be glad to talk with you about the matter."

There is nothing in the letter to produce the impression that Mr. Stahlman was making our claim his special work as our agent, but on the contrary, he is set forth in the light of a man who is very busy about other things, but nevertheless he will be glad to talk with Mr. Gaines and to give the matter some attention. This letter produced a strong impression on Mr. Gaines, and he actually loaned it to Mr. Stahlman to use to defend himself against the charge that he had a contract for fees in the event of a passage of the bill. Here indeed we strike a strange result. Mr. Stahlman writes a letter and sends it to Barbee & Smith to sign and send to Mr. Gaines and Mr. Gaines brings it to Mr. Stahlman to use as a testimonial from Barbee & Smith, that Mr. Stahlman had no special interest in the passage of the bill. This was a vicious circle indeed.

Mr. Gaines also testified that he had personal interviews with Dr. Barbee and Mr. Smith in Nashville, and one with Mr. Smith at Old Point Va., in the spring and summer of 1897, and that in all these interviews they said that they had made no contract; that they did not owe anybody a cent, and that they were not going to spend any money. Mr. Gaines testifies that so firmly was he impressed by this letter and these conversations, that he was very active in denying the report that Stahlman had a contract, and during the progress of the debate in the Senate he told Senators Bate and Hoar that he had it directly from Barbee & Smith that there was no contract for payment of fees, and his statement was repeated by Senator Hoar on the floor of the Senate, in reply to Senator Lodge.

On January 1st, 1898, representative James D. Richardson, of Tennessee, wrote to Barbee & Smith, and in the letter used the following language: "Please write me what interest he, Stahlman, has in the claim. What is his share in it?" On January 10th, a reply was sent to him, as from Barbee & Smith (pp. 94-5):

"With reference to the share or interest, if any, Mr. Stahlman may have in this claim, I beg you to talk with him. He is in Washington and can give you all the information you desire on the subject. Surely, whether he has a pecuniary interest in the matter ought not to have any bearing on the merits of our claim, which is admittedly just, and which, as we understand it, you have on all occasions without qualification signified your willingness to support.

"The laborer is worthy of his hire, and if in the final adjustment it shall be deemed proper to pay Mr. Stahlman a reasonable compensation for his services, and this compensation shall be given with the consent of the proper authorities of the Church, you, I am sure, will agree that that will not be an improper thing to do. The claim was placed by us originally in the hands of a Washington attorney. For reasons satisfactory to us, and entirely satisfactory to our friends then in the Senate and House, we refused to renew the arrangement when it expired. Surely we ought not to be made to suffer at the hands of our Tennessee Representatives because we declined to renew an arrangement with this Washington attorney and instead accepted the proffered assistance of a resident of Tennessee and a friend and member of the Church, one who, even as early as 1891, and before the agreement with the Washington attorney had expired, rendered valuable assistance in our endeavor to pass the bill. Mr. Stahlman was as earnest in his endeavor to help us then as he is now, the only difference being that formerly much of his time was occupied in other pursuits, while now he has time which he can call his own, and a good part of which during his sojourn in Washington he has seen fit to devote largely to our interests.

"I will take the liberty of sending Mr. Stahlman your letter that he may talk with you on the subject. Yours truly."

Of this letter Mr. Stahlman said in his testimony before the Senate Committee (page 99):

"Barbee & Smith wrote it. Barbee & Smith advised me practically about everything. They had confidence in me. They were a thousand miles away, and I think, therefore, they conferred with me and I advised them what they ought to say to Mr. Richardson. I talked to Mr. Richardson, and there was nothing said about the matter after that in the House at all that I am aware of."

For this remarkable composition, therefore, Mr. Stahlman claims to be responsible, but for the impression made upon Mr. Richardson, Barbee & Smith are responsible. Had Mr. Richardson known that this letter had been inspired by Mr. Stahlman, he would have considered it a breach of confidence on the part of Barbee & Smith, to send him the letter as coming from them.

The force and value of the statements of this letter came from the impression made upon the mind of Mr. Richardson that he was receiving a direct statement from Barbee & Smith in reply to his question. The entire letter is in this sense misleading. But the letter contains in it specific statements that produced a false impression upon the mind of Mr. Richardson as to Mr. Stahlman's "interest in the claim." That this is true is seen from Mr. Stahlman's own statement, given above. He said, "Mr. Richardson seemed to be perfectly satisfied, and there was nothing said about the matter after that in the House at all, that I am aware of." The necessary effect of the letter was to convince Mr. Richardson that there was no contract. Now, was there anything in the letter that required that interpretation? Undoubtedly there was in several places:

(1) "With reference to the share or interest, if any, Mr. Stahlman may have in this claim, I beg you to talk with him." Here the words "if any," are intended to suggest a doubt. But the Agents knew there was no doubt. Mr. Stahlman had a large and definite interest of 35 per cent.

(2) "If in the final adjustment it shall be deemed proper to pay Mr. Stahlman a reasonable compensation for his services, and this compensation shall be given with the consent of the proper authorities, you, I am sure, will agree that it will not be an improper thing to do." These words are such as would deceive anybody who had confidence in the persons signing the letter. The whole thought of the sentence carries the reader into the future, after the passage of the bill, and the thought that there is a present existing arrangement is virtually banished from the mind by this sentence. It effectually leads the mind of the reader away from the truth, and is misleading and deceptive in its character, whether intentionally or otherwise.

(3) The letter designated the person with whom there had previously been a percentage contract as a "Washington attorney," but designated Mr. Stahlman, with whom there was then a percentage contract, as a "friend and member of the Church," thus producing the impression that the Washington attorney and Mr. Stahlman occupied an entirely different relation, when, as a matter of fact, they occupied exactly the same relation, the only difference being that the Washington attorney was to receive 25 per cent., while Mr. Stahlman was to receive 35 per cent.

(4) It is said that Mr. Stahlman, "even as early as 1891, and before the agreement with the Washington attorney had expired, rendered valuable assistance in our endeavor to pass the bill. Mr. Stahlman was as ear-

(Continued on page 9.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON X, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 8.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xv, 22-33.
Memory Verses, 30-32—Golden Text,
Gal. v, 1.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

22. Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas.

Paul and Barnabas, having returned to Antioch after their first missionary tour, continued there a long time with the disciples, teaching the word (xiv, 28). While there teachers came from Judea, who said that the gentiles could not be saved by faith in Christ unless they were also circumcised. There was so much dissension and disputation about it that the church at Antioch sent Paul and Barnabas and others to Jerusalem to the apostles and elders to lay the matter before them. The council, having heard the whole story and discussed it, came to a decision which they now send to Antioch with these brethren.

23, 24. Forasmuch as we have heard that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls.

Behold the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Spirit in this greeting from the believing Jews at Jerusalem, the apostles, the rulers in the church, to the gentile believers, the uncircumcised at Antioch. Notice that the Jewish brethren send greeting unto the gentile brethren. They are all brethren in Christ and acknowledge it.

25, 26. Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Thus honorably do they mention "our beloved Barnabas and Paul" because of their sufferings for Christ's sake, some of which were mentioned in last lesson, but for a fuller list of Paul's sufferings see II Cor. xi, 23-28. And yet hear Paul say, "None of these things move me," and "the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us," and "our light affliction which is but for a moment," etc. (Acts xx, 24; Rom. viii, 18; II Cor. iv, 17), because he believed God.

27, 28. It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us.

Observe the partnership of the Holy Spirit and the church and compare chapter xiii, 2. Every one who receives Jesus Christ receives also the Holy Spirit, and the body becomes His temple, every whit of which He jealously desireth for the glory of God (I Cor. vi, 19, 20; Jas. iv, 5, R. V., margin). The Lord Jesus said to His apostles when He sent them forth, "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you" (Matt. x, 20). See also Acts v, 32; xvi, 6, 7.

29. Abstain from meats offered to idols and from blood and from things strangled and from fornication, from which if ye keep yourselves ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

These the council considered necessary things, but did not say necessary for salvation, rather necessary as an evidence of salvation. There is no salvation by works revealed in the word of God, but only salvation by the great and finished work of the Lord Jesus, which the sinner must receive as God's free gift, purchased for him by the precious blood of Christ (Acts iv, 12; xiii, 38, 39; Rom. iv, 5; v, 1; Eph. ii, 8, 9; Tit. iii, 5), but being saved by faith in Christ—that is, by accepting Christ, receiving Him (John i, 12: I John v, 11, 12) then the good works are necessary as an evidence to men that we are new creatures in Christ (Eph. ii, 10; Tit. iii, 8; Matt. v, 16; Gal. vi, 15). The believer is expected to be an epistle known and read of all men to the glory of God (II Cor. iii, 2, 3). There is nothing burdensome in the service of Christ. His commandments are not grievous. His yoke is easy, and His burden is light (I John v, 3; Matt. xi, 30).

30, 31. They delivered the epistle which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.

These were words of comfort instead of the words which had troubled them (verse 24). The Holy Spirit is a Comforter, and when He speaks He brings comfort to the people of God. "Comfort ye, comfort ye, My people, saith your God." "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, * * * O thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up. Be not afraid. Say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!" (Isa. xl, 1, 9, margin.) All God's thoughts to His people are thoughts of peace, and He does not want His obedient people troubled or sad. His words are intended to make us glad and give us peace (Jer. xxix, 11; John xiv, 1, 27; Ps. lxxxv, 9).

32. Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words and confirmed them.

A true prophet is one who is a spokesman for God. Compare Ex. vii, 1, and iv, 16. God is the Father of Mercies and the God of all comfort, and He comforts us in all our tribulation that we may comfort others in their troubles by the comfort where-with we ourselves are comforted of God (II Cor. i, 3, 4).

33. And after they had tarried there a space they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

It is our privilege to live in peace, the peace of God; to come and go in peace; to have peace always by all means, even perfect peace (Phil. iv, 6, 7; II Thess. iii, 16; Isa. xxvi, 3). Our God and Father is the God of peace, the Lord Jesus is the Prince of Peace, and if we are not enjoying the peace of God it must be because we are not in fellowship or in some sense unbelieving, for the God of hope loves to fill His children with all joy and peace in believing (Rom. xv, 13).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic for the Week Beginning June 8, "How the Weak Become Strong"—Text, II Cor. ix, 10; Isa. xli, 10; Ixviii, 11.

"The Lord shall guide thee continually."

Weakness is often the result of undue strength in some faculty or organ. Overdevelopment in any part destroys the harmonious balance of all parts and hence makes weakness or inefficiency in the whole combination. Strength lies in proportionate development of all parts into a unity, as in "The One Hoss Shay."

Fer, says the deacon, "'tis mighty plain The weakest part must stand the strain."

A will accustomed to act in the direction of what gives most pleasure rather than as what is most reasonable makes one selfish and willful and weak to resist the calls of bodily desires.

A sensitive regard for honor and strong self consciousness may make one quick in resenting an injury or a slight and lead to a strong, quick temper and lack of self poise. Anger becomes strong and a ruling characteristic, and self control grows weak.

Cultivation of taste for articles of comfort and the material advantages of life weakens the force of imagination tion and spiritual faculties until one finds more satisfaction in eating, personal adornment, recreations of society, press of business, than in soul piety, helpfulness of others, conversation with God and men or righteousness and truth.

How shall we cultivate strength, which lies in well rounded and harmonious development of all powers?

It can best be done by recognition of the worth and relation of all faculties. To starve any part of our nature to nourish more fully some other is a serious error.

We need first of all to obtain a deep seated confidence in God as our Father. In this we recognize gladly His place as our Ruler and yield Him quick and joyful obedience in all things. Our first impulse becomes an inquiry as to what He would have us do and be. This trustfulness never doubts that His will concerning us is always what is best and in the end the most joy giving course possible for us. It also believes unquestioningly that He is able to keep us unharmed in any path He calls us to tread, and so we are not afraid. We have no doubts and no fears to weaken us and spend neither time nor strength in fighting them. We overcome all these in one pitched battle when we devote all of self to God and believe Him to be our Father God.

We grow strong in the second place when we come to look upon our brother man not as a rival in anything or any sense. Whatever he may be to us, we are not to have any sense of rivalry toward him. We are to be his friend and helper. We study his needs as we study our own. We scan his peculiarities so as to find the best line of approach. We learn his opinions and desires that we may put ourselves in position to help him. When we see any chance, we do for him as we would like some one to do toward us. If we know a good thing we should like some one to try upon us, we don't wait for him to do it, but just go and do it to some one else. We in this way keep selfishness under and develop strong love to God and man.

Chaplains in the Navy.

The Rev. E. G. Strobridge of Stamford, Conn., made the following statements concerning the treatment of chaplains in the United States navy at the recent meeting of the New York Methodist preachers:

"The neglect of the chaplains in the United States navy and the wrongs practiced on them have continued with monotonous uniformity for well nigh half a century. In their interest there has been no legislation since 1842. With the passage of the personnel bill all other seagoing corps were advanced in rank, with a considerable increase in pay. In this distribution of favors the chaplains were passed by. The only recognition given to them was that the seven lowest on the list were classified as lieutenants. Not only in their support, but also in their dress, the chaplains are oppressed by an odious distinction. Their coat and the mess jacket of the naval cadets are identically the same, and to add yet a keener edge to the humiliation the white service coat for the chaplains and the jacket of the mess attendants—i. e., the waiters—are so nearly alike that only an expert can distinguish them.

"No captain in the service would allow a chaplain as at present attired to go ashore and march as part of his official staff, though he is entitled to do so by every other consideration, and his presence would be appreciated by the bluejackets themselves. At one time a captain was going off his ship to return some calls at a foreign port, and his chaplain was detailed along with other officers to accompany him, but when the chaplain presented himself dressed in his unbecoming uniform the captain told him as politely as he could to remain behind, while the captain of the marines was selected to go in his place. It is the all but unanimous sentiment of the chaplains that they should be permitted to wear the full uniform of their rank as commissioned officers, complete in all its details, with the single exception of the sword. This is both just and reasonable, for if their commissions fix a grade their attire should indicate it. Either allow the chaplains to dress as they choose, or if a certain style is prescribed let it be in keeping with their rank. Otherwise it is not a uniform, but, as at present, a ridiculous nondescript."

Always.

God is no nearer when an hour of gloom Fills thy weak heart with question and
 With fe
 Or grief sits shrouded in thy narrow room
 Than in thy joy, but He is just as near (Christian Endeavor World.)

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Dems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The voice of God is clear and strong, though still and quiet.—Rev. C. Brent, Episcopalian, Boston.

Sign of an Ignoble Mind.

Slander, whether of friend or foe, is the sign of an ignoble mind.—Rev. J. L. Quinn, Catholic, Pittsburg.

Salvation a Gift.

Salvation is a gift. It is not merited nor given as a reward for works.—Rev. Dr. William J. Holtzclaw, Baptist, Atlanta.

Deeper Social Sympathy.

The crying need of the hour is a deeper social sympathy.—Rev. Henry Frank, Church of the Higher Thought, New York.

The Time Too Short.

The time is too short for bickerings, too short for harsh words, too short for dishonesty, too short for anything but God and good and love and righteousness.—Rev. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, Chicago.

The Question of the Centuries.

The question which he asked nineteen centuries ago is still sounding in our ears, "Why call ye me Lord and do not the things which I say?"—Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, Presbyterian, New York.

Pure Joy of Christianity.

Christianity brings the pure joy of worthy occupation. Worthy work gives one of life's greatest incomes of happiness. Leisure tires and pleasure grows stale and insipid.—Rev. Dr. Sims, Methodist, Syracuse, N. Y.

Mission of the Church.

The Christian church in its inner life and nature is the same as that of Jesus. Its mission in the world is the same as his, to save the world through wisdom and power of love.—Rev. A. B. Church, Universalist, Akron, O.

Susceptible to Influence.

We are all susceptible to external influences, to impressions made upon our minds and hearts by forces working upon them from without—what in scientific language we call our environment.—Rev. Dr. Dewey, Reformed, Brooklyn.

Satisfies Every Need.

Every point in the ever widening circle of human wants and needs and inspirations is a place where a more perfect apprehension of the inexhaustible and satisfying sufficiency of God becomes possible.—Rev. Charles Watson, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

The Joy of Giving.

Love is always manifested and measured by gifts. Justice requites reas compensates, conscience commands, and love gives. God "so" loved that he gave and man may "so" love that giving becomes his greatest joy.—Rev. Bruce Brown, Christian, Denver.

Religion a Thing of Activity.
Worship is the fragrance of religion, at religion itself is the human will rung into line, with the divine will and our struggling hands and feet battling forward under the marching orders of our Saviour.—Rev. Dr. W. J. McKittrick, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

The Gospel in Political Life.
The gospel of Christ is the true elevator. Let the hearts and lives of men be molded by it and you will have a constituency from which you may choose officers who will be a credit and not a disgrace to the community.—Rev. Dr. William B. Wood, Methodist, Philadelphia.

The Influence of Literature.
If you want your children to be sailors, hang pictures of ships on the walls; if farmers, get them interested in agricultural papers; if electricians, put them the life of Edison; if Christians, put healthful, practical Christian literature before them.—Rev. Dr. M. Cobern, Methodist, Chicago.

Abuse of Freedom of Press.
Freedom of the press is a splendid thing, but not when it sows broadcast the dragon's teeth of anarchy and discord, not when it seeks to instill hatred into ignorant and undiscriminating minds, not when it attempts to array the poor against the rich or the workman against his employer.—Rev. Dr. Clair Hester, Episcopal, Brooklyn.

The Heroism of Suffering.
The heroism of battle is not to be mentioned the same day with the heroism of suffering. The supreme hero of history was Jesus Christ, who was reatest not in what he could achieve, but in what he could bear, and who conquers the world not by what he is able to do, but by what he is able to suffer.—Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Happy Christians.
Oh, that we all may have that consecration in our lives, that obedience to the Lord, love for the Lord and for service and work, that we may be joyful, glad servants and people might say: "What a happy Christian! What a happy church that is! That is the kind of people I want to associate with!"—Rev. J. Wesley Sullivan, Baptist, Philadelphia.

Knowledge of the Creator.
The more wondrous, fair and lovely his world and its life grows to look to is the more they desire to know of him who is its heart and life. The science which has seemed to obliterate men from God is really giving them a deeper thirst for him. As we get closer to the facts, as we master more of the truth, we are more eager to see and know God.—Rev. Dr. John Coleman Adams, Universalist, Hartford, Conn.

The First Drink.
The career of every inebriate begins with but one drink. Will you incur the responsibility of being the one to proffer that drink? The dreadful end of every inebriate is surely hastened by one drink more. Will you become the means of precipitating the irremediable catastrophe? Remember that in every glass there is possible ruin for the one to whom you give it.—Dr. W. Callaferro Thompson, Congregationalist, Washington.

When we love the Lord in earnest some of our neighbors will be sure to find it out.

Balsams from the Northern Wood are in Piny-Balsam, the certain cure for coughs.

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—by a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. Has no taste or odor. Is air tight and perfect proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake. Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY

THROUGH THE STATES OF MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.

Valley Route THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.

Shenandoah Valley LURAY GROTTOES NATURAL BRIDGE MOUNTAIN LAKE BRISTOL KNOXVILLE CHATTANOOGA LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN BIRMINGHAM MEMPHIS NEW ORLEANS

Chesapeake & Ohio Line

Write for Rates, Maps, Time Tables, Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptive Booklet, to any Agent or to W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, FRAGG, GENERAL PASS. AGENT, DIVISION OF TRANSPORTATION, WASHINGTON, D. C.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

W. H. MANN, President.

J. M. HARRIS, Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT, Cashier.

GEO. B. SEAY, AND F. H. HARDAWAY, Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by expert Dispensary.

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Blackstone, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM.

NEURALGIA.

HEADACHE.

STIFF NECK.

STIFF MUSCLES.

STIFF JOINTS.

STIFF KNEES.

SCIATICA, LUMBAGO.

PAIN IN THE BACK.

PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS.

PAIN IN THE SIDE.

CUTS AND RUINS.

For

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.

Richmond, Virginia

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY
METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the subscription will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty.
Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.
Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.

Boydton, May 28th, at night.

Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED.

Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.

High-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blandford, May 25th, night.

Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH

FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

IS GOLF CATCHING on to popular favor? It seems to be. A noticeable increase in sales of Painkiller come from golf districts. The reason for this is clear, as Perry Davis' Painkiller is the oldest and best remedy extant for sprains, strains, bruises and soreness, all of which are of common occurrence, either in vigorous play or through accident. Everywhere the standard liniment and balm,

A PERSONAL STATEMENT.

(Continued from 1st page.)

the report. At the close of the reading, the Conference passed a resolution that the minority be allowed to print the report in pamphlet form, or in the Daily Advocate, as they might prefer. Shortly afterward, Dr. E. E. Hoss, the editor of the Daily Advocate, arose and said that he had been informed by a good lawyer that the publication of the minority report in the Daily Advocate might lead to legal complications, and he desired to announce that on the day on which the report was published he would not be the editor of the Daily Advocate.

This remarkable statement was the foundation for all the talk that followed. It was reinforced by a statement of Dr. Rankin, the editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, published in Dallas, to the effect that he had been in Texas long enough to know just what one could afford to put in public print, and that he hardly thought it possible that a solvent printing establishment could be found in Texas that would publish the document.

The minority was not swerved from its purpose by these very remarkable utterances, but Saturday afternoon sent the report to Dr. Hoss for publication. Nothing was heard from him. The report was not returned, but on Monday morning, when the Daily Advocate appeared, the report was not in it. When inquiry was made Dr. Hoss was absent, but the publisher was present, and he said that he had presented the report to his attorney, and was directed under no circumstances to undertake the publication of the document in the Daily Advocate or in pamphlet form, that he would lay himself liable to a suit for damages. The publisher admitted that he suggested to his attorney that he feared a suit.

In the face of all this talk, immediately upon the adjournment of the Conference, the writer was approached by the most prominent Methodist lawyer in the city, who said he had heard the report read, that the idea that it was libelous was ridiculous, and that if there was any difficulty in getting it printed, he would lease the machines and the material and do it himself. There was no difficulty, however, for on going to the leading type-setters in the city, they undertook the job at once, putting three machines at work on it. One member of the firm said he was present when the report was read, and heard every word of it, and had no fear whatever of a suit. He also stated that the publishers of the Daily Advocate had telephoned to him and urged him not to handle the report, but that he believed in "fair play," and was very glad to set the type. The writer then went to a press-room and had no difficulty in having the report printed. In both cases the first man approached was not only willing, but seemed eager to do the work. On Tuesday morning, the reports were distributed in the Conference room, and nothing further was heard of libel, and thus the remarks of Drs. Hoss and Rankin made on Saturday, and the remarks of the publisher of the Advocate made on Monday were met by the actual fact of publication on Tuesday.

with no libel suit filed up to the present time.

There is not one word or one line in the report which is unparliamentary or unduly severe, unless the facts stated are severe. That our Virginian people may fully understand how unjust are the criticisms which have been made on the report, the fact should be remembered that 112 members of the Conference voted for that report; and that this number of 112 included a great number of the most prominent men in the Conference, some of whom I mention for the information of our readers: Dr. Gross Alexander, Professor of New Testament Exegesis, Vanderbilt University; Dr. C. E. Dowman, president of Emory College, Georgia; Dr. W. F. Glenn, late editor of Wesleyan Advocate; Dr. J. D. Hammond, General Secretary of the Board of Education; Dr. T. N. Ivey, editor of Raleigh Christian Advocate; Dr. C. Lovett, editor of Wesleyan Advocate; Dr. W. B. Palmore, editor of St. Louis Christian Advocate; Dr. W. Richardson, editor of Southern Christian Advocate; Dr. John J. Tigert, editor of Quarterly Review; Dr. W. Tillet, professor of Systematic Theology in Vanderbilt University; J. H. Pritchett, Missionary Secretary; Drs. Richardson and Neighbors, leading men of Holston Conference, and all the missionaries from China, Japan and Brazil. Among the laymen were Hon. M. E. Benton, member of Congress from Missouri; Judge S. B. Aams, of Savannah; Judge Stokes, Nashville; Ex-Governor Hindman, Kentucky; H. W. Palmer, a leading lawyer of Atlanta; Judge Shackelford of Missouri; Professor Clinkscale, Wofford College; President Craighead of Missouri State Normal College; J. Age Critz, of Mississippi; Prof. W. Jones, of University of Mississippi; Judge Strother, of California; Prof. W. R. Webb, of Tennessee, and C. Tillet, a leading lawyer of Charlotte, N. C. Eight of our Virginia delegates voted for it—namely, Revs. B. F. Lynchcomb, J. C. Reed, James Cannon, J. Dr. W. W. Smith, and Messrs. E. Moseley, of Danville; W. W. Vicar, Norfolk; F. T. West, of Louisa, and Judge T. J. Barham, of Newport News.

I think that the above facts should be sufficient to convince any one that there is nothing libelous or unchristian in the minority report. I am glad to have my name recorded on the General Conference Journal in such noble company.

JAMES CANNON, JR.

"I tread the path; the end thereof I cannot see; but then my Guide Has taught me that thy name is loved So evermore at thy dear side I walk content; and though my feet Are sometimes weary and my eyes Strain through the dark I find it sweet Know the pathway homeward lies."

WATER MELON and Cholera are easily associated. This dreaded and grave trouble of the bowels causes much suffering, painful cramps, profuse sweating and intense thirst, with vomiting, purging and evacuation. Treat vigorously with Perry Davis' Painkiller. It is efficient and safe. It is a standard remedy, Druggists, and 50 cents.

MINORITY REPORT.

(Continued from page five.)

nest in his endeavor to help us then, as he is now, the only difference being that formerly much of his time was occupied in other pursuits, while now he has time which he can call his own, and a good part of which during his sojourn in Washington he has seen fit to devote largely to our interests." It is difficult to see how any statement could be more misleading than this. The impression is produced that the relation of Mr. Stahlman to the claim was exactly the same in 1898 that it was in 1891, at which time Mr. Richardson knew that the case was in the hands of a Washington attorney, the only difference being the amount of time at his disposal to help Barbee & Smith with the claim. But was that the only difference? Certainly not. In 1891 he had no contract for pay for his help; in 1898 he had a contract to be paid 35 per cent. Is not that a very great and controlling difference?

We have made this careful analysis of this letter for two reasons: (1) To show that our Agents signed and became responsible for a letter which effectually misled Representative Richardson. And (2) To show that if the Book Agents had been in any doubt before, they ought to have seen from this letter that Mr. Stahlman was not a person "upon whose statements you can implicitly rely." They ought to have seen from his advice in this matter that he was willing to bring reproach upon the good name of the Church contrary to his explicit instructions from the Book Committee, that therefore the contract had been violated, that the Book Committee should be informed at once and that Mr. Stahlman should be dropped from further connection with the claim.

But the Agents did not seem to realize the perilous position into which they had been led, and into which by this act as our representatives they had led the Church.

The bill passed the House and came up for action in the Senate. The report that Mr. Stahlman was to get a large fee was current and excited considerable comment. Senator Pasco had a conversation with Mr. J. W. Baker, and asked him about the report, and Mr. Baker refused to believe it. Senator Pasco said that he would write to Barbee & Smith, requesting them to telegraph him. Mr. Baker testifies that on the same evening he told Mr. Stahlman of the conversation with Senator Pasco, and the purpose of Senator Pasco to write to Barbee & Smith. Senator Pasco did not write his letter until Saturday, March 5th, and it was received by Barbee & Smith on Monday, March 7th. In the meantime, acting presumably upon the information received from Mr. Baker, that Senator Pasco was going to write to Barbee & Smith about the fees, Mr. Stahlman also wrote to Barbee & Smith. He also telegraphed them on March 6th (page 103, Senate Investigation), and referred them to a letter which should reach you by special delivery to-morrow morning" (Monday, March 7th). The telegram and letter which passed between Mr. Stahlman and Barbee & Smith on this subject have never been produced. The Senate Committee made several efforts to get them, but absolutely failed. Dr. Barbee, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Stahlman all testified that there were telegrams and letters on these days. Mr. Smith said that there was a letter on Monday, March 7th, on the subject of exorbitant fees, and that there was a telegram on Sunday, March 6th, but never produced them. Mr. Stahlman stated the same, but never produced them. He gave his recollection of the substance of the letter as follows:

"I said to them: 'The story that was started in the House three weeks before the passage of the bill has been revived in the Senate. It is said that I am to get 40 per cent., and that I have a contract with you for the money. You know that that is not so. It seems to me that if any inquiry is made about it, you ought to deny that. You can afford to deny that. And, if you want to, you can refer anybody making inquiry to me, and I will talk to them.'" (Page 61, Senate Report.)

This missing correspondence is seen by every one at a glance to be of the greatest importance, and it must be confessed that the failure of the Agents and of Mr. Stahlman to produce it has justly subjected them to severe criticism.

The letter of Senator Pasco was as follows:

March 5, 1898.

"Messrs Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.: Dear Sirs,—Some malicious persons are circulating a slanderous story about the Capitol with the evident purpose to obstruct the passage of our bill. It is to the effect that you have made a contract with Mr. Stahlman to pay him 40 per cent. of the amount recovered.

"It was not necessary for me to get any contradiction, because I knew very well that the Agents of the Publishing House knew better how to conduct their trust than to make such an improvident bargain, and I knew also that there was no power to make such a contract, so I did not hesitate to denounce it as a malicious slander; and I am sure also that the Senators who came to me for information upon the subject are thoroughly satisfied with my statement. But as a matter of caution, it will be very well for me to have a positive denial from you which I can use if it appears necessary either before the bill comes up for action or on the floor of the Senate, so I suggest that you send me a telegram on Monday as to the facts in the case and authorizing me, as I am sure you can, to deny this statement. Yours truly,

"S. PASCO."

To this letter the following telegram was sent on Monday, March the 7th; "Letter of 5th received. The statement is untrue and you are hereby authorized to deny it.

"BARBEE & SMITH, Agents."

A few minutes later they sent another telegram:

"Nashville, Tenn., March 7, 1898.

"Hon S. Pasco, Senator:

"Have asked Mr. Stahlman to call at once to see you. He is a gentleman upon whose statements you may implicitly rely. He is our friend and neighbor and official member of our Church, whose interest in our behalf reaches above and beyond pecuniary considerations.

BARBEE & SMITH,
Book Agents."

At the same time a telegram was sent to Mr. Stahlman, telling him to call on Senator Pasco, which he did, but was told that no other information was needed.

In the meanwhile Senator Bate, of Tennessee, being anxious to hear at once, sent the following telegram:

"Telegraph today answer to Senator Pasco's letter to you Saturday as to Stahlman having fee of 40 per cent., or any other fee, in case of payment of your claim. I would like to hear from you also. In my judgment, if true, it will endanger the bill.

"WILLIAM B. BATE."

To this Barbee & Smith replied:

Nashville, Tenn., March 7, 1898.

"Hon W. B. Bate: We wired Senator Pasco early this morning as follows: 'The statement is untrue, and you are therefore authorized to deny it.'

BARBEE & SMITH."

We think that it is hardly necessary to attempt to prove that these telegrams misled the Senate. The Chairman of the Book Committee himself said before the Senate Committee, as stated by him on the floor of the General Conference Thursday, May 15, 1902: "What I did say substantially on the point on which my opinion is quoted in the paper to which this is a reply, was that the telegrams misled those whose knowledge of the facts were confined to the statement made on the floor of the Senate in connection with the reading of the telegrams, and under the circumstances would have misled anybody. I also stated that I did not approve the telegrams."

In looking for the reasons which led the Agents to send these telegrams, we think that the Book Committee have omitted the chief and controlling reason. On the same morning the Agents received Senator Pasco's letter they also received the special delivery letter from Mr. Stahlman, which letter we regret to say, they have failed to produce for the inspection of anyone. But Mr. Stahlman gave in his testimony a part of the letter as quoted above. He told them that the report was current that "I am to get 40 per cent., and that I have a contract with you for the money. You know that this is not so." What did he mean by that? Why, simply, that he was to get 35 per cent. instead of 40 per cent., and that his contract was not with them, the agents, but the Book Committee, which was exactly the same position that he took in his conversations with Senators. After thus warning them, he then told them what to do: "It seems to me that if any inquiry is made about it you ought to deny that. You can afford to deny that, and if you want to, you can refer anybody making inquiry to me, and I will talk to them." Here the Agents had brought before them by Mr. Stahlman the fact that these inquiries were being made, and that by ignoring the spirit of the inquiries, and simply replying to the exact form of words, they could keep as he claimed from telling a falsehood, and yet mislead the persons making the inquiries. It is not correct to assume, therefore, that they were ignorant of the purpose of Senators Pasco and Bate, and were sending these telegrams in the dark. They had been advised by Mr. Stahlman as to what was being said, and were told how to answer inquiries should any be made, and they seem to have done exactly what he told them to do.

In the light of this letter of Mr. Stahlman to Barbee and Smith, there is a portion of the second telegram which deserves more careful consideration than it has received. That telegram follows exactly the instructions of Mr. Stahlman and notifies Senator Pasco to talk with Mr. Stahlman. It says: "He is a gentleman upon whose statements you may implicitly rely." When Barbee and Smith sent that telegram they had before them the letter of Mr. Stahlman, urging them to deny statements, which while not exactly correct as to the letter, were true in spirit, and urging them to send parties to him that he might deny these statements. They had also the Richardson letter of January 10th, as an evidence of his misleading methods. Yet despite both of these letters, they telegraphed to Senator Pasco that he could implicitly rely upon the statements of Mr. Stahlman, knowing from his letter of that very day, then before them, what kind of statements he would make. We are constrained to state that the reasons given by the Book Committee do not satisfactorily explain the conduct of the Agents. We can understand it only on the ground that they had surrendered their own individuality, and had placed themselves absolutely in the hands of Mr. Stahlman, to be used by him as simple instruments to record and to carry out his wishes. We cannot express too strongly our condemnation of such a theory of conduct, involving as it does, unquestioning surrender of the will to the control of other human beings, and the unscriptural doctrine that "The end justifies the means."

As to the remainder of their telegram, "He is our friend and neighbor and official member of our Church, whose interest in our behalf reaches beyond and above pecuniary considerations," it is to be noted that this language is also calculated to mislead. Senator Pasco had asked about the existence of a contract with Mr. Stahlman. They had denied that in the first telegram, and now in the second they clinch the nail by calling him "gentleman," "friend," "neighbor," "official member," anything but the proper word, "agent or attorney," and finally by stating that his "interest in our behalf reaches beyond and above pecuniary considerations." In other words, that the idea of a contract of 40 per cent. ought not to be thought of in connection with his great interest in the welfare of the Church.

We might stop here in discussing the methods employed by our Agents, did not the Book Committee, in its report, bring forward the subsequent correspondence with Senator Pasco as substantiating its view of the conduct of the Agents. We are unable to con-

(Continued on page 12.)

WASHINGTON. — In this discourse Dr. Talmage makes practical use of an occurrence in the orient which has seldom attracted particular attention; text, II Kings vi, 6, "The iron did swim."

A theological seminary in the valley of palms, near the river Jordan, had become so popular in the time of Elisha, the prophet, that more accommodations were needed for the students. The classrooms and the dormitories must be enlarged or an entirely new building constructed. What will they do? Will they send up to Jerusalem and solicit contributions for this undertaking? Will they send out agents to raise the money for a new theological seminary? Having raised the money, will they send for cedars of Lebanon and marble from the quarries where Ahab got the stone for the pillars and walls of his palace? No; the students propose to build it themselves. They were rugged boys, who had been brought up in the country and who had never been weakened by the luxuries of city life. All they ask is that Elisha, their professor and prophet, go along with them to the woods and boss the job. They start for the work, Elisha and his students. Plenty of lumber in those regions along the Jordan. The sycamore is a stout, strong tree and good for timber. Mr. Gladstone asked me if I had seen in Palestine any sycamore tree more beautiful than the one we stood under at Hawarden. I told him I had not.

The sycamores near the Jordan are now attacked by Elisha's students, for they must have lumber for the new theological seminary. I suppose some of the students made an awkward stroke, and they were extemporized axmen. Stand from under! Crash goes one of the trees and another and another. But something now happens so wonderful that the occurrence will tax the credulity of the ages, so wonderful that many still think it never happened at all. One of the students, not able to own an ax, had borrowed one. You must remember that while the ax of olden time was much like our modern ax, it differed in the fact that instead of the helve or handle being thrust into a socket in the iron head the head of the ax was fastened on the handle by a leathern thong, and so it might slip the helve. A student of the seminary was swinging his ax against one of those trees, and whether it was at the moment he made his first stroke and the chips flew or was after he had cut the tree from all sides so deep that it was ready to fall we are not told, but the ax head and the handle parted. Being near the riverside, the ax head dropped into the river and sank to the muddy bottom. Great was the student's dismay. If it had been his own ax, it would have been bad enough, but the ax did not belong to him. He had no means to buy another for the kind man who had loaned it to him, but God helps the helpless, and he generally helps through some good and sympathetic soul, and in this case it was Elisha, who was in the woods and on the river bank at the time. He did not see the ax head fly off, and so he asked the student where it dropped. He was shown the place where it went down into the river. Then Elisha broke off a branch of a tree and threw it into the water, and the ax head rose from the depths of the river and floated to the bank, so that the student had just to stoop down and take up the restored property. Now you see the meaning of my text, "The iron did swim."

The Iron Did Swim.

Suppose a hundred years ago some one had told people that the time would come when hundreds of thousands of tons of iron would float on the Atlantic and Pacific — iron ships from New York to Southampton, from London to Calcutta, from San Francisco to Canton. The man making such a prophecy would have been sent to an asylum or carefully watched as incompetent to go alone. We have all in our day seen iron swim. Now, if man can make hundreds of tons of metal float, I am disposed to think that the Almighty could make an ax head float.

"What," says some one, "would be the use of such a miracle?" Of vast, of infinite, of eternal importance. Those students were preparing for the ministry. They had joined the theological seminary to get all its advantages. They needed to have their faith strengthened; they needed to be persuaded that God can do everything; they needed to learn that God takes notice of little things; that there is no emergency of life where he is not willing to help. Standing on the banks of that Jordan, those students of that day of the recalled ax head had their faith re-enforced, and nothing that they had found out in the classrooms of that learned institution had ever done more in the way of fitting them for their coming profession.

I hear from different sources that there is a great deal of infidelity in some of the theological seminaries of our day. They think that the garden of Eden is an allegory, and that Moses did not write the Pentateuch, and that the book of Job is only a drama, and that the book of Jonah is an unreliable fish story, and that water was not turned into wine, although the bartender now by large dilution turns wine into water, and that most of the so-called miracles of the Old and the New Testaments were wrought by natural causes. When those infidels graduate from the theological seminary and take the pulpits of America as expounders of the Holy Scriptures, what advocates they will be of that gospel for the truth of which the martyrs died! Hail the Polycarps and Hugh Latimers and John Knoxes of the twentieth century, believing the Bible is true in spots! Would to God that some great revival of religion might sweep through all the theological seminaries of this land, confirming the faith of the coming expounders of an entire Bible!

The Right to Borrow.

Furthermore, in that scene of the text God sanctions borrowing and sets forth the importance of returning. I do not think there would have been any miracle performed if the young man had owned the ax that slipped the helve. The young man cried out in the hearing of the prophet, "Alas, master, for it was borrowed!" He had a right to borrow. There are times when we have not only a right to borrow, but it is a duty to borrow. There are times when we ought to lend, for Christ in his sermon on the mount declared, "From him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." It is right that one borrow the means of getting an education, as the young student of my text borrowed the ax. It is right to borrow means for the forwarding of commercial ends. Most of the vast fortunes that now overshadow the land were hatched out of a borrowed dollar.

If in any assembly it were requested that those who had never borrowed hold up their hands, none would be lifted, or if here and there a hand were lifted we would know that it was a case of invertebracy. Borrow! Why, we are borrowing all the time. We borrow from the Lord the sunlight that shows us our way, the water that slakes our thirst, the food that refreshes us three times a day, the pillow on which we slumber. We borrow gladness from our friends; we borrow all elevated surroundings. The church borrows all its beauty from the Christ who founded it. In our songs and sermons we borrow from the raptures of heaven.

We borrow time; we will borrow eternity, and that constant borrowing implies a return. For what we borrow from God we must pay back in hearty thanks and Christian service, in improvement of our lives and helpfulness for others. For what we borrow in the shape of protection from good government we must pay back in patriotic devotion. For what we borrow from our parents in their good example and their hard work wrought for us in our journey from cradle to manhood or womanhood for all the ages to come we ought to be paying back. The balalaikas of heaven will be returned for crucifixion agency.

Debt a Calamity.

Haydon the painter said his ruin began the day he began to borrow money, and he wrote in his diary, "Here began debt and obligation, out of which I have never been and never shall be extricated as long as I live." Dr. Johnson said: "Do not accustom yourself to consider debt only as an inconvenience. You will find it a calamity." We have a right to borrow for the absolute necessities, expecting to pay back again, but we ought never to borrow for the luxuries. According to the "Laws of Amasis," in Egypt if a man died without paying that which he had borrowed he was deprived of all obsequies. If that law were in vogue in our times, how many postponed and impossible funerals!

Furthermore, let us admire these young men of Elisha's theological seminary for the fact that they were earning their own way. The most of those today who are successful in the professions, mediating the sick or advocating the law or preaching the gospel, fought their own way on and up. Those are the kind of men who know what education is worth and know how to use it. Many of us remember that in college days the sons of affluent fathers, with plenty of money to spend and horses to drive and libraries crowded with books never read and wardrobes that kept them in perplexity as to which of many garments was appropriate for the weather that day, were worth to the world nothing then and have been worth to the world nothing since, while the young men in college who had to economize three months in order to get some book they needed and who could hardly raise money for their diploma have since wrought mightily for God and the truth, turning the world upside down because it was wrong side up.

In the summer watering places north, south, east and west, in the great hotels, serving at table and in baggage room, are theological students who are in preparation for the ministry, earning in July and August the means by which they may study the other months of the year. I train them; I cheer them; I bless them. They will be the Hereschels in the observatories, the Dr. Motts in your medical colleges, the Rufus Choates in your courtrooms, the Bishop McIlvaines in your pulpits. Let them not now be ashamed of the ax with which they hew the beam for Elisha's seminary.

Superiority of God.

Those students in the valley of palms by the Jordan had a physical strength and hardihood that would help them in their mental and spiritual achievements. We who are toiling for the world's betterment need brawn as well as brain, strong bodies as well as illumined minds and consecrated souls. Many of those who are now doing the best work in church and state got muscle and power of endurance from the fact that in early life they were compelled to use ax or plow or flail or hammer, while many who were brought up in the luxuries of life give out before the battle is won. They are keen and sharp of mind, but have no physical endurance. They have the ax head, but no handle. The body is the handle of the soul.

Let all those who toil for their education remember they are especially favored, and if things go against them and the ax head should fly the helve that very hindrance may some time turn out advantageously, as the accident by the river Jordan, which seemed to finish the young student's capacity to help build the new seminary, resulted in a splendid demonstration of the power of Elisha's God to help any one who helps himself. No ax that was ever wielded has wrought so well as that ax, the handle and head of which parted.

Notice, also, how God is superior to every law that he has made, even the strongest law of nature, the law of gravitation. The stick that Elisha threw into the Jordan floated, but the ax head sank. By inexorable law it must go down into the depths of the Jordan, yet without so much as a touch the hard, heavy metal sought the surface. There it is, the floating ax head. What a rebuke to those who reject miracles on the ground that they are contrary to nature, as though the law were stronger than the God who made the law! Again and again in Bible times was that law revoked! Witness the scene on the banks of the same Jordan, where, in after time, the ax head sank and rose. Elijah stood there, wearing cape of sheepskin, when there was a mighty stir in the air and a flashing equipage descended. Elijah stepped into it, and on wheels of fire, drawn by horses of fire, he rose. Fifty men for three days searched the mountains to see if the body of Elijah had not been dropped among the rocks and picked at by birds of prey, but the search was in vain. The law of gravitation had been defeated.

Wonders of Divine Power.

There Christ stood by his disciples on the Mount of Olives after his coming out of the sepulcher. No ladders let down for his ascension, but his feet lift from the hill, and he goes up until the curtain of cloud drops, and he is invisible. Law of gravitation again unharnessed. Enoch, Methuselah's father, escaping death, went up bodily and will have no need of resurrection. So will all the good who shall be still alive at the end of the world. They will not need wings. Every one of the millions of our planet who loved and served the Lord, if then alive, will "be caught up," as the Bible says, body as well as soul, the law of gravitation paralyzed. God mightier than any law

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

100 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

10 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

10 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

10 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

10 A. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

10 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

10 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

10 P. M. and 6:30, between Manchester and Nashville.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APR. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:15 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
2:56 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	4:12 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	7:00 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.

1:05 A. M.	9:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
4:55 A. M.	2:10 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
9:15 A. M.	7:00 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	—Ar. St. Augustine.
5:45 P. M.	6:45 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
10:32 P. M.	10:08 A. M.—Ar. Charlotte.
1:35 A. M.	10:22 A. M.—Lv. Chester.
3:43 A. M.	12:35 P. M.—Lv. Greenwood.
6:13 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Lv. Athens.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
	5:40 P. M.—Ar. Augusta.
	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Macon.
	9:20 P. M.—Ar. Montgomery.
6:25 P. M.	2:55 A. M.—Ar. Mobile.
	2:55 A. M.—Ar. New Orleans.
	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

11:35 A. M.	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

No. 1
Teach Bookkeeping, Penmanship,
Commercial Arithmetic,
Business Practice,
Shorthand,
Typewriting,
Telegraphy,
English,
and all other branches of the business college.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry.

Fine Repairing.

Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing

Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

121 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter, before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,

Patent Lawyers,

MINORITY REPORT.

(Continued from Page 9.)

our in its view, and we think a brief examination of it will show that it is not sound.

On March 9th, right after the passage of the bill, Senator Pasco wrote to Barbee and Smith the following letters:

"Washington, D. C., March 9, 1898.

"Messrs. Barbee and Smith, Agents Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.: Dear Sirs,—Your telegram in response to my letter was received, and was serviceable to me in meeting the charge which had been made by some malicious persons as to the employment of claim agents and attorneys who were to absorb a large proportion of the funds appropriated for the publishing house.

"I succeeded in calling up the bill yesterday afternoon, and as you have doubtless been already informed by telegraph, it was passed after a few hours' debate; and from conversations I have had with Senators who are on intimate terms with the President, I feel sure there will be no delay in his approval.

"It is but just that I should say that Mr. J. W. Baker has given the matter his close attention for some weeks past, and has rendered diligent, intelligent and effective services in behalf of the bill. Yours very truly,

"S. PASCO."

This letter clearly indicates to the careful reader that Senator Pasco understood the telegram of the Agents to mean that a large proportion of the $288,000 was not to go to claim agents and attorneys, and that his letter of inquiry had referred to the existence of a contract, and not to the percentage to be paid out. It is evident from this letter that the telegrams misled him, but Barbee and Smith did not write him a line of explanation at that time.

On March 28th Barbee and Smith saw the Congressional Record, with the speeches of Senators, quoting them as authority for the statement that no part of the claim was to be paid to an attorney. They realized the gravity of the situation, and wrote a letter to Senator Pasco, of which the following is the pertinent part:

"Nashville, Tenn., March 29, 1898.

"Hon. S. Pasco, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.: Dear Sir,—On the 7th of March we received a letter from you, under the date of March 5th, in which you stated, among other things:

"Some malicious persons are circulating a slanderous story about the Capitol with the evident purpose to obstruct the passage of our bill. It is to the effect that you have made a contract with Mr. Stahlman to pay him 40 per cent. of any amount recovered."

"To this we responded:

"Letter of 5th received. The statement is untrue, and you are authorized to deny it."

"We also, on 7th of March, received a telegram from Senator Bate on the same subject, and repeated to him the telegram we had sent you.

"We should not deem it necessary to say anything further on the subject but for the fact that during the discussion of our bill in the Senate (as shown by the Congressional Record, which we have just read) statements were made by one or two Senators which, by inference, were calculated to create the impression that nothing was to be paid by the Publishing House to any attorney or representative of the Book Agents.

"The claim, as you are aware, was pending in Congress for nearly thirty years. During several years of that period we had a Washington attorney (Mr. Moyers) employed on a percentage basis. This arrangement was made with the full knowledge and consent of our Book Committee (the Book Agents, as very properly stated by you, having no authority to make such contracts without the consent of that committee). For reasons satisfactory to our friends in the Senate and House, we declined to renew the contract when it expired, and instead accepted the proffered assistance of others, some of whom were devoted friends and members of our Church, and one of whom, even as early as 1891, and before the agreement with the Washington attorney expired, had rendered valuable assistance in our endeavors to pass the bill. This gentleman was as earnest in his endeavor to help us then as he was subsequently, the only difference being that formerly much of his time was occupied in other pursuits, while during the past two and a half years he has had time which he could call his own, and a good portion of which during his extended sojourn in Washington he has seen fit to largely devote to our interests.

"It is hardly to be presumed that this gentleman and others who assisted him should be willing to serve the Publishing House and incur the large expense of staying in Washington without some compensation, and if, therefore, in the final adjustment, it was deemed proper to pay these gentlemen a reasonable compensation for their services and expenses, and this compensation was paid with the consent of the proper authorities of the Church, you, as well as other Senators, we are sure, will agree that it was not an improper thing to do."

We cannot understand how the Book Committee can introduce this letter as relieving the Agents from the charge of misleading the Senate. This letter is so very similar to the one written to Mr. Richardson on January 10, 1898, that one is forced to conclude that much of it is taken directly from that letter, or that it was inspired by the same person. The letter still conceals the fact of a contract existing before or at the time of the collection of the claim, and still makes a distinction between Mr. Moyers, calling him a "Washington attorney," and Mr. Stahlman, including him among "friends and members of the Church," and the intimation is, that after the claim had been collected, the Church authorities met and decided what ought to be given these gentlemen for their services and expenses. The statements of the letter, as well as its tone, would lead the reader to still believe that there had been no contract at the time of the passage of the bill.

That Senator Pasco so understood it is evident from his reply:

"United States Senate, Washington, D. C., April 6, 1898.

"Messrs. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn.: Dear Sirs,—Your letter of March 29th relative to the Methodist Book claim was duly received, and I value highly the kind manner in which you speak of the efforts to secure favorable action in the Senate upon it.

"I have always felt that the question of compensating the gentlemen who represented the Publishing House here in Washington while this claim was pending before Congress belonged entirely to the Book Agents and the Book Committee of the Methodist Church. Although it was understood from the statements that were made that they were not influenced by a desire to gain large fees, yet it is quite proper that they should be paid their expenses and such other remuneration as the Church authorities deem fair and just. I was well satisfied that no such exorbitant and unreasonable contract existed as was alleged, and I did not hesitate to deny it before I received your telegram, which, as you know, I used freely both in the Senate and among Senators who approached me upon the subject. Yours very truly,

"S. PASCO."

This letter simply indicates that Senator Pasco thought that the Church should pay the expenses of those who helped with the claim and give them a fair remuneration, but Senator Pasco in this letter again reasserts his understanding that no such unreasonable contract existed as was alleged, and which he understood their telegram to deny.

This closes the official acts of our Agents in reference to this matter so far as the United States Senate is concerned, until the meeting of the Senate Investigating Committee, at which time they appeared and were examined as to their contract. Their statements are in the report of that Committee and are open to the judgment of all. We do not feel that they justified their conduct in their testimony before the Senate Committee, or improved in the slightest degree the condition of affairs, but that their attempted explanation is equally as humiliating to the Church as their original statements. We are obliged, therefore, after this careful and impartial review, to say that the methods employed by the agents in the collection of this "war claim" were clearly misleading and deceptive in their character, and that they did mislead the Senate of the United States.

In closing this review of the conduct of the Agents, we greatly regret that the friends of our Church in the Congress of the United States were so greatly misled by our Agents. They had the right to expect fair and candid replies, and they were treated with great injustice when they were led to make such strong and misleading statements on the floor of the Senate on the authority of the agents of the Church which they were striving to help. Such conduct was not only misleading, but it was also clearly ungrateful and unjust.

In all that has been said above the Agents have been considered together, and all that applies to one applies to the other, as in the testimony before the Senate Committee Mr. Smith stated that he joined in the replies sent to the Agents.

In using the word "deceptive," I desire to call attention to a distinction which we think has been ignored by many in discussing this whole matter. A judgment may be pronounced that conduct is deceptive, and yet does not follow of necessity that a person engaged in such conduct believes it to be deceptive as he understands the meaning of the word, that he would intentionally engage in what he believes to be wrong. An error may happen that we may be thoroughly convinced that a person has intention to do wrong, and yet we do not pronounce severe and public sentence upon his conduct. In other words, moral standards frequently differ greatly with different persons. The duty of the Church, however, in such cases is very clear. She must live to the highest standards set before her in the life of Christ and His Apostles. What though Abraham and Jacob and David did things which do not agree with the standards set by our Lord? This is no justification for such conduct now, since we know the high revelation of God in Christ. We lament and deplore that men of good purposes and love for the Church should have followed a low standard of ethics, and we may relieve them of all charges of intentional wrongdoing, but we must at the same time pronounce our unqualified condemnation of their conduct and declare our judgment that it does not agree with the high standards of the Holy Church of Christ. Love for our brethren who have committed the wrong, as well as love for the Church, constrains us to adopt this course. The word "deceptive," therefore, which we have been obliged to use in expressing our judgment of the conduct of our Agents does not imply that we are either harsh or unforgiving in our feelings toward them, but does imply that we must characterize their conduct so plainly and strongly that all the world must realize that as a Church we stand to the highest possible standard of morality in all our transactions with fellow-men.

In regard to the report of the Book Committee, which was referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests at the Conference so far as it refers to the "war claim," we beg leave to say

The greater part of the report of the Book Committee, referring as it does to the conduct of our Agents in the prosecution of the "war claim," has been very largely reviewed and passed upon in our discussion of the methods employed by the Agents, and our views as to the conclusions presented by the Book Committee on this subject have been already indicated in a general way. We cannot agree with the findings of the Book Committee on this subject. We believe that the Book Agents have been shown to be guilty of misconduct in their management of the war claim, and by their misconduct have greatly damaged the work of the Church. This misconduct the Book Committee have denied in their port, and have argued at length to sustain their position. We hereby explicitly and in terms express our dissent from the findings of the Book Committee, and we regret and regret their conclusion, and this is done with the highest appreciation of the efforts of the Book Committee to reach a just and satisfactory conclusion.

Having concluded our review of the conduct of the representatives of our Church, and the action of the Book Committee thereupon, we have decided to present at this point in our report the resolutions which we offer for adoption in reference to the conduct of our representatives, and of the action of the Book Committee upon the same, reserving for a separate section of the report a statement and resolutions in reference to the disposition of the money collected from the United States Government.

Resolved, 1. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, must stand and must stand for the highest honor, and with scrupulous regard for the demands of truth and frankness. While no question has been, or can be, made as to the justice of the claim commonly known as the war claim, we greatly deplore the fact that statements by the representatives of the Church which are misleading and deceptive, were made to secure the passage of the bill for its payment. We recognize the fact that the Book Agents had no selfish purpose in making the statements made by them, and did not personally profit by the money, but we greatly deprecate the fact that they permitted their zeal for the Church, which they had served with great fidelity for many years, to use them to be betrayed into a lack of frankness and candor which had previously characterized them, and that they thus did themselves and the Church, which they and all of us are, great injustice. This General Conference, as the supreme representative of the Church, is constrained to express its condemnation of the statements and to say that in making them, the representatives did not properly represent the Church, and were not its agents on the ethical questions involved.

That while we recognize the entire sincerity of the Book Committee, whose report has been submitted to this Conference, and realize that in a very trying and difficult position, its members have labored zealously and conscientiously for what they conceived to be the good of the Church, and that this report expresses their conscientious convictions, yet this Conference cannot agree with the conclusions reached by them touching the means used to collect this claim, and expressed its decided dissent therefrom, in so far as these conclusions operate the Book Agents from the Church. * * *

We also had before us the letter of the Bishops to the United States Senate, pledging themselves to the return of the money, should the Senate decide by affirmative action that the bill had been passed because of deceptive statements, or the money had been appropriated as a gratuity. We had also the action of the Senate upon this letter of the Bishops; the letter of Bishop Candler to Senator Clay, and the reply of Senators Clay and Bacon, with the paper signed by seventy-seven Senators, agreeing to the statement made by Senators Bacon and Clay. Inasmuch as these documents have all become part of the official record of the General Conference, by being made part of the Episcopal address, or an appendix thereto, we do not deem it necessary to give these papers as part of the record at this point, but express our opinion.

We are profoundly gratified that the Bishops of our Church, as soon as this matter became thoroughly understood, wrote to the Senate of the United States that in case the Senate should declare by affirmative action that the passage of the bill was due to misleading statements, they would take proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the Government. We think, however, that there is no question, from the statements made by various Senators, that the bill would not have been passed but for the support given it by a large number of Senators who voted for the bill, after distinctly stating that they did not consider the claim a legal claim, but that they voted for it as a gratuity; it is also true that other Senators have stated that they would not have voted for the bill at all had they known of the contract to pay 35 per cent. to Mr. Stahlman; there is still another group of Senators who say that they would not have voted for the bill unless it had first been so amended as to protect the beneficiaries from such a large diversion of the funds to an agent. Had such an amendment been adopted the bill would have been sent back to the House, and it is impossible to predict what would have been the result; certainly the friends of the bill were very anxious that no amendment should be put upon it, as they felt that they could not foresee the result of such action.

The reply of the United States Senate to the letter of the Bishops is not as clear as it should be in our estimation. It simply states that no blame should rest upon the Church for the misstatements and concealments of the Book Agents in connection with the passage of the bill for the payment of the claim; that the injury resulting therefrom affected only the beneficiaries of the fund, and not the United States, and the Senate should take no further action in the matter, but this is not a direct clear-cut response to the letter of the Bishops. It does not state whether the bill was passed because of misleading statements or not; it does not state whether Senators voted for the passage of the bill as a gratuity, and therefore it does not answer the very matters referred to in the letter of the Bishops. It does assert most positively that there were misstatements and concealments in connection with the passage of the bill, and to that extent, and to that extent alone, does it refer to the main question raised by the Bishops in their communication. The reply of Senator Clay to the letter of Bishop Candler is an unofficial reply to an unofficial communication, and is not a part of the record of the United States Senate, and cannot therefore be construed in any proper sense as an official interpretation of the meaning of the resolution of the Senate, which was passed in response to the letter of the Bishops. This incident is not entitled to that importance which it would otherwise have were it an official document of the United States Senate.

The last official record made in the Senate of the United States is a reiteration of the charges of misstatements and concealments by the Agents of our Church. The Church cannot allow the record to be closed at this point. We might show many reasons in detail for the action, which we shall recommend the General Conference to take on the question of what disposition shall be made of the money appropriated to our Church by the United States Government, but the highest reason includes all the others. If there is the slightest doubt that the bill could not have been passed but for the misstatements and concealments of our representatives in the case, then the Church cannot afford to retain one dollar of the money in question. It is impossible for us to read the record in this case, even the letter of the Bishops and the response of the United States Senate thereto, and not say that there is genuine doubt as to whether the bill would have passed but for the misstatements and concealments of our representatives, and that being the case, there can be but one course which measures up to the highest standards laid down for us in the Word of God for our guidance in all our dealings with our fellow-men. We must return to the Government of the United States every dollar of the money which came into our hands by this transaction; questions of method and means are not to be involved in the question of right. We must settle first that we will do right, and having done that, we can find a way in which to do right.

The Investigating Committee of the United States Senate in its report finds as a fact that the attorney of our Book Committee wilfully and deliberately practiced a deception upon the Senate, and that our Book Agents purposely withheld information from certain Senators which the Senate deemed material, in procuring the passage of bill appropriating $288,000 to pay our "war claim." This report was unanimously adopted, and a public and official record made against the Agents of our Church in the prosecution of the claim in favor of our Church against the government.

The report of said Investigating Committee finds that no censure should rest upon the Church on account of the wrongful acts of its Agents, and reaffirmed the same by special resolution when the report was adopted.

This action was eminently proper, for at that time the supreme governing body of the Church had done no act approving the action of said Agents, and it would have been unjust to have condemned the principal before it had ratified the wrongful acts of its Agents.

We cannot construe this action of the Senate as prospective in its nature and to be an exoneration of the Church for the wrongful acts of its Agents, should it accept the fruit of its labors.

Neither can we accept the private views of Senators expressed in the letter of Bishop Candler as changing in any respect the record made against the Agents by the Senate in its official capacity, especially when thirty-two Senators of the seventy-seven Senators signing the letter were not members of the Senate at the time the record was made by it against the Agents of the Church.

To condemn our Agents for the methods resorted to by them in procuring the passage of the bill and yet accept the fruits of these methods would be illogical and subject the Church to severe criticism.

We believe that the retention of this money is a disturbing factor in the peace and harmony of the Church at present, and may disquiet our membership in the future.

Therefore, in order that there may be peace and harmony within the borders of our beloved Church, and that it may do no act that could call in question its good name, we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

First. That the entire sum collected—viz., $288,000—be returned to the United States Government.

Second. That a committee of nine (9) members of the General Conference be appointed, who shall report to this Conference at as early a day as practicable a plan for carrying into execution the above resolution.

Third. That we heartily endorse the letter written by our Bishops to the Senate of the United States. It showed their jealous care of the good name of the Church, and indicated a wise solution of the matter.

JAMES CANNON, JR.,
Virginia Conference.

J. W. DANIEL,
South Carolina Conference.

H. E. W. PALMER,
North Georgia Conference.

SAMUEL B. ADAMS,
South Georgia Conference.

JORDAN STOKES,
Tennessee Conference.

J. W. TARBOUT,
Brazil Mission Conference.

W. H. PARK,
China Mission Conference.

M. L. MONTGOMERY,
Los Angeles Conference.

G. M. GIBSON,
Missouri Conference.

(I dissent from this minority report as to the return of the money to the United States Treasury.—G. M. Gibson.)

W. W. BALL,
Kentucky Conference.

S. H. WAINWRIGHT,
Japan Mission Conference.

R. G. APPLIGATE,
St. Louis Conference.

J. F. CORBIN,
Northwest Mexican Conference.

J. R. HINDMAN,
Louisville Conference.

R. P. HOWELL,
Illinois Conference.

J. P. STROTHER,
Pacific Conference.

(Reserving the right to support as a substitute for return of money to the United States, the restoration of full sum of $288,000 to fund and to pay in-

(Concluded on page 16.)

(Continued from page 10.)

ne ever ere on t the mura cles becu they show God independ ent of everything

Notice also the divine power in the backwood. Wonderful things were done at the cities of Jericho and Jerusalem and Babylon and Nineveh, and the great cities of our time have seen the divine power, but this miracle of my text was in the backwoods, far away from the city, in the lumber districts, where the students had gone to cut timber for the new theological seminary. And if this sermon shall come, as it will come, like my other sermons for the last thirty years, with out missing a week, let me say to those far away from the house of God and in the mountain districts that my text shows the divine power in the backwoods. The Lord by every stream as he certainly was by the Jordan, on every mountain as surely as he was on Mount Zion, on every lake as on Tiberias, by every rock as by the one whose gushing waters slaked the thirst of the marching Israelites.

Do not feel lonely because your nearest neighbor may be miles away, because the width of the continent may separate you from the place where your cradle was rocked and your father's grave was dug. Wakened though you may be by lion's roar or panther's scream, God will help you, whether at the time the forest around you raves in the midnight hurricane or you suffer from something quite insignificant, like the loss of an ax head. Take your Bible out under the trees, if the weather will permit, and after you have listened to the solo of a bird in the treetops or the long meter psalm of the thunder, read those words of the Bible, which must have been written out of doors: "The trees of the Lord are full of sap, the cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted, where the birds make their nests; as for the stork, the fir trees are her house. The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats and the rocks for the conies. Thou makest darkness, and it is night, wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth. The young lions roar after their prey and seek their meat from God. The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together and lay them down in their dens. Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labor until the evening. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all. The earth is full of thy riches." How do you like that sublime pastoral?

Overcome Evil.

My subject also reminds us of the importance of keeping our chief implement for work in good order. I think that young theological student on the banks of Jordan was to blame for not examining the ax before he lifted it that day against a tree. He could in a moment have found out whether the helve and the head were firmly fastened. The simple fact was the ax was not in good order or the strongest stroke that sent the edge into the hard sycamore would not have left the implement headless. So God has given every one of us an ax with which to hew. Let us keep it in good order, having been sharpened by Bible study and strengthened by prayer. The reason we sometimes fail in our work is because we have a dull ax or we do not know how aright to swing it. The head is not aright on the handle. At the time we want the most skill for work and perfect equilibrium we lose our head. We expend in useless excitement the nervous energy that we ought to have employed in direct, straightforward work. Your ax may be a pen or a type or a yardstick or a scales or a tongue which in legislative hall or business circles or Sabbath class or pulpit is to speak for God and righteousness, but the ax will not be worth much until it has been sharpened on the grindstone of affliction.

Go right through the world, and go right through all the past ages, and show me one man or woman who has done anything for the world worth speaking of whose ax was not ground on the revolving wheel of mighty trouble. It was not David, for he was dethroned and hounded by unfillal Absalom. Surely it was not Paul, for he was shipwrecked and whipped with thirty-nine stripes from rods of elmwood on his way to beheadment. Surely it was not Abraham Lincoln, called by every vile name that human and satanic turpitude could invent and depicted by cartoonists with more meanness than any other man ever suffered, on the way to meet a bullet crashing through his temples.

God Does the Impossible.

But I have come to the foot of the Alps, which we must climb before we can see the wide reach of my subject. See in all this theme how the impossibilities may be turned into possibilities. That ax head was sunken in the mud-diast river that could be found. The alarmed student of Elisha may know where it went down and may dive for it and perhaps fetch it up, but can the sunken ax head be lifted without a hand thrust deep into the mud at the bottom of the river? No; that is impossible. I admit, so far as human power is concerned, it is impossible, but with God all things are possible. After the tree branch was thrown upon the surface of Jordan "the iron did swim."

Some one asks me, "Did you ever see iron swim?" Yes, yes; many a time. I saw a soul hardened until nothing could make it harder. All styles of sin had plied that soul. It was petrified as to all fine feeling. It had been hardening for thirty years. It had gone into the deepest depths. It had been given up as lost. The father had given it up. The mother, the last to do so, had given it up. But one day in answer to some prayer a branch of the disfoliated tree of Calvary was thrown into the dark and sullen stream, and the sunken soul responded to its power and rose into the light, and, to the astonishment of the church and the world, "the iron did swim." I have seen hundreds of cases like that. When the dying bandit on the cross beside Christ's cross was converted. When Jerry McAuley, a ruffian graduate of Sing Sing prison, was changed into a great evangelist, so useful in reclamation of wandering men and women that the merchant princes of New York established for him the Water Street and Cremorne missions and mourned at his burial, amid the lamentations of a city. When Newton, the blaspheming sailor, under the power of the truth was brought to Christ and became one of the mightiest preachers of the gospel that England ever saw. When John Bunyan, whose curses shocked even the profane of the fish market, was so changed in heart and life that he could write that wonderful dream, "The Pilgrim's Progress," in such a way that uncouthed thousands have found through it the road from the "city of destruction" to the "celestial city." In all these cases I think iron was made to swim. I worship the God who can do the impossible.

There is no warrant for carelessness or self-sufficiency in the smallest thing we may be called upon to do for God.—D. W. Whittle.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone,

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTT,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class society magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the Church, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have a beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hursey.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendricks.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of the land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get a beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,

CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,

ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L.

WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO.,

Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk;

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

This old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts?

If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished.
Time made to suit the borrower.
Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant,
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,

BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

MINORITY REPORT.

(Continued from page 13.)

terest thereon annually to beneficiaries under Sixth Restrictive Rule.—J. P. Strother.)

T. L. LALLANCE,
New Mexico Conference.
M. E. BENTON,
Southwest Missouri Conference.

ACTION ON WAR CLAIM ADOPTED BY GENERAL CONFERENCE.

"Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had a just and valid claim against the United States Government for the use and abuse of property connected with its Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., during the war between the States; which said claim was for a much larger sum, but after many years of effort to secure the payment thereof, the sum of $288,000 was accepted by representatives of the Church in full settlement of all demands for loss of and damage to said property; and,

"Whereas, it was charged by certain members of the Senate of the United States that in connection with the passage through Congress of a bill for the payment of said claim, misleading statements were made to them by representatives of the Church regarding the amount of fees which were to be paid for prosecuting said claim before Congress; and,

"Whereas, an investigating committee of the United States Senate, after a full review of all the facts, concluded its report with the statement that 'The Church has been injured by the misconduct of its agents, but for such misconduct it (the Church) is held entirely blameless.' And

"Whereas, the College of Bishops, acting for the Church, transmitted a letter to the Vice-President of the United States, as the presiding officer of the Senate, containing the following tender:

"While reaffirming the justness of our claim, payment of which has been sought for twenty-five years, we insist that the Church cannot afford to accept it as a gratuity or on conditions that reflect upon its honor. Inasmuch, therefore, as some Senators have affirmed on the floor of the Senate that they were induced to support the claim by misleading statements on the part of the representatives of the Church—statements, however, which do not affect the merits of our claim—we hereby give this assurance: that, if the Senate, by affirmative action, declares that the passage of the bill was due to such misleading statements, we will take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the Government.

"ROBERT K. HARGROVE.

"Secretary of the College of Bishops."

"And, whereas, this communication being referred to the Senate Committee on Claims, said committee reported that 'misstatements and concealments' of the representatives of the Church 'affected only the beneficiaries of the fund, and not the United States, and the Senate should take no further action in the matter.' And a resolution reciting these facts was on February 21, 1899, adopted by the Senate of the United States without a dissenting voice; and,

"Whereas, upon additional communication, a letter was written to Bishop Candler, signed by, and concurred in, by seventy-nine Senators, including a majority of the Senators who had voted on this question, concerning the offer to repay the money realized from said claim, to the following effect:

"The resolution adopted by the Senate was a distinct reply to that offer, declining to recognize the propriety of the repayment by the Church of this money to the Government. In view of this record, we are unable to see upon what ground there can be based the contention that the Church should make a second offer, and invoke a second refusal from the Government, or any department thereof. The report of the committee and the resolution, both adopted by the Senate, in explicit terms exonerate the Church from all blame or ground of criticism for anything which occurred in connection with the passage of the bill, and is a clear expression of opinion that there is no obligation on the part of the Church to repay the money to the Government, or to make further offer to do so: therefore,

"Resolved, 1. By the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, now assembled, That the Church distinctly repudiates all the acts of concealment, misstatement or unfairness on the part of any and all persons representing the Church in the prosecution of this claim before Congress, either intentional or otherwise, and whether the same did or did not affect the vote or opinion of any Senator or Representative.

"Resolved, 2. That we endorse the purpose of our Bishops in their communication to the United States Senate, and do hereby ratify and confirm their conditional tender of the money, and make their action the act of this General Conference and declarative of the mind of the Church, and that this action be entered on the Journal of the General Conference as a final disposition of the whole matter."

METHODIST PREACHERS.

Nearly all the members of the Methodist preachers' meeting of the city were present this morning. The reports of their labors yesterday and the pleasant social feature of the meeting made it very entertaining and interesting. The presiding elder, Rev. R. T. Wilson, spent Sunday hereabouts on yesterday and aided in the morning in the funeral services of the Rev. Mr. Warwick and preached at Blandford at night. Pastor Guyer is contemplating, with the aid of his parishioners, making considerable improvements at West Street. As usual, he was busy on yesterday. Rev. Mr. Hatcher, just back from Dallas, Texas, where the General Conference has been in session, was as bright and full of good cheer as ever. He entertained us with a delightful account of his trip. Texas is a big State, and its resources are indeed vast. The soil, climate, and future outlook there all point to a grand development. The General Conference was a grand gathering of representative Methodists. Rev. Mr. Moore reported revival services still in progress at Matoaca, and will continue this week. Rev. Mr. Lipscomb, our president, is expected back from Dallas this week.—Secretary, in Progress.

NORFOLK PREACHERS.

The Methodist ministers met yesterday at Epworth church as usual, the president, Rev. W. R. Proctor, in the chair. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. P. Jordan.

Rev. J. P. Barrett, of the Christian Memorial Temple, reported that Rev. Mr. Hughes, of Richmond, would assist him in a meeting this week.

Rev. J. N. Latham reported a large and increasing Sunday school and children's day exercises, with an excellent programme.

Rev. G. W. Jones had good services at Trinity and received two new members.

Revs. D. T. Merritt, E. T. Dadmun, G. H. McFaden, and Ernest Stevens reported the usual services. The latter's meeting has closed. One member was received yesterday.

Dr. Thompson, of Pittsburg, preached at Cumberland Street in the morning and Dr. Judkins at night. Rev. C. L. Bane preached at night at Memorial, Berkley.

Rev. J. W. Crider preached at Oaklette in the morning and Rev. S. Smith at Bethel and South Norfolk. Services at Central and at Cottage Place were conducted by Rev. W. T. Green. Rev. D. B. Austin preached as usual. Rev. R. H. Bennett preached at Epworth morning and night, and spoke at the children's day exercises at McKendree in the afternoon. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers attended the service in the morning, and at their request the sermon was preached to them.

Rev. J. B. Merritt had a good day.

Dr. Judkins preached at Queen Street in the morning.

Revs. W. R. Crowder and G. H. Lambeth reported an interesting day.

A resolution of congratulation was telegraphed to Dr. A. Coke Smith upon his elevation to the bishopric.

The committee on the Park Place movement to build a church reported, recommending that the offer of the Methodists of that community to build a church if the other Methodist churches of the city would finish paying for the four lots purchased, be accepted. The report was accepted, and the Norfolk pastors apportioned the amount needed to their churches. The amount needed is $600. It is expected that there will be a new Methodist church in Park Place by the meeting of Conference in November next.

Rev. W. C. Vaden, presiding elder of the Portsmouth District, reported interestingly from his work.

Let us lay hold of the happiness of to-day. Do we not go through life blindly, thinking that some fair tomorrow will bring us the gift we miss to-day? Know thou, my heart, if thou art not happy to-day, thou shalt never be happy.—Anna Robertson Brown.

Your "few things" may be very few and very small things, but He expects you to be faithful over them.—Frances Ridley Havergal.

Only those can sing in the dark who have light in the heart.

GO TO BEACH PARK, WEST POINT EXCURSION AND PICNIC GROUNDS.

Only thirty-nine miles, one hour's ride from Richmond, via Southern Railway.

A great many excursions have already been booked for "Beach Park" for June and July. The various attractions and improvements at this popular resort gives it more prominence each season. The close proximity to Richmond, and the unlimited supply of the most wholesome artesian water, together with many other natural advantages, places it second to none as a pleasure and health resort for Richmond people.

King William pier, a substantial structure, extending 689 feet in length and 25 feet wide over the York river, with waterproof roofing as a protection from sun and rain, adds considerably to the beauty and convenience for picnic and other outing parties.

In addition to the new Beach Park Hotel, now being erected, you will find other hotels and many nice boarding houses, furnishing cheap rates and good, first-class accommodations.

The principal attractions are such as fine fishing, boating, sailing, merry-go-round, shooting galleries, steam and naphtha launches, a large dancing pavilion, with a band of music, day and night, several wells of fine artesian water on the grounds, and various other attractions to suit the older people, as well as the little ones.

For any other information apply at or write to the Southern Railway office, No. 920 E. Main street, Richmond, Va.

Commencing May 25th, additional passenger train service will be operated over Norfolk and Western Railway as follows:

Leave Roanoke 7 A. M., Lynchburg 8:45 A. M., arrive Petersburg 1 P. M., arrive Richmond 1:50 P. M.; leave Richmond 1:15 P. M., Petersburg 2 P. M., Lynchburg 6:15 P. M., arrive Roanoke 8 P. M.

Leave Lynchburg 7:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., arrive East Radford 10:45 A. M., arrive Bristol 2:50 P. M.

Leave Bristol 2:05 P. M., arrive East Radford 6:05 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:55 P. M., arrive Lynchburg 9:50 P. M. Close connection at East Radford to and from Bluefield, Norton, Welch and intermediate points.

Leave Roanoke 8 P. M., arrive Hagerstown 4:15 A. M. Returning, leave Hagerstown 1:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., connecting to and from Harrisburg, Philadelphia, New York and interior Pennsylvania points. Pullman sleeping cars Philadelphia and Welch, W. Va.

Leave Roanoke 9:15 A. M., arrive Winston-Salem 2 P. M., arrive Charlotte, N. C., 6 P. M. Returning, leave Charlotte 11:10 A. M., leave Winston-Salem 2:55 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:40 P. M. Trains run solid between Roanoke and Charlotte.

See regular schedule advertisement for further information.

W. B. BEVILL,
General Passenger Agent.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 24

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., JUNE 5, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

RANDOLPH-MACON COLLEGE.

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAMME

June 15th—Baccalaureate sermon by
Rev. J. W. Duffey, D. D., Washington,
D. C.

June 17th—Meeting of the Board of Trustees.

June 18th, 12 M.—Address before the Alumni by Hon. S. S. P. Patteson, of
Richmond, Va.

8 P. M.—Contest for the "Sutherland
Lize Medal for Oratory."

June 19th—Commencement Day.

12 M.—Annual address before the
Students by Rev. James Atkins, D. D.,
Nashville, Tenn. Diplomas conferred.

8 P. M.—Joint celebration of the Literary Societies. President, Francis Osmond Smith, of Virginia; First Vice-President, Vernon Hope Kellam, of Virginia; Second Vice-President, Edward
James Woodhouse, of Virginia.

Orator of Washington Literary Society, Eldridge Watts Poindexter, of Virginia.

Orator of Franklin Literary Society,
Lewis Stafford Betty, of Virginia.

Address before the Societies by Rev.
Edward M. Deems, Ph. D., of New York.

F. INSTITUTE COMMENCEMENT.

PROGRAMME.

Sunday, June 8th, at 11 A. M.—Annual sermon, Rev. J. T. Whitley, Lynchburg, Va.

Monday, June 9th, at 11:30 A. M.—
Annual concert.

Monday, June 9th, at 8:30 P. M.—
Annual address, Rev. E. H. Rawlings,
Portsmouth, Va.

Tuesday, June 10th, at 10:30 A. M.—
Mass day exercises, delivery of distinctions and diplomas, closing exercises.

Editorial.

The editor had expected to give considerable space to matter pertaining to the General Conference in this issue, but commencement at the Blackstone Female Institute comes on apace, and that with collections and examinations and grades, there has not been time for editorial work. Fortunately our correspondence is full, and our readers will have a most excellent number.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

At Morristown and in the region undoubtedly we differ as to the action of the General Conference on the Publishing House question. Some would have been delighted at the adoption of the majority report; others would have been pleased at the adoption of the minority report; others again think that the compromise measure, as finally amended, was "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." One good thing was settled, all parties in the General Conference condemned the methods by which the claim was railroaded through the Senate; they only differed as to the manner of stating that condemnation.

I am sure that the final action means that the money is to be retained. But really, if the proposal of the Bishops to the Senate were carried out, the money would be refunded. The Senate has said it was deceived by our agents.
The adoption of their committee's report said that. Now, all that the Bishops have to do is to take steps to have the money returned. Their proposal is now law. But the money will not be returned, so I believe.

Some laymen and preachers in my section are soured; whether that is true in other sections, I know not. Some are talking quite sharply and boldly. On the contrary, the Rev. Wm. H. Bates, an aged superannuate of Holston Conference, says, in a letter to the Knoxville Sentinel: "The idea of giving the money back to the Government, to my mind, is whimsical, childish, as well as unjust." His remarks are being severely criticised in little groups at the corners of the streets.

The Coal Creek mine horror is attracting a good deal of attention in our section. The number of lives lost is now estimated at 226. Many were killed outright, but a number were entombed to die gradually by suffocation.
While breathing up the little air in their narrow chambers, some wrote letters to their wives and children. One little boy, who went in with his father, sent word to his mother that he had found the Lord. Nothing is so pathetic as these letters. All the writers made their peace with God, if they had not already done it, and doubtless went to that beautiful world where—

"No chilling winds nor poisonous breath

Can reach that healthful shore."

Five of these letters I send you, as follows:

For Henry Beach—Alice, do the best you can; I am going to rest. Good-bye little Ellen darling. Good-bye for us both. Elbert said the Lord had saved him. Do the best you can with the children. We are all praying for air to support us. But it is getting so bad without any air. Howard, Elbert said for you to wear his shoes and clothing.
It is now half past two o'clock (Monday). Powell Harmon's watch is in Audrey Wood's hand. Ellen, I want you to live right and come to heaven.

Raise the children the best you can.
O, how I wish to be with you. Good-bye, all of you, good-bye. Bury me and Elbert in the same grave. My little Eddie, good-bye, Ellen, good-bye Lillie, good-bye Jimmie, good-bye Horace. It is twenty-five minutes after 2 o'clock.
There is a few of us alive yet. O, God, for one more breath. Ellen, remember me as long as you live. Good-bye, darling. Written by J. L. Vowell.

Dear Darling Mother and Sister,—
I have gone to heaven. I want you all to meet me in heaven. Tell all your friends to meet me there, and tell the church I have gone to heaven. Tell my friends not to worry about me, as I am now in sight of heaven. Tell father to pay all I owe, and you stay there at home or at my home and bury me at Pleasant Hill if it suits you all. Bury me in black clothes. This is about 1:30 o'clock, Monday, so good-bye, dear father, mother and friends. Good-bye all. Your boy and brother.

JOHN HENDREN.

To My Wife,—We are shut up in the head of the entry with a little of the air, and the bad air is closing in on us fast, and it is now about 12 o'clock (Monday). Dear Ellen, I have to leave in a bad condition. Now, dear wife, put your trust in the Lord to help you raise my little children. Ellen, take care of my little darling Lillie.
Ellen, little Elbert said he trusted in the Lord. Chas. Wilkes said he was safe in heaven if he never seed the outside again. If we never have to get out we are not hurt, but only perished.
There is but a few of us here, and I don't know where the other men are.
Elbert said for you all to meet him in heaven. Tell all of the children to meet with us both. J. L. VOWELL.

My Dear Wife and Baby,—I want you to go back home and take the baby there, so good-bye. I am gone to heaven, so meet me there.

JAMES A. BROOKS.

To Everybody,—I have found the Lord. Do change your way of living.
God be with you. SCOTT CHAPMAN.

To George Hudson's Wife,—If I don't see you any more, bury me in the clothing I have. I want you to meet me in heaven. Good-bye. Do as you wish.

GEORGE HUDSON.

The explosion is now attributed to fire-damp, the explosive carburetted hydrogen of mines. There was under the mountain an old mine, long since abandoned; one of the new mines had opened a communication with this mine, and the bad air rushing in came in contact with the fresh air, ignited, and produced the catastrophe.

The people of this section are giving nobly for the help of the widows and orphans of the deceased. Also a number of damage suits are being instituted against the company, for the proper precautions were not taken.

On the morning of the day the disaster occurred the wife of one of the miners stated to her husband that during the night she dreamed that there was a terrible explosion in the mine in which he was working, and besought him with tears not to work that day, nor to allow her two sons to work. He yielded just to gratify her, and he and his sons escaped. Usually, when we take the advice of our wives, we do well. How is this dream to be explained? Was it a divine warning? Or was it simply a coincidence?

Last week Mr. Terry, of Ohio, lectured here on "How to Make a Farm Fertilize Itself," or words to that effect.
He is a plain, honest, thoughtful old farmer. He bought a rundown farm of less than 80 acres, which could at best bring some eight bushels of wheat and some fifteen bushels of corn to the acre. He bought no fertilizers, but by rotation of crops, peas or clover, wheat, potatoes, he made the farm pay for itself and fertilize itself, till it brings 50 bushels of wheat and 75 bushels of corn. He has also built a house, which, furnished, cost six thousand five hundred dollars, all from this farm. He began without a cent, and is now independent. He has been hired by different agricultural societies to tell his story. That story, told in every county in Tennessee, would, in ten years, be worth a million dollars to the people of the State. Prof. Moon, of the University of Tennessee, also lectured, and threw much light on the making and use of manures. Our farmers are groping in the dark, when they ought to be rejoicing in the light.

R. N. PRICE.

Morristown, Tenn., May 29, 1902.

IN THE PINEY WOODS.

I'm in the stump business now. I'm clearing land for my industrial school farm, and getting rid of the stumps is a job. These Mississippi pines have tap roots, and some of them seem to have started for China, and got a good distance on the way. I have to blast them out with dynamite—bang, bang, bang, boom!—then, that was a whopper.
Sounds like a battle, and it is: the battle of the stumps. When it is all over, and acres of watermelons, potatoes, strawberries and beans spread out be-

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1922, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

He appeared just three weeks after the fall term opened. There was quite a celebration at the college when he returned. Barnes, who had been wounded in the foot in the battle when Willis was hit by the knife, also re-entered college the same week. There was a bonfire on the campus and speeches all around, and the day wound up with a banquet by the society men in the rooms down town. Willis returned from this festive occasion quite sober, somewhat to Edward's surprise, but very much to his relief. It was very late, but he was sitting up and waiting for him. In the general excitement of the college celebration the two had hardly had time to exchange many words.

As Willis came in Edward was obliged to confess that he made a handsome appearance. His bearing was soldierly, the empty sleeve was eloquent of heroism, and the scar on his face was "positively lovely," to quote one of the young ladies in the hall.

"Well, old man, it seems awful good to get back here again, I tell you. I've had all the war I want, and I'm ready to surrender even to old Quad if he will put me on hospital diet. Tell me all about everything."

Edward pleaded the lateness of the hour; but Willis was wide awake and insisted on asking a host of questions. Finally, from sheer force of habit he went over to the closet where he had always kept his blacking materials.

Edward had packed out and was packing his things into it.

"Hello! Same old brush and everything! No! You've got me a new box of blacking! Well, that's thoughtful." He began blacking his shoes as if he had been in college right along. Edward asked him something about the loss of his arm.

"Of course I miss it," said Willis, pausing in his work. "I was born with two arms, and somehow I don't seem to get used to only one. I can do most things all right, except cut the rawhide they used to give us for steak at the club. I expect I'll have to eat hash instead. I suppose hash will be the regular thing at intervals, won't it? There's another thing that bothers me. I can't tie my neckties with one hand. I've tried to practice with one hand and a foot, but it doesn't work. It's a difficult feat. Say, it wouldn't be a bad scheme, would it, to get the girls to tie my ties for me? Do you think any more of the girls than you used to, you old misogynist? Have you been falling in love with anybody?"

The unexpected question embarrassed Edward in a way he had not anticipated. He did not venture to say a word, and, to his relief, Willis did not wait for an answer, but rattled on about something else.

"Mother sent her regards to you, of course, and she's awfully glad to have us together again. Mother thinks you're a paragon or a peri, and she isn't far out. Hope you'll keep me going straight." And then Willis started to whistle, and Edward did not ask him about his drinking—whether he had given it up. The fact that he had come home from the banquet apparently without having indulged in anything was hopeful, and Edward was relieved at the thought that Willis had reformed.

But in a few days he was undeceived. Willis was popular with the fast set in college and in great demand at whist and poker parties. The society dinners were frequent that fall. He had plenty of money, and Mrs. Preston very foolishly indulged him in that respect. It was no secret to Edward that Willis bet and gambled. They were two vices that Edward had a perfect horror of. In so far as his morality was Christian, he could not bear the thought of either vice, in which Willis indulged without scruple. At the football game that fall Willis lost $50 which he had put up on the game. He mentioned it with a laugh to Edward.

"I'll get even when we play the return game. One season I cleared $200 on the games." Edward listened to him coldly and did not even remonstrate. If he had been a Christian, he might have pleaded with him, but his self-righteousness simply made him scorn the whole affair. His esteem for Willis suffered. Nothing but the recollection of Willis' generosity to him kept him from threatening to leave him—that and his mother's appeal.

But matters grew more and more trying for Edward as the fall term went on. One night Willis came home very late and, in company with a crowd of boisterous students, all of them partially under the influence of liquor, broke into the physiological cabinet and took out the college skeleton. They hung this outside the window of one of the quietest, most inoffensive men in college and put under it a sign that read: "This Is My Funeral. Services All Day. No Flowers." After perpetrating this nonsense, which they called fun, they came back into the hall, broke in a few doors, waked up everybody, had a little fight with the janitor and wound up the night by opening the college hydrant and flooding the basement of the chemical laboratory.

The next morning Edward, who had been awakened and kept awake for several hours by the disturbance, said to Willis just before they went over to chapel, "If you get drunk and make a fool of yourself again, you can get some one else to room with you."

"Oh, pshaw! What's the use making a fuss over a little fun?" exclaimed Willis, with a short laugh. But he was evidently somewhat disturbed by Edward's manner.

"I mean what I say," replied Edward briefly.

For two weeks after that Willis straightened up and behaved beautifully. Several of the offenders of that night were apprehended by the authorities and suspended. Willis escaped, with his "usual good luck," he said, commenting on it afterward.

But one morning, about 2 o'clock, he came back from one of his nights out and came into the room singing boisterously. He was very noisy and took out his blacking materials, whistling a loud tune as he worked.

In the morning, before Willis came out of his bedroom, Edward was busy in his own room, and finally when Willis came out and called to him he did not answer. He crossed over the large room and stepped to the door of Edward's room.

"Hello, old man! What you doing?"

"I'm doing what I said I would. I'm going to leave you. I can't room with a drinker any more."

Edward had his trunk out and was packing his things into it. The sight completely sobered Willis.

"Do you mean it?" he asked quietly as Edward looked up at him.

"I certainly do!" exclaimed Edward.

"Then," said Willis, "you are willing that I should go to the devil alone? You're a nice friend, you are."

Edward looked up at him, still kneeling by his trunk.

CHAPTER X.

"It's not a matter of friendship," began Edward, with even more than his usual doggedness. "It's simply a matter of necessity. I've stood the racket as long as I can stand it. If you're bound to make a fool of yourself, I don't know that I am bound to room with you and suffer from it."

"No, you'll look after Edward Blake all right enough!" retorted Willis, either purposely or unconsciously probing down into the real selfishness Edward's moral rectitude.

Edward turned and went on with his packing, and Willis went back into the other room.

There was a silence of several minutes. Then Edward came out of his bedroom and gathered up his books and a few other things that belonged to him and went back into his bedroom with them. He packed them in and flung down the lid, locked it, strapped the trunk and came out into the room and took down his coat and put on his hat.

"Want any help about getting your trunk down stairs? You had to have some about getting it up," said Willis as he wheeled about from the window where he was standing and faced Edward, his hand in his pocket and a smile on his face that hurt Edward more than if he had struck him. The words and the tone reminded him irresistibly of that first meeting, when he had befriended him during that first blow of great trouble. And here he was leaving him when perhaps he ought to stay by him. And the promise to Willis' mother—was he true to that?

If Willis had uttered a plea then, it is possible Edward might have reconsidered his action. But Willis turned around to the window again and began to whistle a tune. It was, unfortunately, the same tune he had whistled the night before, and the sound irritated Edward again.

"Here's my key," he said shortly going over to Willis' table and flinging it down.

"All right," said Willis quietly. Then he suddenly turned around and faced Edward, and there was actually a tear in his eye.

"Won't you shake hands, Ned, before you go? I don't blame you a bit. By George, I wonder you've stood it as long as you have. But I don't want you to bear me ill will. I'll go to bed fast enough without your helping to push."

The unexpected attitude of Willis almost upset Edward. He put out his hand silently and shook Willis', and as he did so his eye traveled down the empty coat sleeve. And, again, Willis had waited just a second. Edward might even then have changed his mind. But he turned around to the window and resumed his whistling, and Edward slowly went over into his bedroom and dragged out his trunk, put it out in the hall, shut the door and went down stairs, leaving the trunk against the wall at the end of the upper passage.

He had not the slightest idea as to where he would go or what he would do for a room; but he felt the need first of a bit of solitude, and he went out into a piece of woods down in one corner of the campus and had a time alone by himself, during which he cooled off a little, although when he came back up on the hill he had not changed his mind concerning the step he had taken, and was, if anything, more deeply convinced that he had done the right thing for himself. The only thing that troubled him much was the thought of Willis' mother. Would she consider Edward false to his promise that he would do all in his power for her son? Had he exhausted all possible effort to save him, or had he deserted him just because of the annoyance and discomfort of a few unpleasant times with him?

He had been such a stickler for the truth and for keeping his word that this one thought made him uneasy. It was Saturday, and there were no classes, so he walked slowly over to the ladies' hall, thinking to see Freeda and tell her about the matter, with more or less vague feeling that arguing with her about it he could persuade himself that what he had done was justified by the facts.

Freeda came down into the parlour after a few moments, and Edward with his usual directness told her what he had done. She looked very serious and questioned him rather closely.

"Do you think Mr. Preston has been drinking more this term than he used to?"

"There's no doubt of it," Edward replied decidedly. "He's been out often. He is getting worse all the time."

"Are you sure you have taken the best way to help him?"

"Well, Freeda, what can I do? I can't stand the breaking into my sleep and the annoyance generally. I've given myself to consider some, haven't I?"

"I suppose so, yes," replied Freeda slowly. "Did he seem to care much about your going?"

Edward told her something of the scene that took place. Freeda listened attentively.

"He's not altogether bad, do you think?"

(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

✿ ✿ THREE COURSES. ✿ ✿

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications

YOUR PARSONAGE?

[Mr. Editor.—Listen to this pathetic cry from one of many of those noble women, the wives of ministers, who suffer in secret many things of which even their husbands know not. Note, too, what a good all-round presentation it is of that tender and troubled subject, the preacher's home. If the suggestions herein contained are heeded by those concerned, the problems of the parsonage are largely settled.]

X.]

One of the hardest things in the life of a Methodist preacher's family is the impossibility of having a settled home. We do not mean that their lives are full of hard things, nor, on the other hand, is the life an entirely easy and pleasant one. The love of home is inborn in human hearts, and to know that one cannot have a home is in itself a hardship. This is probably more of a trial to the minister's wife than to the minister himself. There are several things that may either intensify the hardship or ameliorate it to a great degree. In the first place, the parsonage itself may be improperly located and inconveniently arranged, and inadequate to the needs and tastes of the minister's family. The rooms may be small, and sadly lacking in number. In some there is nowhere to put one's clothes except on the body, and this, indeed, may be a blessing in disguise to prevent extravagance in the wardrobe of the family. In others, there are lacking various things ordinarily thought to be essential to a moderate degree of comfort, such as carpets, comfortable beds, and such like. We have said before that the parsonage may be very inadequate to the tastes as well as necessities of the occupants. To some, perhaps, this seems of very little importance, but when we consider how much of the time is spent within one's home, it is not surprising that the gratification of taste is to be given some consideration. Some parsonages are furnished with the odds and ends from the different members' houses. One of the members of the Parsonage Society has recently gotten a new hat-rack, so she donates to the parsonage her old one, which has been broken and mended, and bears many scars, and furthermore she expects Mrs. —, the pastor's wife, to be so grateful for it, although Mrs. — can just as fully appreciate a new hat-rack as any member of the Parsonage Society. Another sister donates a buffet which she has cast aside as altogether too shabby for her own use, and with a very benevolent feeling sends it to the parsonage. And thus in very many cases, the whole house is furnished. If one carpet is too small and doesn't cover more than half the floor, or if it is stained and threadbare; if Mrs. A.'s old curtains are a foot shorter than the parsonage windows, what difference does it make? What business have the preacher and his wife with taste? His business is to preach and visit; hers is to be pleased with everybody and everything. After this manner many parsonages are furnished. But there are others that, while being a shelter from the rain and cold, also meet to some degree the needs of the higher and æsthetic nature of the inmates. They reflect credit upon the Parsonage Societies that furnish them, and the churches that own them; but the condition in which some are kept is a disgrace to the preachers that live in them. Preachers of this class have no interest or pride in keeping up and improving the parsonage property. Very often just a little repairing, the replacing of a couple of nails or some such little thing, will save some piece of the parsonage property from destruction. But the preacher simply lets it alone, and soon the article is entirely gone.

Many of our parsonages have nice yards and gardens, which could be beautified and improved by the planting of rose bushes and fruit trees. The present occupant thinks, "O, well, I shall be here probably several years, at the most only four, and can reap very little benefit for any expenditure of labor or time or money I might make." This conclusion is false in reality, and in principle utterly at variance with the professions of a minister. Suppose that as soon as a minister goes to a new charge he takes an inventory of the parsonage yard or garden, as the case may be, and then loses no time in planting out trees and shrubs of different kinds. The first year he is there he will get no return for his trouble, but the second he will get some return, and if he stays three or four years he will be well repaid. But, on the other hand, suppose he takes this trouble, and is moved at the end of the first year, receiving no benefit from his labor, yet somebody is benefited by it; the succeeding preachers enjoy it. And ought any minister to live by the principle that he will do only what will benefit himself? If each preacher would improve the parsonage property, taking a pride in it as if it were his own, and improving and beautifying it where possible, each preacher, if not reaping the benefit of his own labor, would enjoy that of some one else. This same principle applies to the "mistress of the manse," who, in many cases, allows the children to abuse and disfigure the furniture and carpets, which would be peremptorily forbidden if the furniture were her own. Such a minister and his wife bring to our mind the famous sentence of the French King, "Après moi, le deluge." They seem to think that if the things in and about the parsonage will only hold together until they leave, that the next preacher can look out for himself.

We know of several cases where the outgoing preacher and his wife, after a sojourn in the parsonage, have left it in such a miserably unclean condition that the ladies of the Parsonage Society had to come en masse and work for days in cleaning it up before the new preacher could move in. We think that a society among the preachers for the preservation and improvement of parsonage property is greatly to be desired, and we think, also, that there ought to be a society for the promotion of cleanliness, to which, it is desirable, every preacher's wife should belong.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT CENTENARY CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA.

Dear Brother,—I have written this sketch of our Children's Day service, hoping to inspire every Sunday school worker in the land to more zeal and greater effort to encourage the children in Sunday school and Church work. Let us do all we can to make their childhood happy, for they are the hope of the Church, and the salvation of the world.

Show me a church without a Sunday school, I will show you a dead church. "Oh Church of God, unfurl your banner,

Help the children, help them now;
Cultivate their lives for Jesus;
Victory rests on every brow."

COMMITTEES.

Music and Recitations.—Mrs. P. J. Malbon, Mrs. J. W. Granby, Mrs. E. T. Dadmun.

Decorations.—Mrs. S. B. Harrell.
Ushers—Messrs. W. J. Woodward,
J. H. Harwell. J. P. G.

After several days of dark, gloomy weather, the members of Centenary Sabbath school were rejoiced to see a bright and beautiful day on the 3d Sunday, which day is set apart by our Conference for "Children's Day." On Saturday the clouds were lowering, and seemed ready at a moment's notice to flood the earth with water—everything indicated rain on the following Sabbath — But the morning broke, light stole upon the clouds with a strange beauty. Earth received again its garments of a thousand dyes, and leaves, and delicate blossoms, and painted flowers, and everything that bendeth to the dew and stirreth with the daylight lifted up its beauty to the sweet morn that ushered in the happy Children's Day at dear old Centenary.

The dear little children seemed to catch the inspiration, and were filled with new life, as they rendered the beautiful service, "Sunshine and Song," a service splendidly adapted for the occasion. It is one continuous strain of entrancing music from beginning to end, embracing solos for infant department as well as adults, but for the most part the service was comprised of lovely chorus singing, which was participated in by the entire school.

The musical programme was conducted by Mr. J. P. Grandy (chorister), assisted by Prof. H. F. Maxim's fine orchestra. Our accomplished organist, Mrs. Lola Russell, presided at the organ.

The chorus singing was the best in the history of children's services in Centenary. Will mention a few items that deserve special notice:

"Be a Little Sunbeam" (solo), by Alice Dadmun, was beautifully rendered in pure, child-like manner.

"More of Thy Sunshine" (solo), by Ruth Granby, sung very sweetly in happy style.

"We are Little Sailors," chorus sung by six small boys dressed in white sailor suits. This was pronounced by many to be the best item in the list.

"Twas well done, and the boys who did it are to be congratulated.

"Beautiful Roses," sung in ecstatic style by twelve girls, six with red roses, six with white, was simply beautiful.

Many other songs deserve special mention, but I must say something about the recitations, decorations, etc.

The rendition of "The Dream Pilot's Wife," by Miss Calena Newell, was greeted with profound admiration and conceded by every one just to be the best declamation ever heard in children's service. Miss Newell's fine in declaiming, and is a treasure to her school.

The Children's Day acrostic exercise was real pretty and instructive. Twelve little girls, each holding a letter, formed the words Children's Day, and then placing the letter in position would recite a Scriptural text concluding with the twenty-third Psalm recited by all in concert.

Little Henry Dadmun then recited "My Piece,"

"I cannot say a long piece,
Because I am so small.
I only want to tell you
That Jesus loves us all."

This is short indeed, but oh how sweet and true.

The floral decorations for this service were beautiful, comprising a great variety of flowers of every hue and color, and evergreens, ferns and potted plants in rich profusion bedecked the platform. The chancel rail, in crescent shape, was beautifully graced with palms. This gorgeous floral display added much to the service, and Sister S. B. Harrell and her assistants have the gratitude of the entire school for these attractions, designed and ranged with so much taste.

One of the most attractive features of the day was the "Amen Corners" at the church, where all the little Rebels of the school were seated on elevated seats. A more beautiful scene is rare. Think of innocence, purity and beauty in one group; it is certainly foreign to things of the twentieth century, and those who witnessed the scene will never forget it.

Our pastor, Rev. E. T. Dadmun, made a short address, which was very appropriate, and I trust may never be forgotten by those who listened to him.

I might go on at great length about this beautiful service, but must stop. A few words in conclusion: The committees have labored faithfully to make this service a success, and now that it is over, they feel amply rewarded for all their work—conscious that it was not love's labor lost. It was a great success in every way, and the writer believes that good has been accomplished, and the Master has been honored. The service was very elaborate, and required one hour and forty-five minutes to render it. Yet no one in the large audience seemed wearied, but seemed anxious to hear more, and when the last chorus, "Farewell, Children's Day," was announced every one seemed to regret that it was over.

Many of the children's parents were present, and it was easily discerned that the fathers were sighing, "When I were a boy again," and the mothers singing,

"Backward, turn backward,
Oh time in your way,
And make me a child again
Just for to-day."

The children were living in the present, and were enraptured with the light, happy surroundings as they celebrated "their day." And with light, beaming faces and light, cheerful voices they sang the beautiful songs with all their might, "making melody in their hearts," and making light and happy all hearts within the sound of their voices.

DEACONESSSES.

The General Conference, now in session, will be asked to institute the order of deaconesses in our Church. Now, the problem is as simple as it seems if it involves either the American woman in the Church. This one of the deaconesses is likely to show a resemblance to those innocent-looking equations, easily stated in half a line, and with difficulty lived in half a day.

Some time ago the editor of this paper said in effect that the management of deaconesses in our Church might easily be turned over to the women. It is the tendency of the man of to-day to turn certain things over to the women, and then—to look for the results to fulfill his expectations. They never do; nothing in this world is single." In the matter of deaconesses for us, the women should legislate jointly with the men, or the men should work with the women in carrying out the provisions of the General Conference.

The first condition is impossible; the second could be provided for. The third prevails that it is time to institute the order of deaconesses in our Church. We have work for educated, consecrated women, and have women who, if they do not find an opening in their own Church, will leave it to seek elsewhere the training that they wish. If the present General Conference institutes the order, it is to be hoped that the plan adopted will not admit of the errors evident in the practice of other Churches, and will yet make the "deaconess" to mean something worth while.

The hypothetical preaching by the deaconess need not be an objection to the institution of the order; what she will or shall not do is to be settled by the brethren; it may be as they wish. There is enough to be done without preaching. The deaconess need not be cramped if that privilege is denied her; the opportunities for teaching the religion of Jesus are by no means limited to the pulpit. The distinctive dress is another greatly magnified objection. An appropriate costume would mean a saving of energy to the woman who wore it. The clothing of men is designed for them, and they cannot appreciate the semi-annual expenditure of time and energy needed to keep the simplest feminine wardrobe in respectable condition. A uniform would relieve the wearer of this burden.

It will be a risky experiment to adopt any system now in use. One of the great orders of deaconesses is that adopted by Pastor Fliedner, with headquarters at Kaiserswerth. There are many thousands of women in the active service of that order, and it has homes for them in most of the large cities of continental Europe and Southern Asia. The work began some seventy years ago, in the poor little parish of Kaiserswerth, Germany, a town which to-day has a settled population of less than three thousand. Women who wished to learn how to be most helpful gathered about Pastor Fliedner, and there grew up the training school, a kindergarten, a hospital, the factory for the clothing of the deaconesses, the home for aged deaconesses, and other associated enterprises which so great a work makes necessary. The Kaiserswerth deaconess pledges her services for terms of five years; at the end of the period she may leave the service, or may enlist for another term. During her service she is provided with clothing made to her measure at the factory, and sent to her twice a year. All her expenses are paid. If she is ill or needs rest, she finds shelter in the nearest home of the order; when she becomes superannuated, she returns to Kaiserswerth to finish her days in the home for aged deaconesses. So far as can be, she is relieved of earthly cares. In our own country there is no order of deaconesses so thorough in its system. In our sister Methodist Church the order is about sixteen years old. A girl may receive training in the school upon her promise to render to the Church two years of service for one of such training. Some cities have homes for the deaconesses, managed by boards of local Churchwomen. In at least one case it has been possible, under existing laws, to receive a trained nurse deaconess at a salary of eight dollars per month, and hire her out in the town for twenty-five dollars a week, the money going into the treasury of the management to help pay for the house, the missionary being expected to do mission work every day she was not employed with pay cases. At the end of six months the deaconess broke her promise to give two years of work for one of training, and went to work for herself. It is to be hoped that we can avoid both of these evils.

Not only the matter of training deaconesses, but that of retaining them in the service for a reasonable length of time is a puzzle for the brethren of the General Conference to solve. Our American deaconesses are like other women, our young men know a good thing when they see it, so many of our deaconesses soon marry. Two methods of procedure are open; to adopt in the beginning a system as rigid as that of Germany, or else to provide the means of training, require the candidates to pay their own expenses, and when they graduate pay each a salary equal to that commanded by other young women of like grade of education. The German system is the result of long growth; it works well at home, but we do not live in Germany, and there is little reason to suppose it would be possible with us. We might require candidates to promise to serve for a term of years, they might make the promise in good faith, receive their training, and fail to keep the contract, is doubtful if American Protestant girls would at first take kindly to the sisterhood idea as implied in the promise to serve for a term of years. It is not an unreasonable condition to make; if the Church provides means for special training she has a right to expect to use the fruits of her work. The doubtful element is the young woman; can she be depended upon to serve for the period of enlistment among the distractions of our everyday life? On the other hand, if a girl is sure of a call to the deaconess work, and is as deeply consecrated as need be, she will find a way to pay her own expenses through a reasonable course of training, or she isn't smart enough to make much of a deaconess. When she has helped herself so far, give her a fitting salary, let her pay her landlady and washwoman and go for her vacations to any proper place she likes. The hard experiences will bring out and strengthen the traits of character she needs in her work; having loved the work well enough to pay the high price of admission to it, she is likely to stay in it.

To be a deaconess should mean much. She should give evidence of thorough conversion, have abundant common sense, intellect above grade, and an insatiable appetite to learn more. If the very spirit of the Master is needed by any servant of the Church, it is necessary to the deaconess. The worries likely to test one by the sore discipline of little ills are sure to come to her in full measure. She will have to deal with the beneficiaries of the Church; that one matter demands a degree of common sense not always manifested by the people who have it in charge. She must know something, and be well-trained in the craft of learning more, or she cannot teach, and that is something she will always be asked to do.

These questions seem pertinent; shall we regard the deaconess as a woman having a calling, or a profession? Does a call to serve the Church lay upon a woman a life-long obligation, or may she heed it for a term of years and then leave the service? If we say the deaconess is a woman called of God to do His work in this prescribed way, do we not adopt something of the monastic idea? Is a woman ever called to set her life in any way apart from its original purpose as implied by her place in nature? On the other hand, can the needs of the Church be met by women who pay as they go and are hired servants? What shall our deaconesses wear to distinguish them from other women, including deaconesses of other Churches? Where and how shall they be trained? It is easier to ask questions than to answer them.

Now, the shy rabbit of England became in Australia a most pestiferous rodent, and the useful mongoose of India, transplanted to a rich isle of the sea to rid it of snakes and rats, destroyed all that it was set to do, and promises soon to make way with all the beautiful native birds. It is a dangerous experiment to take a plan which is the result of growth in one society and graft it into another; it is rarely successful. The wise way to act in the deaconess matter will be to begin with the very simplest plan, allowing room for natural growth, which always follows the line of least resistance. To ask all these questions is not to oppose the institution of deaconesses, only to point out the need of moving slowly.

M. C. FAYLLE

Norfolk, Va., May 9, 1902.

PETERSBURG LETTER.

Mr. Editor.—Taking a walk recently in certain sections of our city, and being in a musing mood, I let the mind go back to the past as the eye rested upon objects that reminded me of the days that are forever fled. The removing of old buildings, now taking place here, naturally served to encourage this mental tendency that evening. I felt none the worse afterwards for this backward glance. It stirred better feelings and emphasized anew the vanity of worldly things.

The taking down the old hotel lately called the Albemarle, but known in former years as Jarratt's Hotel, impressed me with feelings of sadness. It was an old landmark, and in Petersburg's earlier history was a noted hostelry. One of its proprietors, who made a big financial failure, lived for years near the old home where I was born and reared. It is well that the old building, unsightly and decaying, should go, but its passing away touches a chord in the heart. Not far away from this spot where workmen are busily engaged in tearing down the old hotel on Union street stands the colored Methodist Episcopal church, where the first General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was held in 1846, then owned by us. That evening I found my way through the gate in front and entered the building, the door of which was unlocked. I viewed it and ruminated over the past. I tried to picture to myself the scenes of that historical gathering, at which those giants of early Methodism, Joshua Soule, William Capers, John Early, Lovick Pierce, H. B. Bascom, H. H. Kavanaugh, J. B. McFerrin, George F. Pierce, and others, were present. The membership of this church is small and poor, but the pastor, Rev. Ivey, is working energetically to lift a debt on the building. It is well located, and the site in the future is destined to become valuable property.

In the rear of Wesley church, now being taken down, preparatory to being rebuilt, is an ancient house, located on Hickory street, in which Bishop Asbury held a session of Conference, the date of which I don't know. It was with a great deal of interest that I visited the house and was shown nearly all the rooms. It is a very old building, and shows on the outside especially marks of decay. It is at present occupied and is owned by a gentleman living in Dinwiddie county. From the appearance of the building it is probable that it looks as it did when Asbury held Conference within its walls. Dr. Bennett says that three of the thirteen Conferences held in 1791 met in Virginia, the first held—April 20th—being in Petersburg, and perhaps was the session convened in this ancient house. The kind lady who courteously showed me the rooms of the old house, to my questions seeking information concerning the Conference, could give no light. The walls and roof were silent, and I could only let imagination very meagerly supply what was lacking.

Getting away from these old relics in the busy thoughts of the present, I threw off the spell of a past that is daily getting farther away from us,

(Continued on page 12.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 15.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xvi, 6-15.
Memory Verses, 9, 10—Golden Text,
Acts xiii, 15—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

6. Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia.

This is written of Paul and Silas on the second missionary tour. We left Paul and Silas and Barnabas and others in the last lesson at Antioch in Syria preaching the word of the Lord. Then Paul suggested to Barnabas that they revisit the cities where they had preached and see how the brethren were doing. Barnabas wished to take Mark with them, but Paul refused because he had left them on the previous journey. There was a sharp contention, and they separated, Barnabas taking Mark and sailing to Cyprus, where they began the first tour and to which island Barnabas belonged (Acts xiii, 4; iv, 36), while Paul took Silas and started through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches (chapter xv, 36-41). It is interesting to note that the time came when Paul thought better of Mark and was glad to have him with him (Col. iv, 10; II Tim. iv, 11).

7. After they were come to Mysia they assayed to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered them not.

In teaching this lesson and the other missionary lessons a map is essential to the understanding of the lesson. One of the most striking things in this book is the partnership of the Holy Spirit and the apostles just as Jesus had said that it would be (John xiv, 16, 17; xv, 26, 27; xvi, 13, 14; Acts i, 8), and as it was manifested to be in such passages as Acts v, 32; viii, 29; xiii, 2; xv, 28. It has been well said that our fidelity to our Master is as thoroughly exemplified in our refraining from doing what the Spirit forbids as in our doing what He commands.

8, 9. Come over into Macedonia and help us.

Being hindered in going either north or south, as they waited at Troas this is what they heard and saw in a vision. We may be sure of this—that if we are wholly under the Spirit's control, seeking only the glory of God, He will guide us in some unmistakable way (Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21). Opposition is not necessarily an evidence that we are to move on or cease the work, but often it is an encouragement to continue. See chapter xiv, 2, 3; xviii, 6, 9, 10; I Cor. xvi, 9.

10. And after he had seen the vision immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

The pronoun "we" which now begins to be used may indicate that Luke, the writer of the book, had now joined the party. Previous to this it is "he," speaking of Paul, and "they," speaking of the party. See Col. iv, 14; Phi. 24; II Tim. iv, 11, for further references to Luke.

11. Therefore loosing from Troas we came with a straight course to Samothracia and the next day to Neapolis.

By consulting the map we find that Samothracia was an island in the Aegean sea, almost in a line direct from Troas to Neapolis and about half way across. Neapolis being the port of Philippi and about ten miles distant from it. Although we are not told of anything accomplished on the voyage over, we may be sure that He who teaches us to "buy up the opportunities" (Eph. v, 16, R. V. margin) was not slow to do the same.

12. And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia and a colony, and we were in that city abiding certain days.

Strangers in a strange land, no one to meet and welcome them, no kindly greeting, not expected by any one! What a good time for Satan to get in some work on his line! And probably he tried it, perhaps after this fashion: Well, Paul, you are quite a distance from home, and nobody knows you or wants you here. Your man in the vision who called you this way is not up to time. Perhaps you have made a mistake. Hadn't you better get back where people know you?

13. And on the Sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made, and we sat down and spake unto the women which resorted thither.

What is this but a women's prayer meeting at which the gospel is first preached in Europe? Thank God for the women who love to meet for prayer and who labor in the gospel either by proclaiming it or helping those who do (Phil. iv, 3; Ps. lxxviii, 11, R. V.).

14. And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us, whose heart the Lord opened that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

We can readily imagine the topic of Paul's theme, for he had but one—one person had taken him captive (Acts ix, 20; xvii, 2, 3; xxviii, 23, 31; I Cor. ii, 2). Paul was not suffered at this time to go into the province called Asia, but here was a woman of Asia who up to her light worshiped God and doubtless eagerly prayed for more light, and now she has received it by a special messenger all the way from Syria and but recently from the holy city Jerusalem, one who had himself seen the Lord (I Cor. xv, 8).

15. And when she was baptized and her household she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and abide there. And she constrained us.

Now the apostles and their company are not so lonely. They have seen the good hand of our God upon them and have seen souls receiving and confessing Christ. Happy indeed are those who not only receive Jesus into their hearts, but cheerfully hand over to Him spirit, soul and body.

THE WHISKY LEVEL

A POWERFUL ARGUMENT IN BEHALF OF TEMPERANCE.

Alcohol Does For the Nerves What the Lash Does For a Tired Horse and Is a Cheat to the Body and to the Brain.

A recent editorial in the New York Journal says:

This is to be no sermon on teetotalism. The desire is to discuss with young men and others not a sentimental principle, but the interest of each individual.

Strong drink is the curse of millions in our modern civilization. There is throughout society what may be called a "whisky level." This level exists in every great city and in every small village. There are men classed as whisky drinkers, hard drinkers, and, whatever they may profess to believe, they are, and they know they are, the pariahs of the community.

Perfectly true. The powerful races do drink. But the powerful individuals do not drink.

The conquering armies are armies of discipline men usually, but their leaders are sober, temperate men. If you want to be one of the ordinary crowd, no worse and no better than others, drink spirits "moderately," as whisky's friends put it. But remember that there is no such thing as drinking whisky "moderately."

Immoderate drinking makes you a brute. So called moderate whisky drinking takes the edge off your ability. It discounts your mental activity. You can't be one of the really successful men if you start out to be a moderate drinker.

What does a young man lose by not drinking spirits?

In the first place it is necessary to cultivate the taste in the beginning. Why cultivate it at all?

In the second place, admitting all the usual sophistry about moderate drinking, whisky means the loss of time, loss of money, loss of clear mental thought.

There is boasting, lying, vacillation, procrastination, self delusion, in every glass of spirits.

How many millions of men—on their dying bed—have wished fervently and mournfully that they had never tasted spirits?

Did any dying man ever regret a temperate life?

Young men should know and daily remember that whisky and all other spirits cheat their bodies and brains.

Whisky does for the nerves what a lash does for a tired horse.

Your system needs rest. Your brain to compete with others ought to sleep and recuperate. Whisky lies to you. It makes you think that it can give the rest and the renewed strength. It creates an appetite in the nerves, and when you satisfy that appetite it makes you think you have found renewed strength, whereas you have only taken a new dose of poison.

Your brain and heart are lashed by whisky into temporary activity, and you wonder that you are passed in life's race by the man of less ability. You need not wonder. He has given his brain, body and heart normal rest, while you have given yours a beating.

Henry Ward Beecher, whose sermons on temperance every young man should read, said this:

"If you say, 'Yes, I have a natural craving for it,' then to you I say: 'That is the very reason why you should not take it. If you have no craving for it, why should you peril yourself by it? And if you have such a craving surely, if you are wise, you will not put yourself in danger by indulging in it.'"

Look at the thing from the viewpoint of your own interest.

If you had to employ young men to work for you, you would avoid drinking men.

Then don't drink whisky yourself. Don't give every successful, conservative man the best of reasons for mistrusting you.

An Irish Bishop's Protest.

The bishop of Galway protests vigorously against the scattering broadcast of drink licenses in certain districts of Ireland. He says: "This very day I administered the total abstinence pledge to some hundreds of young boys and girls on the occasion of their receiving the sacrament of confirmation, but I feel that the magistrates are working against me by multiplying the centers of temptation to pledge breaking. It is no exaggeration to say that every drinkshop is a hotbed of such temptation. But probably these magistrates have not fully taken in the moral aspect of the question. Some of these gentlemen pose as blazing patriots, but a genuine patriot is never found to have a hand in demoralizing his fellow countrymen."

Tobacco and the Drink Habit.

One of the chief counts against tobacco is its being the main source of the drink habit, says George May Powell. Statistics show that drink is the root of nine-tenths of crime; also that tobacco begins nine-tenths of the use of intoxicating liquor. Medical investigation in France, Germany and America proves that tobacco using boys make stunted, childless men. A large share of nervous diseases of women are inheritances from tobacco using fires.

Will Weed Out Drunkards.

Drunkards in Germany will for the future be sternly looked after by the state. Each town must keep a record of all the hard drinkers, and the city medical men are bound to report those who habitually imbibe to excess, so that the authorities may weed out the black sheep and subject them to a strict course of treatment.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

To live and to help others to live is our mission.—Rev. E. C. Moore, Providence, R. I.

The Ladder of the Soul.

The Sabbath is the Jacob's ladder up which man's soul climbs to God.—Rev. Edward W. Burke, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Measured by Faith.

Man's spiritual life is measured by his faith. Faith is necessary in religion.—Rev. Dr. Scott, Methodist, New Orleans.

Universal Creation.

God is carrying on universal creation by building man up in grace and in knowledge.—Rev. Dr. Alonzo Monk, Methodist, Atlanta, Ga.

Sin Is a Poison.

Sin is the sugar coated pill of death. It contains a poison that is sweet to the taste, but bitter in the end.—Rev. Dr. B. H. Charles, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

Futility of Worry.

It isn't work that breaks down a man; it is worry, and so I advise you all to take things as easy as you can and be true philosophers.—Rev. Dr. George L. Perin, Boston.

Follow God's Example.

Did you ever stop to think how God finishes things? He leaves nothing undone, nothing unfinished. Should not we follow God's example?—Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt, Baptist, Philadelphia.

The Full Consecration.

The soul that grudges, hesitates, complains and finds no delight in the suffering or in the performance of God's will has not entered into a full consecration.—Rev. Josephus Stephan, Methodist, St. Louis.

Only Place of Rest.

The heart of man can find no rest until it comes to Christ. The Saviour brought life and immortality to light, and immortal life can only be satisfied in him.—Rev. E. K. Bell, Lutheran, Baltimore.

Makes Bad Men Good.

Christ makes bad men good men, weak men strong men, cowardly men brave men because his life was the illustration and confirmation of his doctrine.—Rev. Dr. Landrum, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

Power of Christian Truth.

How wonderful the fecundity and harmony of Christian truth were found to be we have evidence in the triumph of the doctrines of the cross over the wisdom of the world.—Rev. M. P. Smith, Catholic, San Francisco.

Food to the Soul.

Faith brings food to the soul, and its content is assimilated to the inner life. The man at the aquarium will tell you that the beautiful markings of the trout depend upon the kind of food it receives.—Rev. A. E. Dent, New York.

Enduring Victories.

Only those who strive lawfully, said Paul, are crowned. Only those who fight with God, in harmony with the vast tendencies of nature toward good, help toward the victories that are enduring.—Rev. Dr. David Utter, Unitarian, Denver.

The Law of Love.

What we need to learn is the truth that the law of love governs the factory as well as the hospital; that the statesman and the economist must reckon with it, no less than the preacher and the philanthropist.—Rev. Washington Gladden, Methodist, Columbus, O.

The Gifts of Christianity.

Atheism cannot organize nor can it perpetuate republicanism. The principles of equality and the virtues that enliven are the gifts of Christianity. Write God across your legislation, obey his Bible, honor his Sabbaths, and the Prophet of Life abides.—Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, Presbyterian, Washington.

A Bar to Religious Progress.

Religious progress always has been impeded by a superstitious veneration for the old that finds no place for the new. Many men cling to the false and resist the truth on no higher grounds than that their fathers worshiped on the same mountain where they offer their devotions.—Rev. Johnson Henderson, Chicago.

The True Gentleman.

It is urged sometimes that the gentleman of today is rather the creation of culture, of ethics, than of Christianity, in that "it is easier to conform to a conventional standard of good taste than to the inward law," but your true gentleman will say, must—of necessity conform rather to the inward law than to the outward standard.—Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, Episcopalian, Philadelphia.

The Greatest of Arts.

The art of submission is the greatest art a person ever acquires, and it is a thousand to one that if it is not learned when one is young it is never learned. That is why adults so rarely become Christians. They have passed the stage where there is any flexibility in their own wills. Christianity commences in obedience, and an un subdued adult has ceased to know how to obey.—Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Death's Bright Lesson.

All nature teaches us that latent possibilities are realized by seeming death. If the acorn does not die, the oak tree cannot come into being. Only as the reed perishes can the golden harvest enrich the husbandman. Only when the bulb crumbles to dust can the flower lift its beautiful face to the smiling sun. Through the chambers of seeming death lies the path to the larger, richer and fuller life. Death is not destruction. It is the realization of the possibilities with which God in love has enriched our lives. The white faces of the flowers tell us that the higher life for which we long is the life of perfect purity realized through the reflection of Christ.—Rev. Dr. Polemus H. Swift, Methodist, Chicago.

The Christian life demands our all, yet it gives more than all in return.

I Know One Sure Remedy

for an obstinate cold. Its name is Pyny-Salmon.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of

PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE

Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package.
Sold everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK NEW WESTERN
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and
NORTH CAROLINA.

Shenandoah Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE
SLEEPERS.

LURAY
GROTTOS
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS

NORFOLK
ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLUMBUS
AND THE NEW

Write for Rates, Maps, etc. Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptions, etc. to any Agent or
W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, FRANK, FRANK
GENERAL PASS AGENT, DIVISION OF PASSENGER SERVICE,
RICHMOND, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital. $57,000; Surplus $15,500.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

GEO. B. SEAY, AND
F. H. HARDAWAY,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

D. R. W. ADKINS
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All Prescriptions compounded by expert chemist.

The Union Central

LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
Blackstone, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM.

NEURALGIA.

HEADACHE.

STIFF NECK.

STIFF MUSCLES.

STIFF JOINTS.

STIFF KNEES.

SCIATICA, LUMBAGO.

PAIN IN THE BACK.

PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS.

PAIN IN THE SIDE.

CUTS AND BURNS.

For

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.

Richmond, Virginia

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY
METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.
Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.

Boydton, May 28th, at night.

Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.

Ligh-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blandford, May 25th, night.

Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

SUMMER COMPLAINT is not always brought about by change of air and water. The "stay-at-homes" are just as susceptible to diarrhoea; due, generally, to over eating, as unripe fruits, etc.; and, drinking ice water; all accompanied by painful bowel discharges; and, if not checked, results seriously. Perry Davis' Painkiller is the only purely reliable remedy, 25c, and 50c.

IN THE PINEY WOODS.

(Continued from 1st page.)

fore me, I'll point to the smiling landscape and say: "Peace hath her victories" far more enjoyable than war.

The prospect is that I am going to have more boys than I will be able to take care of, even to start with. They will all have to work. That is the condition of getting in. We won't compel them to work, for we are not a reformatory to curb bad boys or coerce lazy ones; but a colony of industrious, self-reliant folks, working out our own salvation. If a boy refuses to work, we will put a fool's cap on his head, put him astride a donkey, face backward, make him hold the tail for a bridle, and escort him with horns and gongs, with a regular "callithump," to the station, put him on the train, and "fire" him out of the community. The school exists to train boys to work. He won't need a dollar, but he must work.

When a boy comes to us he will have the rules explained to him, and he will sign an obligation to obey them. He will then be turned over to the physical director, who will make a thorough examination of his bodily makeup. He will be weighed and measured, and his strength tested, and a record will be kept of his condition. Then he will be sent to the bath, and scrubbed from head to heel with soap. After that he will be enrolled, and will report to the superintendent, who will assign him his quarters and arrange his hours and his work. He will then enter upon a thoroughly systematic order of life. Our method will not aim to make military machines, but manly men, and our rules will be directed to the development of character. Moral purity, correct habits, personal cleanliness, polite manners, systematic work, punctuality, economy, and a healthy ambition to excel, will be fundamental ends kept in view. Book learning and manual training, what we technically call education, is important, but not near so important as character formed upon the lines of morality. We will not house our boys in barracks, but put them in separate cottages, two in a room, with single beds. We expect to do most of our own building. Lumber is abundant, of the finest quality, and there is plenty of material for making brick. It won't take a hundred industrious boys, working under skilled instructors, long to erect all the buildings we need.

One trouble I find in my college for girls in Kentucky, is the custom of "cutting" prices. I have paid my teachers a fair compensation for service, but to do this I had to maintain a certain standard of prices. But some schools, that do not pay as much to their teachers as I do, that take a girl for "twelve dollars a month board, and make seven clear," as one "college" president assured me he did—but such schools, I say, could afford to take a girl for less than I could. But they can't cut under me at Lumberton, for it won't require a dollar to attend this school. All expenses will be paid by the labor of the pupil. Nor do we give anything. That is not the best way to help a poor boy, even to get an education. With us he works his way, pays as he goes, and comes out square and qualified for business. Nor are we going to get only poor boys. A prominent railroad official told me he was well pleased with our plan he expected to put his boy with us. "I'll let him there," he said, "get an education, learn a trade, and pay his way with his work and I will put to his credit each year what he would spend at some other school: so when he gets through will have an education, know how to work, and have some capital to start on." That is what a man said who is able to send his son anywhere. And is going to send him to us because our boys are on the same footing with the State Agricultural and Mechanical College there are poor boys who pay their expenses by work; but there are also those who do not. This creates distinction. With us work is honorable, and rich and poor alike will be leveled down to it.

I like the idea of stressing self-reliance. It makes a boy manly, self-reliant, capable of grappling successfully with the problems of life. Individual initiative is one of the chief characteristics of the American. He loves to paddle his own canoe, to "tote his skillet," to make his own way in the world. That is the kind of manhood we need now. The raw material for it is lying all around us in the untutored youth of the land, the barefooted boys with unwashed faces and unkempt hair following the plow in the furrow, with the "yoller" hound runs the nanny-ton-tail in the thicket. My task is to work up this crude material and mold it into polished men out of it. I know it is a big undertaking, but I do not know of anything worthier of a man's best efforts.

What a magnificent country South is! And what a wonderful progress is going on around us, from Potomac to the Rio Grande. And it is only the beginning. We have scratched the surface of our resources—only given a sample of what we are capable of producing for the welfare of mankind. If we cultivate the delta of the Y in Mississippi as Belgium is cultivated we could feed the population of the globe on its produce. We can clothe the world with our cotton, warm it with our coal, lubricate it with our oil, house it with our lumber, and light it with our electricity. With a thousand unharnessed streams leaping from the mountains to turn mills, and countless rivers to float traffic to the sea, and a hundred harbors looking out on the sunny highways of the world to accommodate the argosies of our commerce; with a genial climate that brightens all year, and a fruitful soil yielding to perfection every herb and tree that is fit for the use of man; with a mighty heritage behind us, and a heroic ancestry traces its descent from the loins of those fierce Vikings who emerged from the forests of Teutonic Europe five hundred years ago to begin the Anglo-Saxon conquest of the globe—will this to strengthen and inspire our people on earth has a brighter future than the South. It is only a question of time, and now the time cannot be long, when the Pacific ocean, and the teeming Orient, will pour their limitless traffic into the Gulf of Mexico through the Nicaragua Canal, and New Orleans become the emporium of the world.

Religious News.

LIST OF EPISCOPAL APPOINTMENTS, 1902-1903.

FIRST DISTRICT.

Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson.
 Denver, Pueblo, August 28th.
 Western, Arkansas City, September 4th.
 Missouri, Chillicothe, September 10th.
 Southwest Missouri, Jefferson City, September 17th.
 St. Louis, Malden, September 24th.
 Tennessee, Fayetteville, October 8th.

SECOND DISTRICT.
 Bishop W. W. Duncan.
 Montana, Butte, August 28th.
 East Columbia, Milton, Oregon, September 11th.
 Columbia, Corvallis, Oregon, September 18th.
 Pacific, Oakland, October 16th.
 Los Angeles, Santa Anna, October 23d.
 Virginia, Richmond, November 12th.
 South Carolina, Newberry, S. C., December 3d.

THIRD DISTRICT.

Bishop Chas. B. Galloway.
 Japan Mission Conference, Matsuyama, August 28th.
 Corean Mission, Seoul, September 24th.
 China Mission Conference, Shanghai, October 22d.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
 Brazil Mission, Juiz de Fora, July 30th.
 German Mission, Houston, October 30th.
 West Texas, Floresville, November 5th.
 Northwest Texas, Temple, November 12th.
 Texas, Cameron, November 26th.
 North Texas, Terrell, December 3d.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

Bishop J. S. Key.
 New Mexico, El Paso, August 21st.
 North Alabama, Lafayette, November 19th.
 North Mississippi, Tupelo, December 3d.
 Mississippi, Natchez, December 10th.
 Louisiana, Alexandria, December 17th.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

Bishop W. A. Candler.
 North Georgia, Atlanta, November 20th.
 South Georgia, Thomasville, December, 4th.
 Northwest Mexican, Chihuahua, January 14th.
 Central Mexico, Gaudalajara, January 28th.
 Mexican Border, Austin, Texas, February 5th.
 Cuban Mission, February 26th.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

Bishop H. C. Morrison.
 Kentucky, London, September 3d.
 Western Virginia, Charleston, September 24th.
 Illinois, Waverly, October 17th.
 Louisville, Columbia, October 1st.
 Holston, Wytheville, October 8th.

EIGHTH DISTRICT.

Bishop E. E. Hoss.
 Indian Mission, Muskogee, October

Memphis, Paris, November 5th.
 Arkansas, Harrison, November 12th.
 Little Rock, Benton, November 19th.
 White River, Paragould, November 26th.

NINTH DISTRICT.

Bishop A. Coke Smith.
 Western North Carolina, Monroe, November 19th.
 North Carolina, Wilmington, November 26th.
 Alabama, Montgomery, December 10th.
 Florida, Quincy, December 17th.
 Baltimore, Fredericksburg, Va., March 25th.

Rev. George H. McFaden, pastor of Wright Memorial M. E. Church, is confined to his house by an attack of muscular rheumatism, from which he has been suffering since Friday last. His pulpit was supplied on Sunday morning by Rev. C. W. Cain, and at the evening service by Rev. R. H. Bennett, of Norfolk.—Virginian-Pilot.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Children's Day was observed at Market Street church yesterday afternoon, there being a large congregation in attendance. The church was beautifully decorated, and a splendid musical programme was rendered. There were recitations and readings by several children, all of which were much enjoyed. A short talk to the children was made by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Hatcher. Children's Day services were also held at West Street church, where a delightful programme was presented.—Progress.

WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Petersburg District of the Virginia M. E. Conference will hold its annual meeting in Blandford church, the business meeting beginning Thursday, June 12th. On Wednesday, the 11th, the annual sermon will be preached. Arrangements will be made to have the presence of a good choir. The meetings will continue two days, and delegates from sixteen auxiliary societies are expected to be in attendance. Mrs. Shelton Chieves, of this city, is the district secretary.—Progress.

CHRISTIAN THOUGHT CLUB.

The regular meeting of this club was held at Epworth church yesterday at 12 M. The president, Bishop A. Coke Smith, occupied the chair, and the secretary, the Rev. George Wesley Jones, kept the minutes. Prayer was offered by the Rev. D. T. Merritt. Inquiry elicited the fact that each member had read one or more books of a helpful kind since last meeting.

The committee on the annual outing reported, through the Rev. E. H. Rawlings, that they recommended that the club spend a day on the Old Dominion steamer "Mobjack" on a trip to Gloucester and Mathews. Monday, June 23d, was fixed on as the date.

The Rev. E. T. Dadmun read a carefully prepared and interesting review of the work of the Rev. Dr. John A. Kern, entitled "The Way of the French er; an Interpretation of a Calling." After a helpful discussion of some of the features mentioned the club adjourned.—Landmark.

MINISTERS' MEETING.

The Methodist ministers of this city have determined to make a house-to-house canvass of the mission districts of this city to secure scholars for their Sunday schools.

In order to do this they will secure the services of a number of ladies of their congregations, whom they will interest in the work of saving the souls of the little ones of this city, many of whom have never heard of God and have never been to Sunday school or anywhere else on Sunday except in the streets in front of their houses.

The plan of the Methodist ministers, which was adopted at their session held yesterday, is a gigantic one, but is thoroughly practicable. It will within a short while bring hundreds of little children into the Sunday schools. An effort will also be made to interest older people in the missionary districts in the work of the church, and in this way make the work of the canvassers for scholars more pleasant.

Bishop A. Coke Smith, who was present at yesterday's meeting, told of the last session of the General Conference at Dallas, Tex., and said that he had never before known of a Conference at which better feeling was displayed, notwithstanding there were several important questions to be decided.

The session of the ministers was called to order by the president, the Rev. W. R. Proctor, and prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Watson.

Reports of the work during the past week were made as follows:

The Rev. Dr. W. E. Judkins preached at Centenary in the morning, and the pastor, the Rev. E. T. Dadmun, at night. The Sacrament was administered in the morning.

The usual service was held at the Seamen's Bethel by the chaplain, the Rev. J. B. Merritt.

On the Norfolk Circuit the Rev. D. J. Traynham preached at Beech Grove to the largest congregation during his pastorate, and at Jolliff's in the afternoon.

The Rev. Graham H. Lambeth taught the Sunday school, after which the exercises of Children's Day were held, during which he baptized five infants. One adult member was received on profession of faith. Mr. Lambeth preached at night and administered the Sacrament.

The Rev. J. N. Latham reported an excellent Sunday school at Park View and preached morning and night to good congregations. He received eleven by certificate.

At Epworth the pastor, the Rev. R. H. Bennett, preached in the morning and the Rev. Dr. W. E. Judkins at night. Mr. Bennett preached at Wright Memorial at night.

The Rev. W. R. Crowder reported a very good Sunday school and a good congregation in the morning. He also preached in the afternoon.

The Rev. E. H. Rawlings preached, administered the sacrament and received six by certificate at Monumental world. Midway between Europe and Asia, with the Mississippi drifting the commerce of a continent to her wharves, and Latin America pouring her tropical treasures on her shores, these Southern States of the Union hold the advantage of position over all the rest. And the buzz of saws, and whirr of looms, and thud of steam hammers, and roar of rushing trains, and hum of myriad agencies of toil, are only notes in the grand wedding march to which Dixie is moving down the aisles of time to wed her destiny and receive her crown. Gov. Odell, of New York, was in New Orleans recently, and as he steamed along the river front, and saw the big vessels at anchor in the mighty river, and thought of the vast continent that river drained, and the proximity of the oil fields of Texas, and the short cut to the Orient through the Nicaragua Canal, he exclaimed: "Go South, young man! Go South!" He is right. Here is the sunrise realm. The land of immortal men, like Washington and Lee, Jackson and Hampton, Forrest and Gordon, Stephens and Davis, whose names are synonyms of the loftiest patriotism: the land of deathless memories, built over graves of myriad heroes, whose blood nourishes the roots of a civic life that flowers into the noblest virtues; a land surpassing Cashmere in its beauty or Ophir in its wealth or Greece in its glory or England in its fame—this glorious Southland is the land of promise now. "Go South, young man! Go South!" S. A. STEEL.

(Continued on page 12.)

In speaking of the work of the Southern and General Educational Boards, the Chattanooga Times clearly states the case when it says, "It is proposed above all else, to lead the parents and children into the paths of self-help. All that hints toward charity will be scrupulously avoided. There will be no pauperizing in the National Education Board's work for the improvement of the people's schools. The people who are unable to secure the necessary means of giving their children a sound English training schooling in the common branches of practical science, will not have the means "given" them without they shall first make a strenuous effort to help themselves. They must do their share, first or all. The plan contemplates no "bounty," no gift, but is to be strictly on co-operative lines. There will be no gifts of "scholarships" or free living for peculiarly bright pupils in this scheme. All will share the benefit of the newly awakened interest, and the assistance added to the means raised by the patrons. No singling out of pulpits, except as their merits and achievements in study make them conspicuous. The spirit of generous rivalry will be encouraged.

In short, the plan is at once the most benevolent and safest of its kind that has ever been devised by any association or individual, in this or any other country.

You will find that the mere resolve not to be useless, and the honest desire to help other people, will, in the quickest and delicatest ways, improve yourself.—Rusk

Talmage Sermon

WASHINGTON. —In this discourse Dr. Talmage urges thoughtfulness for others and shows how such a benignant spirit may be fostered; text, I Peter ii, 8. "Be courteous."

In an age when bluntness has been canonized as a virtue it may be useful to extol one of the most beautiful of all the royal family of graces—courtesy. It is graciousness, deference to the wishes of others, good manners, affability, willingness to deny ourselves somewhat for the advantage of others, urbanity. But what is the use of my defining the grace of courtesy when we all know so well what it is? The botanist might say some very interesting things about a rose, and the chemist might discourse about water or light, but without ever seeing a botanist or a chemist we know what a rose is and what water and light are. Do not take our time in telling us what courtesy is. Only show us how we may get more of it and avoid what are its counterfeits. Mark you, it cannot be put on or dramatized successfully for a long while. We may be full of bows and genuflections, and smiles and complimentary phrase, and have nothing of genuine courtesy either in our makeup or in our demeanor. A backwoodsman who never saw a drawing room or a dancing master or a caterer or a fold of drapery may with his big soul and hard hand and awkward salutation exercise the grace, while one born under richest upholstery and educated in foreign schools, and bothered to know which of ten garments he will take from a royal wardrobe, may be as barren of the spirit of courtesy as the great Sahara desert is of green meadows and tossing fountains.

Christian courtesy is born in the heart by the power of the Holy Ghost, who has transformed and illumined and glorified one's nature. Mark you, I am speaking of the highest kind of courtesy, which is Christian courtesy. Something like it—ordinary politeness—may grow up with us under the direction of intelligent and watchful parentage, but I am not speaking of that which is merely agreeableness of conversation and behavior. All that may be a matter of tutelage and fine surrounding and show itself in lifting the hat to passersby and in a graceful way of asking about your health and sending the right kind of acceptance when you can go and the right kind of regrets when you cannot go and understanding all the laws of preference at table and parlor door, all of which is well. I am speaking of a principle of courtesy so implanted in one's nature that his suavity of conversation and manner shall be the outburst of what he feels for the happiness and welfare of others, a principle that will work in the next world as well as in this and will be as appropriate in the mansions of heaven as in earthly dwelling places.

Undesirable People.

Now, you know as well as I do that some of the most undesirable people have been seeming incarnations of courtesy. In our early American history there arose a man of wonderful talent, an impersonation of all that can charm drawing rooms and cultivated circles. Aged men who knew him in their youth have told me that he was the most irresistible man they ever met, his voice silvery, his smile bewitching, his glove immaculate, his eye piercing, his high forehead wreathed in curls, his attire a fascination. He became vice president of the United States and within one vote of being president. Men threw away their fortunes to help him in his political aspirations and to forward him in a conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States, he trying to do in America what Napoleon at that very time was trying to do in Europe—establish a throne for himself. But he was immoral and corrupt. He was the serpent that wound its way into many a domestic paradise. He shot to death one of the greatest of Americans—Alexander Hamilton. The world found out long before he left it that the offender I speak of was an embodiment of dissoluteness and base ambition. He was the best illustration that I know of of the fact that a man may have the appearance of courtesy while within he is all wrong.

Absalom, a Bible character, was a specimen of a man of polish outside and of rottenness inside. Beautiful, brilliant and with such wealth of hair that when it was cut in each December as a matter of pride he had it weighed, and it weighed 200 shekels. He captured all who came near him. But, oh, what a heart he had—full of treachery and unfaithful spirit and baseness! He was as bad as he was alluring and charming.

In the famous Athenian Alcibiades history discourses of the same splendor of manner covering utter depravity. Noble pedigree, transcendent abilities, radiant personality, eloquent tongue, triumphant warrior, victor at Olympic games, but a debauchee and an impersonation of all the vices. Alas, that all up and down history and clear on into our day there are so many of what Christ called "wolves in sheep's clothing"—"whitewashed sepulchers, full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness!" Gilded abominations, walking lazaretos, attired in vermilion and gold. Perdition hanging out the banners of heaven. As far as possible are they removed from all genuine courtesy.

Heart Courtesy.

I like what John Wesley said to a man when their carriages met on the road. The ruffian, knowing Mr. Wesley and disliking him, did not turn out, but kept the middle of the road. Mr. Wesley cheerfully gave the man all the road, himself riding into the ditch. As they passed each other the ruffian said, "I never turn out for fools," and Mr. Wesley said, "I always do." I like the reproof which a Chinaman in San Francisco gave an American. The American pushed him off the sidewalk until he fell into the mud. The Chinaman on rising began to brush off the mud and said to the American: "You Christian; me heathen. Goodby." A stranger entered a church in one of the cities and was allowed to stand a long while, although there was plenty of room. No one offered a seat. The stranger after awhile said to one of the brethren, "What church is this?" The answer was, "Christ's church, sir." "Is he in?" said the stranger. The officer of the church understood what was meant and gave him a seat. We want more courtesy in the churches, more courtesy in places of business, more courtesy in our homes.

But heart courtesy must precede hand and head and foot courtesy. Cultivation of it should begin in the father's house. You often notice that brothers and sisters are often gruff and snappy and say things and do things that they would not have the outside world know about. Rough things are sometimes said in households which ought never to be said at all—teasing and recrimination and faultfinding and harsh criticisms, which will have their echo thirty and forty and fifty years afterward. In the sleet driven by that east wind no sweet flowers of kindness and gentility will grow. Let children hear their parents picking at each other, and those children will be found picking at each other, and far down the road of life will be seen the same disposition to pick at others. Better than this habit of picking at children, which so many parents indulge in, would be one good, healthy application of the rod. Better a shower that lasts a few minutes than the cold drizzle of many days. We never get over our first home, however many homes we may have afterward.

Cultivate Christian Grace.

Let us all cultivate this grace of Christian courtesy by indulging in the habit of praise instead of the habit of blame. There are evils in the world that we must denounce, and there are men and women who ought to be chastised, but never let us allow the opportunity of applauding good deeds pass unimproved. The old theory was that you must never praise people lest we make them vain. No danger of that. Before any of us get through with life we will have enough mean and ignoble and depreciating and lying things said about us to keep us humble. God approvingly recognizes a system of rewards as well as of punishments.

When you hear a good sermon, stop after the benediction and tell the pastor, though you never saw him before that day, "Your sermon did me good." When a mechanic does a good piece of work, tell him it is well done. When a physician brings you out of a perilous illness, stop him in the street and say, "Doctor, you saved my life." When you hear of a business man in some heavy stress of financial weather helping frailer craft into the harbor, go into his counting room and say, "I hear you have been helping your fellow business man to outlive the tempest of a panic, and I came in to thank you for the good advice you gave and to let you know that all good citizens appreciate what you have been doing." Go down the street tomorrow and thank somebody. There are hundreds of people who never get thanked at all. Plenty of severe criticism, plenty of faultfinding, plenty of misinterpretation, plenty of depreciation, but as to gratitude—that is a market in which the supply does not equal the demand.

In the cultivation of this habit of Christian courtesy let us abstain from joining in the work of defamation. Every little while society takes after a man, and it must have a victim. If you had a roll of all the public men of this generation or of any generation who have been denounced and despoiled of their good name, it would take you a long while to call the roll. It is a bad streak in human nature that there are so many who prefer to believe evil instead of good concerning any one under discussion. If a good motive and a bad motive have been possible in the case in hand, one man will believe the conduct was inspired by a good motive, and ten men will believe it was inspired by a bad motive. The more faults a man has of his own the more willing is he to ascribe faults to others.

Speak Well of One Another.

What a curse of cynics and pessimists afflicts our time, afflicts all time! There are those who praise no one until he is dead. Now that he is clear under a round and a heavy stone is on top of him there is no possibility of his ever coming up again as a rival. Some of the epitaphs on tombstones are so fulsome that on resurrection day a man rising may, if he reads the epitaph, for the moment think he got in to the wrong grave. Speak well of one another, and if you find yourself circles disposed to slander and abuse be for the time as dumb as the sphinx which, though only a few yards away from the overshadowing pyramid of Egypt, has not with its lips of stone spoken one word in thousands of years.

There are two sides to every man's character—a good side and an evil side. The good see only the good and the evil only the evil, and the probability is that a medium opinion is the right opinion. Most of the people whom I know are doing about as well as they can under the circumstances. When I see people who are worse than I am, I conclude that if I had the same bad influences around me all my life that they have had I would probably have been worse than they now are. The work of reform is the most important work, but many of the reformers, dwelling on one evil, see nothing but evil, and they get so used to anathema they forget the usefulness once in awhile of a benediction. They get so accustomed to execrating public men that they do not realize that never since John Hancock in boldest chirography signed the Declaration of Independence, never since Columbus picked up the floating land flowers that showed him he was coming near some new country, have there been so many noble and splendid and Christian men in high places in this country as now. You could go into the president's cabinet or the United States senate or the house of representatives in this city and find plenty of men capable of holding an old fashioned Methodist prayer meeting, plenty of senators and representatives and cabinet officers to start the tune and kneel with the penitents at the altar. In all these places there are men who could, without looking at the book, recite the sublime words, as did Gladstone during vacation at Hawarden, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ," and from the senate and house of representatives and the presidential cabinet and from the surrounding offices and committee rooms, if they could hear, would come many voices responding "Amen and amen!"

"If You Please."

Christian courtesy I especially commend to those who have subordinates. Almost every person has some one under him. How do you treat that clerk, that servant, that assistant, that employee? Do you accost him in brusque terms and roughly command him to do that which you might kindly ask him to do? The last words that the Duke of Wellington uttered were, "If you please." That conqueror in what was in some respects the greatest battle ever fought in his last hours, asked by his servant if he would take some tea, replied, "If you please," his last words an expression of courtesy. Beautiful characteristic in any class. The day laborers in Sweden, passing each other, take off their hats in reverence. There is no excuse for boorishness in any circle. As complete a gentleman as ever lived was the man who was unhorsed on the road to Damascus and beheaded

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

8:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Naples.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH.

LEAVE RICHMOND:

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAY 11, 1902.

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York-river landings.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, daily, except Sundays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND.

9:15 A. M., No. 15, daily, from Baltimore, except Monday.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, daily, except Sundays and Mondays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations. Nos. 15 and 16 will make no stops between Richmond and Quinton.

Steamers sail from West Point 5:50 P. M. daily, except Sundays. Steamers call at Gloucester Point and Claybank Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and Yorktown and Allmonds Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

C. W. WESTBURY.

District Passenger Agent.

920 east Main street.

Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICK,

General Passenger Agent.

C. H. ACKERT,

General Manager,

Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some hint as to price given. Work delivered at any depth, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APR. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:15 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
2:56 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	4:12 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	7:00 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
1:05 A. M.	9:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
4:55 A. M.	2:10 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
9:15 A. M.	7:00 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	—Ar. St. Augustine.
5:45 P. M.	6:45 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
10:32 P. M.	10:08 A. M.—Ar. Charlotte.
1:35 A. M.	10:22 A. M.—Lv. Chester.
3:43 A. M.	12:35 P. M.—Lv. Greenwood.
6:13 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Lv. Athens.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
	5:40 P. M.—Ar. Augusta.
11:35 A. M.	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Macon.
6:25 P. M.	9:20 P. M.—Ar. Montgomery.
	2:55 A. M.—Ar. Mobile.
	7:25 A. M.—Ar. New Orleans.
	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norfolk, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norfolk with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.
4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.
5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norfolk, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Sleeping cars between New York and Tampa. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington, and between Washington and Jacksonville. Pullman sleeping cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa; also through drawing-room. Sleeping cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe cars between Hamlet and Atlanta and between Hamlet and Savannah.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-room Buffet Sleeping cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest day coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure TRADE-MARKS write to

C. A. SNOW &amp; CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.
I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same. When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.
WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:
"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

diamonds,

Watches,

Jewelry.

Fine Repairing.

Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing

Lumsden &amp; Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

781 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

PATENTS

SWIFT &amp; CO.,

Patent Lawyers,

Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW PLANING MILLS

and

UMBERYARD.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

PLOW HANDLES.

TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.

CORN MEAL.

SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

PETERSBURG LETTER.

(Continued from page five.)

Meeting one of our busy pastors, the talk soon drifted to more recent things, but I felt amply repaid for the remiscient mood that had gotten hold of me.

I have had some lessons taught from an unexpected quarter, and although my teacher was a plain, humble colored man, I feel that they were impressively taught. Not far from our home a blind and deaf colored man lives, who, wonderful to relate, makes his way along the streets and works a garden and saws wood to make a living. His knowledge under these unfortunate conditions surrounding him of places, streets, etc., is wonderful. His sense of touch is very keen, and he can tell money and other articles given him with wonderful facility. A kind neighbor often gives him his breakfast, and with the sense of touch he can tell the nature of food given him. Some time last winter he had a narrow escape from death by fire, which destroyed the house he occupied alone. Not able to see or to hear, he felt the heat from the flames, and safely made his exit from the burning building. The lessons that this poor, humble man taught me were—first, that of gratitude to God for possession of unimpaired faculties, etc.; second, resignation to my lot in life, which is so much better than I deserve; thirdly, an inspiration to battle with difficulties and obstacles in life which to all diligent and faithful workers gives never-failing rewards. How much of the beautiful do we see in life, and how much of the helpful in life do we hear, and yet so many of us grumble and complain and see only the dark side.

The hardest lot in life has its bright side. The loving, Heavenly Parent has been kind and gracious; let us not forget to make him return of our praise, our love, and our service.

I may be already prolix in rambling screed, but I must say before closing that the outlook for the Lord's cause hereabouts is encouraging. Our pastors have been earnestly at work. God's blessing has and is resting upon their labors. There is not as much noise and demonstration accompanying our revival meetings, perhaps, as the past witnessed, but we believe that a better, more intelligent, more progressive type of conversions are constantly taking place, and Petersburg, we believe, has been favored along these lines this year. So mote it be. E. P. P.

Petersburg, Va., April 13, 1902.

P. S.—Since writing the above I see that a Conference was held here in 1788, and this session may have been in the old house on Hickory street.

P.

Bealton, Va., April 21, 1902

Mr. Editor:

Dear Sir,—May I, through the columns of your paper, tell your readers how I protected my grapes and sweet corn last year from worms and made perfect fruit, while my neighbors' were very bad? I used a device called a "moth-catcher," having a central light to attract insects, millers, moths, and bugs, having bumpers to knock the insects down as they attempt to fly around the light, and a pan below to catch and kill those that fall in a little coal oil on the surface of the water. I tried one morning after a calm dark night to count the little pests I had caught in one trap. After counting for a long time I found I had about 1,400 insects. By killing these parents of the worms before they lay the eggs, I had a nice lot of grapes, while my neighbors had no good ones at all. These traps also protected my cabbage and tomatoes, and also a row of sweet corn. I would not be without them another year, and I can recommend them to my brother farmers and gardeners as the best means of preserving their crops from insects.

Respectfully,

STEPHEN ROGERS, Agent.

***

FROM BROTHER KILBY.

Well, well, my unknown brother, John of Kent, has popped up, and is so eager for a fray that he could not even wait until I had finished what I had to say. Why didn't you wait, Bro. John, for you might have found something else to kick about without straining yourself so much. Your position is so anomalous that I am almost undecided whether you are in earnest or are poking fun at me.

I have heard that we have among us some High Churchmen, who think it a moral sin to criticise ministers, or the powers that be, but it was left for Bro. John to discover that a man violates the Discipline if he should criticise or even mention outside anything that occurs at Methodist revivals. He should take out letters patent at once; there won't be any difficulty in the way, for there is nothing like it in the patent office. I wish hereby to caution all laymen, if they value their membership in the Methodist Church, not under any circumstances to mention or criticise in a friendly way anything that they may have seen or heard at revivals. My, my, where has Bro. John been all this time that he has not arrested the characters of the brethren who have been writing about revivals and about the war claim, etc.

Bro. John is very mandatory, and even dramatic. Note this: "I cite you before the tribunal of the Church to answer to the charge of violating one of the rules of the Church." All right, Bro. John, come when you are ready to the proper place with the specifications you have drawn up, and I promise you a parrot and monkey time. You hope it will not become necessary for you to comment on the specifications. Why, bless your soul, pitch right in and comment all you please. This is a free country, and I don't care a snap of my finger whether or not you agree with me in a single particular. I have my opinion, and you have a perfect right to yours, but don't order me around, if you please, until you have proven your right to do so.

You ask me please to rise and explain myself. Well, I can't comply with your request, for I must mournfully confess that I haven't the ability to make myself plainer. If you can't understand what I have written, I am sorry for you, but I am not in any way responsible for your obtuseness. Now, please don't pull the Discipline out on me, for I assure you there is nothing in it that makes me responsible for your lack of understanding. Bro. John tacks on an N. B., and says the Editor has his name. Wonder what the Editor will do with it? I don't want it. Perhaps he had better send it back.

It is evident that Bro. John has entirely missed the intent and spirit of my articles. I had no other desire than to do good, and before writing I mentioned my purpose to two ministers, and both of them said, go ahead, as they saw no impropriety in so doing. I talked over the matter fully with one of them, whose opinion I value highly, and outlined my first article. He said it was all right, and he wished that more laymen would talk out and tell the preachers just how they feel on subjects of interest to the Church, and frankly admitted that laymen could often give valuable pointers to the preachers, and that he personally always appreciated it when laymen had suggestions to make to him, etc. So I went ahead with the kindest of feelings and with nothing but love in my heart for all of our ministers, and yet Bro. John got excited, and while his pupils were dilated he made a wonderful discovery, which isn't going to pan out well. A few days after my first article appeared, I received a postal from a minister in the Virginia Conference, which reads as follows:

"Dear Bro. Clay,—I have read your recent letter in the Recorder, and feel like telling you I like it; well, you struck the nail flat. Do it again."

Now, here is another chance, Bro. John, for you to distinguish yourself by drawing the Discipline on this minister for endorsing what I said.

As far as I know now, this will be all I will have to say to Bro. John.

L. CLAY KILBY.

***

The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine for June opens with an article on French Canada, entitled "New France on the St. Lawrence," by Jacques d'Ayres. The frontispiece of the issue gives a view of the grand falls of Montmorency, near Quebec, near which lived the Duke of Kent, Queen Victoria's father, when he was commander-in-chief of the British forces in America. The article, while not neglecting the picturesque, is up to date, and makes use of the most recent contributions by Canadian authors to our knowledge of the province of Quebec.

The Famous Hymn Writers Series is represented by Frederick W. Faber, who wrote "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy," "Hark, Hark, My Soul, Angelic Songs are Swelling," and so many other justly popular hymns.

Published monthly by the Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

***

ONE MINUTE LATE.—It makes no difference whether you were one minute or one hour late, if you missed the train. Better get there on time. Colds lead to coughs, coughs to pneumonia and consumption; therefore, it is all important to check a cold before it reaches the lungs. Perry Davis' Painkiller will positively break a cold inside of twenty-four hours. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

(Continued from Page 9.)

in the morning, and preached again at night.

The Rev. H. R. Smith had a very pleasant day at Oaklette and Bethel.

The Rev. Ernest Stevens reported some additions to the Sunday school at Wright Memorial. He preached to a good congregation and a fairly good congregation at night. The Sacrament was administered, and one was received on profession of faith.

The Rev. W. P. Jordan preached at the Park Place Sunday school in the morning.

The Rev. C. L. Bane had a busy day at Cumberland Street. He attended the Sunday school, preached to fine audiences morning and night, and attended the Epworth League in the afternoon. One was received by certificate.

The Rev. W. T. Green reported some additions to the Sunday school at Central. He preached morning and night, and at Cottage Place in the afternoon. Three were received by certificate.

At Trinity the pastor, the Rev. George Wesley Jones, conducted the usual services. The Rev. W. Asbury Christian did likewise at Memorial.

The Rev. J. K. Jolliff had a splendid Sunday school and good congregations at Queen Street.

At Lambert's Point there was a good Sunday school and the pastor, the Rev. C. H. McGhee, conducted the usual services.

The Rev. W. R. Proctor had a good day at McKendree. Children's Day was observed at the mission Sunday school in the afternoon.

The Rev. C. W. Cain preached at Wright Memorial in the morning, and administered the Sacrament. The Sunday school was the largest in the history of the church, 378 being present.

The Rev. D. T. Merritt reported six new scholars added to the Sunday school at Port Norfolk. A profitable missionary programme was rendered in the school. Children's Day exercises were rendered.

The Rev. Mr. Watson, evangelist, gave an account of the meetings which he has recently held.

The roll-call being completed, by request, the Rev. G. H. Lambeth offered some resolutions, requesting the continuance of the quarterly temperance lesson in the International Sunday School Lesson system, which was adopted.

Mrs. M. C. Faville, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society, appeared before the meeting and spoke in reference to mission work in the city.

The session then adjourned.—Landmark.

***

Love's secret is to be always doing things for God, and not to mind because they are such very little ones.—F. W. Faber.

***

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations—these are the silent threads of gold, which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life that God approves.—Canon Farrar.

GOODSCHOOLS IN GOOD WEATHER

Every county superintendent and every member of a county or district school board in the mountains and hill country of the South should know of the work of Supt. S. F. Venable, of Buncombe county, N. C. In this county, as in so many others, the public schools had for years been taught in the late fall and winter, when the weather is bad and the little children cannot attend without exposure and danger to health. Two summers ago Supt. Venable worked out a plan for what he calls "duplicate graded schools," and induced a number of the districts to give it a trial.

The children were classified in eight grades, each grade representing the work of a school year. About the first of June the schools were opened for children of the first, second, third and fourth grades, which included all the children from six to ten years old, and the records show that the average attendance daily of the children of these four grades was as large as the average daily attendance of all children of all grades the year before. After four months, children of the higher grades were admitted. In some instances the first, second and third grades were discontinued; in others additional teachers were employed and children of all grades were taught the next four months. In other cases smaller schools were combined in central schools.

So satisfactory were the results that the majority of the schools in this county have now adopted the plan. The attendance of the small children, on account of good weather in the summer and fall, has doubled, and some of the teachers reported last summer that every child in their district from six to ten years old was in school. The progress made by the children was surprising to the parents and children, and was made possible because of the few grades to be taught. These schools will run from eight to nine months this year. The plan is economical, and has many advantages, which make it worthy of careful consideration.

***

Though our bread does not fall from heavens as did the manna of old, it does come from that same inexhaustible storehouse.

DAILY SERVICE VIA THE POPULAR YORK RIVER ROUTE BETWEEN RICHMOND AND BALTIMORE, EFFECTIVE MAY 12, 1902.

Leave Richmond daily, except Sunday, 4:30 P. M.; West Point, 5:50 P. M. Arrive Baltimore 8:30 A. M. One night on the beautiful York river and Chesapeake bay. Refreshed by the bracing salt air, you arrive in Baltimore at a convenient hour in the morning. This route is famous for its good service, elegant meals, polite attention, etc. The morning train from Charlotte, Greensboro, Danville, Durham, Oxford, Clarksville, Chase City, etc., arriving Richmond 3:25 P. M., makes direct connection with this route in same station at Richmond, and at Baltimore connection is made for Philadelphia, New York, and all Eastern and Northern points, including Atlantic City and all Eastern resorts. Low rate excursion tickets are on sale daily at Richmond to Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York. This is the favorite of all short water trips.

GO TO BEACH PARK, WEST POINT EXCURSION AND PICNIC GROUNDS.

Only thirty-nine miles, one hour's ride from Richmond, via Southern Railway.

A great many excursions have already been booked for "Beach Park" for June and July. The various attractions and improvements at this popular resort gives it more prominence each season. The close proximity to Richmond, and the unlimited supply of the most wholesome artesian water, together with many other natural advantages, places it second to none as a pleasure and health resort for Richmond people.

King William pier, a substantial structure, extending 689 feet in length and 25 feet wide over the York river, with waterproof roofing as a protection from sun and rain, adds considerably to the beauty and convenience for picnic and other outing parties.

In addition to the new Beach Park Hotel, now being erected, you will find other hotels and many nice boarding houses, furnishing cheap rates and good, first-class accommodations.

The principal attractions are such as fine fishing, boating, sailing, merry-go-round, shooting galleries, steam and naphtha launches, a large dancing pavilion, with a band of music, day and night, several wells of fine artesian water on the grounds, and various other attractions to suit the older people, as well as the little ones.

For any other information apply at or write to the Southern Railway office, No. 920 E. Main street, Richmond, Va.

Commencing May 25th, additional passenger train service will be operated over Norfolk and Western Railway as follows:

Leave Roanoke 7 A. M., Lynchburg 8:45 A. M., arrive Petersburg 1 P. M., arrive Richmond 1:50 P. M.; leave Richmond 1:15 P. M., Petersburg 2 P. M., Lynchburg 6:15 P. M., arrive Roanoke 8 P. M.

Leave Lynchburg 7:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., arrive East Radford 10:45 A. M., arrive Bristol 2:50 P. M.

Leave Bristol 2:05 P. M., arrive East Radford 6:05 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:55 P. M., arrive Lynchburg 9:50 P. M. Close connection at East Radford to and from Bluefield, Norton, Welch and intermediate points.

Leave Roanoke 8 P. M., arrive Hagerstown 4:15 A. M. Returning, leave Hagerstown 1:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., connecting to and from Harrisburg, Philadelphia, New York and interior Pennsylvania points. Pullman sleeping cars Philadelphia and Welch, W. Va.

Leave Roanoke 9:15 A. M., arrive Winston-Salem 2 P. M., arrive Charlotte, N. C., 6 P. M. Returning, leave Charlotte 11:10 A. M., leave Winston-Salem 2:55 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:40 P. M. Trains runs solid between Roanoke and Charlotte.

See regular schedule advertisement for further information.

W. B. BEVILL,
General Passenger Agent.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare for the round trip, plus $2 membership fee. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, inclusive, with return limit July 6, 1902, except by depositing tickets and upon payment of 50 cents an extension to September 10th may be obtained.

SOUTHERN STUDENT CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A., JUNE 14-23; ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF Y. W. C. A., JUNE 13-23, 1902, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Asheville, N. C., and return. Tickets on sale June 13th-14th, with return limit June 25th.

SUMMER SCHOOL, KNOXVILLE, TENN., JUNE 19TH-JULY 30TH, 1902.

One fare for the round trip from all points to Knoxville and return. Tickets on sale June 16th, 17th, and 18th, 28th, 29th, and 30th, and July 11th, 12th, and 13th, with return limit August 15th.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP AND TAKE NO OTHER KIND. Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS, UP-TO-DATE FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure &amp; Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 TO $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

(Continued from page 10.)

on the road to Ostia—Paul, the apostle I know that he might be so characterized by the way he apologized to Annas, the high priest. I know it from the way he complimented Felix as a judge and from the way he greets the king. "I thank myself, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews, especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews." I know that Paul was a gentleman from the way he opened his sermon on Mars hill, not insulting his audience, as King James' translation implies, but saying, "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are very devout." I know he was a gentleman from the fact that when he, with others of a shipwreck, on the island of Melita visited the governor of the island he was most impressed with the courtesy shown them and reported that visit in these words: "In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius, who received us and lodged us three days courteously." And then see those words of advice which he gives: "Bear ye one another's burdens;" "In honor preferring one another;" "Honor all men."

What a mighty means of usefulness is courtesy! The lack of it brings to many a dead failure, while before those who possess it in large quantity all the doors of opportunity are open. You can tell that urbanity does not come from study of books of etiquette, although such books have their use, but from a mind full of thoughtfulness for others and a heart in sympathy with the conditions of others. If those conditions be prosperous, a gladness for the success, or if the conditions be depressing, a sorrow for the unfavorable circumstances. Ah, this world needs lighting up! To those of us who are prosperous it is no credit that we are in a state of good cheer, but in the lives of ninety-nine out of a hundred there is a pathetic side, a taking off, a deficit, an anxiety, a trouble. By a genial look, by a kind word, by a helpful action, we may lift a little of the burden and partly clear the way for the stumbling foot. Oh, what a glorious art it is to say the right word in the right way at the right time!

How reprehensible the behavior of those who pride themselves on the opposite quality and have a genius for saying disagreeable things, using sarcasm and retort not for lawful purposes, but to sting and humiliate and hurt! "Didn't I take him down?" "Didn't I make him wince?" "Didn't I give it to him?" That is the spirit of the devil, while the opposite is the spirit of Christ.

Make Others Happy.

Alexander the Great won the love of his soldiers on foot by calling them fellow footmen. Rehoboam lost the ten tribes through his discourtesy. More thoughtfulness for others—let us all cultivate it. That spirit was well illustrated when the Birkenhead was wrecked on the rocks and all knew she must go down. Many soldiers were on board. The drum sounded, and the soldiers fell into line. The women and children were got off in the boats. Then the commander of the ship said, "Let all those who can swim strike out for the boats." "No," said Captain Wight of the Ninety-first highlanders; "if you do that, you will sink the boats in which the women and children are." The brave men kept to their post, and just as the ship was about to make its last plunge they fired a salute to those in the boats. What sinking of self in thoughtfulness for others!

Many years ago two men entered the largest locomotive workshops in Philadelphia. They were treated in a very indifferent way and were allowed to depart without any show of courtesy. They went into other shops, and no especial attention was given them. After awhile the two men entered a smaller shop, and the overseer took great pains in showing them everything and how they wrought and on what plan the shops were run. The two visitors were agents of the czar of Russia, and those shops were transferred to St. Petersburg, and that polite man that bestowed such attention was called to build the locomotives for all the railroads of Russia and had fortune after fortune roll in upon him. Courtesy is a mighty force in temporal things as well as in spiritual things.

Let us start each year, each month, each day, with the question, What can I do to make others happy? On our way to office or store or shop or railroad let us be alert for heaven descended opportunities.

What the World Needs.

The time must come when the world will acknowledge international courtesy. Now courtesy between nations is chiefly made of rhetorical greeting, but as soon as there is a difference of interest their ministers plenipotentiary are called home, and the guns of the forts are put in position, and the army and navy get ready. Why not a courtesy between nations that will defer to each other and surrender a little rather than have prolonged acrimony, ending in great slaughter? Room for all nations of the earth and all styles of government. What the world wants is less armament and more courtesy, less of the spirit of destruction and more of the spirit of amity. This century has opened with too many armies in the field and too many men-of-war on the ocean. Before the century closes may the last cavalry horse be hitched to the plow and the last warship become a merchantman.

There is nothing worthy in the thought that the earth will get too crowded with population if vast multitudes are not destroyed by war. When our old world is full of inhabitants, it will have fulfilled its mission, and it will be put aside like an old ship turned into a navy yard and dismantled and the world's inhabitants transferred to some other constellation. The angels in the song celebrated this coming international courtesy when in the Bethlehem starlight they chanted, "Good will to men."

Divine Grace in the Heart.

If others lack courtesy, that is no reason why you should lack it. Respond to rudeness by utmost affability. Because some one else is a boor is no reason why you should be a boor. But how few show urbanity when badly treated! Human nature says, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, retort for retort, slander for slander, maltreatment for maltreatment." But there have been those you and I have known who amid assault and caricature and injustice have maintained the loveliness of blossom week in springtime. Nothing but divine grace in the heart can keep such equilibrium. That is not human nature until it is transformed by supernal influences. To put it on the lowest ground you cannot afford to be revengeful and malignant. Hatred and high indignation are stages of unhealth. They enlarge the spleen; they weaken the nerves; they attack the brain. Rage in a man is one form of apoplexy. Every time you get mad you damage your body and mind and soul, and you have not such a surplus of vigor and energy that you can afford to sacrifice them.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.
DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SPRING IS HERE

And so is our immense stock of GOODS SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON. We visited the largest and best markets, and selected the best things to be had for this section.

Dress Goods, Wash Fabrics and Novelties IN ALMOST ENDLESS VARIETY.

Each season we try to improve, and we are sure we can convince you of this fact if a chance is given us.

ZIEGLER'S Slippers and Shoes for Ladies, DOUGLAS' for Men—which is enough to say.

Elegant line of MEN'S CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS.

BEAUTIFUL MATTINGS.

Our stock of RIBBONS is immense.

It costs you not a cent more to buy from a large, well-selected stock than from a poor one.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO., OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

N. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO. RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

This old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.
Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished.
Time made to suit the borrower.
Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's
Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE, STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO., RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co., BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company,

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

... FOR TOBACCO. ...

Bellefonte,

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Hard Cash,

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Standard,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

Alliance,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3.

FOR CORN AND COTTON,

Highland,

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 3.

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16 70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 22

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., JUNE 12, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

*Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.*

RANDOLPH-MACON COLLEGE.

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAMME

June 15th—Baccalaureate sermon by
Rev. J. W. Duffey, D. D., Washington,
D. C.

June 17th—Meeting of the Board of Trustees.

June 18th, 12 M.—Address before the Alumni by Hon. S. S. P. Patteson, of
Richmond, Va.

8 P. M.—Contest for the "Sutherlin Prize Medal for Oratory."

June 19th—Commencement Day.

12 M.—Annual address before the
students by Rev. James Atkins, D. D.,
Nashville, Tenn. Diplomas conferred.

8 P. M.—Joint celebration of the Literary Societies. President, Francis Osgood Smith, of Virginia; First Vice-president, Vernon Hope Kellam, of Virginia; Second Vice-President, Edward
James Woodhouse, of Virginia.

Orator of Washington Literary Society, Eldridge Watts Poindexter, of Virginia.

Orator of Franklin Literary Society,
Lewis Stafford Betty, of Virginia.

Address before the Societies by Rev.
Edward M. Deems, Ph. D., of New York.

Editorial.

The issue is given up quite largely this week to educational matter.

As a number of delegates to the General Conference asked the editor to send them the Recorder for awhile, a number of copies are being sent out temporarily.

What is fame? In the published report of the Richmond District Conference proceedings in the Richmond Dispatch, Rev. Asa Driscoll, pastor of our 15th Street church, Manchester, is put down as pastor of the colored Methodist church, of Petersburg. Verily, the secular press takes many and profiting privileges with both churches and preachers.

NAPOLEON—IN HANDWRITING.

In another column of the paper it is stated that the address of Brother Rawlings follows after the sermon of Brother Whitley. The editor requested Brother Rawlings to let him have the manuscript of the address delivered at Blackstone, and after some very commendable expressions of modesty as to his handwriting, he surrendered it.

The editor pocketed his prize and took it to Richmond with him. After preparing all the rest of the copy and turning it over to the printer, he decided to run over the manuscript hurriedly and see if there was anything out of the ordinary in the matter of handwriting. He sat down to do this at 7:15 P. M. Nobody was at hand to interrupt, except the operator on the type-setting machine close at hand.
The following note, which was left by this night operator for the day operator tells the tale:

"Mr. Lewis,—Tell Mr. Pace there is

BLACKSTONE INSTITUTE COM- MENCEMENT.

The 8th commencement exercises of the Blackstone Institute were held on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, June 8th, 9th, and 10th. All the exercises were held in the Institute hall, which has been built with special reference to public occasions, having a raised platform, large enough to seat the entire school of 275 young ladies, and an auditorium of large seating capacity.
The exercises were more largely attended by persons from a distance than ever before in the history of the school, there being at least 150 visitors entertained at the Institute, besides woman? for her price is far above ru-bies."

An excellent abstract of the sermon is given below. It was strong and clear, and the thought was clothed in the choice and appropriate language which those who know his preaching always expect to hear. He preached also at night on "That Bible of Yours," a very suggestive and helpful discourse. His work was highly appreciated by both faculty and students.

On the following morning the final concert was given. The programme of the entire commencement is given below. The music and recitations were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

an article on the stone, which I did not set. I could not make heads nor tails of it. Mr. Cannon stayed here until nearly 11 o'clock trying to decipher it, but he gave it up for a bad job, and left it for me to do, and this I could not do. It is awful. D. TUCKER."

Any man who can write English in Chinese characters, without ever having studied Chinese, and can then make out the meaning of the writing, deserves to be selected as special connectional interpreter of the meaning of all the documents pertaining to a certain celebrated "war claim." The whole working force of the Recorder—editor, publisher, compositor, proof-reader—
all acknowledge defeat by the Napoleonic chirography of Brother Rawlings.

The large number entertained by the citizens of Blackstone. This has always been a notable feature of the Blackstone commencements, and it is a source of much pleasure to the management of the Institute that so many persons from various parts of the State are willing to incur the expense and to lose the time in order to be present.

The weather was delightful. A refreshing rain had been followed by a drop in the mercury, and the great lawn was beautiful from the effect of the much-needed moisture.

The exercises began with the sermon. The preacher was Rev. J. T.
Whitley, of Lynchburg. The text was Prov. 31: 10: "Who can find a virtuous

A very delightful feature of the commencement, and one especially characteristic of the Blackstone Female Institute, was the singing of the chorus, composed of all the pupils, large and small, which, after the thorough training of Misses Sterling and Post, sang so delightfully, that notwithstanding the finished and brilliant work of the individual performers, the general desire of the audience was to hear the chorus "once more."

One of the special features of the work of the Institute is the opportunity offered for preparation for teaching. This department is in charge of Misses Nellie V. Powell, A. M., of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and Martha P. McGavock, A. B., of Ran-

(Continued on page 4.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1902, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

"By no means. Willis has some noble qualities. Why, Freeda, I'm in college now, perhaps, on account of his generosity. That's what plagues me some. That, and—and my promise to Mrs. Preston."

"What did you promise her?"

"Why, I made a general sort of promise to her that I would do all in my power to help Willis. But what can I do in this drink matter when he himself confessed that he had repeatedly broken the promise he had made to his own mother? I don't seem to have any influence over him in this direction. That is what I said to Mrs. Preston."

"Do you think you will have any influence over him now?"

"I don't know. Anyway, he's to blame for all this trouble. He knows he's wrong, and he can't blame me for his own foolishness."

"It seems dreadful, though, Ned, to think of him going to the bad this way and no one doing anything to stop it. Do you know?"—Freeda stopped and looked at her brother very thoughtfully as if she was in doubt about giving him her confidence—"do you know, Ned, if—it is possible some one of the girls might have influence with Mr. Preston. I think I know of one who could help him some."

Edward looked at Freeda anxiously. It was the first time in the conversation that he had given a thought about Willis' feeling for his sister. Was it possible she—

He asked a question cautiously, but at the same time with his usual love of the truth:

"What girl could help him?"

"I think Ida could. In fact, Ned—this is entirely confidential and you must not breathe it to a soul—I am sure Ida thinks a good deal of Mr. Preston. Ever since his return from the Philippines she has admired him. If she should use her influence, she might help him to break off his drinking."

Edward listened in silence. Here was a little complication with a vengeance. For the first time in his life he knew what jealousy meant. It was true he had, ever since his talk with the president, been able to control and even direct his feelings in regard to Miss Seton. But the thought that she might care more for the reckless Willis than for himself, the pang added a touch of bitterness to his love for Willis that he had never known.

He was so disturbed by this feeling that he did not stay much longer with Freeda. In answer to her question as to whether he didn't think Ida could help Willis he replied shortly that he didn't know, and soon went away to brood over this new chapter in his own little tragedy.

Before the end of the day he had found an empty room in one of the other halls and had moved his trunk into it. He secured a few pieces of furniture from a student who was selling out, and very late that night he went to bed thoroughly unhappy, restless over the whole business, angry with Willis, with Freeda for making the suggestion about Ida and with himself in general for being several kinds of a fool in coming to college at all.

Next morning he felt a little better, and a little ashamed of himself besides. But all through the day he was haunted by the dread of getting a letter from Mrs. Preston. He could not make his action seem quite right in the face of his promise to her. And as the week went by he watched for his mail with increasing nervousness.

But when another Saturday had gone and the letter the truth dawned on him that perhaps Mrs. Preston knew nothing about the affair. Edward had a returning wave of his old liking for Willis come over him as he began to realize that Willis had not written anything to his mother about it and probably never would.

It was at this point that Edward showed the better side of his character, especially in the matter of his truthfulness. He sat down that night and frankly wrote Mrs. Preston a full account of his leaving Willis. He did not attempt in this letter to hide the fact that it was largely on his own account, for the sake of his own peace and quiet, that he had left Willis.

An answer came promptly that week. It was in some particulars exactly what he had anticipated. In other ways parts of the letter surprised him.

It was a matter of great surprise to me—Mrs. Preston wrote—that you had left Willis. He writes me every week, and he said nothing about it in his letter that I received yesterday. I am more grieved and pained than I can tell you. Of course I do not excuse Willis for his conduct. It is what has been breaking my own heart for years now. He knows full well the consequences, and yet he chooses his course. I never told you that his grandfather was a drinking man. He used to boast of his temperance in drinking and said any man was a fool to let the habit get the better of him. He also claimed the liberty, as he called it, to do as he pleased, and on several occasions that I know of he resented attempts to restrain the liquor drinking in his own neighborhood. His son, Willis' father, was born without any taste for liquor, and I think he never touched a drop, but Willis is suffering from the sins of his grandfather. Willis is apparently a victim of the passion that his grandfather indulged in so boastfully and without any apparent personal harm. Oh, when will men learn the terrible truth that what they do or are will be repeated somewhere, some time in the third or fourth generation, and if they don't suffer some one will in the future? It seems to be one of the inexorable laws of God. But what have you done, Mr. Blake? Are you sure you have acted in the best way? Was there no other way for you to do but to leave my son alone? What influence will you have now? Did you plead with him as you might, or did you leave him in anger? Suppose I his mother, had abandoned him after all the times he has annoyed and disappointed and even ignored me and my prayers. For more than seventy times seven I have forgiven him on my knees before God. That is because I am his mother, while you were only his friend. But did you do all that a friend ought to do? God help me not to be unjust to you. I have tried to realize the position in which you were placed. But if our Father in heaven dealt with us too severely how many of us would ever come into the kingdom? What I fear for Willis now is that he will go down faster. He will become more and more reckless and make his friends more among the fast set than heretofore. If in any way you can still prevent this, I pray God you will do so. I do not know any other student in college who has any power over him. I have thought to write the president, but I know he is burdened with a great load, and I hesitate. If I have said in this letter things I should not, pardon me. You never can know the heartache of a mother for her firstborn and only son. The Lord bless you and give you success. Your friend, LUCILE PRESTON.

Edward reread this letter gravely. The last part of it added to his self accusation. At one time that same evening he was almost on the point of going over to see Willis and talk over matters. But his pride and also his natural obstinacy in keeping at a thing he had once decided upon kept him back. He answered the letter, after a fashion, and said in it that he would serve Willis in any way he could if opportunity offered. All the time he was writing it he felt more or less like a hypocrite. Was this friendship? Had he done all that a friend could do? The questions faced him repeatedly as he tried to go on with his college work and were seldom out of his mind. Along with it all was present that tinge of jealousy and bitterness toward Willis that dated their real beginning from his talk with Freeda.

So the winter term went on, rather unsatisfactorily for him. He was discontented from a number of causes and was not getting out of the course what satisfied him. He had a real pride in keeping up his rank in class, however, and in spite of his troubles he managed to retain interest enough in his regular work to do his best.

There was another matter, also, that began to interest him, and, for a time at least, it drew his mind away from thoughts of Willis.

His paper route was in the heart of the city and took him into stores, business offices of lawyers and doctors and into some places that he knew were evil. There was one place, especially, a large room at the top of an office block, that he very soon came to understand was nothing more nor less than a professional gamblers' resort. Generally he simply opened the door and flung the paper in without stopping. He had too many stairs to climb and too big a load of papers to stop anywhere on the route. But occasionally, as men were going in and out, as he came up to the door, instead of throwing the paper down inside where they would step on it, he walked in and put the paper on a table. The proprietor of the place one day asked him to do so every time, as his customers carelessly kicked the paper on the floor if it was thrown down there.

So, after awhile, as Edward fell into the habit of entering the room regularly, he gradually came to understand just what was going on there. There was an ordinance in Raynor that winter against gambling devices; but it appeared to be a dead letter, and there was hardly a pretext of secrecy about the matter of running the machines and the tables. In this particular place the violation of the law was open and bold. Crowds of young men thronged it every night. One evening, when the paper was delayed by an accident and the carriers were all two hours late, Edward noticed when he went in several college men from the fast set, and among them Willis, who was trying one of the new machines recently set up in the establishment.

It was this sight of Willis in this place that really started Edward to think about the iniquity of the whole business. We have spoken of his wholesome horror of the vices of gambling and betting. This horror was inborn in him. With all his faults of self righteousness, his firm love of truth and fairness gave him a real feeling of indignation toward such a vice as gambling, and the sight

"State your business here, you!" he said, of Willis and the thought of what it meant to him gave him sober thoughts on the subject, and he could not drive them away. Mrs. Preston's prediction concerning Willis' more rapid fall smote Edward as he thought of all he owed Willis for the paper route and many other old time kindnesses.

This feeling grew on him until he could not resist the growing conviction that he ought to do something. But he did not know just what to do, and finally, in his perplexity, he went to President Royce and told him about the affair.

The president listened with growing seriousness.

"I had no idea that matters were so bad in Raynor. How many of these gambling places are there on the street?"

"I don't know, sir. Williams, who carries a route on the other side, told me the other day that there were two places in the west block. I know of three smaller places at the end of my route down by the river."

"How many of the students did you see in this one place?"

"I think eight or ten in all. Of course I didn't stay long enough to notice much. But there were at least that many."

"You say that Mr. Preston was among them?"

"Yes, sir," said Edward, with some reluctance.

"Preston has been going down faster than ever lately. I've had to have him in here twice within the last two weeks and warn him. I fear he is in a very bad way. I'm sorry for his mother. Of course I know you have left him. Are you sure that was a right step?"

"No, sir, not altogether," replied Edward in a low voice.

"Well, my boy, we will not discuss that now. The question is what to do about these gambling dens in Raynor. They must be stopped if possible."

The president was silent a moment. Then he spoke abruptly.

"Are you willing to testify against the place, Blake?"

Instantly Edward confronted the situation and understood what it might mean. In the first place it would mean an enemy on the part of the proprietor. Then rose in his mind the question of spying. He entered the place unchallenged because he was on the paper route. If now he used that advantage to bring testimony against it, the fact when it came out in court, would mean the loss, not only of that one customer for his paper, but probably of several other keepers of disreputable places. He would have the whole crowd of lawbreakers down on him, and would damage his prospects seriously.
(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

BLACKSTONE FEMALE INSTITUTE.

(Continued from 1st page.)

dolph-Macon Woman's College and Ph. B. of the University of Chicago. (The latter has just completed a two-years' course at Chicago, having been given a furlough for that purpose.) Young ladies desiring to prepare to teach have actual practice in the work, as there is a model school in connection with the theoretical work. Of the thirty graduates of the present session, two-thirds look forward to entering upon the work of teaching.

The annual address was delivered by Rev. E. H. Rawlings, of Portsmouth, Va. The subject of the address was "The Daughter in the Home." Mr. Rawlings is at his best with young people. He feels at home, and his audience are speedily on good terms with him. His theme had the proper sound, and as he proceeded to develop it, it sounded better still, and at the close the large audience manifested its appreciation by the long-continued applause.

The class day exercises were carried out with much enthusiasm. The class of 1902 numbered thirty, being the largest class ever graduated at this Institute. The class officers and honors were as follows:

President, Bessie Fitcher, of Halifax; Vice-President, Della Louise Vaughn, Amelia; Secretary, Annie H. Irby, of Nottoway; Salutatory, Mabel Burton, of Culpeper; History, Frances C. Rogers, of Surry; Prophecy, Lucy Ashby Allen, of Amelia; Recommendations, Della Louise Vaughn, of Amelia; Testament, Mary Florence Rodes, Albemarle; Valedictory, Sallie Macon Garland, Cumberland. English diplomas were conferred upon the following young ladies: Lura Savage Bacon, New Kent; Alice Loleta Boggs, Accomac; Mary Frances Berger, Charlotte; Eloise Borum, Mathews; Annie Benson Compton, Chase City; Bessie Fitcher, Halifax; Mary Robertson Foushee, Norfolk county; Lizzie Eleanor Gillette, Southampton; Julia Lee Irby, Nottoway; Henrietta Aurelia Meredith, Brunswick; Lura Adelaide Phillips, Accomac; Frances C. Rogers, Surry; Clara Lee Sturgis, Brunswick; Belva Lorraine Temple, Brunswick; Margaret Anne Whitehead, Suffolk; Hannah Martin Wilkinson, James City.

Full diplomas were conferred upon the following: Lucy Ashby Allen, Amelia; Edith Burton and Mabel Burton, Culpeper; Nannie Maxey Epes, Nottoway; Sallie Macon Garland, Cumberland; Orlene Hutton, Texas; Emma Pauline Irby, Annie Harrison Irby, and Alice Irby, Nottoway; Hattie Ruth Lewis, Gloucester; Mary Florence Rodes, Albemarle; Alice Saunders Thomas, Nottoway; Della Louise Vaughn, Amelia; Rosa Pearl Wilroy, Nansemond.

Medals were awarded as follows: Music medals—improvement, Mabel Kennedy, Nottoway; Lottie May Bates, Halifax; Anna Seay, Nottoway; Lura Winstead, Northumberland; improvement in Vocal Music, Lucy Garland, Cumberland; proficiency in Vocal Music, Frances Ethel Cottrell, Newport News; proficiency in Instrumental Music, Anna Dupuy, Nottoway.

Medals for General Scholarship: Introductory course, Lura Lee Cannon, Nottoway; Junior course, Sadie Wallace, Brunswick; Intermediate course, Iona Edwards, King William, and Margaret McGavock, Wythe.

English Bible Medal, Janie Jackson, Amelia.

General Department Medal, Mary Florence Rodes, Albemarle.

The year which has just closed was the most prosperous in the history of the institution. The total enrollment was 270, of which number 210 were boarding pupils, 35 more boarders than during the preceding year.

Several thousand dollars were expended during the year in adding new and improved equipment to the various departments of the school, and the Board of Trustees authorized a like progressive policy for the coming year.

The programme of commencement exercises and the report of the sermon and address follow:

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAMME.

June 8th, 9th, and 10th, 1902.

SUNDAY, JUNE 8TH, 11:30 A. M.

1. Opening Chorus, "Creation," Haydn; 2. Hymn 1, "Come Thou, Almighty King;" 3. Prayer; 4. Anthem, "Great is the Lord," J. Lawrence Erb; 5. Scripture Reading; 6. Hymn 144, "My Saviour, My Almighty Friend;" 7. Sermon, Rev. J. T. Whitley, Lynchburg, Va.; 8. Chorus, "There is a Friend in the Home Land Far Away;" 9. Prayer; 10. Hymn 490, "So Let Our Lips and Lives Express;" 11. Benediction.

FINAL CONCERT.

Monday, June 9th, 11:30 A. M.

1. Chorus, "Welcome Pretty Primroses," Pinsuti-Benbow; 2. Piano Quartette (a, "Choeur Des Filenses du Vaisseau Fantonie," R. Wagner; b, "Song of the Toreador," from Carmen, G. Bizet), Misses Ruth Compton, Ida Jones, Lucie Bowman, Susie Armstrong; 3. Recitation, "A Sisterly Scheme" (H. C. Bunner), Miss Mary Margaret Smith; 4. Piano Duet, "Sonata II., Opus 33" (Anton Diabelli), Misses Mattie Thornton, Florence Deshazo; 5. Vocal Solo, "Daisy Time" (L. Denza), Miss Bessie Fitcher; 6. Chorus (a, "Voice of the Western Wind," b, "Slumber Song") (J. Barnby); 7. Piano Solo, "March" (Godard), Miss Louise Bear; 8. Vocal Trio, "The Lonely Rose" (E. Hermes), Misses Sallie Garland, Sallie Finney, Clara Sturgis; 9. Piano Trio, "Pensionatsfrenden, Walzer, Opus 18" (Wilhelm Kramer), Misses Annie Bell, Gelia Shepard, Annie Irby; 10. Recitation, "The Unsuccessful Plan," Miss Carrie Morris; 11. Duo, "Belisario," Misses Ethel Cottrell, Anna Dupuy; 12. Chorus, "Amorosa Waltz" (A. J. Boex).

ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Monday, June 9th, 8:30 P. M.

1. "God Bless Our Native Land;" 2. Prayer; 3. Anthem, "Come Holy Spirit" (Warren); 4. Piano Trio, "Bolero Brilliant" (E. Phillier), Misses Cordie Ewing, Addie Kuyk, Iona Edwards; 5. Chorus, "Sweet May" (J. Barnby), vocal class; 6. Address, Rev. R. H. Rawlings, Portsmouth, Va.; 7. Piano Quartette, "Peer Gynt-Suite" (Grieg), Misses B. A. Jones, B. W. Jones, Alma Burton, Mary Bell; 8. Chorus, "Just for To-Day" (H. R. Palmer).

CLASS DAY.

Tuesday, June 10th, 10:30 A. M.

1. "B. F. I. Song," Rev. J. R. Sturgis; 2. Salutatory, Miss Mabel Burton; 3. Piano Duet (a, "Minuet de Mozart," Schulhoff; b, "Rigandon," Chaminade), Misses Maxey Epes, Edith Burton; 4. "Class History," Miss Frances Rogers; 5. Recitation, "Bobby Shaftoe" (Homer Greene), Miss Henrietta Meredith; 6. Class Prophecy, Miss Ashby Allen; 7. Vocal Solo, "Dear Heart" (Tito Mattie), Miss Clara Sturgis; 8. Testament, Miss Florence Rodes; 9. Recitation, "Thora" (Hjalmar H. Boyesen), Miss Margaret Whitehead; 10. Recommendations, Miss Louise Vaughan; 11. Valedictory, Miss Sallie Garland; 12. Chorus, "Graduates' Farewell;" 13. Delivery of Distinctions, Medals, Diplomas; 14. Chorus, "Brief Life Is Here Our Portion."

THE DEMAND FOR CAPABLE WOMEN.

(Sermon preached by Rev. J. T. Whitley at Blackstone Female Institute commencement.):

"Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies."—Prov. 31: 10.

In its literary form, the Book of Proverbs is not an orderly treatise by a single author upon a definite theme. It is rather a collection of short sayings and brief poems, composed by a number of authors at various times, and probably in different lands, and dealing with the practical side of human life in the multiform details that it presents.

At the very close of the book the compiler has appended the brief composition of which our text is the opening verse. It is a little poem in the form of an acrostic of twenty-two stanzas, by an unknown author, sketching for us with extraordinary grace of outline and rare beauty of coloring the Hebrew conception of a perfect woman.

The poem opens with the question: "Who can find a virtuous woman?" Let me hasten to say that the word "virtuous" is here used, not in the narrower modern sense of "chaste," but in the older, broader meaning of "strong and brave and full of energy." It would be but a doubtful compliment to say of either Hebrew or Christian matron, "She is chaste," as if there could be any need to say such a thing as that. But it is a compliment of which any woman might well be proud to say of her, "She is strong and valiant and capable."

On the whole, I think this word "capable" expresses quite as fully as any one word can set it forth the meaning of the Hebrew term here employed. And so I invite you to join me in considering this question of capable womanhood.

I.—First, the Characteristics of this Virtuous, or Capable, Woman, as they are set forth in this inspired poem.

1. She is a wife and mother, the mistress of a household. Whatever may be our modern view of the matter, it is certain that the old Biblical conception of the highest type of womanhood was that of a matron rather than a maiden. So in this poem: "The heart of her husband trusteth in her. . . . Her children rise up, and call her blessed. . . . She looketh well to the ways of her household." . . . This is in harmony with the general tenor of the Scriptures. Eve, the first woman, was a divinely-ordained wife and mother. Mary of Nazareth, the wife of Joseph and mother of Jesus. Paul's advocacy of celibacy was only temporary to meet unusual conditions. For 1 Timothy 5: 14 he says: "I will that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house," etc. Let us, therefore, exalt wifehood and motherhood. The capable woman in the highest sense is a matron.

2. This capable woman is industrious and thrifty. "She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands. She is like the merchant ships: she bringeth her food from afar. She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and their task to her maidens. She considereth a field, and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard. She girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms. And so the description goes on to set before us a busy, thrifty housewife. Applied to our modern conditions, the details might require some modification. But the essential features are the same for all ages and lands. The truth here taught is that the model woman is not the indolent, careless one, who rielate, saunters languidly through the day, depending upon others to wait upon her; but the industrious one, who rises betimes, addresses herself with diligence to the duties that confront her, and serves others. Industry and economy are her watchwords.

3. Moreover, this woman is benevolent and religious. She is kind to the poor, and devout toward God. "She spreadeth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." Though full of business, she is never too busy to relieve the wants of the distressed; and though an adept at economy, she is never close-fisted toward the destitute. And she is thus a friend to the poor, not from worldly policy, but because she is a child of God. "A woman that feareth the Lord," is the brief but pregnant description with which the poet characterizes her. So the virtuous woman is a Christian woman, devout, spiritually minded, a lover of the prayer-meeting, and also one who, like Dorcas, is the friend and helper of those less fortunate than herself. A cold-hearted, undevout, formal, unsympathetic woman may be petted by the world, but she can never wear the crown of glory that God has prepared for the noblest womanhood.

4. Refinement and dignity also characterize this capable woman. Thus she is described here: "She maketh herself coverings (that is, carpets or cushions) of tapestry; her clothing is fine linen and purple." "Strength and honor (or dignity) are her clothing." That is to say, the ideal woman is not coarse and careless, willing to live in dirt with frayed garments and broken furniture. Her industry and thrift are manifested in the simple elegance with which she furnishes her house and attires herself and her family. She does not indulge in petty vanity, nor strut in lofty pride; but she loves to have elegant and beautiful things about her because she has a beautiful soul. In personal character she is not frivolous, but dignified, and her womanly tenderness is full of strength. The highest type of woman never casts aside her sweet dignity, even in her closest intimacies, nor is she weak and pliable in character.

5. Once more: this capable woman is wise and kind in the use of her tongue. A single verse of this poem sets forth the trait I have mentioned: "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and the law of kindness is on her tongue" (v. 26). This is the point at which many women—and men also—make the most grievous failure. Their many shining virtues are offset by an unruly habit of speech. Their influence for good is neutralized by a foolish or venomous tongue. The truly capable woman is capable of talking wisdom when instruction is needed; of speaking words of kindly sympathy when comfort is required; and of refraining from speech altogether when "silence is golden." To her husband and children, her domestic servants, her neighbors and friends, and to all who come within her sphere of influence, she is a wise counselor, a kind and sympathetic friend; her tongue a "tree of life."

II.—Now, secondly, consider the Great Demand for this Type of Womanhood.

1. In the text there is a distinct hint that the capable woman is not as plentiful as could be desired. The question, "Who can find" her? does not imply that such a woman is not to be found at all; but it does indicate a scarcity of such women. And the declaration that "her price is far above rubies," indicates not merely the value that proceeds from usefulness, but also the value that is based upon rarity, and is not this true to our experience? All gallantry aside, looking over your circle of acquaintance, how many maidens, or maidens, can you recall who embody all these traits of capable womanhood? How many are at once industrious and thrifty, spiritual and charitable, refined and dignified, wise and kind in speech? You will doubtless find a few; but is not the hint of scarcity justified by facts?

2. Let me call attention to the demand for capable women in the sphere of matrimony. It is significant that some scholars have translated the question of this text thus: "Who will find a virtuous wife?" It is not improbable that this is the real force of the text—that King Lemuel, or whoever wrote this remarkable little poem, meant to express his sense of the supreme value of such a woman as he describes in the tender relationship of marriage. The price of such a wife, in his opinion, was far above rubies.

At all events, the capable woman will never be in demand as a wife. While any a "beauty" or "belle" is left stranded upon the desolate beach of spinsterhood, the woman who is industrious, thrifty, religious, benevolent, refined, dignified, and wise and kind of speech will sooner or later find appreciation with a man who has brains enough to value her and heart warm enough to love her as she deserves to be loved.

3. Again, there is a distinct demand for such women in our social life. We are accustomed to look upon what is called "society" with too indiscriminating an eye; and we are prone to pronounce it heartless and shallow without reservation. But we should discriminate. No doubt there are social circles in which elegant indolence is valued above industry, and selfish brilliancy is set above devout beneficence, and dash outranks dignity, and wit outshines kindness of speech. But not all society is of this sort. There are circles where the capable woman is regnant; where brains and energy and womanly valor are held at their true worth; where reality is enthroned far above sham and shallowness. And I am glad to believe that this element in our social life is on the increase. More and more society will come to honor the capable woman, and will yield to her guidance up the sunny slopes of knowledge and virtue.

4. Moreover, there is great and increasing demand for capable women in the world of business. Along with the enormous development of manufacture and commerce in these modern times has come a great enlargement of the sphere in which public sentiment allows woman to move. I myself can remember the time when there was scarcely anything in business life open to women except domestic service and primary teaching! But now the sphere of woman's activities has been wonderfully widened. The difficulty is to find capable women to fill the places that are open. Many women, like many men, fail for lack of industry, and for lack of discretion. Many fail because they work under protest, with no enthusiasm and no passion for thoroughness. There will always be demand at high remuneration for the woman who shows industry, intelligence, and conscientious thoroughness in all that she attempts to do.

5. Finally, let me say, this type of capable womanhood is in great demand in the Church of God. It scarcely needs to be said that a very large proportion of the work of the Church is done by women. They are far more numerous than men on the rolls of the church; and, as a rule, they are more devout and faithful in their work. But will anyone affirm that the type of womanly character in our churches is as noble and Christ-like as it ought to be? Are there no indolent, worldly, frivolous women who bear the name of Christ? Are there none who prefer the shallow novel to the Book of God, and to whom the play-house has more attractions than the prayer-meeting? Believe me, after all that women are doing for God and humanity, there is yet abundant room for the capable woman who shall train her children well, set a noble example to the community, win men to the Saviour, and cultivate the multifarious life of the Church.

In concluding these remarks, let me say to every woman, old or young, in this audience: Though it is not an easy task to cultivate the character and do the work here set forth, it is possible to do it, and in the doing of it there is rich reward. There is praise for such a woman coming from lips that are very dear to her. "Her children rise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her (saying), 'Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.'" Deep down in her own heart there is a quiet voice that speaks words of commendation which she would not exchange for gold and jewels. And far beyond all mortal praise there is One who looks with joy upon such a character and life, and who says, and ever will say, to you: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." The capable woman finds her heaven begun on earth, as she lives and works to lift this earth to heaven.

And may I not say just a word to men, the fathers, husbands, brothers, sons, of these women who are aspiring to be and do all that God wills for them? It lies with you to help them to realize their loftiest ideal of capable womanhood. See that you put no obstacle in their way. Let no word of yours discourage them, no act of yours impede their progress. But let not your help be merely negative. See that you understand and appreciate the aspirations that fill their hearts. Render to them in due measure and at the right time the word of praise that they so much prize. And, above all, let the lives of these Christian women who are seeking a wider horizon and a more perfect service in behalf of their Lord stimulate you to a nobler manhood. Thus the capable woman and the capable man shall clasp hands in aspiration and achievement, and the prayer, "Thy kingdom come," shall find its perfect fulfillment.

RICHMOND DISTRICT CONFERENCE IN SESSION AT HAMPTON.

Hampton, Va., June 10.—The annual convention of the Richmond District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, opened in the First Methodist church here this morning, and will continue until Thursday afternoon. There are about 100 delegates and ministers in attendance, including the representatives of nearly every church in the district.

The opening session was called to order by Rev. Dr. J. Powell Garland, presiding elder of the Richmond District, and was devoted to the transaction of the usual routine business, such as the appointment of committees and the selection of the mode of procedure.

Rev. A. B. Sharpe, of the West End church, of Hampton, was unanimously elected secretary of the Conference, and Rev. R. L. Busby was chosen his assistant.

CHURCHES IN FINE CONDITION.

The roll-call of the churches when taken up elicited considerable interest. Presiding Elder Garland stated that the reports showed the spiritual, financial, and general state of the churches in this district to be the best in any Conference that he had ever been connected with. The reports showed that much work is being accomplished in all sections, but especially is this true in the city of Richmond.

The opening sermon of the Conference was delivered by Rev. A. A. Jones, of King and Queen county, who preached a masterly discourse from Lamentations 2: 12.

THE ORPHANAGE.

At the afternoon session the Committee on Orphanage made its report, which showed that considerable interest is felt in that branch of the work. The statement was made that enough money for the erection of the administration building, to cost $21,000, had been subscribed by the churches in Tidewater Virginia, while two cottages, to cost $15,000, were also provided for. The money needed now is to equip the building when completed. There are seventy acres of land in the tract selected for the home of the Orphanage.

A letter from Rev. Asa Driscoll, of Petersburg, pastor of the colored church in that city, was read, asking the Conference to assist his congregation in raising money with which to pay off the indebtedness of his church. A special collection for that purpose was announced for to-morrow.

Resolutions of sympathy were voted to Mr. M. E. Gary, of Richmond, who recently lost his son, and to Rev. J. Sidney Peters, of Hampton, whose wife is now ill in a hospital. Beautiful prayers were offered for the distressed families.

Hampton, Va., June 11.—The Richmond District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which held its annual convention here, completed its work this afternoon and adjourned to-night with a big missionary rally in the First Methodist church. The closing sessions of the Conference were not looked for until to-morrow, but the business passed off with such smoothness as to expedite matters, and the work was rapidly transacted to-day. The Conference met this morning at 9:30 o'clock, and the opening devotional services were conducted by Rev. W. A. Tompkins, of Fox Hill.

A letter from the Richmond and Manchester union class meeting was read, asking the Conference to endorse the work being accomplished by the union, and requesting all ministers to give it their hearty support. The communication was referred to the Spiritual Committee, which later reported favorably upon its recommendations, and the Conference unanimously adopted their report.

The petition from the York County Circuit, requesting that the circuit be divided, was presented, and the special committee named to look into the advisability of allowing the request, reported a resolution leaving the matter entirely in the discretion of the presiding elder, who may or may not grant the request.

ENDORSED REV. MR. CRAWFORD.

Rev. Dr. W. G. Starr, president of Randolph-Macon College, delivered a very interesting address before the Conference, in which he made a brief review of the condition of the college. Rev. Dr. James Cannon, Jr., president of the Blackstone Female Institute, was introduced and delivered a powerful discourse on "Christian Education." Considerable discussion was precipitated over a resolution endorsing Rev. Dr. J. H. Crawford, president of the Virginia Anti-Liquor League, and censuring Judge Campbell of Amherst county. The Conference declined to censure Judge Campbell, but adopted resolutions endorsing the work of Rev.

(Continued on page 12.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 22.

Text of the Lesson, Rom. xiii, 8-14.
Memory Verses, 12-14—Golden Text,
Rom. xiii, 12—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

8. Owe no man anything but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

We are asked to turn aside from our studies in the Acts to what the committee term a temperance lesson, but those who are acquainted with our lesson notes know that we never turn aside from the gospel of the grace of God and the glory of God for any other topic, believing that the gospel includes all else and that temperance means the fullest possible self control and self renunciation in every form. Our lesson is a part of the practical portion of this epistle, beginning with chapter xiii, 1, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God," and all that follows is enjoined upon the believer because of the free justification by grace given to the penitent sinner through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus (Rom. iii, 24). Apart from the redemption that is in Christ no amount of so called temperance counts for anything in the light of eternity, but when through His blood we enter into the place of "no condemnation and no separation" (Rom. viii, 1, 38, 39), then God expects us to walk no longer after the flesh, but after the Spirit and to let Him fulfill in us the righteousness of the law (Rom. viii, 4).

9. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

This is the Lord's own summary of what is called the second table of the law or our duty to our fellow man (Matt. xxii, 36-40). Some one has said that love is the law itself in manifold action, an obligation never fully discharged. It certainly was fulfilled perfectly in our Lord Jesus Christ, and He is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. x, 4). When He set the law, the Ten Commandments, before any one, saying, "This do and thou shalt live," He was endeavoring to convince him of sin that he might turn to Him for righteousness, for the law cannot give life, and by the deeds of the law no one is justified, because he cannot fully keep the law, so that the law simply shuts one's mouth and sends guilty and lost to Christ (Rom. iii, 19, 20; Jas. ii, 10; Gal. iii, 21-24).

10. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

Love studies to please and therefore cannot injure. The man who takes another's money and for it gives him that which destroys his reason and beggars himself and his family is not showing any love, but the most intense selfishness. He is saying, "I must have this man's money, no matter what becomes of him."

11. And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

A condition of indifference to things that should interest us is a state of sleep. The most remarkable instances of the sleep of believers is that of Peter, James and John, heavy with sleep on the Mount of Transfiguration in the presence of His glory and actually sleeping in the presence of His great agony in Gethsemane. Think also of the sleep of Samson in the lap of Delilah and its consequences to him, and of the storm at sea when the heathen cried to their gods and the only man on the ship who knew the living and true God was fast asleep, and the captain had to awaken him, saying, "What meanest thou, O sleeper?" Does it not seem as if millions of heathen perishing in their blindness are crying to the church today in the same words?

12. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light.

We were once darkness, but now we are light in the Lord, and we should walk as children of light (Eph. v, 8). Light has no fellowship with darkness. God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all. If we say we have fellowship with Him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not speak the truth. Let us therefore walk in the light, as He is in the light (11 Cor. vi, 14; 1 John i, 5-7). Although we have entered into the twentieth century since Christ came, it is still the world's night, and no amount of progress can bring the day which awaits His coming.

13. Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

These are varied forms of intemperance, impurity and passion to all of which the believer is to reckon himself dead. Now, we are to watch and be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love and for a helmet the hope of salvation (1 Thess. v, 6, 8). Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we are to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for our Lord Jesus, who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto Himself a people for His own possession (Tit. ii, 12-14).

14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make not provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof.

We are said in Gal. iii, 27, to have put on Christ, in Eph. iv, 22-24, to put off the old man which is corrupt and put on the new man which, after God, is created in righteousness and true holiness. So also in Col. iii, 9, 10. We are in Christ, and Christ is in us; the Father, Son and Holy Spirit have come to dwell in us (John xvii, 21, 26; xiv, 17, 23), and all they ask is that we yield fully to them, that they may fill us with joy and peace and manifest the life of Jesus in us.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Hospitality is a Scriptural characteristic of greatness in woman.—Rev. J. T. M. Johnston, Baptist, St. Louis.

The Sermon on the Mount.

The sermon on the mount is an appeal for an outward and inner life in accord with the spirit and life of Christ himself.—Rev. Dr. Dana, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

The Spirit of Helpfulness.

Once let the spirit of helpfulness be developed in a life, and ways to manifest it will open on every hand.—Rev. Dr. F. B. Cherington, Episcopalian, San Francisco.

The Pursuit of Truth.

If a man wishes to lead the manly life, he must consecrate himself to the pursuit of truth. The truth seeker is the only God seeker.—Rev. Minot J. Savage, Unitarian, New York.

Asked Disciples to Follow Him.

Christ never talked to his disciples about Christianity. He did not ask them to endorse his sermon on the mount, but invited them to follow him.—Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Acquaintance With Christ.

No man is shut off by the weakness of another's showings of Christ, and no man is justifiable in being without Christ who has not made personal acquaintance with him.—Rev. Dr. A. M. Campbell, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

The Temple of the Soul.

The noblest edifice that ever was erected by the hand of man is but a perishable monument compared to the temple of the soul illumined with the light of faith and adorned with the jewels of virtue.—Cardinal Gibbons, Catholic, Baltimore.

No Salvation In Theories.

Speculative and impractical piety is not worth the time it takes or the paper it is printed on. I have no desire to tax my mind with any theories about religion. There is little profit and no salvation in theories.—Rev. Robert E. Lee Craig, Episcopalian, St. Louis.

The Four Identities of Man.

There are four identities to man: the organic, personal, formal and material. The present body is the master of the soul, but the spirit shall be the master of the body after death. The body shall then be glad to be the willing servant.—Rev. Dr. H. C. Minnion, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Conscience the Guide.

The Christian conscience should be a guide. There are certain methods in legitimate business that a Christian cannot practice. Whether he employs labor or whether he is himself employed, his conscience should reveal to him what is legitimate in business.—Rev. W. G. Partridge, Baptist, Cincinnati, O.

The Very Best Thing.

Our age has somehow absorbed the idea that Christian living is a very busy thing, asking little of us and not insisting very strenuously even on that little. This is responsible for the easy going religion of our time, a religion which refuses to be harnessed to any definite belief.—Rev. J. K. Brennan, Episcopalian, St. Louis.

Test of Christianity.

The test of Christianity, the truth of faith, is a holy spirit. The confessed need of humanity is the inspiration of divinity. The ideal of society is a communion of spirit and truth for eternity. The fount of this communion is the love, joy, peace and power of Christian spirituality.—Rev. Dr. Tompkins, Methodist, Chicago.

Way to Learn God.

Humility is the way to learn of God. It is the opening of the heart toward God. It is the receptive attitude of the child before its parent, of the student before his teacher. With that receptive disposition does the student of nature seek to solve its mystery, learn its law, and know its life.—Rev. J. C. Horning, Reformed Church, St. Louis.

Must Use It or Lose It.

In the Mammoth cave there are eyeless fish because not a ray of light has ever reached those deep caverns, and the organ, having fallen into disuse, disappeared. The vital current will not flow to keep up a useless organ. So with our religious life. We must use it or we will lose it.—Rev. W. A. Hunter, Presbyterian, Denver.

Faithful to Divine Authority.

If men really would live great lives, they must be faithful to the divine authority even unto death. Man can flame bright and high for a moment in some phase of service and then, alas, go out into utter darkness and collapse. Only the supernatural forces can uplift the whole man and sustain him on the high level of the long stretches.—Rev. R. H. Bent, Independent, St. Louis.

The Mystery of Life.

It is strange that when the deepest experiences come and the most intimate griefs knock on our door and the latch and come in unannounced that their faces should be veiled, and we do not know them or know their errand, nor trust it when we see it, nor know what to do with them now they have come. They are part of the mystery of life. So it behooves us to keep the main traveled roads.—Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Unitarian, New York.

A Question of Mathematics.

Some mathematician has calculated that if I cent had been loaned at compound interest at 6 per cent at the birth of Christ, the principal would equal a mass of gold as large as all our planets, and that this earth on which we live, if it were a ball of gold, would not pay one hour's interest on the sum. How great, then, will be the harvest of the righteous who are living a life of simple faith in Christ, and how great and how awful will be the harvest of those who live and die in sin.—Rev. Dr. W. J. Williamson, Baptist, St. Louis.

TEMPERANCE TIME TABLE.

Pastor's Novel Way of Crystallizing Prohibition Sentiment.

Rev. George F. Waters, pastor of the Congregational church, Glastonbury, Conn., has adopted a novel means of crystallizing the prohibition sentiment of his parishioners in the form of the following time table:

BLACK VALLEY RAILROAD,
The Great Central Fast Route —from—
SIPPINGTON —to—
DESTRUCTION.

Quick Time! Accommodating Service! Low Fares!

N. B.—No danger from COLLISION, as all trains are DOWN TRAINS.

Trains start at all hours day and night via:

SIPPINGTON	Beggarstown
MEDICINEVILLE	DELIRIUMTUM
TIPPLETON	MANIACVILLE
TOPERSVILLE	IDIOI FLATS
DRUNKARD'S CURVE	THUNDERLAND
ROWDIVILLE	DESTRUCTION

*Branch ticket offices in doctors' offices and drugstores.

**Lightning Express beyond this station. All excursion tickets exchanged for through tickets.

†Passengers are warned not to put their heads out of the windows while passing this station.

John Burns on Drink.

In a recent speech in London to working people John Burns, the famous labor leader, laid earnest stress upon the enormous evils of drink. He recounted, with facts and figures, the overcrowded housing conditions of London, the amount of pauperism, the great though decreasing amount of criminality, the prevalence of betting, the tendency toward increased isolation of rich and poor. "But," he added, "I deem it my duty to say that but for drink and its concomitant evils our problem would be smaller and our remedies more effective."

Temperance In Japan.

The temperance movement began in Japan in 1873 with a society of foreign residents of Yokohama. Other societies have been organized, many of them by the round-the-world missionaries of the W. C. T. U., until now there are forty six of these societies united in a national temperance league. The league represents 3,617 members. As a result of their agitation a bill has been passed prohibiting the use of tobacco by children under twenty years of age.

An Incentive to Drink.

Dr. David Paulson of Chicago declares that the eating of pepper sauce and hamburger cheese by boys creates in them an appetite for cigarettes and whisky. He thinks that cooks are in league with the saloon keepers and cigarette makers. Parents are guilty of criminal carelessness, according to Dr. Paulson, when they allow highly seasoned food to be served to their children.

BEER AND DISEASE.

Relation Between the Two Shown by William G. Haselbarth.

The brewers dwell upon the peculiar advantages of beer as "a wholesome beverage" adapted to promote health and longevity. Even some physicians lend their sanction to its habitual use. It is self prescribed by many, with the vague notion that in some way they are to be benefited by it. Thousands thus drink beer "medicinally," as they fancy, obtaining their supplies from the grocer or the saloon keeper, who would not think of taking other drugs without a trusted physician's order and the skillful chemist's preparation. The injury thus wrought to the public health is beyond computation, says W. G. Haselbarth in Christian Work. One of the results clearly demonstrated is the alarm increase since the more general habit of beer drinking of serious kidney and other threatening maladies.

The constant use of beer is found to produce a species of degeneration of all the organism, profound and deep seated. Fatty deposits, diminished circulation, conditions of congestion and perversion of functional activities, local inflammations of both the liver and kidneys, are constantly present. In appearance the beer drinker may be the perfect picture of health, but in reality he is of all others the most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, severe cold or shock to the body or mind will commonly provoke acute disease, ending fatally. Compared with inebriates who use different forms of alcohol he is more incurable and more generally diseased.

So far from being nourishing and strengthening to those who use it, the ultimate effect of beer is shown by the experience of athletes and others to be a serious loss of power for great achievement and endurance. The testimony is most abundant and conclusive that, so far from being a healthful beverage, as the brewers assert, beer, which contains an average of 5½ per cent of alcohol, is inimical to the public health.

Facts From a Reformatory.

A study of the 500 inmates of the Jeffersonville (Ind.) reformatory, all young men between the ages of sixteen and thirty, shows that 57 per cent of these criminals had never attended Sunday school. Eighty-one per cent had no trade, 312 used liquor, and 404 used tobacco in some form.

An Enemy by Instinct.

The liquor traffic and the Sabbath are in natural enmity, says Judge Robert J. Pitman in Alcohol and the State. It is no chance association which leads to the cry, "Down with Sunday laws and the liquor laws," in so many parts of the country. The traffic wants the day.

France's Unenviable Record.

More alcoholic liquors are drunk in France than in any other country.

If we do stumble and fall, it is to our credit if we stumble and fall toward God.

Piny-Balsam Relieves Right Away and makes a speedy end of coughs and colds

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. It has no taste or odor. It is air tight and self proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake.

Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK NEW WESTERN VALLEY ROUTE

THROUGH THE STATES OF MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.

THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.

Shenandoah Valley

Virginia & Ohio Line

LURAY GROTTOS NATURAL BRIDGE MOUNTAIN LAKE BRISTOL KNOXVILLE CHATTANOOGA LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN BIRMINGHAM MEMPHIS NEW ORLEANS

NORFOLK ROANOKE KENOVA CHILLICOTHE COLUMBUS AND THE N. C. T.

Write for Rates, Maps, etc. Sleeping Car Reservations, Descriptions, etc. to any Agent.

W. B. BEVILL, ALLEN, FERRIS, GENERAL PASS AGENTS, DISTRICT MANAGERS, RICHMOND, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $16,400.

W. H. MANN, President.

J. M. HARRIS, Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT, Cashier.

BENHAM MORRIS, R. LOGAN HARRIS, Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

DR. W. V. ADKINS,

Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

Prescriptions compounded by express.

please Druggists

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than ..... 4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 ..... 3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
Blackstone, Va.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,
STIFF MUSCLES,STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
PAIN IN THE BACK,
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS.

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.

Boydton, May 28th, at night.

Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.

Ligh-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blandford, May 25th, night.

Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

IMPURE DRINKING WATER is always a source of danger; dysentery and bowel troubles follow its use, every person should have handy a bottle of Painkiller (Perry Davis'), which will quickly cure these distressing ailments. Be careful and see that the storekeeper does not pawn off some worthless substitute upon you, as is sometimes done for the sake of a few cents extra profit. Large bottles, 25 and 50 cents.

Communications

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The world is getting wiser, if not weaker. Theology, as a science, has been undergoing an evolution for the better from the first. Calvinism is on its last legs. The Northern Presbyterian Church will utterly repudiate the harder features of their system of divinity. Calvin is decreasing and Arminius is increasing. If you can get civilized men to believe that an enlightened and rebellious sinner, who could be saved, but chooses death in the error of his ways, will go to endless torment that is as much as you can get them to believe; but it is too far up towards the noon of the world to get them to believe that men for whom no provisions of salvation have been made, who were created to that end, will go to endless torment to the praise of God's glorious justice! Some time ago I asked an intelligent man, who was once Calvinistic in sentiment, what he thought of Calvinism; he replied: "It makes God worse than the devil."

Some of those who favor a revision of the Confession are wont to say that the present Creed is all right; but it has been misunderstood and misinterpreted; that they favor such a change as that such misapprehensions cannot take place. The Creed has not been misunderstood; the difficulty with it has been that it has been too well understood for the good of those holding it. No creed was ever expressed in less ambiguous terms. It would be more candid in those advocating a change to say that they want a new creed simply because the old Creed is false. Many pretend to deny that Calvinists ever believed in the damnation of infants. Why, the damnation of infants is a necessary corollary of the doctrine's absolute decrees and unconditional election; and it is one of the mildest forms of Calvinistic doctrine. It is a greater display of divine mercy to allow a reprobate to die in infancy and go to hell to be punished only for Adam's sin than to allow him to grow up to manhood and then go to hell to suffer for both his own sins and Adam's. To hold to unconditional election, and, therefore, to unconditional reprobation, and then deny infant damnation, is to believe that a reprobate can't die in infancy, and that reprobation is an absolute life insurance to infants! Such absurdities does the doctrine involve.

Ingersoll said one good thing: "An honest God is the noblest work of man." Civilized men demand a civilized God. In the minds of barbarians God is simply the greatest of all barbarians, the most relentless and implacable of all tyrants.

Hitherto intelligent Presbyterians have worn Calvinism as a loose garment; now they are about to lay it aside for a better fitting garment. I admire their Church government; it is republican, and if they had a republican creed they would at once step into greater popularity. With a faulty creed this Church has done a vast amount of good in the world; with a good creed it will do vastly more good. God bless and prosper the Presbyterians!

I was glad to see that the minority report at General Conference was supported by at least two of the Holston delegation—Richardson and Neighbors. I did not expect this of Neighbors, for he was one of the committee that reported that resolution of censure against the Midland Methodist for criticising the Book Agents, and demanding a return of the money. But wise men change, fools never.

I have read and compared the two reports and the substitute. The minority report was an able document, and its facts and arguments were unanswerable. I was glad that the attempt to permit its publication was a failure. That bluff game was evidently inspired by Major Stahlman, either directly or indirectly. Between the majority report and the substitute, as it was adopted, I should have voted for the former. But the paper adopted has become the law, and we must take due notice thereof and govern ourselves accordingly. It is the voice of the Church, and we must heed it.

The Pentecostal Herald of May 27th said: "At last, but by no means least, Mr. Stahlman, the attorney for the Book Agents, who virtually admitted before the Senate Committee that he had been untruthful, and who had put into his pocket one hundred thousand and eight hundred dollars of the money which of right belonged to the worn-out preachers, or the widows and orphans of deceased preachers, had the audacity to come upon the scene, and make himself conspicuous, in the hotel lobby, at the place of the meeting of the Conference, and in the columns of the daily papers. It is presumed that it was the presence of this man which made Dr. Hoss afraid to publish the minority report. The Church will be glad to know that many of her loyal sons were only stimulated by these circumstances to rise in their Christian manhood to defend her sacred honor."

The Nashville Christian Advocate of June 5th contains the "parting words" of Dr. Hoss and "a salutation" from the Rev. George B. Winton, the incoming editor. These farewell and salutatory words are very appropriate. But in the same issue there is a very unfortunate editorial article, headed "The Work of the General Conference." Whether written by the outgoing or by the incoming editor I know not. It is to be hoped that in the interregnum "an enemy hath done this." Whether it marks the spirit of a man entering the episcopacy or of a man taking his seat on the tripod of "the great official," it is equally unfortunate. I copy only the following paragraph: "The war claim occupied the attention of the Conference much less than the secular papers would have had the public suppose. Those who thought the Church had been compromised or might be, stated their views fully, but the Conference did not accept those views. The Bishops had long since offered to return the money if any wrong were alleged. To this offer the Conference heartily adhered. But a large majority of the delegates were convinced that no such allegation had been made or would be made by either branch of Congress. There was, therefore, nothing further to be done. To attempt to meet and hush the accusions of ignorant and prejudiced individuals was a hopeless task. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not need to define her position on a matter of common honesty nor to have her servants tried at the bar of Congressional Committees. Elsewhere to print the action of the General Conference, the only body competent to pass upon the whole subject. Any further agitation of a matter of which the Church is heartily weary should be looked upon as an attack upon her peace."

What of the assertion, "But a large majority were convinced that no such segregation had been made or would be made by either branch of Congress?" This means to say that Congress had not alleged any wrong done in the matter. This sentence convinces me that Dr. Hoss did not write the article. And I feel pretty sure that the General Conference could not have committed the blunder of putting a man into the place of editor of our chief connectional organ who would be capable of making such an assertion. I therefore conclude that some incompetent person has succeeded in wedging his unfortunate article into the paper. I shall so believe until I am better informed.

What about calling such men as Cross Alexander, President Dowman, S. Glenn, Hammond, Grey, Lovett, Moore, Richardson, of South Carolina; Richardson, of Tennessee; Tigert, Ellett, Pritchett, Neighbors, et als—I say, what about calling such men ignorant and prejudiced individuals?" Since beginning this paragraph I think I could guess the young buck who penned the article in the Nashville Advocate. I hope Drs. Hoss and Winton will both publish cards disavowing the authorship of the article.

Dr. Hoss is a Holston man of great talent and learning. His Conference is proud of him, and I pray that he may make a first class Bishop, and that, as a preacher and pastor, he may do a great amount of good.

Dr. Coke Smith is a favorite of men. I voted for him four years ago on the last ballot. I was glad to hear that his genial, loving man was made one of our chief shepherds.

Dr. Bigham is a choice man for a Book Agent, and he will not be a sore-head. He is honest and incorruptible, and the very soul of system.

R. N. PRICE.

Morristown, Tenn., June 6, 1902.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

All convene at Shiloh church, North Rocklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 9th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Lughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

God gives us power to bear all the sorrows of His making; but He does not give the power to bear the sorrows of our own making, which the anticipation of sorrow most assuredly is.—MacLaren.

Religious News.

PRINCETON'S NEW PRESIDENT.

Woodrow Wilson, head of the department of jurisprudence and politics, was to-day elected president of Princeton University in place of Francis L. Patton, who has resigned in order to devote more time to literary work. He will retain a place on the faculty.

MINISTERS' MEETING.

The meeting of the Methodist ministers of this city and vicinity at Epworth church yesterday was held within one-half hour, and the reports were brief and to the point. The one item of special interest was the large amount raised by the congregation of the Christian Memorial Temple, which indicated the tremendous impetus the cause has attained in that live congregation.

The meeting was called to order by the president, the Rev. W. R. Proctor. Prayer was offered by the Rev. H. J. Paylor.

Reports were called for and were made as follows:

Rev. W. R. Crowder had a good congregation at Denby's in the morning. In the afternoon Children's Day drew a large crowd together and the occasion was one of the greatest successes in the history of the church.

Rev. J. B. Merritt, chaplain, held interesting services at the Seamen's Bethel.

At Owen's Memorial the Sunday school was fairly good. The pastor, Rev. Ernest Stevens, preached in the morning and conducted a funeral in the afternoon. At night a crowded house greeted Children's Day exercises, which were a great success.

Rev. G. H. Lambeth conducted the usual services at Lekie's Memorial, as did Rev. D. T. Merritt at Port Norfolk.

Rev. Geo. Wesley Jones, at Trinity, and Rev. J. N. Latham, at Park View.

The Rev. Dr. J. P. Barrett had a good day at the Christian Memorial Temple. There were four services held during the day, in which the annual missionary offering was made. The sum realized amounted to $1,215.

Rev. W. C. Vaden conducted the services at Wright Memorial in the morning and at Monumental at night.

Rev. E. K. Odell, recently appointed to the pastorate of Huntersville, filled the pulpit there Sunday, morning and evening and reorganized the Epworth League.

Rev. C. W. Cain preached to a good congregation at Centenary in the morning, supplying for Rev. E. T. Dadmun.

The usual good Sunday school was held at Lambert's Point and the usual services were conducted by Rev. C. H. McGee.

At Queen Street Rev. J. K. Jolliff, in addition to conducting the usual services, took up the Conference collections. The amount asked for is in sight.

Rev. Hugh J. Paylor stated that the Cartersville chapel is in good condition. More money has been raised on Conference collections than was asked for, and more than ever before in the history of the chapel.

At Wright Memorial Rev. W. C. Ya-den preached in the morning, and Rev. R. Finley Gayle at night. He also addressed the missionary meeting in the afternoon.

Rev. R. Finley Gayle stated that his work at Mt. Vernon, Danville, is in fair condition.

Rev. W. R. Proctor, at McKendree, and Rev. W. Asbury Christian, at Memorial, conducted the usual services.

At Epworth Bishop A. Coke Smith preached in the morning, and the pastor, Rev. R. H. Bennett, at night. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. C. Vaden.

MINISTERIAL UNION.

The Tidewater Ministers' Union met yesterday at 11 A. M. in Epworth M. E. church. The president and vice-president being absent, Rev. C. H. McGhee was elected temporary chairman. Rev. J. W. Harrell was elected a member of the association. According to the constitution, there will be no meetings here during July, August and September.

The Prayer-Meeting Committee reported that Rev. Dr. C. E. Grammer would present a paper at the first fall meeting in October.

Rev. R. H. Bennett, pastor of Epworth church, presented a paper on "The Cost of the Atonement." It was an able paper and very much enjoyed by the association. The following is a brief sketch of his paper:

"While many inviting vistas of thought open before us in this subject, the properties of this occasion and the the theoretically cosmopolitan character of this assemblage close many of these doors, leaving at the same time abundant fields of investigation for us, walking in which we may emphasize our manifold wealth of agreement without accentuating our minor points of difference.

"Whatever may be our different theories of this great subject, the common inheritance of the followers of our Lord is the cost of the atonement. Of the cost to the Son who 'suffered for us' we have the accounts from the evangelist who recorded His life.

"The atonement was preconceived with God and not an afterthought or desperate remedy to retrieve His shattered fortunes when sin entered the world. Atonement is coexistent with man's transgression. All its tragic and glorious history was foreseen by its author. Some of its elements were the condescension of the Creator in the incarnation, the shame of His life, the degradation of the cross, the physical sufferings of crucifixion, a lifelong surrender of every personal preference, the misinterpretation of His holiest purposes and the attributing of His noblest deeds to ignoble motives; a lifelong exposure to temptation, the knowledge in advance of all the suffering through which He was to pass, the futility of even infinite love in the presence of wilful sin, the many elements of Gethsemane's agony, including especially the burden of universal guilt upon a stainless soul, infinite loneliness with even the abandonment of the Father upon Calvary.

"There was, however, sustaining joy through all this suffering, as He contemplated the results He was to bring to pass. Our Saviour did not drag Himself as an unwilling victim to a hated and despised altar. The unquenchable affection of the divine overcame the human shrinking. The elements of this sustaining comfort were the assurance of the riches of grace to be bestowed upon His chosen ones throughout eternal ages when this brief suffering was over, of destroying sin by the power of infinite love, of reconciling all feuds, of proclaiming peace on earth, good-will to men, of putting an end to unholy strife, of gathering unto Himself in one all the nations of the world, and ultimate and complete satisfaction at the travail of His soul.

"And so, having endured the cross, despising the shame, He has risen to take His place up, up, up far above all principalities and powers at the right hand of the throne of God—far more glorious than ever before, and forevermore exalted a prince and a Saviour to give repentance to Israel and remission of sins."—Virginian-Pilot.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

That Americans love peace is well known to all familiar with the character of our people. It has often been shown in cases in which we had no personal interest, and it was once more shown this week, when the official news of peace between the British and the Boers was received in Washington. There was, of course, no such noisy demonstrations of satisfaction as the cable reported to be occurring in London and other parts of Great Britain. The British had other reasons than love of peace for rejoicing. The war in South Africa had devoured thousands of British soldiers, and has cost something like a billion of dollars. But the war had cost us nothing, either in blood or money—in fact, it had probably brought a financial profit on the whole to this country. Yet, no news for a long time has been received with more general and heartfelt satisfaction than that of peace in South Africa. This was not merely by a few individuals, but by everybody. The President, members of the Cabinet and of both branches of Congress, as well as those in more humble positions, all took occasion to express their pleasure at the return of peace. As the fighting was thousands of miles away this pleasure could only have been caused by a sincere love of peace that is highly creditable to the American people. The peace terms, while by no means light on the Boers, were doubtless as good as could have been expected under the circumstances, and better than many thought they would be. But there has been comparatively little discussion of the terms in Washington—only expressions of satisfaction that they have been agreed to and that the white-winged dove of peace is once more flying over a country which has suffered all the untold miseries of war since October, 1899—miseries which have borne hard, if not hardest, upon women and children, who had nothing to do with the war.

Mr. James A. LeRoy, who went to the Philippines as secretary to Mr. Dean C. Worcester, of the Philippine Commission, and now calls Manila his home, said of the ex-member of Agui-

(Continued on page 12.)

WASHINGTON. — In this Dr. Talmage's first discourse for the new year he speaks words of encouragement to all the timid and doubting. The text is Exodus xii, 2, "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you."

The last month of the old year has passed out of sight, and the first month of the new year has arrived. The midnight gate last Wednesday opened, and January entered. She deserves a better name, for she is called after Janus, the heathen deity who, they supposed, presided over doors and so might be expected to preside at the opening of the year. This month was of old called the wolf month because, through the severity of its weather, the hungry wolves came down seeking food and devouring human life. In the missals of the middle ages January was represented as attired in white, suggestive of the snow, and blowing the fingers, as though suffering from the cold, and having a bundle of wood under the arm, suggestive of the warmth that must be kindled.

Yes, January is the open door of the year, and through that door will come what long processions, some of them bearing palm leaves and some myrtle, others with garlands of wheat and others with cypress and mistletoe. They are coming, and nothing can keep them back—the events of a twelvemonth. It will, I think, be one of the greatest years of all time. It will abound with blessing and disaster. National and international controversies of momentous import will be settled. Year of coronation and dethronement, year that will settle Cuban and Porto Rican and Philippine and South African and Chinese destinies. The timest year for many a decade past has dug its millions of graves and reared its millions of marriage altars.

We can expect greater events in this year than ever before, for the world's population has so vastly increased there are so many more than in any other year to laugh and weep and triumph and perish. The mightier wheels of mechanism have such wider sweep. The fires are kindled in furnaces not seven times but seventy times heated. The velocities whirling through the air and sailing the seas and tunneling the mountains will make unprecedented demonstration. Would to God that before the now opening year has closed the earth might cease to tremble with the last cannonade and the heavens cease to be lighted up with any more conflagration of homesteads and the foundries that make swords be turned into blacksmith shops for making plowshares.

Grasp Present Opportunities.

The front door of a stupendous year has opened. Before many of you there will be twelve months of opportunity for making the world better or worse, happier or more miserable. Let us pray that it may be a year that will indicate the speedy redemption of the hemisphere. Would to God that this might be the year in which the three great instruments now chiefly used for secular purposes might be put to their mightiest use in the world's evangelization—the telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph. Electricity has such potent tongue, such strong arm, such swift wing, such lightning foot, that it occurs to me that it may be the angel that St. John saw and heard in apocalyptic vision when he started back and cried out, "I saw another angel flying in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people." They were tongues of fire that sat on the heads of the disciples at the Pentecost, and why not the world called to God by tongue of electric fire? Prepare your batteries and make ready to put upon the wires the world wide message of "whosoever will."

Furthermore, this month of January has the greatest height and depth of cold. The rivers are bound in crystal chains. The fountains that made highest leap in the summer parks now toss not one jet, for every drop would be a frozen tear. The sleds crunch through the hard snow. Warmest attire the wardrobe can afford is put on that we may defend ourselves against the fury of the elements. Hardest of all the months for the poor, let it be the season of greatest generosity on the part of the prosperous. How much a scuttle of coal or a pair of shoes or a coat or a shawl may do in assuagement of suffering between the 1st of January and the 1st of February God only knows. Seated by our warm registers or wrapped in furs which make us independent of the cutting January blast, let us not forget the fireless hearth and the thin garments and the backing cough and the rheumatic twinge of those who through destitution find life in winter an agony. Suppose each one of us take under charge one poverty stricken household or one disabled man or one invalided woman. On our way come from such a charity, though the wind may be howling and the night tempestuous. I should not wonder if we could hear a voice that was heard on Galilee and at the gates of Nain and by the pool of Bethesda saying, "Inasmuch as ye did it to them, ye did it to me."

Victories of the Frost.

Oh, the night of the cold! The arctic and antarctic invading the temperate zone! The victories of the frost—as when the Thames in 1205 became firm as any bridge and the inhabitants crossed and recrossed on the ice and booths and places of temporary amusement were built on the hardened surface; as when many years ago New York harbor was paved with ice so that the people passed on foot to the adjoining islands. But the full story of the cold will never be known. The lips which would have told it were frozen and the fingers that would have written it were benumbed. Only here and there a fact appears. In 1691 the cold was so terrific that the wolves entered Vienna. In 1468 it was so cold that wine was cut with hatchets and distributed among the soldiers. In 1234 a whole forest was killed by the cold at Ravenna. In 763 the Black sea was frozen over. As we go further back the frosts are mightier, but as we come further down the frosts lessen. The worst severities have been halted, and the snows have lost their depths, and the thermometers announce less terrific falls of temperature, and the time will come when the year will be one long summer of foliage and bloom. While the world's moral condition will be reformed, the worst climates will be corrected. You could not have a millennium with a January blast possible.

Behold, also, as it is possible in no other month of the year, the wondrous anatomy of the trees in January, the leaves of the last year all gone and not so much as a bud of a new botanical wardrobe appearing, the trees standing with arms stretched toward heaven, one of the greatest evidences of the wisdom and the power of the Creator. The leaves appear only once and then die, but these great arms are stretched up toward heaven in silent prayer for scores of years, now mailed with ice, now robed in snow or bowing to the God of the tempests as he passes in the midnight hurricane. In July the trees stand glorifying the earth; in January they stand defying the winter. Under the same tree the child plays with his toy and, growing up to manhood, sits under it in sentimental or philosophic mood and, having passed on to old age, rests himself under its shade. In these January days the trees seem to say: "The leaves that rustled their music in the last summer are dead and gone, but the leaves that will adorn this uncovered brow and these bare arms shall have as much beauty and glory as their predecessors. Only wait. There are beautiful and lovely things to come in my tree life, as there are beautiful and lovely things to come in your life, O human spectator." Oh, the tree! Only the Almighty and the Infinite could have made one. Gothic architecture was suggested by it. But for the arch of its bough and the pointing of its branches the St. Chapelle of Paris and other specimens of Gothic arch would never have been lifted. No wonder the world has taken from it many styles of suggestiveness—the laurel for the victor, the willow for the sorrowing, the aspen for the trembling, the cypress for the burial! But, unlike ourselves, they cannot change their place and so stand watching all that passes. Some of them are solemn monuments of the centuries. Thank God for trees, their beauty, their shelter, their interlacing branches—not only for the trees in June time coronation, but in January privation of everything but graceful structure! Let the iconoclastic ax not be lifted against them. "Woodman, spare that tree."

The Increasing Daylight.

Behold also in this January month the increasing daylight. Last month the sun went down at 4:30, but in this month the days are getting longer. The sunrise and the sunset are farther apart. Sunlight instead of artificial light, and there is for our dear old battered earth growing light. "The day-spring from on high hath visited us." We shall have more light for the home, more light for the church, more light for the nation, more light for the world—light of intelligence, light of comfort, light of rescue, light of evangelization, light from the face of God, light from the throne. But, you say, the light increases so slowly, each day of this January only one minute longer than its predecessor, the sun setting the 1st day of January at 4 o'clock and 43 minutes, the sun setting the 2d day of January at 4 o'clock and 44 minutes, the 3d day of this month the sun setting at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes, the 4th day of January the sun setting at 4 o'clock and 46 minutes. This evening it will set at 4 o'clock and 47 minutes. The day enlarges very little, and the reign of sunlight is not much increased, but do not despise the minute of increasing light each day of this January, and do not despise the fact that more light is coming for the church and the world, though it come slowly. As we are now in this season gradually going toward the longest day of next summer, so our world is moving forward toward the long day of emancipation and Christly dominion. It may now in the state and the church and the world be January cold, but we are on the way to July harvests and September chards.

Do not read your almanac backward. Do not go out and ask the trees how with icicles by January storm whether they will ever again blossom in May and leaf in June. We are moving toward the world's redemption. Frozen tears will melt, the river gladness will resume its flow, the ice will come up at the edge of snowbank, the morning star will open the door for the day, and the arms of the world will "ground arms" around the world. The January frost will be abolished, and the beauty and radiance of a divine atmosphere will fill the nations. If you do see it and hear it for yourself, let it be at the utmost your grandchildren—see and hear it. The heavens will take part in the conflict between righteousness and sin, and that will settle it aright, and settle it forever.

In this very month of January, 100 years ago, two months after a great battle had been fought between the army of the king and the army of parliament, shepherds and travelers between 10 and 11 o'clock at night heard the booming of drums—the sound of drums, the clash of arms, the groaning of dying men and then the withdrawal of the scene into complete silence. These shepherds and travelers reported in the neighboring towns what they heard, and large numbers of people, expecting that all was a deception, went out on the following night and they heard the same uproar and tumult in the heavens—the two armies in battle. The king, hearing of seeming combat in the heavens, sent ambassadors to inquire into the matter. In the night they also heard conflict and came back to the king and took solemn oath as to this mysterious occurrence.

Whether those shepherds and travelers and ambassadors of the 17th century were in delusion I cannot say, but I know—that the forces of God and the forces of Satan are now in combat, the heavens as well as the earth in struggle as to who shall win this world. Blessedness or woe, and, as the arm of God are mightier than the arm of the devil, we know who will triumph and we have a right to shout the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. The King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the God of Joshua and Havelock, is in the conflict. I have no fear of the tremendous issue. My only fear is that we will not be found in the ranks and fully armed to do our part in the campaign of the eternities.

Again, I remark that the month of January has seen many of the most stupendous events in the world's history and a rocking of cradles and digging of graves that have affected nations. In this month American dependence was declared, followed Lexington and Bunker Hill and Yorktown and Valley Forge and Yorktown. January saw the proclamation that abolished American slavery. Though at the time there were mighty opinions and they were exactly opposed—those who liked the dominion and those who disliked it—it is but one opinion now, and if it were put to vote in all the states of the south, "Shall slavery be reinstated there would be an overwhelming vote of 'No!'" The pen with which the document was signed and the ink that contained the ink are relics as sacred and valuable as the original Declaration of Independence, with all erasures and interlineations. The institution which for seventy or eighty

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

0:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis Dining Car service.

1:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

4:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

8:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH.

LEAVE RICHMOND:

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAY 11, 1902.

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York-river landings.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, daily, except Sundays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND.

9:15 A. M., No. 15, daily, from West Point, with connection from Baltimore, except Monday.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, daily, except Sundays and Mondays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Nos. 15 and 16 will make no stops between Richmond and Quinton.

Steamers sail from West Point 5:50 P. M. daily, except Sundays. Steamers call at Gloucester Point and Claybank Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and Yorktown and Allmonds Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

C. W. WESTBURY,

District Passenger Agent,

920 east Main street,

Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICK,

General Passenger Agent,

C. H. ACKERT,

General Manager,

Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and

Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APR. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:15 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
2:56 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	4:12 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	7:00 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.

(Eastern Time.)

(Central Time.)

1:05 A. M.	9:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
4:55 A. M.	2:10 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
9:15 A. M.	7:00 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	—Ar. St. Augustine.
5:45 P. M.	6:45 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
10:32 P. M.	10:08 A. M.—Ar. Charlotte.
1:35 A. M.	10:22 A. M.—Lv. Chester.
3:43 A. M.	12:35 P. M.—Lv. Greenwood.
6:13 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Lv. Athens.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
	5:40 P. M.—Ar. Augusta.
	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Macon.
	9:20 P. M.—Ar. Montgomery.
	2:55 A. M.—Ar. Mobile.
	7:25 A. M.—Ar. New Orleans.
	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

6:55 P. M.
8:20 A. M.

4:55 A. M.
9:15 A. M.
10:50 A. M.
5:45 P. M.
10:32 P. M.
1:35 A. M.
3:43 A. M.
6:13 A. M.
7:50 A. M.

11:35 A. M.
6:25 P. M.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Continued from Page 9.)

naldo's cabinet who is now in Washington: "In Manila Buenacmino is familiarly known as 'Deacon.' I am not sure that he is a deacon, but he is a very prominent member of a Presbyterian church there, and the name of the church officer has been conferred upon him because of his religious fervor. I believe that Methodist missionaries converted the well-known Filipino to the Protestant faith, but he afterwards joined the Presbyterians, and was an active member in a congregation which met in the Rizal Theatre in Manila for awhile, and afterward secured a regular church building. He is a very consistent member of the church, and has done much to lead natives of the islands to join Protestant churches. He attributes much of the trouble in the Philippines to the friars, and is very bitter in his denunciation of them. Few Filipinos have the faculty of reasoning in common with Americans and Europeans. Most of the natives of the islands get lost in a maze of words and fail to arrive at definite conclusions. Buenacmino is an exception. He is far-sighted and thoroughly practical in his views. When he cast his lot with the Americans he changed his religious and political views entirely, and began life all over again. He is very influential among the residents of the Tomdo districts, or ward of Manila, and has done much to advance the interests of the United States in that section of the city."

It is not complimentary to members of the House that the action of that body in voting, with only 19 dissenting votes, to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Capitol restaurants, should be so generally regarded as merely a meaningless attempt to curry favor with the temperance voters of the country. That it is so regarded in Washington, and doubtless elsewhere, is certain. Mention the subject almost anywhere and somebody will be sure to say in substance: "Most of the members who voted for the prohibition did so with the expectation that the Senate would refuse to sanction the reform, and without any real desire to see it go into effect." There is a way in which the temperance people can disappoint the insincere members of the House who voted for this reform, and it is hoped it will be acted upon. That is, to bring pressure to bear upon Senators to vote for the prohibition. Senators, while not as quickly responsive to public sentiment as members of the House, can be influenced if the sentiment be strong enough and persistent enough. Let every temperance man and woman in the country go to work to get the vote of his or her Senators for this reform, and it will be accomplished. It is certainly worth the effort.

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of the Reform Bureau, preached a sermon on "Living and Dying Nations" at the Gunton Temple Memorial church this week, with special reference to proper Sabbath observance. Before starting on the sermon Dr. Crafts exhibited the pen with which President Roosevelt signed the act of Congress prohibiting the sale of intoxicants, opium, and firearms to the aboriginal races in all the Pacific Islands, and afterward presented to the Reform Bureau, and briefly outlined the work of that bureau, especially what it had accomplished and attempted to accomplish in the way of reform Congressional legislation. In the sermon Dr. Crafts took the broad ground that the living nations are those in which the Sabbath is respected and properly observed, and the dead or dying ones those in which it is ignored or treated only as other days. In the development of his argument Dr. Crafts declared that the saving of the individual was the first step toward saving the community, and consequently the country, and that the best way to save the individual was to inculcate the spirit of reverence and respect for the Sabbath.

AFTER SIX MONTHS IN KOREA.

BY JOEL B. ROSS, M. D., GENSAN, KOREA.

Only very recently have I begun to feel settled in any way, though I have been in Korea six months, as prior to my coming to Wonsau I was constantly on the go or preparing for some journey or other, and after here in Wonsau it was quite awhile before I could do more than "camp out" here in the McGill dispensary. I am beginning to feel somewhat at home in Korea, but find the language very troublesome. I have gotten the run of things here at the dispensary somewhat better, and have done some studying, but comparatively little. I remain here to look after the dispensary work.

Coming direct to Seoul from the United States as I did, my brain was so deluged with strange impressions, numberless in confusion and indefiniteness, that to give any detailed account of them was beyond me. This Korean metropolis, though for the most part still a filthy conglomeration of hovels, with narrow little pass-ways or alleys for streets, is rapidly becoming modernized, and in this stage of its development presents many strange contrasts. There are a few broad avenues, a few fine modern buildings, a steam railway leading to its massive gates on the south and west, a complete system of electric cars and electric lights, all of which contrast strangely with mud-walled, thatched-roofed houses, ancient modes of transportation, vegetable oil lamps and candles the manner of which has scarcely improved since the world began.

Alighting from a modern railway coach, and dodging out of the way of a humming electric car in the midst of a lazily turbulent mass of poorly clad men and women, naked children, pack cattle, pack ponies, dogs, pigs, and chickens, one feels that he is indeed between two extremes of civilization, and when at night the whole strange panorama is lit up by electric lights the strangeness of the scene is the more glaring.

The newly arrived missionary is glad to escape from the confusion and filth of the street, and take refuge in the seclusion of the quiet, clean compound of the mission, where he receives a hearty welcome and finds, at last, in the missionaries' home, familiar surroundings once more.

Dr. Reid and I were most kindly received by Bro. and Sister Moose, and quickly made to feel at home. It was, of course, a trying time for the Doctor, everything he saw calling up memories of the past, which could but increase his sense of loneliness, reminding him of the absence of her from whom he had always received a glad welcome on returning to the old compound.

Business matters called Dr. Reid to Wonsau, and having failed to catch a steamer from Fusan to that port, the journey had to be made overland. Arrangements were immediately begun for the trip. Bro. Moose and I were to accompany the Doctor. Economy, convenience, comfort, and the saving of time were all considerations which caused us to prefer riding bicycles rather than walk, ride ponies or cows, or be carried in a native or foreign chair.

Our pack pony, with food supplies and cots, was sent ahead a day's journey on Saturday, and we started bright and early Monday morning, on our bicycles, easily overtaking the pony the same evening. We stayed with our pack on the second day, and on the third day, leaving our pony to await our return, and pushing on until early the following morning, arrived at the home of Dr. Hardie, in Wonsau, at 2 A. M., coming upon him as thieves in the night, but much the worse for wear.

It was a beautiful summer morning as we left Seoul by way of the little East gate; the weather was pleasantly cool, and the roads in good condition—a prospect to please a cyclist greatly. Roads are not always good in Korea, and Bro. Moose explained why the road to Wonsan happened to be in such fine condition at this time.

The "powers that be" in Korea having seen fit to move a picture of a former ruler from Ham Heung by way of Wonsau to Seoul it was absolutely essential that the road between these places be put into as perfect condition as possible. It was a very easy matter for the emperor to have this great work done, as he simply had to have the order published, and the people along the route in humble submission, and with due reverence, saw that it was carried out, and bore all the expense. It was not enough to have the road graded and made smooth, but as the picture was being moved men went before it scattering fresh red earth upon its surface, that it might be unpolluted by the feet of ordinary mortals. Selfishly grateful that the old monarch of days gone by had had his picture painted, and that the emperor saw fit to have it moved to Seoul, we sped along past great barren mountains, with their bold peaks towering high above us and "rolled" on into less rugged and more beautiful country, dodging as best, we might numerous heavily laden men, cows, oxen and ponies, often in apparent dangerous proximity to heels and horns.

The great, broad highways that leaves Seoul soon becomes narrow, and finally, in the more mountainous regions of the eastern side of Korea, becomes a highway path of variable breadth, but generally quite smooth. Through valley after valley we rode, past fields of ripening grain, beside beautiful little streams of crystal clear water, and along the bases of hills and mountains covered with a great variety of flowering vines and grasses, but, for the most part, treeless.

On our journey of 160 miles we passed through nearly 100 villages, large and small. Among the first striking objects that catch the newcomer's eye are the wayside idols or image possibly works of art from a native viewpoint, but certainly most hideous. They stand on either side of the road, guardians of the approaches to the villages. Nearing a village, one suddenly finds himself passing between several grimly hideous visaged monsters, possibly as many as five or six on either side drawn up in single ranks blankly staring at each other. It must be, indeed, a venturesome evil spirit who would dare to pass between them. We found them entirely harmless—in fact, some of them were much the worse for wear, and dumb though they were, they bore eloquent testimony to change and decay and death. A small poorly made wooden imitation of a bird perched on the top of a pole offered additional safeguard to the village and occasionally kept lone vigil, seemingly frail and ill suited to his task.

Passing these village sentinels and leaving the town to their care, a clump of fine trees would attract our attention, strikingly beautiful on account of their rarity, their presence explained by the little house in their midst devoted to spirit worship. About the house a great pile of stones bore testimony, each one to the worship and homage of some poor ignorant soul. Bright colored rags hanging from the limbs of the trees also bore witness of devotion to the spirits.

The numerous little streams that we saw were indeed beautiful, and were a constant temptation to hot, dusty cyclists to hunt some secluded place and take a plunge in their swift-flowing, cool waters. Indeed, they more than tempted us; not to be unheeded they would, when least expected, directly cross our path. Under these circumstances, if no kindly disposed countryman was to be found to carry us across, we had but to submit to the inevitable, and after various preliminary proceedings, depending on the depth of the stream, shouldered our wheels and plunged in, vigorously reminded by the stones that we were "tenderfeet." It is only during the summer and early fall that one is thus balked by these streams, for at these seasons, on account of the likelihood of floods carrying away the frail structures, all bridges are taken down and the timbers laid to one side, to be replaced after the rainy season.

Korean bridges are like everything else Korean—antique affairs—and consist merely of poles, brush and earth, supported by numerous little trusses. These same streams were a constant reminder of the fact that there is much that is beautiful in this world and attractive which yet contains unseen and unapparent the germs of evil and the power to harm; for though tormented with thirst, we dare not drink the clear cool water, because we know that they had not only brought water supply, but had also carried away much of the sewerage for villages along its course.

Through plain after plain, over successive passes, we wended our way, the scene constantly changing, ever new and beautiful. Finally climbing to the top of the high pass, over the backbone of the eastern mountain range of Korea, we stopped to rest and enjoy the beauties of the scene that stretched out before us. Far and near were mountains and rugged steeps surrounding a vast plain that stretched out toward the sea. Just visible in the dim distance to the north thirty miles away lay Wonsau harbor. The sun, low in the West, added beauty to the scene, but told us that we had better hasten on our way. The prospect of spending the night in a native inn without foreign food and without our beds, was not inviting, so hasten we did as best we could, spending most of the night, as it happened, on our heels, but finding a hearty welcome from Dr. and Mrs. Hardie, and good food and comfortable beds, and had a short, but luxurious, rest before dawn. Hotel accommodations along the route were not good. The foreigner generally takes food supplies, dishes, coat, and bed clothes with him, and the most that he desires from the innkeepers is water to boil before drinking, a charcoal fire to cook with, and a room in which to spread his cot. The first night spent in a Korean inn is one long to be remembered. The room occupied is probably eight feet square and six or seven feet high, at most twice this size, and the number of occupants indefinite. Happy is the traveller if, having walked or ridden all day in the open air, nature kindly takes him off to the land of nod out of the realm where his senses hold sway, and thus delivers him from the disturbing influences of his environment. But if bad smells, the sensations caused by minute marauders, and glimpses of creeping things defy Morpheus, his imagination takes wild flights and he remains disconsolate. The experienced traveller, however, becomes accustomed to some things, learns how to avoid others, and with a short time at least, with comparative comfort.

Men plowing with home-made, antique plows drawn by oxen, or possibly, as in one case, by wife and daughter, the former carrying a baby on her back; a sick man lying in his room with an old man beating a drum, clashing cymbals and yelling in a monotonous, dirge-like tone to drive the evil spirit away; on the mountain tops, in the valleys, on the hillsides, in the fields, everywhere graves—these are some of the sights that are amusing, interesting, strange, yet sad indeed, and speaking loudly of the needs of these benighted people for the enlightenment and uplifting power of the Gospel of Truth.

On first acquaintance with Koreans impressions received are not the most reassuring, but it does not take long to find out that they are "slow," "dead slow," in the fullest sense of the term; that they are of a kindly disposition, very patient and child-like. Ignorant, poverty-stricken, knowing little but oppression and want, slaves to superstition and the devil, they stand in greatest need of the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

HAMPTON CONFERENCE. (Continued from page five.)

Dr. Crawford. It was contended that inasmuch as the court has not yet settled the proceedings against Dr. Crawford, it would be unwise for this Conference to place itself on record as being adverse to the court.

Rev. W. A. Campbell, of Manchester, submitted the report of the Sunday School Committee, and Mr. Charles Heffelfinger, of Hampton, submitted the report of the Finance Committee. The two papers elicited considerable interest, as they showed the Conference to be in better condition in these respects than has ever before been reported.

INVITE THE CONFERENCE TO RICHMOND.

Rev. W. B. Beauchamp, chairman of a special committee appointed for the purpose, submitted a resolution placing this Conference on record as inviting the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to hold its annual meeting in the city of Richmond. The resolution calls upon the Richmond District and the West Richmond District Conferences to unite in making an urgent fight to bring the next meeting of the highest official body to the Old Dominion. When the vote on the resolution was called for it was adopted with a great deal of enthusiasm. The general body meets in 1906.

Upon reconvening at 3 o'clock, the meeting was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. J. E. McCartney, of West Point. This proved to be the most interesting of the many sessions held during the Conference.

"LOCAL MINISTERS" LICENSED.

Upon the recommendation of the License Committee, the following "local ministers'" licenses were ordered renewed for another year: Rev. B. F. Watson, York county; Rev. J. H. Busby, Manchester; Rev. T. F. Pettigrew, Manchester; Rev. D. W. Moger, Hampton; Rev. C. V. Richardson, New Kent; and Rev. J. T. Montgomery, Richmond.

The Committee on Licenses also recommended that A. J. Gary, of Richmond, and C. H. Smith, of Richmond, be granted licenses to preach, each having passed most satisfactory examinations.

DELEGATES TO VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The election of delegates to the annual meeting of the Virginia Conference, which meets in Richmond next November, was then entered into, and resulted in the selection of the following: Messrs. W. J. Boone, Hampton; M. E. Gary, Richmond; W. D. Folk, Smithfield, and Dr. Garrett Anderson, East King and Queen. The alternates chosen were Messrs. E. T. Wilson, Hampton; J. H. Busby, Manchester; G. G. Ware, Newport News, and R. H. Nelson, Henrico county. The election of delegates concluding the business before the Conference, a recess was taken until 8 o'clock, when the missionary rally was held. This brought the Conference to an end. The question of a meeting place for next year was left to a committee composed of Messrs. W. D. Folk, R. T. Wilson, and Dr. Garrett Anderson. The Conference was very successful, and the delegates are warm in their praise of the magnificent treatment accorded them by the people of Hampton.—Dispatch.

NEW BOOK COMMITTEE MAPS OUT ITS WORK.

The new Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Nashville, Tenn., June 11th. Dr. Collins Denny, of Nashville, was elected chairman, and W. C. Dibrell was elected secretary.

The matter of uniting the publishing interest of the Southern Church and Northern Church in China was discussed.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore; Rev. Paul Whitehead, of Lynchburg, Va., and Dr. Collins Denny were appointed a special committee to meet representatives of the Northern Church, and to take steps for the consummation of the proposition.

The salaries of the two book agents, editors of the Advocate, Quarterly Review, Epworth Era, Sunday School Literature, Superintendent of Sunday-School Training were fixed at $3,000 per annum each. The committee acted in regard to the transfer of a site at Shanghai, China, by the Board of Missions to the Book Agents and Book Committee, upon which a new publishing house is to be erected. The building and plant is to cost $50,000, and $10,000 of this amount was ordered forwarded to Shanghai at once for carrying on the work. The balance will be forwarded at the rate of $5,000 a month.

The usual appropriation for the different publications were made. The amount for the Sunday-school literature is $15,000.

About $25,000 or $30,000 are carried for the other publications and for editorial assistance and contributions.—Times.

EVEN A STOIC GROANS under the torment of neuralgia, when every nerve in fact or limb throbs and jumps. Philosophy cannot endure this agony, but Perry Davis' Painkiller relieves it. Bathe the affected parts freely, keep them warm, and do not expose yourself to cold and dampness. Medical science marches right along, but it has not found the equal of Painkiller in the treatment of neuralgia.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP AND TAKE NO OTHER KIND.

Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,
UP-TO-DATE
FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 to $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

(Continued from page 10.)

years kept the nation in anarchy, and the north and south today are in as complete accord as ever were flute and cornet in the same orchestra. The north has built its factories on the bank of the Chatahoochee and the Roanoke and the south has sent many of its noblest attorneys into our northern courthouses, its most skillful physicians into our sickrooms, its wisest bankers into our exchanges, its most consecrated ministers into our pulpits—all this the result of the proclamation of Jan. 1, 1863.

Birthdays of Great Men.

Furthermore, I notice that January has been honored with the nativity of some of the greatest among the nations. Edmund Burke was born this month, the marvel and glory of the legal world; Fenelon of the religious world, Benjamin Franklin of the philosophic world, William H. Prescott of the historic world, Sir John Moore of the military world, Robert Burns of the poetic world, Polycarp of the martyr world, Peter the Great of the kingly world, Chrysostom of the sacred rhetoric world, Daniel Webster of the statesman world.

In this month, at Hampton court, 1604, a new translation of the Holy Bible was ordered. There were Bibles of all kinds abroad, some of them translations from Hebrew and Greek by incompetent men, and the church and the world cried out for a Bible translated by a group of the good and the learned. King James disliked the Bibles abroad and appointed a commission of fifty-four men, afterward reduced to forty-seven. Those men presented the world with a Bible that held mighty sway among the nations for more than 250 years, the revision of the Bible thirty years ago being founded on that revision, which began under King James of 1604. The old translation, made more than two and a half centuries ago, sustained the martyrs in the fire, illumined the homesteads of many generations, was the book that was read aloud at the embarkation of the forefathers from Delft Haven, cheered the weary voyagers on the Mayflower, comforted them in the wilds of America, was the book on which the first American congress, as well as the last, took the oath and with which all the presidents of the United States have solemnized their entrance into office, is the book that has advanced the world's civilization as no other influence ever could and which now lies on the table of more homes than any book that was ever printed since Johann Gutenberg borrowed money of Martin Brether and John Faust to complete the art of printing. What a January in the world's history—the January that gave the ages a book like that!

Time of Sadness.

But January, like all the other months of the year, has had its sadnesses and its disasters. During this month died Linnaeus, the botanist of Sweden and the world, who called the roll of the flowers and shrubs and trees, putting them into companies and calling them by their names, his beautiful statue standing in a park of Stockholm, a rose in bronze held in his right hand. During this month expired Francis Bacon, and Garrick, and Galilei, and Louis VI., and William Pitt, and Francis Jeffrey of the immortal pen, and Disraeli the first, and Edward Everett, and Bruce, and Catiline. In this month died Peter the Great, the man of whom it was written: "He gave a polish to his people and was himself a savage. He taught them the art of warfare, of which he himself was ignorant. From the sight of a small boat on the river Moskwa he erected a powerful fleet, making himself an expert and active shipwright, sailor, pilot and commander. He changed the manners, customs and laws of the Russians and lives in their memory as the father of his country."

But I cannot read the epitaphs of one out of a hundred illustrious graves in this first month of the year. Many of those well known gained half their renown and did half their work through the help of those of whom we know little or nothing. Lord Herschel is known all the world over and will be known through all time, but little is said of her who was born this first month of the year and without whose help he never could have been what he was—his sister, Caroline Lucretia Augusta. She helped him hunt the worlds. She repaired and adjusted his telescopes. She ciphered out his astronomical problems. She was his amanuensis. She planned for him, his work. She discovered seven comets and made "A Catalogue of Nebulae and Star Clusters." The month of January introduced her to the observatories, but she has never been properly introduced to the world.

Preparing For the Future.

According to my text, "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." Through it make preparation for the other eleven months. What you are in January you will probably be in all the other months of the year. Prepare for them neither by apprehension nor too sanguine anticipation. Apprehension of misfortune will only deplete your body and gloom your soul and unfit you for any trouble that may come. On the other hand, if you expect too much, disappointment will be yours. Cultivate faith in God and the feeling that he will do for you that which is best, and you will be ready for either sunshine or shadow. The other eleven months of the year 1902 will not all be made up of gladness or of grief. The cup that is all made up of sweetness is insipid.

Between these just opened gates of the year and the closing of those gates there will be many times when you will want God. You will have questions to decide which will need supernatural impulse. There may be illnesses of the body or perplexities of mind or spiritual exhaustions to be healed and comforted and strengthened. During the remaining twenty-six days of this month lay in a supply of faith and hope and courage for all the days of the eleven months. Start right, and you will be apt to keep right. Before the ship captain gets out of the New York Narrows he makes up his mind what sea route he will take. While you are in the Narrows of this month make up your mind which way you will sail and unroll your chart and set your compass and have the lifeboats well placed on the davits and be ready for smooth voyage all the way across or the swoop of a Caribbean whirlwind.

The Monster Abomination.

Rev. Solomon Spaulding was for some time in poor health, and to while away the time he wrote a preposterous religious romance. One Joseph Smith somehow got hold of that book before it was printed and published it as a revelation of heaven, calling it the "Book of Mormon," and from that publication came Mormonism, the monster abomination of the earth. Rev. Solomon Spaulding might have been better engaged than writing that book of falsehoods. However much time we have, we never have time to do wrong.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

(Cor. Main and Broad, Blackstone, Va.)

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,
PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY

W. E. HURF, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWER, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

are showing a splendid line of

DRESS FABRICS suitable for the hot weather and at popular prices.

SUMMER CLOTHING for Men and Boys of the latest styles.

Most complete line of SHOES for Men, Women and Children to be seen in this section. Our shoes are made of LEATHER and guaranteed.

Nice assortment of

STRAW HATS, NEGLIGEE SHIRTS, and NECKWEAR.

THOMSON'S, R. & G., and W. B. CORSETS.

Immense stock of EMBROIDERIES at prices that will astonish you.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

J. V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

THOMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA

ASSETS - - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

This old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. MCCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured by Dr. David's Pain Cure.

Dr. David's Unfailing and pleasant, Dr. David's Cough Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, CONSTIPATION, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Constipeness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, VA.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRANDS

...FOR TOBACCO...

Bellefonte

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to 3

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2 to 3

Standard,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

Alliance,

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to 3

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to 3

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 23.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., JUNE 19, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

This issue is given up very largely to Randolph-Macon, the greatest interest of the Methodist Church in Virginia. We should glory in her work. Prof. Robert Emory Blackwell, for twenty-five years professor of English at Randolph-Macon, was elected president of the college for one year, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. W. G. Starr. (More next week.)

Dr. John H. Latane, professor of history at the Woman's College, has been elected to the same chair at Washington and Lee University. It is thought that he will accept.

IMPORTANT ACTION.

The following, taken from the Dispatch of Thursday, gives the facts as to very important action on a vital question. Once more as Methodists we have taken the lead in the great cause of education. This pledge of the Board of Trustees should stir all our preachers and laymen to immediate action.

"The most important action which has been taken by Randolph-Macon in many years was taken yesterday by the trustees. At the annual meeting of the Society of Alumni, Rev. James Cannon, Jr., offered for adoption the following resolutions:

"The Society of Alumni of Randolph-Macon College believes that a crisis has been reached in the history of the college. The college has a great opportunity. Should this opportunity be neglected or lost it must be damaging to the institution. Should it be improved to the utmost, the future of the college as a great and permanent educational force in our State is secured. In view of this fact, the Society of Alumni respectfully presents to the Board of Trustees, for their consideration, the following resolutions:

"1. That the Board of Trustees of Randolph-Macon College hereby pledges itself to the Church to give free tuition in the courses offered by the college as soon as the Church shall increase the endowment of the college by the sum of $300,000.

"2. That the Board of Trustees hereby calls upon all the alumni of the college, all the preachers and members of the Church in the Baltimore and Virginia Conferences, and all the lovers of Christian education to join together in one great effort within the next twelve months to raise $200,000, in which event, in view of the proposition of Mr. John P. Branch to give $100,000, the whole amount will be secured."

HEARTILY FAVORED.

"The resolutions were seconded by Rev. W. B. Beauchamp. Speeches were made in favor of the resolutions by Rev. James Cannon, Rev. W. H. Atwill, and Dr. W. W. Smith, and they were adopted unanimously. The paper was presented to the Board of Trustees at the afternoon session, and after discussion was adopted without a dissenting voice, and referred to a special committee of five, whose business it shall be to formulate and put into operation a plan to raise the $200,000."

This action of Randolph-Macon, as given in this clipping from the Dispatch, is in harmony with Methodist ideas of education, and in line with the progressive movement of the South. Randolph-Macon was the first Southern college to establish a separate chair of English. It was the first college to separate the preparatory from the collegiate students, and it built two great academies, which are an honor to the whole South. It was the first college to provide facilities for women equal to those for men, and the Woman's College, at Lynchburg, is the only college in the South rated by the United States Commissioner of Education as belonging to class "A." It now takes the lead again, and gives a pledge to furnish free tuition as soon as its friends will add $300,000 to its endowment.

Mr. John P. Branch has promised to give to the college one dollar for every two dollars given by others until his contribution reaches $100,000, so that in reality only $200,000 of the $300,000 is to be raised. This proposition of Mr. Branch is considered the most liberal ever made to the cause of education in Virginia, and Randolph-Macon has twelve months in which to raise the amount.

More will be said later.

RANDOLPH-MACON COMMENCEMENT.

The baccalaureate sermon of the Randolph-Macon College commencement was preached Sunday by Rev. J. W. Duffy, D. D., of Washington, D. C., from Isaiah 43: 3. At night Rev. Geo. H. Spooner, of Richmond, preached before the Young Men's Christian Association from the text found in Rom. 8: 24.

The trustees met on Tuesday morning, and about thirty were found to be present. Bishop Granbery, the president of the board, although he had recently been quite sick, was present and presided continuously throughout the meeting of the board. Reports from the various institutions were read, and showed the system to be in the usual condition. The number of students under the care of the board is 670. The gifts and legacies received by the board during the year amounted to nearly $50,000, of which amount about $25,000 had been paid in from the Twentieth Century subscription; of the total about $25,000 came to the college at Ashland and about $14,000 to Front Royal Academy. Fifty thousand dollars is not a large sum in these days of great gifts to institutions of learning, but it is a large sum compared with what the college formerly received. The report of Dr. W. C. Starr, the president of the college, was important, followed by an announcement by him that owing to weakness of his throat he was unable to do the necessary work, and he therefore tendered his resignation. This was referred to a committee, which reported, advising that the resignation be accepted and the salary of Dr. Starr be continued till November 15th. The report was adopted.

The board conferred the degree of A. B. on thirteen, and the degree of A. M. on nine young men for work done by them in college courses. The honorary degree of D. D. was conferred upon Revs. B. F. Lipscomb, J. C. Reed, and R. T. Wilson, of the Virginia Conference; Rev. I. W. Canter, of the Baltimore Conference; Rev. G. B. Winton, of the Mexican Mission Conference, and Rev. J. W. Morris, of the Episcopal Church, now a missionary of that Church in Brazil. (Mr. Morris is the son of the late Prof. Charles Morris, and is an A. M. graduate of the college.)

Resolutions in reference to the death of Prof. Leroy S. Edwards, of Richmond, were adopted.

The writer could not be present at the presentation of the portrait of Mary Washington to the "Wash Hall." The portrait was the gift of Rev. John W. Eure, and the presentation speech was made by Rev. Geo. E. Booker, of Petersburg, taking as his theme, "The Type of Manhood and Womanhood as Demanded By the Twentieth Century." The address is reported to have been eloquent and appropriate. Captain Irby made a fitting response in behalf of "Wash Hall," of which he has been a faithful member for half of a century.

The alumni address was delivered by Hon. S. S. P. Patteson, of Richmond. Of this address, the Dispatch speaks as follows:

"The address before the Society of Alumni was made by Hon. S. S. P. Patteson, of Richmond, his subject being 'The Influence of Character on Success.'"

MR. PATTESON'S ADDRESS.

"Mr. Patteson's address was a most able one, and was listened to with delight. One of the best portions of the address was the following:

"For more than a century no public man with a bad character has been able to hold his place in public esteem. It has been the touchstone of success. It is useless to undervalue the influence of brains, but in this country, built upon character, no one can attach too much importance to it. Randolph-Macon College has never undervalued either. Here the boy is taught, as he should be, self-reliance, the importance of individual and well directed effort, and that he cannot hope to win success and hold the highest place in life except by the constant recognition of the value of character as well as brains. He has it drilled into him that he cannot discharge all of his obligations by one act; but is taught that for the foremost place he must make one continuous, well-directed effort throughout his life.

"Those of the boys who were here when I attended college as a student for one year, with whose careers I am familiar, have lived up to these requirements wherever they have succeeded. Personally, I do not know of one whose foot is now on the upward round of the ladder who is not a man of fine character. I do not make this assertion thoughtlessly, but after getting all the information accessible to me. * * * I do not believe there is a college large or small in the United States where a boy can get better instruction, religious, moral, and intellectual, than here at Randolph-Macon.

"Its graduates and former students occupy some of the most important public places in the State and nation. One of our distinguished young Congressmen, now a member of that much maligned body, was a graduate of the college, and there are others whose names are well known who are honorably serving the public in various capacities."

THE SUTHERLIN MEDAL.

The contest for the Sutherlin medal

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

OCTOBER, 1900, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

But, on the other hand, here was a real moral danger. These men were enemies of society. Had he no duties as a citizen toward society? Was he to plead as an excuse for noninterference the probable loss that would come to him if he testified against the wrong? Was not this just what the average citizen was constantly doing? He knew well enough that the real owners of the block where the gambling was going on were the members of the business firm on the ground floor. They were men who passed as respectable citizens in Raynor because of their wealth and social standing, and yet they took the rent from these gamblers and knew what was going on and all for the sake of the money that was in it.

Edward was not too young to know and understand these facts, and in his heart he had long had a contempt for these real owners of the building who, while walking about like good citizens, were in reality accomplices and deserved stern punishment for their own lawlessness due to their love of gain.

The president was watching him closely and knew exactly what was passing in his mind. When Edward looked up, he was strengthened in his final resolve by the look on the president's face.

"Yes, sir; I'm willing to testify in the case," he replied.

"Are you? Then I will go with you," said the president quietly.

"You go with me!" exclaimed Edward slowly.

"Yes. Why not? Are these young men in peril not my young men? Is it not the duty of the citizen to do his part in the republic in times of peace and lawlessness as well as in times of physical war? What I have asked you to do is nothing more than what the law expects every good citizen to do. According to the ordinance, if I remember it rightly, all that the law requires is that an eyewitness of the gambling testify to the use of the gambling device. I know enough about the condition of local politics in Raynor to feel convinced that appeals to the authorities will do very little good. Preaching and praying and teaching have got to be supplemented with some kind of action that the people of Raynor will respect. We need an old fashioned revival of righteousness in Raynor."

Edward listened in astonishment and yet his admiration for the president increased as he went on. He had a respect for that kind of courage and began to think less of his own possible losses and more of the probable amount of criticism that the president would suffer for such a course.

"When do you think we had better go, Blake?" the president asked after a short silence.

"One time is as good as another," said Edward.

"Say this evening, then. I'll start with you from the newspaper office."

Edward Blake will never forget that little experience with President Royce that evening. When the time came, they went up the stairs and entered the room together.

It was, as usual, pretty well filled, although there was a much larger crowd present later in the evening.

Their entrance provoked no especial notice at first. Several boys and young men were at the tables and a number were trying the new device that Edward had seen Willis try. So they had time enough to take note of details and had started to go out again when the proprietor of the place, who had seen the president when he came in, rose and went over to the door.

"State your business here, you!" he said, planting himself in front of the president.

"State yours, sir, first!" replied the president, standing up with an athletic strength that made the man recoil. The president and Edward walked together to the door, and the man backed away from it. The crowd in the room nearest them had turned to see what was going on, but before anything else was said the proprietor had turned back. The president and Edward went out and down the stairs unobserved.

They at once went to the authorities and swore out a complaint under the ordinance and that evening the place was raided by the police, who arrested the proprietor in the very act of removing his apparatus, having a suspicion of what was coming. To relate briefly the results of all this action on the president's and Edward's part, after many delays of the law and much technical skirmishing on the part of the attorneys for the accused, the proprietor was convicted and sentenced. The conviction frightened all the other gamblers in Raynor and closed every den in the city, for a time at least. The owner of the building was also guilty under the ordinance, but an attempt to convict him failed owing to his social influence and the use of his means, and nothing ever came of the attempt. And yet it is said that the poor man as well as the rich man has equal justice shown him in our courts. Does any one in America today dare deny that wealth and social position have it in their power to defeat justice in our courts? If they do not have that power, how does it happen that so often wealthy offenders escape the penalty of the law they have violated?

The entire affair caused a great stir in Raynor. There was a good deal of criticism of President Royce's course. Good citizens who were very indignant always when mention was made of lawlessness in the city and wanted to know over their coffee and morning paper why something was not done by somebody to prevent such lawlessness said that President Royce had done a thing unbecoming a president of a college. So undignified and—and—well—so lacking—in the—the—best judgment. But the ordinance expressly provided for testimony to convict. The law of the state plainly said that it was the duty of every good citizen to inform the authorities of a breach of the law. The president was a citizen, like other men, and he had simply done his duty. What was there wrong about that? Well—it was a very undignified thing to act as a spy—to enter such an infamous place—to contaminate himself with touching the thing, so these good citizens said, and yet they were the very men who never did anything themselves except to find fault with the people for electing bad men to office or for not enforcing the law in some way. The good citizen of this country, of this type, will take his rightful place some time alongside the lawbreakers and be labeled with his true name, which is "Bad" citizen, with a capital letter "B" for "Bad."

But Edward's experience in the affair did not end with his part in the trial as one of the witnesses. There was another chapter, that might have proved even more exciting for him than it was. It was his training on the football field had not stood him in good stead.

It was during the week of the trial, and while the case was still dragging along with delays on technicalities, and the outcome of it was not certain, that Edward was surprised one evening in one of the hallways of a down town office building by an attack made on him by some unknown person.

He had gone up to the top of the building to deliver a paper at one of the places that he knew was a low gambling den. Since the arrest of the gambler up town the proprietor of this place had kept very strict watch and Edward was not permitted to enter, as he sometimes had done. He threw the paper down at the bottom of the door, as he had been doing for several nights, when some one rushed out of a side hallway and struck at him with some heavy article that partly missed him in the dark, smashing his hat off his head and for a second stunning him slightly.

He instantly turned and grappled with a man when another figure came out on the opposite side of the hall and flung himself on him.

But Edward was used to having several men fling themselves on him in football games, and, although he was very much taken by surprise now, his dogged, stubborn, slow nature was equal to the unexpected event, and he forced one of his assailants back into the hallway from which he had come, and heard him strike the floor in a heap. Then he turned his attention to the other, and instantly felt that he had his hands full, for his antagonist was a grown man, taller and heavier than himself, and he had struck Edward a heavy blow that pained him exceedingly. The two tugged and panted together, the stranger swearing and Edward silent, as usual, each trying to throw the other down. They swayed through the hall in the dark, and before either of them realized their nearness to the narrow stairway, they reeled down the first step, lost their balance and fell, still clinging to each other, and rolling over and over to the bottom.

Edward found himself even in the strange situation of that descent wondering who would be on top when the bottom was reached. Evidently his assailant was having the same idea. For when they struck the hall below and rolled over again he let go of Edward, and although Edward was on his feet with an agility that was remarkable considering his weight, the man rushed past up the stairs again and vanished in the darkness above.

"Discretion was the better part of valor" on this occasion, and so Edward did not wait for the man to come back, possibly re-enforced by his companion, but beat an orderly retreat down the other two flights of stairs and so out on the street minus his hat and plus several bruises.

He happened to be near a clothing store and went in and bought a hat and continued his route. When he reached his room on College hill, he took account of damages and found that, in addition to the loss of his hat, he had sustained several serious rents in his clothing. As he sat up late that night repairing the rents he questioned whether he had better make complaint to the police. But he finally decided not to say anything. He could not identify the men. He did not know whether they belonged to the gambling crowd who were trying to get vengeance for his part in the arrest or whether they were part of the rough gang that had for years infested that part of the city and had attempted to hold him for a purpose of petty robbery. He said nothing about the matter either to the president or Freeda until several weeks afterward. It was also significant of his stubbornness that he continued his route the next night the same as usual. He was not molested again that winter. And the event did not make any particular impression on him—not so much as it did afterward, when he told it to his sister and listened to her comments on it.

After the excitement due to these things centering about the gambler's arrest, trial and conviction had died out Edward found his mind going back more and more to Willis. As the days went on he did not feel satisfied. He met Willis in chapel and on the grounds and in the halls constantly. His face bore heavier marks of dissipation, and he was evidently running a fast pace with the fast set.

He instantly turned and grappled with a man.

(To be continued.)

To fear we will not be faithful is to distrust God's power to keep us faithful.

THE SUMMER SEASON is full of dangers, particularly for the children, who, not knowing the result of eating unripe fruit, indulge themselves, with the usual griping pains in the stomach as a consequence; mothers should have on hand at all times a bottle of Pain-killer (Perry Davis'), which will at once relieve the sufferer; it is a safe, simple remedy, and it should be kept in every house. Large bottles, 25 and 50 cents.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto. THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH.—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Communications

FROM DR. STEEL.

Mr. Editor.—I am now in Southern Mississippi, building the Lumberton Manual Labor School—running lines, cutting timber, building fences, putting up houses, doing a hundred things that are to transform a thousand acres of virgin forest into the parade ground of a battalion of industry and create an institution where hundreds of boys and girls will be fitted for life. We hope to be prepared to open about the 1st of October. The Governor of the State has promised to attend our opening, distinguished public men will be present, there will be addresses and a basket dinner, and a big time generally. We have been obliged to limit our number next year to fifty, because we prefer to begin with a few. Boys are coming to us from New York, from Missouri, from the Indian Territory, from everywhere. It is the only school in the country, it seems, where the prospect is offered of a good education without needing a dollar in money—where labor will pay for everything. We will not need to spend a nickel on advertising. The press is giving us generous and gratuitous support.

Lumberton is a bee-hive. Everybody is busy. Wages are high. Fourteen lots were sold last week at stiff prices on the street leading out to the school grounds. That is pretty good real estate business in a town of a thousand people. I expect it beats Petersburg. I was in Jackson the other day, and Governor Longino asked me how I came to locate the school at Lumberton. Well, for one reason, because the people who are building Lumberton have right ideas. There are fifty new towns springing up in Southern Mississippi, and most of them, unfortunately, are built in a most haphazard way. The streets of most of them are narrow and crooked, and there is no attention paid to art. In Lumberton the streets are wide, everything is laid out with theodolite and chain, and as the town grows it will develop into a beautiful little city. Now, I believe in beauty. God has made everything beautiful. So we intend to have respect to artistic effects in our school, and it will be in keeping with the town to build on the lines of beauty.

We have no saloons and no blind tigers in Lumberton. The Methodists and Baptists have nice churches, with the Methodists decidedly in the lead. And this suits me, too. I have just read Dixon's novel, "The Leopard Spots." The book expresses my sentiments from cover to cover, but its strong denominational bias is an artistic defect. One would imagine from reading "The Leopard Spots" that there were no other people in North Carolina but Baptists, and they had done all the great things. "Dr. Durham," "General Worth," "Charles Gaston," "Tom Camp"—all are Baptists. I have nothing against the Baptists. I like them. But it is a blemish in a book that discusses social and political subjects to make it so strongly sectarian. The Methodists are strong in Lumberton, and Rev. Mr. Thompson, the pastor, is a young man of ability and promise.

I find it no warmer down here than it is in Kentucky. I am sleeping every night under cover. The Gulf breeze cools us off and moderates the heat. We never have sunstrokes. I will be here a few weeks, and then leave for a round among the Chautauquas. I'm going out to Nebraska to make a Fourth of July speech. I believe I'll get even with the President for his Arlington tirade, and touch 'em up a little on lynchings and the Philippines. But it is a good thing when a Mississippian is invited to make Fourth of July speeches in Nebraska—sign of good feeling between the people.

The Boers have "surrendered." They quit on terms equally honorable to themselves and to Great Britain. No people ever fought more bravely. I was against them from the first, for to my mind the issue involved the whole question of British supremacy in Africa; and it is essential to my world-programme for that to be maintained at any cost. It has been maintained, and enormous as the cost has been, it was worth it all. Had England faltered in this fight, the empire might have crumbled. Had the Boers won, Ireland would have been the next to assert "independence." And the scandalous conduct of the Irish faction in Parliament proves to any impartial judge that the Irish are incapable of self-government. The Saxon has triumphed again, and a long stride has been taken toward the virtual federation of the English-speaking people. Africa will now develop along the lines of English constitutional liberty. It will become a great nation of federal States. The Boers will enjoy equal political rights, and become vigorous citizens of a larger and nobler Commonwealth than could ever have been formed by them alone. The man who came out of the contest with the least glory of all was old Kruger, whose stupid obstinacy was the chief cause of the war. He ran away as soon as they began to burn gunpowder in his neighborhood. They did right to ignore him in the settlement. England now virtually controls Africa. If France gets into a war with England, her African possessions will at once go to England. If France keeps out of a war with England, economic agencies will gradually transfer African soil to England. Since Wolf's victory over Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, which decided that the English, not the French, should people North America, there has not been so far-reaching an event as Lord Kitchenor's victory over the Boers in Africa. North America, Africa, Australia—realms peopled by the Saxon! If the rest don't behave, we will know the reason why. I am disposed to wish we could modify the Monroe doctrine some way so as to let Germany settle in South America. The Latin people who have pre-empted that glorious country have done nothing with it; and yet we tell Germany and England to hands off. It is a pity. Either Germany or England would soon make it a garden. As it is, the curse of Spanish blood and civilization is upon one of the fairest parts of the globe. The first thing we know, Uncle Sam will take a notion to settle down there, perhaps, and when he does, good bye to the hidalgos and their spotted race.

O, it is great to be living now!
S. A. STEEL.

Lumberton, Miss.
PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.
R. N. PRICE.

The Morristown Gazette, edited by a Southern Methodist, says:

"Dr. Winton, the new editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, made his bow last week. After analyzing his 'first pass out of the box,' we are of the opinion that the Doctor will make an interesting editor, and retire (probably to the foreign missionary fields) with a rich experience. He shows a dash of the real stuff by writing down the minority leaders of the war claim question as 'ignorant and prejudiced.' On this subject he wants peace."

I am glad to see that Dr. Sam Steel is making such a good beginning with his industrial school. I hope it will be a great success. He is a man whom the Church should have fostered; his fine talking qualities ought to have been utilized by Southern Methodists; and ought to be yet. My heart is with him. His views on the higher criticism I believe to be correct. We can't learn too much of the book which we call the Bible. We ought to know who wrote the various books, and upon what evidence their authority rests. If ignorance is the condition of salvation, then we should shut our eyes and go it blind; but if it is the truth which is to make us free, we should welcome investigation. In fact, we make an outcry against investigation, but it will go on all the same. We might as well dam up the Nile with bulrushes as to attempt to put a stop to the spirit of inquiry which is abroad in the land. Theologians and ecclesiastics have tried from time immemorial to throttle inquiry. Science has had to fight its way against their influence all the time. They contended against the discoveries of anatomy; they feared that the doctrine of the rotation of the earth would contradict the story of the sun standing still, as recorded in the book of Joshua. They contended against the theory of the circulation of the blood. They contended against the testimony of the rocks, for fear it would overturn the Mosaic record of creation and of the flood. They have contended against the doctrine of the immense antiquity of the earth, and, indeed, of man, for fear that they would have to deny the infallibility of the Mosaic history. But science is still marching away; and the Christian religion has more votaries to-day than it ever had. Man is constitutionally a religious being, and the more religion he has the more he loves the truth; and the more truth he has, the more he loves religion.

The last century was the age of discovery in physical science; the present century is likely to be the age of discovery in psychological science. We have passed through the era of matter, and are upon the borders of the era of mind. Fogies in theology and science dread progress along this line. The new psychology is an abhorrence. The occult is a great bugaboo. ought to remain occult! D with the trolley! Along land between mind and are ghosts, hobgoblins, a Sleep should be artificia only by opium; insensibl reform, ether, or laughin one should be healed excep or drugs! One disease m by another! Satan m Satan! If a man is hea ism, or by suggestive th ought not to have been do should be healed excep aitem! Religion and ac thing old and sacred, is men go on prying into t recesses of the spiritual m ence progresses, God reign is sending forth judgment We are suffering from drought in East Tennessee; destructive droughts come year; and this fact sugges probable that we will hav system of irrigation. Th abundantly watered by creeks; and some mechan which their abundant wa utilized in breaking th drought would pay, I belie in the town who has a d hose can laugh at the dr may not the farms be ren immune?

But there is another w drought—I mean the pra God can and will send rain ed, in answer to the pra This proposition has been disputed. It is contended of nature are fixed and and that faith being a s cannot produce natural contention is founded in i when Jesus directed us to daily bread, he did not mock God and stultify ou Natural laws are fixed ble; and no prayer will in violation of natural l tural laws are not mor moral and spiritual laws cannot send rain in answe He cannot convict and sa answer to prayer. God nature as well as of g power is as intimately co matter as with mind, an as with spirit.

Important as faith is, understood. It is often mere condition of salvati condition of answers to a condition, but it is mo dition of salvation; it is of salvation, an instrume answer to prayer for eith temporal good. It is an the hand of God, and an strument in the hand of God saves us not simpl believe, but He saves us ing. But faith is more th ment, it is a force. It force as gravitation, as chemical affinity, as e light. It saves. When "Thy faith hatn made He meant what He sai said, "All things are po that believeth." He me said. Near His own hom works because of the unbelief of the people. The saving power is in them, not in Him.

It is this force—the force of the natural or physical connection—how can it affect moral conduct? To answer the latter question, I answer the former. As a controller of the elements of material things, it heals the fever, injects strength into the weak, it moves upon electricity, chemical affinities, and, if God wills, it can send up the heavens, or can send them to pour down rain. If we were perfect, and all men were perfect in all things, and prayed with a faith, there would be no famines, no pestilences.

FROM REV. MR. MAXEY. A number of things have been mentioned about the paper read by me before the Richmond meeting, and as even when publication is given to a paper, there are still many who do not read it. The editor takes pleasure in mentioning it in the Times the following day, so that it may help to reach those who might not see it otherwise. Further proof of the reckless character of ministers and churches, which is being given by many newspapers, is the necessity on the part of the individual of believing all such reports to be false until proven by sworn affidavit to the Recorder.]

The Times: A few weeks ago it was reprinted in the papers that the preachers of Richmond, in a suggestion, contemplating the movement of a newspaper, cotillions with soft drinks as a means of raising our city from Sabbath to church attendance, and that report was very unjust, but they pay little attention to it, and they question were asked for clippings from papers and sent to New York were sent (June 12th) questions and answers in. Therefore I ask you to answer all at once the facts as I recall and understand.

Understood, first, that in our meeting in "executive session," it was agreed among us that we were to the press from our meeting to go through the secret arrangement grew out of one of the brethren made a protest against the mentioning of the preachers' names and was handled by some of the parsons by remarks by offering a meeting hereafter we sit in executive session. As I recall now one of the other preachers joined in, and the resolution was Understood, second, that in the month we have what we call "day," when some member by the chair brings in a subject of his own selection, the paper offered by myself are about as follows: A few months ago (I do not remember the exact date) I called the attention of the meeting to the fact that on Sundays the churches are not crowded, while the street cars seem busiest on those days, and the parks and other resorts in and around the city are full. I then moved the appointment of a committee to consider this and kindred facts, and report or suggest to the next meeting some plan whereby we might co-operate for the moral and spiritual betterment of our city. At the same time I asked that I be not placed on the committee, because I had already thought the matter over and had no suggestion to offer. The ministers present agreed that the subject was a proper one for our consideration. A motion was made and carried, over my protest, that I be requested to read a paper on the general subject of "Church Attendance, Sabbath Observance, etc.," at our next literary meeting.

I did not like to refuse a request so heartily made, and therefore by silence consented—rather submitted. When I came to offer my "paper" I gave it to the body in the form of a speech, in about the following form:

I called attention to the fact that we were in "executive session," and that I was not speaking for the public ear. It was stated that to cure a disease we must doctor the cause, and not the symptom. If the cause be temporary, the disease will pass away of itself. In the judgment of the speaker the troubles under consideration grew out of human nature, and therefore will always exist, in one form or another, while human nature remains what it is.

The first source I mentioned was what we may call "the social instinct." People must meet and talk with other people to hear the news, exchange ideas, and so on.

Another cause is desire for relaxation, recreation, excitement.

The rich can meet in their clubs, drive out in their carriages, or gather in their homes. Many of the poor, if they meet in their homes, must meet in a garret; or, if they meet outside their doors, must meet in the alleys into which their houses open. They have no broad and airy porches, no elegant drawing rooms where they can sit and talk with friends a summer's afternoon or winter's evening. Hence, largely the popularity of the park, the Sunday excursion, etc.

Then came the remedy. I mentioned incidentally that I had heard that in Venice there are "coffee houses," at which the poor can meet and talk while they sip their coffee. I did not recommend "coffee houses" for Richmond, or anywhere else. I then stated that the city of Boston maintains public baths for her citizens. I did not recommend public baths for Richmond, or anywhere else.

It was stated by the speaker that if we are to reach, control and benefit the people we must first reach the public mind. Mind leads. Then it was that I referred to the power of the press, and said that a paper run by our preachers' meeting might be made a means of wide influence, but that I did not think the suggestion practicable. I repeated the same statement when the matter came up for discussion a second time. I did say that a park run under Christian auspices would be a noble charity, but I did not think it feasible.

The question was then asked by the speaker, What can we do on our own account to better the moral and spiritual condition of our city? I answered as follows:

1. We can with love and firmness enforce the discipline of our Church.

2. We can lay aside fads, hobbies, sensationalism, and preach Christ and Him crucified. I then distinctly added these words, "To mention anything as a substitute for, or in comparison with, this would be sacrilege."

If to make these suggestions and statements in "executive session" was "foolish" or sinful, then your correspondent pleads guilty to whichever charge the public may be pleased to bring.

These facts are here given, as before intimated, in answer to the many questions of friends who are dissatisfied with the matter as they had read it.

It would be interesting to know: (1) Who offered the resolution according to which the reporters were excluded from our meetings? (2) Who made the motion in obedience to which my "paper" was brought in? (3) Who gave the report on my paper to the reporters? The secretary says he did not.

But as the answers to these questions are not now germane they need not now be sought or given.

R. M. MAXEY.

Richmond, Va., June 12th.

Commencing May 25th, additional passenger train service will be operated over Norfolk and Western Railway as follows:

Leave Roanoke 7 A. M., Lynchburg 8:45 A. M., arrive Petersburg 1 P. M., arrive Richmond 1:50 P. M.; leave Richmond 1:15 P. M., Petersburg 2 P. M., Lynchburg 6:15 P. M., arrive Roanoke 8 P. M.

Leave Lynchburg 7:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., arrive East Radford 10:45 A. M., arrive Bristol 2:50 P. M.

Leave Bristol 2:05 P. M., arrive East Radford 6:05 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:55 P. M., arrive Lynchburg 9:50 P. M. Close connection at East Radford to and from Bluefield, Norton, Welch and intermediate points.

Leave Roanoke 8 P. M., arrive Hagerstown 4:15 A. M. Returning, leave Hagerstown 1:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., connecting to and from Harrisburg, Philadelphia, New York and interior Pennsylvania points. Pullman sleeping cars Philadelphia and Welch, W. Va.

Leave Roanoke 9:15 A. M., arrive Winston-Salem 2 P. M., arrive Charlotte, N. C., 6 P. M. Returning, leave Charlotte 11:10 A. M., leave Winston-Salem 2:55 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:40 P. M. Trains run solid between Roanoke and Charlotte.

See regular schedule advertisement for further information.

W. B. BEVILL,
General Passenger Agent.

Religious News.

METHODIST PREACHERS WILL MEET EACH MONDAY AS USUAL.

In the absence of the president, Rev. W. R. Proctor, the Methodist preachers' meeting was called to order by Rev. R. H. Bennett.

The deliberations were opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. S. S. Lambeth, of South Norfolk M. E. church.

After a free exchange of views on the subject it was decided to dispense with the usual summer vacation and to continue the regular weekly meetings from now on until the next Annual Conference, dispensing only with next Monday's meeting, in order to allow those preachers who are members of the Christian Thought Club an opportunity to go on the outing to Mathews county.

Rev. W. R. Proctor appeared and took charge of the meeting. Rev. C. L. Bane preached morning and night at Cumberland Street.

The usual call of the churches was taken up, and reports heard from the following:

Rev. E. H. Rawlings reported a large attendance on the Sunday school at Monumental church. He preached the baccalaureate sermon before the pupils of the Portsmouth High School at 11 A. M. Sunday; addressed the Rosebud Missionary Society at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 4 P. M. presided over and spoke at the Chinese Sunday school connected with the church. Rev. R. Finley Gayle, of Mount Vernon M. E. church, Danville, preached for him at night.

Rev. J. B. Merritt, chaplain of the Seamen's Bethel, made his usual rounds and preached morning and night at the Bethel, and had very pleasant services.

Rev. Dr. S. S. Lambeth reported a fine Sunday school at South Norfolk. He preached at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M., to large congregations.

Rev. J. H. Phaup, of South Princess Anne, reported a pleasant day on his circuit. He preached at Knotts Island in the morning. Children's day was postponed until next Sunday on account of the rain.

At Port Norfolk Rev. Daniel T. Merritt had a good attendance on the Sunday school and had a fine Epworth League meeting in the afternoon. He preached to large and attentive congregations at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

Rev. Geo. H. McFadden reported an excellent Sunday school. He preached in the morning to a fair congregation and to a large audience at night. He received one new member by certificate.

Rev. W. P. Jordan attended the Park Place Methodist church Sunday morning. The school is improving both in efficiency and members. At night he attended divine service at the Presbyterian church.

Rev. W. Asbury Christian attended the Sunday school at Memorial church, preached at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. He delivered a strong sermon to a crowded house, taking as his subject: "Paying Debts." Many merchants heard the discourse.

At Queen-Street church, Rev. J. K. (Continued on page thirteen.)

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 29.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Luke II, 32—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.)

LESSON I.—Saul of Tarsus converted (Acts ix, 1-20). Golden Text, Acts iii, 19, "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out." Saul had an excellent character and standing in the eyes of his fellows and in his own estimation, but a sight of Jesus made him count it all as dross (Phil. iii, 4-11). He was wholly submitted to the risen Christ from the day of his conversion.

LESSON II.—Peter, Eneas and Dorcas (Acts ix, 32-43). Golden Text, Acts ix, 34, "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole." The healing of Eneas and the raising to life of Dorcas each led to a great many turning to the Lord and believing in Him (verses 35, 42). Peter was the instrument in the Lord's hand, but it was God who wrought mightily through him by the Holy Spirit in the name of the Lord Jesus (Gal. ii, 8).

LESSON III.—Peter and Cornelius (Acts x, 34-48). Golden Text, Acts x, 34, "God is no respecter of persons." The church thus far was gathered only from the Jews, but it was the purpose of God to gather an elect company out of all nations, and the parting commission was to preach the gospel in all the world (Matt. xxviii, 19; Mark xvi, 15; Acts i, 8; Rev. v, 9, 10).

LESSON IV.—Gentiles received into the church (Acts xi, 1-18). Golden Text, Acts x, 43, "Whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." The apostles at Jerusalem, hearing what had happened and not understanding the will of the Lord, contend with Peter because he went to the uncircumcised, but when Peter rehearsed the matter to them and told how God had ordered and done it all and that he was only God's willing instrument, then they were quieted and glorified God.

LESSON V.—The church at Antioch in Syria (Acts xi, 19-30). Golden Text, Acts xi, 21, "The hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and turned unto the Lord." They hear of it in Jerusalem, and Barnabas, being sent, a man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, he is glad to see the grace of God and gives them good counsel.

LESSON VI.—Peter delivered from prison (Acts xii, 1-9). Golden Text, Ps. xxiv, 7, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them." This lesson takes us back to Jerusalem, where we find that James, the brother of John, has just been beheaded, and Peter is held in prison probably awaiting the same fate. The church in its helplessness gives itself to earnest and unceasing prayer, and, to their great surprise, Peter is delivered by an angel, and some of his enemies are slain.

LESSON VII.—The early Christian missionaries (Acts xiii, 1-12). Golden Text, Matt. xxviii, 19, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations." The purpose of the Lord is that from the nations He may gather a people for His name (Acts xv, 14). This He does by His Spirit through His word by means of willing and Spirit filled messengers.

LESSON VIII.—Paul at Antioch in Pisidia (Acts xiii, 43-52). Golden Text, Acts xiii, 38, "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins." With some opposition and some encouragement the apostles have come as far as this other Antioch and are here invited to preach on the Sabbath day in the synagogue. Paul, as was his custom, faithfully declares that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God, Israel's Messiah, that He was crucified, raised from the dead, ascended to heaven and that now through Him is forgiveness of all sins and justification from all things.

LESSON IX.—Paul at Lystra (Acts xiv, 8-22). Golden Text, II Tim. ii, 3, "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." Although they abode a long time at Iconium, speaking boldly in the Lord, and a great multitude of both Jews and Greeks believed, yet they had to flee from Iconium, and they came to Lystra, where at first there was unprecedented enthusiasm and then such opposition that Paul was stoned and left for dead. But God gave him back to them, and they went on and preached the gospel.

LESSON X.—The council at Jerusalem (Acts xv, 22-33). Golden Text, Gal. v, 1, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." We have seen persecutions from without the church, even unto death, and now we see false teachers within the church seeking to hinder the gospel. The great enemy is always at work and will be till he shall be shut up in the pit (Rev. xx, 1-3).

LESSON XI.—Paul crosses to Europe (Acts xvi, 6-15). Golden Text, Acts xxii, 15, "Thou shalt be His witness unto all men." In this lesson we see an illustration of at least these three texts, "Led by the Spirit of God," "Do as occasion serve thee, for God is with thee," "My word shall not return unto me void" (Rom. viii, 14; I Sam. x, 7; Isa. lv, 11).

LESSON XII.—A temperance lesson (Rom. xiii, 8-14). Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 12, "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." The whole story of salvation and service and glory is fully told in this epistle and summarized in this lesson, but the special point which the committee desires emphasized is the denial of self that Christ may be manifested. God enthroned, God working, Spirit filled, Jesus occupied and self thus renounced.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The world is rich or poor in proportion to a woman's faithfulness.—Rev. E. E. Wilson, Methodist, Akron, O.

The Christian's Comfort.

Christ's people have the comfort of his love, his forgiveness, his peace.—Rev. Dr. Holderby, Presbyterian, Atlanta, Ga.

A High Privilege.

The deeper knowledge of God is the privilege of the one who lives a godly life in this world.—Rev. M. M. Pearce, Presbyterian, St. Louis.

The World's Great Minds.

The use of the world's great minds is to delight, inspire and teach the generations following them.—Rev. Dr. John White Chadwick, Unitarian, Brooklyn.

Negative Character.

Negative character is produced by the rejection of Jesus Christ; and such characters are not a force for good.—Bishop I. W. Joyce, Methodist, Pittsburgh.

Death Is but Sleep.

We cannot die; we sleep; and when that mysterious sleep is over we wake to meet the gaze of those who have long since passed into and through the valley of shadows.—Rev. George H.

Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Pain Is Nature's Signal.

Punishment in nature is to hold man to a proper valuation of his physical powers. Pain is nature's signal. But for pain what child would come to manhood's estate with limbs and features intact?—Rev. M. T. Haw, Methodist, St. Louis.

Inspirations of the Future.

Righteousness, honor, mercy, freedom, truth—in these and in these alone as they grow to fuller range and power lies the future. In the larger liberty of today and her wider, unfettered outlook lies the opportunity of the church to stand in the van as the inspirer of profounder righteousness.—Rev. W. H. Pulsford, Unitarian, Chicago.

The Chief End of Man.

There is a pleasure which transcends that of making for happiness. It is the strife with the impulses for moral perfection. The large self realization of this perfection of nature and love of God—this is the end to be sought; this is the chief end of man.—Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, Presbyterian, President of Princeton University.

Courage of Convictions.

That flimsy, flabby fickleness that bends with every wind that blows will never bring about the kingdom where in alone dwelleth righteousness if Christians do not in the courage of divinely sealed conviction stand for the sanctity of Christian institutions and the duties of life.—Rev. J. C. Horning, Reformed Church, St. Louis.

The Duration of Eternity.

Were the oceans my ink wells and the sky my writing tablet and I were to write upon the sky as many figures as there are stars and compound the multiplication of them, even after these myriads of ages shall have ensued, the first second of eternity shall not have elapsed, but the ages shall go on and on forever.—Rev. E. B. Platt, Evangelist, St. Louis.

The Keypoint of Faith.

The keypoint of the Christian conception of faith has been the word "Jesus," and today thinkers of every name, whatever their opinion of the person of Jesus, would unite in saying that there is no other name under heaven known among men in which it were better that men should put their trust as representing the name of God himself.—Rev. Willard B. Thorp, Congregationalist, Chicago.

Honesty and Success.

Dishonesty is seldom absolutely necessary to success. If it is, then fail! "Put I had to live," said the culprit to the judge. "I do not see the necessity," said the man of the law. The reply is not overcharged with sympathy, but it glows with the sacred truth of the moral law. Let every one say, "It is not necessary that I live, but that I be a true man while I do live."—Rev. David Utter, Unitarian, Denver.

Doubt and Devotion.

Thomas has many followers in his doubts; how few in his devotion! He saw through a glass darkly, but he felt with his heart the heart of God, and, doubting, he went in the way of Christ. Our doubts we cannot control, but our love may be freely given, and he who loves and follows in life and service is the true disciple and will find the way of God leading through unknown dangers to the Calvary of suffering and finally to the Olivet of ascension into the presence of God.—Rev. Dr. Roderick Terry, Reformed Church, New York.

The Celestial Harmonies.

In Haydn's "Creation" the opening passage abounds in dissonances, a fit representation of chaos, but they soon give way to harmonies, choral and symphonic, that in the dreams of immeasurable celestial peace, and as in music—dissonance will end in harmony—sweet strains fill earth and heaven, may seem to silence the brain, yet it is only as a pause in the preparatory to richer, fuller tones.—Rev. Dr. J. B. Methodist, Saginaw, Mich.

The Revelations of

So we stand on Calvary, the love of God in Christ, filled with gratitude and with This is penitence. But some is needed to make repentance cross reveals not only divine compassion, not only the danger, but also shows our course noblest. It sets before us man, the man we ought to be, we want to be. Then we are to emulate the fascinating and we set ourselves to follow steps.—Rev. Dr. H. P. Dew, Congregationalist, New York.

PHILIPPINE W.

EFFECTS OF VINO ON OUR IN THE ISLANDS

The Intoxication Produced by Native Drink Is the Precursor of Sensibility of a Toxic Dose of Alcohol—How Vino Is Manufactured

Vino is manufactured in swamps around Manila by contiguous lagoons, says a v. Philadelphia Medical Journal does not grow inland or in lands. The greatest nest of is in the vast swamps in the Rio Grande. The parent Nipa fruticans is tapped and collected much in the same way we collect maple sap. A native banka (wooden dugout), to 36 feet long and 30 in with ten or twelve ollas, bowls, holding from three to five gallons each, and paddles through row waterway between the lands densely covered with palm, and frequently with his position in the banka tube into the spongy stem of a section of bamboo to collect. Making his rounds again, these containers into his ollas off to the distillery, disposed of for a few cents.

At the distillery the sap of the juice of the sugar cane per cent of the latter being fermented, distilled and, in a rectified. The product is what that name from the Spanish wine. I was unable to find and the upper islands a distillate from rice, although from that plant, is imported by the Chinese. Maize is produced in some quantity, but, as far as I learn, is not so used either are not grown in any quantity.

Vino is a pungent, colorless, biting an alcoholic strength of 50 to 80 per cent and shows butyric ether, but I never saw of amyl alcohol (fusel oil) and a distillate is made from various species of palm all over the world. In some parts of the "tuba dulce" is obtained from coa palm, is fermented and "toddy," but this is not the vino. Vino more closely resembles mexican, mezcual or agual maguey of the Mexicans.

The native—excluding the larger cities, who have adopted bad habits—does not eat a party to find a drunken native. Of the 500 or more natives we had in our command we never had a case of drunkenness. The only case of intoxication that I ever saw among the Macabebes was our "major domo," or head servant, when we lived at Colonel Blanco's, and he had surreptitiously emptied a bottle of cocktails that belonged to the commanding officer.

The native never drinks vino as it is in the market. He dilutes it with water, adds sugar and oil of anise and drinks it as "anisset," in the manner that his civilized brother takes a cordial. For a "long drink" he has bottled beer made at the native breweries of San Miguel, in Manila, or imported Japanese beer.

The intoxication from vino is purely profound insensibility of a toxic dose of alcohol. The American soldier saw in vino a substitute for whisky, and, to the amazement of the native, took it raw and in big gulps. As a result he was dead drunk in a remarkably short space of time. The American temperament is peculiarly influenced by alcoholic intoxication, and during the preliminary stages the soldier was to the native "mucho loco."

A College Advance.

As a result of a petition recently made to the faculty of Tufts college by the newly formed Prohibition club of that institution the Tufts curriculum will include an innovation during the next half year in a course for the study of the liquor question. The petition of the Prohibition club has met with general favor in the college, and it is probable that the course will be largely attended. The Rev. W. S. Woodbridge, professor of applied Christianity in Tufts Divinity school, will conduct the course.

Sweden's Temperance Strength.

Temperance statistics just issued at Stockholm show that the progress of the movement against alcoholism in Sweden has been so great in the last ten years that the temperance societies of the country have a total membership of 249,000. Five per cent of Swedes belong to them, and at least one-fifth of the nation do not use alcoholic drinks.

Arrests For Drunkenness.

In Portland, Me., the arrests for drunkenness numbered 424, or eight to every thousand population. In Toledo, O., with its 647 licensed saloons, there were 367 arrests, or three to every thousand inhabitants. In New York there were thirteen and in Philadelphia thirty-four arrests to every thousand.

When Men Begin to Drink.

As a rule men begin drinking between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five and abate the habit between forty and fifty, says Dr. G. Stanley Hall. A particularly trying time is the climacteric. Twenty-five years is the average duration of the habit, and it generally ends in exhaustion and death.

Gin Drinking In England.

England drinks more gin perhaps than any other two nations. But the gin of England is drunk by England's failures, says the New York Journal. The successful of England don't know the taste of gin. The deeper you go into Whitechapel the greater the number of gin bottles per capita.

No joy is ever given freely forth that does not leave quick echo in the giver's own heart.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Puny-Balsam Stops the Tickling,
and quickly allays inflammation in the throat.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of

PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE

Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package. Sold everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK NEW WESTERN VALLEY ROUTE
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, AND
NORTH CAROLINA.

THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE
SLEEPERS.

LURAY
GROTTOS
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS

NORFOLK
ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLUMBUS
AND THE N.

Write for Rates, Maps, and Sleeping Car Reservations. Descriptive Booklet on Request. Agents: W.B. BEVILL, ALLEN, and FRAGG, GENERAL PASS AGENTS, DIVISION OF PASSENGER SERVICE, RICHMOND, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $16,400.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President.

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

BENHAM MORRIS,
R. LOGAN HARRIS,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business

D. R. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All Prescriptions compounded by expert pharmaceuticals

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than ..... 4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 ..... 3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,

Blackstone, Va.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM,
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,
STIFF MUSCLES,
STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
PAIN IN THE BACK,
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS.

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY
METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.
East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.
South Boston, May 25th, at night.
Boydton, May 28th, at night.
Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.
Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.
South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.
Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.
Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.
Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.
District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.
Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.
Martinsville, June 29th, at night.
Main Street, July 2d, at night.
Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.
Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.
Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.
Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.
E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.
Calvary, July 23d, at night.
West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.
J. C. REED,
Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.
Ettrick, May 18th, night.
High-Street, May 25th, morning.
Blandford, May 25th, night.
Matoaca, June 1st, night.
Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.
Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.
Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.
Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH

FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times,
The Southern Farmer, and
American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.
East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.
Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.
Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.
South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.
Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.
South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.
North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.
West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.
Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.
Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.
West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.
Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.
West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.
R. T. WILSON, P. E.

By the blood of Jesus it is made possible for the sinner to be transformed into a saint.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE in the past sixty years all over the world could testify to the sterling worth of Painkiller, made by Perry Davis, as an unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis; try it when you have those cold chills in your back—it is a pleasant drink when prepared according to directions.

MAJOR C. V. WINFREE.

Major Christopher Valentine Winfree, who was recently stricken with paralysis, died at his home here this afternoon, aged 76. He was a native of this city and a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute. As a young man he was employed as civil engineer on the Norfolk and Western Railroad, and in Mississippi and Missouri. He served through the war in the Eleventh Virginia, and after the war engaged in the manufacture of tobacco, in which he amassed a large fortune. He was a director of the Glamorgan Works, cotton factory, and People's National Bank, and also prominent in the directory of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, to which latter institution he made several large gifts. He was a steward of Memorial Methodist church, and a member of an important board of the Virginia Annual Conference. Major Winfree is survived by his wife, three sons, and one daughter.—Dispatch—Lynchburg special of the 18th.

The papers report the death of Major C. V. Winfree, of Lynchburg, Va. This will cause deep regret among the Methodists of Virginia. For many years he has been as regular in his attendance at the District and Annual Conferences as any of the preachers, and has shown his love for the Church in innumerable ways. He brought his great business ability to bear upon the questions which arose in the various boards, and served the Church faithfully in his day and generation. He was a director of the Preachers' Relief Society for many years. He had been a trustee of Randolph-Macon College for nineteen years, and was one of the best friends Randolph-Macon has ever had.

When the Methodists of Lynchburg gave $25,000 to endow the chair of English at Randolph-Macon College, Bro. Winfree gave $2,500 to the fund. When the Woman's College was established at Lynchburg, he gave $6,000 to that object, and has since given the funds to build an observatory and to buy a good telescope for the Woman's College. He has served on the Executive Committee of the Woman's College from the beginning, and has given to the work the experience of a skilled business man. The Board of Trustees was in session at the time of his death, and most feeling and appreciative tributes were offered to his memory, and a committee of three appointed to attend the funeral.

He was a leading member of Memorial church, Lynchburg, and had contributed so largely to the building of it that he was given the privilege of naming the church "Memorial" in honor of his deceased wife. He will be greatly missed in every department of church work.

God does not cease to be the God of love because men are low, sad, and desponding. In the performance of duty, in meekness, in trust in God, is our rest—our only rest. It is not in understanding a set of doctrines; not in outward comprehension of the "scheme of salvation," that rest and peace are to be found, but in taking up, in all lowliness and meekness, the yoke of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Robertson.

RANDOLPH-MACON COMMENCEMENT.

(Continued from 1st page.)

for oratory brought out the following young orators, who handled their several subjects in a highly commendable manner. The medal will be awarded to-morrow: C. T. Thrift; subject, "The Era of Exclusiveness is Past"; W. E. Ellison; subject, "The United States in the Westward March of Empire"; Barrett P. Tyler; subject, "England the Mother: America the Child"; E. J. Dryer; subject, "A Watchword."

To-night the graduating class will have its celebration, and the programme arranged is as follows: Address by the president, James Frederick Peake; roll-call; salutatory, Clayton Orlando Tuttle; oration, Charles Tinsley Thrift; history, Francis Osgood Smith; recommendations, Geo. William Martin Taylor; prophesy, Elbridge Watts Poindexter; will and testament, Thomas Hammond Phelps; valedictory, Barrett P. Tyler."

At the annual meeting of the Alumni Society the regular officers were elected. Rev. James Cannon, Jr., offered a resolution on the subject of free tuition, which was discussed, and unanimously adopted and referred to the Board of Trustees for their consideration. The board adopted the paper as presented, without a dissenting voice and appointed a committee of five to formulate and execute a plan to raise within the next twelve months $200,000. The committee are Dr. B. F. Lipscomb, Dr. Paul Whitehead, and Messrs. W. Vicar, J. G. Penn, and George R. Hill. (The paper is given in another editorial.)

The Board of Trustees elected Prof. R. E. Blackwell president of the college for the coming year.

It was decided to establish a full chair of Physics and Biology at the Woman's College, the same to be filled in June, 1903.

Captain Richard Irby offered his resignation as Secretary and Treasurer of the Board, and it was accepted to take effect at such time as the Executive Committee may be able to make satisfactory arrangements as to his successor.

Rev. J. A. Anderson, of the Baltimore Conference, and Messrs. C. V. Hardwicke, of Richmond, and E. L. Sheffey, of Lynchburg, were elected trustees to fill vacancies in the Board.

Dr. James Atkins, editor of Sunday School Literature, delivered the commencement address on "The Conscience of Oliver Cromwell." It was a strong well-written paper, and brought to the young men some very appropriate lessons.

The medals and diplomas were then delivered. The celebration of the two societies followed at night. The address was delivered by Dr. Edward Deems, of New York. Dr. Deems is son of the late Dr. C. F. Deems. (A more particular account of this part of the commencement is prevented by the necessity of going to press.)

RANDOLPH-MACON WOMAN'S COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

The annual commencement exercises began Sunday morning with the baccalaureate sermon.

ureate services. The college chapel as prettily decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and potted plants, while dozens of large magnolia blooms in vases and jars made the air fragrant with their sweet perfume. A cool breeze from the mountains tempered the rays of the summer sun, and while the building had almost every seat filled, the atmosphere was not oppressive, so that those present could enjoy the beautiful services to the utmost. The musical numbers on the programme, always a strong feature at the college, were fully up to the high standard of the institution, and Professor Schehlman with his accompanists as at his best, adding much to the interpretation of the high-class selections rendered. Mozart's "Gloria" as sung by the vocal class was given with all the expression so needful for its true beauties to be appreciated, and Gounod's "O, Divine Redeemer," by Miss Georgiana T. Peters, was a superb effort. Miss Lena Mae Robins, who has been heard more than once with great pleasure by those fortunate enough to attend a concert at the college, sang "Anthem of Heaven," by Faure, in a truly artistic manner.

The services were conducted by Rev. John A. Kern, D. D., of Vanderbilt University, who also delivered the baccalaureate sermon, taking his text from Psalm 90: 17: "And let the beauty of our Lord be upon us." His subject might be termed Beauty, for he dealt with a master hand on all pertaining to the beautiful in nature, in art, in science, in human character, and in religion. "Beauty," said he, "is elemental in the structure of the world—it is one of God's eternal laws." A thing of beauty is perpetual joy to all; to the cultured and uncultured, to the savage as well as to the civilized. The love of beauty, which is instinctive, may be improved by exercise. The significance of God's creating so much beauty in the world was not for utilitarian purposes, but because He desires our happiness. It is an outward type, though feeble, of something glorious in God's own nature and being. God is the all beautiful, the all glorious being. The beauty of nature is one of the stairs we may climb from nature to nature's Creator. It is symbolical of the other world of which this is the bounding shore. All expect Heaven to be a place of beautiful scenes, voices, faces, and forms. It is perfectly natural for us to desire to be beautiful, nor is this desire confined to youth or either of the sexes, but personal beauty does not ensure personal success or happiness. A handsome or pretty face is one thing, a pleasing personality is another. To be admired is one thing; to be happy is another. All is to be used for the glory of God and the benefit of the world. Beauty of character, disposition, motive, and soul is the meaning of the Psalmist. Spiritual beauty is what we ought to desire, pray for, and strive after. The supreme manifestation of beauty in this world was in the life of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Throughout his discourse Dr. Kern gave numerous classical illustrations from the lives and characters of historic men and women, which were most skillfully woven into his explanation of the text. He closed with a brief but pleasing charge to the graduating class, who, in cap and gown, occupied the front seats before him.

After the benediction, the interesting services came to a close.

FRANKLIN SOCIETY CELEBRATION.

A large crowd assembled at the Woman's College last night to witness the celebration of the Franklin Literary Society, the programme of which was introduced with a vocal solo, "For All Eternity," by Miss Lena Mae Robins, and closed with a piano duet by Misses Sara Lee Robertson and Lucy Cole. The officers who presided were Miss S. Maud Carroll, president; Miss Anna L. Howard, vice-president, and Miss Mary Randolph Fleming, secretary.

The address of the occasion was delivered by Professor Edwin Mims, Ph. D., of Trinity College, N. C. Professor Mims discarded the conventional topics so frequently discussed upon such occasions. He also avoided the woman question, which so many speakers feel called upon to discuss before an audience of women. He chose as his subject: "Conditions of Life in the South of To-day," dwelling upon the recent educational and cultural development of that section. He alluded to the fact stated in striking form by Prof. Woodrow Wilson that the statesmen and public men of the South, and Virginia in particular, during the early days of the republic, were immeasurably superior to the public men of New England in culture, ability, and force. He said there was more culture in Charleston and Richmond in 1815 than in Boston. He contrasted this condition with the present state of affairs. He drew in striking language a vivid picture of the great industrial development of New England between the years 1825 and 1850, which was followed by the development of the public school system. He showed that Thomas Jefferson, a Virginian, was the first man to outline a complete system of popular education, but that while we have followed Jefferson in many things and looked up to him as a leader, we have not carried out his ideas of education.

He showed that the development of the South was checked by concentration on a single industry—cotton—and the slavery system built upon it. He said the South gradually became closed to new methods, new ideas. The Southern planter read Addison and Goldsmith and Dr. Johnson and Milton, and the men of the eighteenth century, rather than Wordsworth and Tennyson and Matthew Arnold, the men of the nineteenth century.

He spoke feelingly of the civil war, which removed from the life of the South the flower of her youth, the men who would naturally have been the leaders in public life, in the Church, the professions, in the college, in journalism. The terrible reconstruction period followed. The speaker then took up the condition of the South to-day. He spoke of the lack of libraries, museums, endowed institutions of every kind in the South to-day. He then described in forceful language the present industrial development, the part played in the life of the South by the captains of industry, who are fast becoming the most prominent men in their communities, occupying the positions of influence formerly held by the legal profession.

Dr. Mims then gave a most hopeful and encouraging forecast of the future. He showed that the industrial revolution through which the South is now passing will surely be followed by a great educational and literary renaissance, just as was the case in New England. He alluded to the work of the Southern Educational Board recently inaugurated.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

Of course, all the exercises of commencement center around college day, when diplomas and distinctions are to be delivered. Yesterday morning when the hour of 10 sounded, the chapel was filled with the college students and their friends and relatives, and everybody went there to pay a tribute of honor to the distinguished pupils.

DR. RICE'S ADDRESS.

The address of the morning was delivered by Rev. John A. Rice, D. D., of South Carolina, who discussed in a masterly and interesting manner the subject of "Culture." He received the most appreciative attention of his audience and when he took his seat he was honored with quite an ovation.

In pointing out the benefits of culture, Dr. Rice eloquently portrayed its effect on a man and woman, showing its progress and its gradual development. He told of a young country girl who entered the school an ignorant country girl, whose clothes were not tailor-made, and the colors of whose dress were not matched by an artist. After a few years she was rich in knowledge of those things that tended to make her own power and her own ability to advance. She was bright, attractive, and a splendid conversationalist. Such was the result of culture.

The soul of wealth, said the speaker, was mastery over things. Some of the richest men he had ever seen were the poorest, for they lacked all the great things that make up a true life. There was no man whom he so loved to look at as a carpenter and a blacksmith, and he could study a carved door for a half hour and find pleasure in seeing what the hand of man could accomplish. When a man knew how to do a thing, he was much better off than he who simply had possessions. Self-culture was the most profitable investment that any man could make. To be recognized as a man and not a thing, and to be recognized at his real worth, was the aim of the man who was struggling to rise.

Every one should remember that his best efforts had never been expressed. His kindest word has never been uttered, his greatest poem had never been written, and his noblest deed had never been done. Remembering this, there should never be any relinquishment of honest effort and of true ambition. Youth was the golden period in which the future was to be outlined, and now was the time for all to take down "Ne plus ultra" from the front gate and put it on the other side of the universe. How important it was in the golden era of life for man to give himself a wide horizon! Only that life that is launched in tune with the infinite will gain the infinite beauty of life. Many were content to rest in their little cabins and sing, "Shoo-fly, don't bother me; shoo-fly, don't bother me." In striving for the ideal self to live the ideal life, the horizon opened up in measureless vistas.

Culture was making for peace, was quelling the noise of the gun and the boom of the cannon. Strife and conflict were being drowned in the voice of culture. Nothing is final in the world forces, but in the Word of God there dwelt the final truth, and it was here that culture got in her work. I glory in the fact that infidelity is vanishing and people are being brought to God. To many religion was still an insurance policy against hell, and not the soul of God. To lift man from the depths of sin and ignorance was culture's noblest mission.

In closing his address, Dr. Rice directed his remarks to the graduating class, and spoke in a most touching and impressive manner of their future lives and duties.

DEGREES AND CERTIFICATES.

Dr. W. W. Smith then conferred the masters' degree upon Miss Annie Anthony, Miss Mary Randolph Fleming, and Miss Sallie Scott Nelson, all of Virginia, and the Bachelor of Arts degree upon Miss S. Maud Carroll, Miss Elsie Gilliam, Miss Janet Snead, Miss Grizelda Roberts, Miss Janie Kinnier, and Miss Mary Gish, of Lynchburg; Miss Kathryan P. Acree, of Danville; Miss Anna Howard, of North Carolina; Miss Lillian T. Jones, of Tennessee; Miss Mittie L. Porter, of Georgia; and Miss Ruth L. Clarke, of Richmond.

Certificates of proficiency were awarded by Dr. John H. Latane, secretary of the faculty, as follows:

Latin—Miss Sarah Lee Robertson, of Virginia; Miss Susie Louisa Overton, of Kentucky; Miss Trula Hicks Moorman, of Lynchburg; Miss Emmie Lela Gramling, of Georgia; Miss Ellen McBryde Brown, of Virginia; Miss Nannie L. Blackwell, of Virginia.

English—Miss Lottie L. Cralle, of Virginia.

Mathematics—Miss Catherine Irby Betty, of Virginia; Miss Helen Alvie Dulin, of Virginia; Miss Beulah Russell, of Kentucky.

Biology—Miss Anna Louise Howard, of North Carolina; Miss Sallie Scott Nelson, of Lynchburg; Miss Lillian Tong Jones, of Virginia; Miss Nannie Humphries, of Virginia.

Vocal Music—Miss Lena Mae Robins, of Virginia; Miss Emma Wysor, of Virginia.

Piano—Miss Emma Wysor, of Virginia; Miss Sara Lee Robertson, of Virginia; Miss Lucy Cole, of North Carolina; Miss Louise Blackwell, of Virginia.

Art—Miss Julia Ward Anderson, of Virginia; Miss Martha H. Ballard, of North Carolina.

Greek—Miss Jessie Bostick, of Tennessee; Miss Susie Louise Overton, of Kentucky; and Miss Martha Woodroof, of Virginia.

After this announcements were made by Dr. W. W. Smith, and the exercises were closed with the benediction.

(Continued on page 12.)

Talmage Sermon

WASHINGTON. In this discourse Dr. Talmage advises us to do our best in the spheres where we are placed and not wait to serve God in resounding position; text, I Corinthians x, 31, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

When the apostle in this text sets forth the idea that so common an action as the taking of food and drink is to be conducted to the glory of God, he proclaims the importance of religion in the ordinary affairs of our life. In all ages of the world there has been a tendency to set apart certain days, places and occasions for worship, and to think those were the chief realms in which religion was to act. Now, holy days and holy places have their importance. They give opportunity for special performance of Christian duty and for regaling of the religious appetite, but they cannot take the place of continuous exercise of faith and prayer. In other words, a man cannot be so much of a Christian on Sunday that he can afford to be a worldling all the rest of the week. If a steamer put out for Southampton and go one day in that direction and the other six days in other directions, how long before the steamer will get to Southampton? It will never get there. And, though a man may seem to be voyaging heavenward during the holy Sabbath day, if during the following six days of the week he is going toward the world and toward the flesh and toward the devil how long will it take him to reach the peaceful harbor of heaven? You cannot eat so much at the Sabbath banquet that you can afford religious abstinence the other six days. Heroism and princely behavior on great occasions are no apology for lack of right demeanor in circumstances insignificant and inconspicuous. The genuine Christian life is not spasmodic; does not go by fits and starts. It toils on through heat and cold, up steep mountains and along dangerous declivities, its eye on the everlasting hills crowned with the castles of the blessed. I propose to plead for an everyday religion.

In the first place we want to bring the religion of Christ into our conversation. When a dam breaks and two or three villages are overwhelmed or an earthquake in South America swallows a whole city, then people begin to talk about the uncertainty of life, and they imagine that they are engaged in positively religious conversation. No. You may talk about these things and have no grace of God at all in your heart. We ought every day to be talking religion. If there is anything glad about it, anything beautiful about it, anything important about it, we ought to be continuously discussing it. I have noticed that men just in proportion as their Christian experience is slow talk about funerals and graveyards and tombstones and deathbeds. The real genuine Christian man talks chiefly about this life and the great eternity beyond and not so much about the insignificant pass between these two residences. And yet how few circles there are where the religion of Jesus Christ is welcome. Go into a circle even of Christian people, where they are full of joy and hilarity, and talk about Christ or heaven and everything is immediately silenced. As on a summer day when the forests are full of life, chatter, chirrup and carol—a mighty chorus of bird harmony, every tree branch an orchestra—if a hawk appear in the sky, every voice stops and the forests are still. Just so I have seen a lively religious circle silenced on the appearance of anything like religious conversation. No one had anything to say save perhaps some old patriarch in the corner of the room, who really thinks that something ought to be said under the circumstances; so he puts one foot over the other and heaves a long sigh and says, "Oh, yes; that's so, that's so!"

It Makes the Heart Glad.

My friends, the religion of Jesus Christ is something to talk about with a glad heart. It is brighter than the waters; it is more cheerful than the sunshine. Do not go around groaning about your religion when you ought to be singing it or talking it in cheerful tones of voice. How often it is that we find men whose lives are utterly inconsistent who attempt to talk religion and always make a failure of it! My friends, we must live religion or we cannot talk it. If a man is cranky and cross and uncongenial and hard in his dealings and then begins to talk about Christ and heaven, everybody is repelled by it. Yet I have heard such men say in whining tones, "We are miserable sinners." "The Lord bless you." "The Lord have mercy on you," their conversation interlarded with such expressions, which mean nothing but canting, and canting is the worst form of hypocrisy. If we have really felt the religion of Christ in our hearts, let us talk it, and talk it with an illuminated countenance, remembering that when two Christian people talk God gives special attention and writes down what they say; Malachi iii, 16, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written."

Again, I remark, we must bring the religion of Christ into our employments. "Oh," you say, "that is very well if a man handle large sums of money or if he have an extensive traffic, but in the humble work in life that I am called to the sphere is too small for the action of such grand, heavenly principles." Who told you so? Do you not know that God watches the faded leaf on the brook's surface as certainly as he does the path of a blazing sun? And the moss that creeps up the side of the rock makes as much impression upon God's mind as the waving tops of Oregon pine and Lebanon cedar, and the alder, crackling under the cow's hoof, sounds as loud in God's ear as the snap of a world's conflagration. When you have anything to do in life, however humble it may seem to be, God is always there to help you to do it. If your work is that of a fisherman, then God will help you, as he helped Simon when he dragged Genesaret. If your work is drawing water then he will help you, as when he talked at the well curb to the Samaritan woman. If you are engaged in the custom house, he will lead you, as he led Matthew sitting at the receipt of customs. A religion that is not good in one place is not worth anything in another place. The man who has only a day's wages in his pocket as certainly needs the guidance of religion as he who rattles the keys of a bank and could abscond with a hundred thousand dollars.

Putting Religion Into Practice.

There are those prominent in the churches who seem to be on public occasions very devout who do not put the principles of Christ's religion into practice. They are the most inexorable of creditors. They are the most grasping of dealers. They are known as sharpers on the street. They fleece every sheep they can catch. A country merchant comes in to buy spring or fall goods, and he gets into the store of one of these professed Christian men who have really no grace in their hearts, and he is completely swindled. He is so overcome that he cannot get out of town during the week. He stays in town over Sunday, goes into some church to get Christian consolation, when what is his amazement to find that the very man who hands him the poor box in the church is the one who relieved him of his money! But never mind; the deacon has his black coat on now. He looks solemn and goes home, talking about "the blessed sermon." If the wheat in the churches should be put into a hopper, the first turn of the crank would make the chaff fly, I tell you. Some of these men are great sticklers for gospel preaching. They say: "You stand there in bands and surplice and gown and preach—preach like an angel—and we will stand out here and attend to business. Don't mix things. Don't get business and religion in the same bucket. You attend to your matters, and we will attend to ours." They do not know that God sees every cheat they have practiced in the last six years; that he can look through the iron wall of their fireproof safe; that he has counted every dishonest dollar they have in their pocket, and that a day of judgment will come. These inconsistent Christian men will sit on the Sabbath night in the house of God singing at the close of the service "Rock of ages cleft for me" and then when the benediction is pronounced shut the pew door and say as they go out: "Goodby, religion. I'll be back next Sunday."

I think that the church of God and the Sabbath are only an armory where we are to get weapons. When war comes, if a man wants to fight for his country, he does not go to Troy or Springfield to do battling, but he goes there for swords and muskets. I look upon the church of Christ and the Sabbath day as only the place and time where and when we are to get armed for Christian conflict, but the battlefield is on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. "St. Martin's" and "Lenox" and "Old Hundredth" do not amount to anything unless they sing all the week. A sermon is useless unless we can take it with us behind the plow and the counter. The Sabbath day is worthless if it last only twenty-four hours.

The Work Nearest at Hand.

There are many Christians who say: "We are willing to serve God, but we do not want to do it in these spheres about which we are talking, and it seems so insipid and monotonous. If we had some great occasion, if we had lived in the time of Luther, if we had been Paul's traveling companion, if we could serve God on a great scale, we would do it, but we can't in this everyday life." I admit that a great deal of the romance and knight errantry of life have disappeared before the advance of this practical age. The ancient temples of Rouen have been changed into storehouses and smithies. The residences of poets and princes have been turned into brokers' shops. The classic mansion of Ashland has been cut up into walking sticks. The groves where the poets said the golden dew have been carted out for firewood. The muses that we used to read about have disappeared before the migrant's ax and the trapper's gun, and the man who is waiting for a bewitched with wonders will never find it. There is, however, a field of endurance and great achievement. It is in everyday life. There are a thousand scales, there are Hellesponts to scale, there are fires to brave, but they are all around us now. This is the kind of martyrdom to bear.

It took grace to lead Latimer and Ridley through the fire triumphant when their armed enemies and their friends were looking on, but it requires more grace now to bring a man through persecution when nobody is looking on. I could show you in the city a woman who has had her martyrism for twenty years who has endured more suffering and exhaustion more grace than would have been shown by twenty martyrs passing triumphantly through the fire. If you are not faithful in an insignificant position in life, you would not be faithful in a great mission. If you cannot stand the test of a midge, how could you endure the breath of a basilisk?

Do not think that any work gives you to do in the world is on a small scale for you to do. The whole universe is not ashamed to take care of one little flower. Plato had a friend which I have now nearly forgotten, but it ran something like this: He said, "The spirits of the other world came to this world to find a body and find a sphere of work. One spirit came and took the body of a king and did his work; another spirit came and took the body of a poet and did his work; and while Ulysses came, and he said, 'Why, all the fine bodies are taken, and all the grand work is taken. There is nothing left for me.' And some replied, 'Ah, the best one has been reserved for you.' Ulysses said, 'What's the work?' And the reply was, 'The body of a common man, doing a common work and for a common reward.' A goodly lot for the world and just as goodly a lot for the church. Whether we eat or drink or whatsoever we do, let us do it to the glory of God."

Religion of Everyday Life.

Again, we need to bring the religion of Christ into our commonest trials. For severe losses, for bereavement, for trouble that shocks like an earthquake, and that blasts like a storm, we scribe religious consolation; but, business man, for the small annoyances, last week how much of the grace of God did you apply? "Oh," you say, "these trials are too small for such application." My brother, they are shaping your character, they are scouring your temper, they are wearing out your patience and they are making you a less of a man. I go into a sculptor's studio and see him shaping a statue. He has a chisel in one hand and a mallet in the other, and he gives a very gentle stroke—click, click, click. I say, "Why don't you strike harder?" "Oh," he replies, "that would shatter the statue. I can't do it that way, I must do it this way." So he works and after awhile the features come out, and everybody that enters the studio is charmed and fascinated. When God has your soul under process of development, and it is the little annoyances and vexations of life that are chiseling out your immortal nature. It is click, click, click! I wonder how some great providence does not come and with one stroke prepare you for heaven. Ah, no. God says that is the way. And so he keeps on by stroke

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:30 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffers for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

1:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 85, United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

8:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Newport.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAY 11, 1902.

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York-river landings.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, daily, except Sundays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND.

9:15 A. M., No. 15, daily, from West Point, with connection from Baltimore, except Monday.

10:45 A. M., No. 9, daily, except Sundays and Mondays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations. Nos. 15 and 16 will make no stops between Richmond and Quinton.

Steamers sail from West Point 5:50 P. M. daily, except Sundays. Steamers call at Gloucester Point and Claybank Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and Yorktown and Allmonds Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

C. W. WESTBURY,

District Passenger Agent,

920 east Main street,

Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICK,

General Passenger Agent.

C. H. ACKERT,

General Manager,

Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and Other Purposes

—

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APL. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:15 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
2:56 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	4:12 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	7:00 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
	(Eastern Time.)
1:05 A. M.	9:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
	(Central Time.)
4:55 A. M.	2:10 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
9:15 A. M.	7:00 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	—Ar. St. Augustine.
5:45 P. M.	6:45 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
10:32 P. M.	10:08 A. M.—Ar. Charlotte.
1:35 A. M.	10:22 A. M.—Lv. Chester.
3:43 A. M.	12:35 P. M.—Lv. Greenwood.
6:13 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Lv. Athens.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
	5:40 P. M.—Ar. Augusta.
11:35 A. M.	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Macon.
6:25 P. M.	9:20 P. M.—Ar. Montgomery.
	2:55 A. M.—Ar. Mobile.
	7:25 A. M.—Ar. New Orleans.
6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norlina, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norlina with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norlina, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Sleeping cars between New York and Tampa. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington, and between Washington and Jacksonville. Pullman sleeping cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa; also through drawing-room. Sleeping cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe cars between Hamlet and Savannah.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-room Buffet Sleeping cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest day coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure Patents and TRADE-MARKS write to

CASNOW & CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS

OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address

G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds, Watches,

Fine Repairing. Jewelry. Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing
Lumsden & Son,
Jewellers and Opticians
781 Main Street Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,

Patent Lawyers, Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW, PLANING MILLS
and
UMBER YARD.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

PLOW HANDLES.

TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.

CORN MEAL.

SLAT &amp; WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 9.)

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

The closing exercises of the commencement took place last evening in the chapel of the college, when class day was observed. The officers who presided were Miss Mary Gish, president; Miss Janet W. Snead, secretary, and Miss Anna L. Howard, treasurer. The exercises were introduced by the president who, in a most tastefully worded address, spoke of the women of to-day and compared them with their mothers of other generations, showing that women were continuing to fill a useful and beneficent mission, and that they were keeping pace with the progress and advancement of the world. In conclusion she addressed herself to the members of the class, and referred to its members in a most pleasant and happy manner. Miss Gish fell the duty of introducing the other speakers of the evening, and this duty she performed in a most acceptable and graceful manner.

It devolved upon Miss Mary Randolph Fleming to give the class history, and this she did in a manner that was very highly appreciated by her audience, which frequently interrupted her remarks with generous applause. The history of the class as related by Miss Fleming formed a most interesting and entertaining narrative, and the manner in which it was expressed rendered it delightful. Miss Fleming was followed by the class musician, Miss Janet Snead, who rendered a difficult air from "Stabat Mater," and by her masterly execution and expressive interpretation captured the admiration and plaudits of those who had opportunity of enjoying her performance.

In a most humorous and amusing address, Miss Mittie Love Porter gave the pessimistic view of the class, and her doleful contemplations were received with the heartiest laughter. Miss Porter made one of the hits of the occasion, and she was congratulated on the success of her effort. The optimistic view of the class was set forth in a charming manner by Miss Sallie Scott Nelson, who in terms delicately humorous gave predictions of the future of the members of the class, and by her references to well-known characteristics of her class associates she afforded great entertainment. The closing address of the evening was delivered by Miss Maude Carroll, who gave the charge to the faculty, reminding them of their shortcomings as observed by the students, and of the particular deficiencies in which they should endeavor to institute a reformation. The cleverness and good taste of Miss Carroll's humor, coupled with its kindness, rendered it peculiarly appropriate for such an occasion, and made her address one of the distinguished events of the programme.

The exercises of the evening and of the commencement were concluded with a few feeling and happy remarks by Chancellor Smith.—News.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY.

This week has marked the close of this most excellent school for the current session. On last Sunday evening Rev. C. M. Hawkins, D. D., formerly of Missouri, but now a member of the Baltimore Conference and pastor of Greene Memorial church, in Roanoke city, preached the baccalaureate sermon. It was a masterful discourse, based on Genesis 1: 27: "So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him." He discussed the several respects in which man bore the image of God. The physical part, he said, is the only perishable house in which the real man dwells for a while, and is composed of a few simple material elements, as may be shown by chemical analysis. Under the three definitions of God in the Bible, "God is light," "God is love," and "God is a spirit," he traced the resemblance of man to the Creator in the intellectual, the moral, and the spiritual realms of his being. The sermon was strong in thought, rich in pure, lofty sentiment, and stirred the soul with deep longings for its glorious possibilities through the redeeming work of Christ.

The commencement address was delivered on Wednesday evening by Professor William R. Abbott, principal of Bellevue High School. He showed that success in the battle of life depends upon thorough preparation. It was a most excellent address. Pure, chaste, beautiful English was employed by the learned speaker to express thought that was at once eloquent, classic, patriotic, and inspiring; while a tender, deep undertone of refined Christian faith gave power and effectiveness to the whole discourse. The young men of Randolph-Macon Academy will not soon forget those wise words.

The principal, Professor E. Sumter Smith, announced that, of an enrollment of nearly a hundred, eighty students had completed the full work of the session; of these 48 3-4 per cent. were on the roll of honor for deportment, having received no demerits during the session. These young men were called to the front and addressed by Professor T. M. Campbell in very earnest and appropriate words.

Thirty-seven and one-half per cent. of the students had achieved distinctions on all their studies, and were addressed by Professor Charles G. Evans in terms of congratulation and encouragement.

Professor Marvin E. Smithey spoke fitting words to the following nine, who, having made an average of 95 on all their studies, were deserving of special mention: Messrs. Burton, Compton, Douglas, Duke, Gills, Loving, Nicholson, Saunders, (T. B.), and Stephenson.

The scholarship medals were delivered by Professor W. R. Abbott. The junior medal (awarded by the principal, Professor E. Sumter Smith) was won by Mr. George L. Burton, of Culpeper, Va. The senior medal (awarded by Mr. John W. Bradbury, of Petersburg, Va.) was won by Mr. W. L. Gills, of Bedford City, Va. Mr. Burton is a son of Rev. John M. Burton, of the Virginia Conference, and is truly a promising youth. Professor Smith stated that he was the youngest of all the pupils boarding this year at the Academy, and had made the highest grade on both examinations, not only for the current session, but the highest ever made at this or any other school in which he had taught, his average being 99 78-100. This is truly a remarkable record for one so young—just thirteen years old. Mr. Gills, too, has shown himself to be not only a young man of fine mind, but a hard-working student, and has won well-merited success. It is to be hoped that the way may be opened for these bright youths to pursue the path of learning, which they have thus far travelled so well, until they attain to the noble heights of knowledge and usefulness which they seem so capable of reaching. To every unreasonable objection and opposition it ought to be said: "Stand back and let these boys pass!" And so may it be for all the deserving boys of Randolph-Macon Academy.

The following announcements were made:

1. The best all-round athlete—Mr. C. L. Harrell, North Carolina.

SOCIETY HONORS.

1. Best Debater—Mr. J. T. Allen, Virginia.

2. Best Declaimer—Mr. C. L. Harrell, North Carolina.

How many of the ninety thousand Methodists within the Virginia Conference know the worth of this valuable institution? Crowning one of the hills of beautiful Bedford, and facing one of the loveliest landscapes, it is doing a splendid work. Not only is it well fitted in material things for the health and comfort of its pupils; but, what is far more important, it is supplied with a faculty of faithful teachers. Professor Smith, the principal, a graduate of the University of Virginia, has a rare gift for managing young men, controlling with a kind, but strong, firm hand, and, by force of his own individuality and example, inspiring them to honor, industry, and fidelity. During the session he has been assisted in this noble work by five bright, earnest professors, every one of them a Master of Arts and a Christian man.

Mr. J. Gordon Smith, treasurer and business manager, together with the elect ladies, Mrs. E. S. Smith, Mrs. J. G. Smith, matron, and Mrs. M. F. Goodman, matron, are all esteemed and loved for their Christian character and influence.

From these great blue hills to the sea let the Methodists of Virginia know that they have in Randolph-Macon Academy, of Bedford City, a school that richly merits their patronage, and support. More than twenty of its former students are this session applying for degrees in college and university halls. It is shown "by its fruits."

Professor Smith has recently prepared, with much labor, a beautiful pamphlet, setting forth the salient features of the Academy, the record made by its students who have gone hence to colleges and universities, together with highly commendatory certificates from many learned and distinguished men.

Why will not all of our preachers and laymen who know of pupils available for Randolph-Macon Academy, at once notify Professor Smith of the same? Do this, brethren; get his pamphlet and read it yourselves; and then send him a list of all the boys that may be obtained for this school; and thus, as loyal methodists, all over the State, we will rally to and support our own Academy. Fraternally,

JOSEPH W. SHACKFORD.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meanness, or, worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only those things which are lovely and lovable.—Ex.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them; the kind things you will say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you will send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. Learn to anoint your friends beforehand for their burial. Post-mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.—Sel.

J. R. Miller says that many of us find life hard and full of pain. The world uses us rudely and roughly. We suffer wrongs and injuries. Other people's clumsy feet tread upon our tender spirits. We must endure misfortunes, trials, disappointments. We cannot avoid these things, but we should not allow the harsh experiences to deaden our sensibilities, or make us stoical or sour. The true problem of living is to keep our hearts sweet and gentle in the hardest conditions and experiences." Some time, some where, we must pass beneath the clouds of adversity and trials, but they should make us feel more and more our dependence upon Him who alone is able to help us bear our burdens.

God's parental heart does not wish to grieve us; He must wound us to the very heart, that He may cure its malady. He must take from us what is most dear, lest we love too much, lest we love it to the prejudice of our love for Him. We weep, we despair, we groan in our spirits, and we murmur against God; but He leaves us to our sorrow and we are saved; "our present grief saves us from an eternal sorrow. He has placed the friends whom He has taken from us in safety, to restore the to us in eternity.—Selected.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

(Continued from page 5.)

Jolliff had a most pleasant day. The Sunday school was largely attended. At 11 A. M. Children's Day exercises were held, when a most interesting and attractive programme was rendered, which was enjoyed by the large congregation. At night Mr. Jolliff preached a sermon on the prevailing sins of today.

Rev. C. H. McGee had a field day at Lambert's Point. Evangelist Holcombe preached to the Sunday school at 9:30 A. M. Mr. Holcombe delivered a searching discourse to a full house, and at night he held forth to one of the largest congregations in the history of Lambert's Point, the church and the lecture room being beyond its seating capacity.

At Epworth church Children's Day exercises were held at 11 A. M., a large congregation being present to witness the programme. The meeting of the Rosebud Society was held in the afternoon. At night Mr. Bennett preached to a well filled house. Bishop Smith will lecture for the Rosebud Society Tuesday of next week.

Rev. W. R. Proctor conducted the usual services at McKendree church Sunday morning and night. Rev. Walter Holcombe, the popular young evangelist, was a visitor. He was warmly greeted by the members. He gave an account of the manner in which the preachers conducted the Ministerial Conference at Montreat, N. C., which begins July 20th and continues to August 1st. He extended a cordial invitation to the members to attend the Conference.

After an informal discussion of matters of interest to the Church only, the meeting was dismissed with the benediction by Rev. R. Finley Gale.—Virginia-Pilot.

* * *

Y. W. C. A. AND Y. M. C. A.

The young Woman's Christian Association of the Southern States, and the Young Men's Christian Association of the Southern Conference of Students began their business sessions here today. At the introductory service of the Y. W. C. A. addresses were made by Miss Rutherford, of Lucy Cobb Institute, Athens, Ga., and chairman of the Southern Conference Committee; Miss Martha Coulling, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Virginias; Mrs. K. G. Buford, representing the Executive Committee of Tennessee, and others. Two hundred delegates are in attendance, representing the entire South.

To-night Miss Helen F. Barnes, of the city department of the American Committee, spoke on the extension department of the work.

A large and representative body of Southern college students is attending the Y. M. C. A. Conference. General Field Secretary H. K. Anderson is in charge of the Conference, assisted by S. W. McGill, State Secretary of Tennessee; Mr. Walker, of Virginia, assisting in the business department.

A number of prominent workers, including Dr. Robert E. Spear, the Rev. W. E. McDowell, of New York, and the Rev. John T. Stone, of Baltimore, will deliver addresses before the Conference. The two Conferences will hold a ten days' session.—Asheville (N. C.) special to Norfolk Landmark of the 16th.

* * *

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

* * *

True peace and rest lie not in outward things. There liveth no man on earth who may always have rest and peace without trouble and crosses. Wherefore yield thyself willingly to them, and seek only that true peace of the heart, which none can take away from thee, that thou mayest overcome all assaults.—Theologia Germanica.

SPECIAL RATES VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following special rates will apply via Southern Railway for special occasions mentioned:

VIRGINIA STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS, SESSION 1902.

Special rate of four cents (4) per mile one way for the round trip. Apply to agents for details.

FOURTH OF JULY RATES, SEASON 1902.

Rate of one and one-third first class limited fares for the round trip, between all points. Tickets on sale July 2d, 3d, and 4th, with return limit July 8, 1902.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare plus $2 membership fee for the round trip from all points. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, with return limit July 8th, except by deposit of tickets with joint agent, and payment of fifty cents, extension until September 10th may be obtained.

STATE CONVENTION B. Y. P. U., LYNCHBURG, VA., June 25-26, 1902.

One and one-third fares for the round trip from points within the State. Tickets on sale June 23d, 24th and 25th, with return limit June 28, 1902.

PEABODY COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL, NASHVILLE, TENN., JUNE 16 AND JULY 28, 1902.

One fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale June 12th, 13th and 14th, June 27th, 28th and 29th, and July 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit July 31st, except by deposit of tickets with joint agent on or before July 31st, and payment of 50 cents, extension of limit until September 30th may be obtained.

MEETING VIRGINIA STATE DENTAL ASSOCIATION, OLD POINT, VA., AUGUST 3-7, 1902.

Four (4) cents per mile one way distance for the round trip. Tickets to be on sale August 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit August 10th.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

NEW BOOK COMMITTEE MAPS OUT ITS WORK.

The new Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Nashville, Tenn., June 11th. Dr. Collins Denny, of Nashville, was elected chairman, and W. C. Dibrell was elected secretary.

The matter of uniting the publishing interest of the Southern Church and Northern Church in China was discussed.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore; Rev. Paul Whitehead, of Lynchburg, Va., and Dr. Collins Denny were appointed a special committee to meet representatives of the Northern Church, and to take steps for the consummation of the proposition.

The salaries of the two book agents, editors of the Advocate, Quarterly Review, Epworth Era, Sunday School Literature, Superintendent of Sunday-School Training were fixed at $3,000 per annum each. The committee acted in regard to the transfer of a site at Shanghai, China, by the Board of Missions to the Book Agents and Book Committee, upon which a new publishing house is to be erected. The building and plant is to cost $50,000, and $10,000 of this amount was ordered forwarded to Shanghai at once for carrying on the work. The balance will be forwarded at the rate of $5,000 a month.

The usual appropriation for the different publications were made. The amount for the Sunday-school literature is $15,000.

About $25,000 or $30,000 are carried for the other publications and for editorial assistance and contributions.—Times.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. will preach the opening sermon. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session.

J. C. REED,

Presiding Elder

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING WITH PERFECT SUCCESS. SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP AND TAKE NO OTHER KIND.

Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN Blackstone to call at our nice

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,

UP-TO-DATE FURNITURE STORE

We guarantee our prices low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER

Moncure &amp; Epes

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions AND

Fine Footwear

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 to $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

(Continued from page 10.)

of little annoyances, little sorrows, little vexations, until at last you shall be a glad spectacle for angels and for men. You know that a large fortune may be spent in small change, and a vast amount of moral character may go away in small depletions. It is the little troubles of life that are having more effect upon you than the great ones. A swarm of locusts will kill a grainfield sooner than the incursion of three or four cattle. You say, "Since I lost my child, since I lost my property, I have been a different man." But you do not recognize the architecture of little annoyances that are hewing, digging, cutting, shaping, splitting and interjoining your moral qualities. Rats may sink a ship. One Lucifer match may send destruction through a block of storehouses. Catherine de' Medici got her death from smelling a poisonous rose. Columbus, by stopping and asking for a piece of bread and a drink of water at a Franciscan convent, was led to the discovery of the new world. And there is an intimate connection between trifles and immensities, between nothings and everythings.

Now, be careful to let none of those annoyances go through your soul unarraiged. Compel them to administer to your spiritual wealth. The scratch of a sixpenny nail sometimes produces lockjaw, and the clip of a most infinitesimal annoyance may damage you forever. Do not let any annoyance or perplexity come across your soul without its making you better.

Revenue of Spiritual Strength.

Our national government did not think it belittling to put a tax on pins and a tax on buckles and a tax on shoes. The individual taxes do not amount to much, but in the aggregate to millions and millions of dollars. And I would have you, O Christian man, put a high tariff on every annoyance and vexation that comes through your soul. This might not amount to much in single cases, but in the aggregate it would be a great revenue of spiritual strength and satisfaction. A bee can suck honey even out of a nettle, and if you have the grace of God in your heart you can get sweetness out of that which would otherwise irritate and annoy. The only way to get prepared for the great troubles of life is to conquer these small troubles. And I have to tell you, O Christian men, if you cannot apply the principles of Christ's religion on a small scale you will never be able to apply them on a large scale. If you cannot contend successfully against these small sorrows that come down single handed, what will you do when the greater disasters of life come down with thundering artillery, rolling over your soul?

Again, we must bring the religion of Christ into our commonest blessings. When the autumn comes and the harvests are in and the governors make proclamations, we assemble in churches and we are very thankful. But every day ought to be a thanksgiving day. We do not recognize the common mercies of life. We have to see a blind man led by his dog before we begin to bethink ourselves of what a grand thing it is to have undimmed eyesight. We have to see some wounded man hobbling on his crutch or with his empty coat sleeve pinned up before we learn to think what a grand thing God did for us when he gave us healthy use of our limbs. We are so stupid that nothing but the misfortunes of others can rouse us up to our blessings. As the ox grazes in the pasture up to its eye in clover, yet never thinking who makes the clover, and as the bird picks up the worm from the furrow, not knowing that it is God who makes everything from the animalcule in the soil to the seraph on the throne, so we go on eating, drinking and enjoying, but never thanking, or seldom thanking, or, if thanking at all, with only half a heart.

I compared our indifference to the brute, but perhaps I wronged the brute. I do not know but that, among its other instincts, it may have an instinct by which it recognizes the divine hand that feeds it. I do not know but that God is, through it, holding communication with what we call "irrational creation." The cow that stands under the willow by the watercourse chewing its cud looks very thankful, and who can tell how much a bird means by its song? The aroma of the flowers smells like incense, and the mist arising from the river looks like the smoke of a morning sacrifice. Oh, that we were as responsive! Yet who thanks God for the water that gushes up in the well, and that foams in the cascade, and that laughs over the rocks, and that patters in the showers, and that claps its hands in the sea? Who thanks God for the air, the fountain of life, the bridge of sunbeams, the path of sound, the great fan on a hot summer's day? Who thanks God for this wonderful physical organism, this sweep of the vision, this chime of harmony struck into the ear, this soft tread of a myriad delights over the nervous tissue, this rolling of the crimson tide through artery and vein, this drumming of the heart on our march to immortality? We take all these things as a matter of course.

God's Common Blessings.

But suppose God should withdraw these common blessings! Your body would become an inquisition of torture, the cloud would refuse rain, every green thing would crumple up, and the earth would crack open under your feet. The air would cease its healthful circulation, pestilence would swoop, and every house would become a place of skulls. Streams would first swim with vermin and then dry up, and thirst and hunger and anguish and despair would lift their scepters. Oh, compare such a life as that with the life you live with your families! Is it not time that, with every word of our lips and with every action of our life we began to acknowledge these everyday mercies? "Whether ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Do I address a man or a woman who has not rendered to God one single offering of thanks?

I was preaching one Thanksgiving day and announced my text—"Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever." I do not know whether there was any blessing on the sermon or not, but the text went straight to a young man's heart. He said to himself as I read the text: "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good!" Why, I have never rendered him any thanks! Oh, what an ingrate I have been!" Can it be, my brother, that you have been fed by the good hand of God all these days, that you have had clothing and shelter and all the beneficent surroundings, and yet have never offered your heart to God? Oh, let a sense of the divine goodness shown you in everyday blessings melt your heart, and if you have never before uttered one earnest note of thanksgiving let this be the day which shall hear your song! What I say to one I say to all. Take this practical religion I have recommended into your everyday life. Make every day a Sabbath and every meal a sacrament and every room you enter a holy of holies. We all have work to do; let us be willing to do it. We all have sorrows to bear; let us cheerfully bear them.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING. BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLAOE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $200,000.

SURPLUS, $375,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agen's, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE For Our Readers. EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.
"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."
—Central Christian Advocate.
"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.
"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.
"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."
—Methodist Magazine and Review.
"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."
—Richmond Christian Advocate.
"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."
—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.
"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."
—St. Louis Globe-Dem.
"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.
"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."
—Bishop C. C. McCabe.
"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.
"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."
—Bishop J. F. Hurst.
"It ranks with the best."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.
"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.
"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

are showing a splendid line of

RESS FABRICS suitable for the hot weather and at popular prices.

SIMMER CLOTHING for Men and Boys of the latest styles.

Most complete line of SHOES for Men, Women and Children to be seen in this section. Our shoes are made of LEATHER and gnaranteed.

Nice assortment of

ERAW HATS, NEGLIGEE SHIRTS, and NECKWEAR.

THOMSON'S, R. & G., and W. B. CORSETS.

Immense stock of EMBROIDERIES at prices that will astish you.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

OMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

Old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVFERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

V. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.
Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant,
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU
—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRAND

...FOR TOBACCO.

Bellefont

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to

Hard Cas

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2

Standard

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

Alliance

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

FOR CORN AND COT

Highlan

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to

and shoes.
amount to millio
I would put a hi and vex soul. Th in single would be strength suck he you ha heart

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is $15.20,	but it actually runs $16.54
Alliance	" 15.20,	" " " 17.71
Hard Cash	" 16.70,	" " " 18.96
Bellefonte	" 21.20,	" " " 23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 245

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., JUNE 26, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

Editorial.

A card from Bro. John R. Gill gives the information that he is now at Johns Hopkins Hospital, and that the doctors speak hopefully of his case. He requests that the brethren remember him in his affliction, and this we will all gladly do.

On another page an editorial from the columns of the Nashville Advocate is published. It is on "The Work of the General Conference." It was written, presumably, by the editor, Dr. George B. Winton, and gives a very clear statement of the views of the writer on several subjects.

Dr. Hammond, the secretary of the General Education Board, has sent to the editor the complete statistics of the contributions on account of the twentieth century fund. These statistics are worthy of careful reading, and show that the amount set as a minimum to be subscribed was more than subscribed. And yet we all know that a very small percentage of the membership made any subscription to this fund, and millions could be given by our people to this great cause.

CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP.

The Southern Seminary, of Buena Vista, which was transferred about three years ago to a Board of Trustees by its owner, Rev. E. H. Rowe, has now been transferred back again to Rev. E. H. Rowe. The reason assigned by the Board for this action is "that both the Baltimore and Virginia Conferences declined to take it under control as a Church school." This action was anticipated by those familiar with the condition of affairs at the time the Board of Education of the Virginia Conference declined to recommend the adoption of the Southern Seminary as a school belonging to the Church. It is understood that the school will be continued as a private venture by Rev. E. H. Rowe at Buena Vista. As this town is in the Baltimore Conference, the location of the Seminary there finally severs all its connection with the Virginia Conference. As the Baltimore Conference has no female school of its own, it is likely that the school will receive some support from that territory, and so be able to continue the work it formerly did at Bowling Green.

Since removal of the Southern Seminary from Bowling Green a school has been carried on in the building formerly used by the Southern Seminary by Prof. Henry Davis. He has resigned, and the school will be continued the coming year by Prof. Phelps.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

R. N. PRICE.

Newspaper editors should lead and not follow. Newspapers should do more than reflect public sentiment; they should manufacture it. An honest newspaper must necessarily be more or less independent. We cannot perfectly rely upon official organs, because the proprietors dare not advance their honest sentiments freely if they have anything of that sort; they are necessarily chameleous; they sneeze when the bosses take snuff.

On Sunday, 15th instant, I was present at the dedication of the new Episcopal church in Morristown. Bishop Gailor preached the dedicatory sermon and conducted the worship. The sermon was thoughtful and eloquent, and was a defence of ritualism and apostolic succession. The communion was close. No invitation was given to the table that would have made a Methodist or Presbyterian feel welcome. I think the Episcopal Church is much higher in Tennessee than in Virginia. I have no use for the dogma of succession, and as little for an extensive ritual. But there is a demand here for a Church whose worship is somewhat scenic, and for a discipline which is broad and liberal, taking in card-players, dancers and moderate dram drinkers. The rector boasts that his church is a hospital—a place for the sick. All sorts of people make up a city; and there is room in every community for a variety of churches.

To-day a long drought ended here in an abundant rain, and now for a little while we are happy. My garden, well pulverized, was nearly as dry as fresh ashes, and my crops were making a brave fight for existence. Now they have a new lease of life, and I trust there will be bread for the eater. God is wise and good, and His tender mercies are still over His works.

The wheat crop of this section is a comparative failure—hardly a half a crop. It is thin on the ground, but well filled. The apple and peach crops are the poorest in years. The hay crop is light, but the health of the section is excellent, and God is still good—good when He gives, supremely good no less when He denies.

I have just finished reading a little volume of 127 pages, a poem by the Rev. John W. Smith, D. D., entitled "A Rose That Saved." It is in verse, and is a touching love story, interlarded with the best religious and evangelical sentiment. I would not call it poetry of high order, but it has the afflatus, and there are in it some delicate touches. Address Rev. J. W. Smith, Gate City, Va. Bro. Smith is a member of Holston Conference.

The brethren of the other side are crying, "Peace, be still," and well they may. They have all along for four years been the party of silence. But, my beloved brother, there are things in this world worse than controversy, worse than war.

I am glad to know that individual virtue and piety are not wholly dependent on the state of the Church or of the country. Piety is a personal, individual matter, and we should not be so solicitous in regard to public affairs as to suffer deterioration in our faith and zeal for God.

The best way to secure public and general morality and religion is for every man to guard well his own heart, and see that it is kept in the knowledge and love of God.

"Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

PETERSBURG LETTER.

Petersburg, Va., June 16, 1902.

Mr. Editor,—You and Bishop Smith, it seems, just touched our city on your return from the dedication services of the new church at Stony Creek. It was so much like you to be in a hurry. How could it be otherwise with a man who does your work? When you were at Stony Creek you were in my native county. Our presiding elder gave a good account of those dedication services. I would have liked to have been with you, but other duties forbade. Sussex is famed for raising peanuts, but it does not stop at that. Some fine specimens of manhood and womanhood hail from her borders. The name starts a floodtide of memories, but I shall check the inflow. Speaking of the Editor of the Recorder usually being in a hurry, seriously, do you ever slow down? You seem to be getting on well in the line of health going under that high pressure.

In Petersburg we have a preacher who goes under high pressure, too.

He is the picture of health, and pulls down the scales at big figures. Do you know L. W. Guyer? Well, he is a hustler.

Rev. W. H. Atwill is expected here June the 26th, to make an address at the laying of the corner-stone of the new Wesley M. E. church. Bro. Atwill has hosts of friends here, and they will greet him warmly.

Genial Sam Hatcher is planning improvements at Market Street church, and no doubt he will succeed. If grit, perseverance and energy count for anything, Hatcher will succeed. His people will back him, too, and it is refreshing to write about such things under so favorable surroundings.

Bro. Geo. E. Booker is not only getting on well at High Street, but his kindness of his people superabounds. An admirer has made him a present a travelling outfit.

Our modest brother, C. F. Comer, not one to blow his own trumpet, his faithful service is telling for good at Ettrick. The Lord has greatly blessed his labors this year. A large number have been converted in his meetings.

The recent death of Rev. B. P. Warwick, in this city, took from our midst a good man, and one of genial, pleasant manners. He had been useful in filling appointments as a supply in our Conference. For a number of years, Bro. Warwick carried on the mercantile business in this city.

Our Preachers' Meetings will soon disband for the hot term. These meetings have been very pleasant and helpful this year. This scribe acknowledges with great pleasure the benefits they have given him. But long letters and warm weather don't harmonize too well, so I must halt right here.

A HOME FOR MRS. CHEATHAM.

The secretary of the Virginia Conference Brotherhood is sending circulars asking special contributions to the Brotherhood fund for the widow of Rev. H. C. Cheatham. The object is to raise a fund sufficient to buy a little home for Mrs. Cheatham and her daughters.

Every person friendly to the enterprise is asked to send one dollar, or more.

Bro. Cheatham's many friends and admirers are specially requested to aid in raising this fund. Do not wait to see the circular. It is seldom that so worthy a cause appeals to our sympathy and beneficence. Send by check, post-office money order or registered letter to Rev. Wm. P. Wright, treasurer, Capeville, Va.

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1909, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

Mrs. Preston had also written again, urging Edward if possible to go back and room with her son. "I am sure," she said, "that Willis would welcome you, and you could keep him from many wrong things. I know he still has great respect for you. Your recent action in the matter of the gambler's arrest evoked his admiration. He wrote me a strong account of it and defended your motives, although, alas! I fear he himself was one of the frequenters of the place. Can you do anything? If so, will you not do it for the sake of Willis, if not for me? I cannot help feeling that he is going from bad to worse. But just what I fear I cannot define. I seem to be waiting to hear of some final disgrace that he will suffer. In God's name, do all you can, Mr. Blake, and I will pray for you as I ask you to pray for me."

Edward read this letter with a feeling of shame, as he had always felt more or less on reading Mrs. Preston's letters. She wrote, always assuming that Edward was a conscientious Christian and she always appealed to more than his morality. Edward did not call himself a Christian, and there was nothing in him that could respond to a part of her appeal. Nevertheless, he was moved so much by it that he was exceedingly unhappy. He even sought to see Willis that evening. He decided to go and have a talk with him and see if their former relations could be resumed. But when he went up to the old room, Willis happened to be having a card party of fellows most of whom were distasteful to Edward. So when Willis opened the door and Edward saw at a glance who were in the room he said briefly: "I wanted to see you. But I won't come in to-night."

Willis stepped out into the hall and shut the door. He was puffing a cigarette, and looked more than usually dissipated.

"Anything in particular?" he asked, not unkindly.

Edward hesitated. "Yes, but I can't talk with that crowd around."

"I'll send 'em away," said Willis carelessly.

"You needn't do that," said Edward slowly. Afterward he was sorry he had not taken Willis at his word, for Willis turned and went back into the room indifferently, and Edward slowly went down the stairs disappointed and more unhappy than ever.

It was perhaps a week after that that Edward was hailed by one of the men in his hall as he came down to breakfast.

"Say! Heard the news? Preston and Williams and Hawley and half that gang were taken in last night and are likely to get fired for good. They stacked Wheaton's room, burned up all his Bibles and wound up by painting a lot of ballet dancers on the chapel tower. They were caught red handed and have confessed. Prexy won't stand the desecration of the chapel, and he'll give them their final papers, I guess."

Edward listened in silence. He felt glad of the news if it meant the dismissal of the fast set that were no credit to Hope. But he could not help wondering about Willis. He had known of his indulging in various pranks, such as tearing a student's room to pieces and piling the pieces up in the center of the room, which was called "stacking," but he had never known him to be guilty of such an immoral act as the one ascribed to him in connection with the chapel tower.

Later in the day the morning rumor was confirmed, and more too. It was said that Willis had confessed himself to being the principal offender in the chapel desecration. It was also said that the college authorities could not pardon it and that Willis, with half a dozen others in his set, would be not only suspended, but expelled from college.

On hearing the news, which came direct from good sources, Edward determined to see President Royce. He was not altogether clear in his mind concerning what he wanted to see him for. But he seemed impelled to go to him in Willis' behalf. Perhaps Mrs. Preston's letter had something to do with it.

He went over to the office at the usual hour in the afternoon when the president was in for students and knocked. In answer to the summons to come in he entered and found Wheaton in earnest conversation with the president.

"It's all right if Blake hears your story, Wheaton, isn't it?" asked the president.

"Yes, sir," replied Wheaton, nodding at Edward.

"Go on, then," continued the president gravely. It was very still in the little office as Wheaton began to speak.

CHAPTER XI.

"Of course I feel bad about the damage to my room," said Wheaton gravely, "and the destruction of my books, especially my Bibles and Sunday school helps, seems like a wanton and irreverent thing that is without excuse. But I wish to say for Preston that while he was present and helped to tear up the carpet and turn my stove bottom side up he did not touch any of my books, and I can swear to his remonstrating with one of the other men who did do it."

"But what I called to see you for especially, sir, was to tell you that Preston did not desecrate the chapel tower, as he claims he did."

"How do you know that?" asked the president, a good deal surprised.

"Well, sir, I came by the chapel late last night because I had been down to the night school across the river. The painting of the picture had not been done then, and it was nearly midnight. I went right up to my room and found my door off its hinges and Preston and half a dozen others inside tearing the room to pieces. When they were through they all rushed out of my room and the hall, except Preston, who staid until after 3 o'clock. And it was between midnight and 3 o'clock that the pictures were drawn on the tower, according to the testimony of Logan, who helped to apprehend a part of the men."

"How is that? You say Preston staid with you until 3 o'clock? How did that happen?"

"Well, sir," answered Wheaton, with some reluctance, "he had been drinking quite hard before he came up to the room and he was taken ill just as the men finished their work, and I made him go into my bedroom, which they had not touched, and lie down there until he insisted on going out again."

The president and Edward learned afterward that Wheaton had staid up and tended Willis as carefully as if he had been his dearest friend.

"But Preston was caught with the rest of the men near the chapel," said the president.

"Yes, sir; but you see he left my room after the crowd had done the work on the chapel, and walked around the hall right into the midst of them only a few minutes before they were caught. So he couldn't have been guilty of the offense."

The president was silent and thoughtful.

"Why should he confess, then, that he is the guilty party? He insists upon it that he planned and executed most of the work."

Wheaton was silent, because he evidently had no good reason to give for Willis' conduct, and Edward spoke up.

"I think I can make a guess at that," he said, as the president turned toward him. "Preston has been borrowing heavily of his society friends, notably from Rankin. I have good reason to suppose that he is a good deal involved with them, in one way and another. He considers that this event will mean his discharge from the college anyway, and he has confessed to being guilty of this act of desecrating the chapel in order to shield the other men, who really did it, and to whom he is under such heavy obligations, in order to retain their favor. And the other men are mean enough to keep still and let Willis lie about it, just to save themselves, seeing he is in so deep with them on the money question."

"It's a shrewd explanation," replied the president, "and you may be right." In fact, as it afterward came out, Edward had hit upon the exact truth in the matter, as Willis himself confessed. "But now the question still faces the faculty as to the punishment to be meted out. If Preston is not guilty of the particular offense of which he is charged, he is more or less of a ring leader among the worst set in Hope, and we cannot let such an affair as that of last night go by unnoticed or unpunished."

Wheaton looked at Edward and was evidently disturbed in his mind. But after a silence, which neither the president nor Edward attempted to break, he said:

"Dr. Royce, I came in here on purpose to ask you to allow Mr. Preston to remain in college if possible. I have been praying for him all winter that he might be saved. A number of other men in the association are doing the same thing. We feel deeply interested in him. He will be a man of great power if the Lord once wins him. It is a critical time with Preston, right now, and it may prove the turning point in his whole life."

The president looked at Wheaton kindly.

"Then you bear him no grudge for this share in last night's destruction of your room."

"No, sir; how can I? Are we not told to love our enemies? Besides, I do not regard Preston as by any means the worst of the set in Hope. I have always had a personal drawing toward him, and there has not been a night for two years that I have not prayed for his conversion."

The president was silent again. Then he turned to Edward.

"Is that what you came to see me about too?"

"Yes, sir," replied Edward in a low voice. "That is, I—to tell the truth, I hardly knew at first what I came over for. But I want Willis to stay and have another chance. I don't feel quite easy about my part. I haven't kept my promise to his mother as I ought."

It cost Edward Blake more than the president could understand to say all that. There was really a struggle going on in him all the time over his own duty to Willis. If he pleaded with the president not to discharge him from college, there was Miss Seton, who—and then—his own relations to Willis—what could he do more than he had done?

The president sat eying the two young men thoughtfully.

"I had fully made up my mind before you came in to advise the faculty that Preston be dismissed once and for all. What Mr. Wheaton has said, Blake, changes my views somewhat. What you have said changes them more. Of course, you understand I am powerless to remit all punishment; that would not be fair. Mr. Preston deserves suspension, at least, for his part in the night's work. But I can promise this—that his case shall be carefully considered, and, if possible without injustice to others, he shall be allowed to continue his course."

Wheaton thanked the president and rose to go. Edward, knowing how busy the president always was, rose also.

"Wait a minute, Blake, please. I want a word with you," said the president. And Edward sat down again as Wheaton went out.

"I want to ask another thing about your relations to Preston. You have not been rooming together now for several weeks. Do you think you could help him by going back and resuming your old relations?"

"I might," Edward answered slowly. "Then I would say by all means go back to him."

"That is, supposing he wants me to come back."

"Of course," replied the president quickly. "I do not know how he feels toward you. That is for you to find out. But if the faculty of the college are to help Preston we must ourselves be helped by any of the students who have it in their power to use good influence. Besides, you said you felt as if you had not quite kept your promise to his mother."

"Yes, sir, I said it, and I can't help feeling that I might do more."

"Whatever that is, Blake, I rely on you to do," said the president gravely as he turned to his papers on his desk. "Don't forget that the future destiny of a soul may rest with you to determine." And Edward, with this last sentence impressed almost painfully on his mind, went out of the office.

(To be continued.)

Yes, we must be watchful, especially in the beginning of the temptation, for the enemy is then more easily overcome if he be not suffered to enter the door of our hearts, but be resisted at the very gate on his first knocking.—Thomas a' Kempis.

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

"AMERICA MEANS OPPORTUNITY."

(Dr. S. C. Mitchell, in Rel Herald.)

The greatest spectacle on earth is a stalwart man struggling with adversity. This is what appeals to the American heart in Franklin's fascinating "Autobiography"—his self-help, his slow climb from a humble place to power, intellectual and political. Among the treasures of Richmond College—the gift of that unforgetting friend, Dr. J. L. M. Curry—is a receipt for $3.50 given by Andrew Johnson, a Tennessee tailor, for making a coat. Georgetown College, Ky., likewise has a receipt for $0 for the conduct of a case in court, signed by Henry Clay, then just making a start in the profession which he was destined so greatly to adorn. These are the seals of our greatness. That is the best government which gives every man a chance, and careers such as these are proofs of the limitless possibilities of an American boy, no matter how poor or obscure he may be, provided he has ability, energy, and a noble purpose. Here is a concrete instance, the facts of which are known to me personally.

A MARKED MAN IN MISSISSIPPI COLLEGE.

When the writer was called, in 1889, to a chair in Mississippi College, much was heard on all hands of a student named O. M. Johnston, who had evidently made a deep impression upon the students, faculty and community by his love of learning and by his mastery of difficulties that must have thwarted any ordinary man. Naturally, such accounts of him made me curious to see the man, and I remember distinctly the moment when he was pointed out to me. He seemed about twenty-three years old, of vigorous physique, with a strong, earnest face, that bore evidence of conflict, as well as of noble self-control. He was then entering, so I learned, his senior year, and was easily in the lead for the honors of his class. The following day, he presented himself in two of my classes, and I soon found that an eye more voracious for learning it had never been my fortune to look into. It was easy to discover that he lacked an acquaintance with many elementary matters that more favored boys learn in their earliest years, they knew not how. But his face, all aglow with enthusiasm for culture, was a source of inspiration to his teachers, and among his fellow-students his influence was unrivalled.

A BACKWOODS BOY PIPS THE SHELL OF CIRCUMSTANCE.

Some antecedent facts in Mr. Johnston's life may be of interest. He was born in Morehouse parish, Louisiana, sixteen miles north of Bastrop. His aged father and mother still live on the little farm, on which he worked until eighteen years of age. During these years, he plowed or hoed in the day, and read at night by torchlight the four or five books to be found in the humble home. In the late fall, after his father's crop of cotton had been picked out, he would go on foot to the richer valley section and pick cotton far into the winter. It was by such aid that the family eked out a living. When he reached his seventeenth year, a Mr. Williams came from Mississippi College to teach during the summer in the neighborhood. The school-house, however, was seven miles from Johnston's home. For a month and a half he walked daily to this school. In so short a time Williams could have taught him at best only a little; but, like every true teacher, he did for him something that meant infinitely more than a knowledge of the elementary text-book. He fired Johnston with a desire for an education.

Perhaps, after all, it was only a case of the spark falling upon tinder; it shows at any rate the power that lies in such a spark. Poor Williams did not live to see the outcome of that summer's work. While studying medicine in Louisville, Ky., he died; and his body, on its homeward journey, was carried past Mississippi College at the very time when his pupil, Johnston, was nearing graduation. Yet Williams lives in his work.

Johnston, now resolved upon an education, asked his father to give him his time and turn him loose. No, that could not be done; at least, not yet. Another year, perhaps. Accordingly, when he was eighteen his father told him he might strike for himself. At last the world was before him. How could he make money enough to get to college in September? To this end he helped to build a gin-house and to drive a bunch of cattle to the Indian Territory, by which jobs he made in eight months sufficient, as he thought, to start to Mississippi College. There was then no railroad between Bastrop and Monroe; so for this distance of forty-five miles he took a stage-coach, in which he met a Mr. Bell, from Starkville, Miss. This gentleman persuaded him to go to the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Starkville, since, as he said, it made no charge for tuition. On Johnston's arrival, he was told by General Stephen D. Lee, then the president of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, that, as he came from another State, he would have to pay tuition, and also that he must get a uniform suit. Sixty dollars would be needed. As this amount was about twice the sum of money which Johnston had left after paying his fare to Starkville, he felt forced to give up the plan of going to college that year. So, broken-hearted, he remarked to General Lee that he would go to the Delta to pick cotton that winter, in hopes of coming back the following session. Happily, General Lee suggested that on his way to the Delta he would pass by Mississippi College, at Clinton, and advised him to stop there to see if President Webb could help him.

THE STRUGGLE OF A STUDENT.

At sunrise on January 8, 1885, Johnston, on his way to the plantations, got off at Clinton, rather to make inquiries as to the expenses at the College than in the hope of remaining there. With scarcely enough money to pay his board for a month, he made straight for President Webb's home, and told his purpose. To his surprise, the Doctor advised him to remain and study in the college. To the credit of this venerable teacher, permit me to add, what so many of the students present repeated to me, that, when on that winter morning they assembled in the chapel and noticed this awkwardly-dressed young man, Dr. Webb, in kindly introducing Johnston, alluded to his need, and said that he proposed to divide with him his last half biscuit, if necessary, to enable him to educate himself. The spirit of this generous remark was faithfully kept, as Johnston delights to testify. Johnston rented a little room, now pointed out with pride by every student. He did his own cooking, living from January until the middle of May on one barrel of bolted meal and two pounds of bacon, with neither lard nor butter, and selling for seventy-five cents the remainder of the meal, when he left college in May. Friends from the town, it is true, occasionally sent him something from their tables. Having no bed, he slept on some quilts which a lady kindly gave him. He did any kind of labor obtainable—such as cutting wood and working gardens. Every vacation he taught a summer school, which was always reserved for him by a Jew, the county superintendent. (In after years, when I was on a visit to Johnston, then a notable man, he introduced me to this humble Hebrew with a deference that might have pleased a prince—not the least mark, to me, of his own nobility.) Thus making his way, even paying his tuition, he displayed as a student remarkable diligence and grasp. He had no second in his influence over the student body. The mention of "O. M.," as he was familiarly known, still stirs the blood of those Mississippi College men. In his third year at college, he was converted, under the ministry of Dr. B. D. Gray, now the honored president of Georgetown College. Ere long he headed the religious as well as the literary forces of the institution, and was made a deacon in the Clinton church—activities in which he has advanced ever since. (When I met him, in later years, in Paris, he led me to the Baptist chapel, in which he had found himself a home.) In 1890, he graduated with signal honors, crowning a series of years with sacrifices that I have not the heart to relate, so sacred do such heroisms seem.

BECOMES A TEACHER.

Immediately upon his graduation, he was made principal of the preparatory department of the College. The next year he was elected to the chair of English. In both of these positions Johnston's personality told powerfully, and his vital influence pervaded the whole institution. The presidency becoming vacant three years thereafter, he was besought by many of the trustees to let them make him the executive of the college. To this he said, "No," as he had made up his mind to push on to Johns Hopkins University, in Baltimore, to extend his studies in his chosen field, the Romance languages. There he remained three years, winning a $500 fellowship, and, in due time, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Meantime he spent his summers in Europe, making special investigations in Italy and in France. No sooner had he finished his course at the University than he was called to a chair in Bryn Mawr. From there within a year he was invited to Leland Stanford University, in California, where he is now a factor in the educational and religious life of the Pacific slope, as I was informed recently by a member of that faculty. He is a contributor to journals, both in Europe and America.

He was, so far as I could learn, the first person in his native county to go off to college. Since that time, chiefly through his personal influence, I know of fifteen boys and girls from that county who have gone to different colleges, so contagious has been his example.

While I have purposely chosen a man remote, and narrated the facts in his life, to illustrate, on the one hand, the possibilities of plain life, and, on the other, the splendid service which our colleges render to the world, there have been known to me in Richmond College and like institutions in Virginia many young men whose sacrifices have been as heroic and whose characters are as worthy as in the one just cited.

THE WORK OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The fourteenth General Conference proved to be a distinctly representative body. In its wholesome combination of the spirit of progress with a rational conservatism, it undoubtedly exhibited the mind of our Church to-day. We made up in an unusually large proportion of young men, it was in no sense revolutionary. Yet the feeling was in the air that this is the twentieth century. No provision for meeting enlarged opportunity of our new era, which was suggested from any quarter, failed to have frank consideration. Few timid spirits shrank at the shadowing of what they believed would be a dangerous storm, but in the note of advancement, of faith in God and in His Church was dominant. The perfect openness to conviction shown by the delegates on doubtful disputed points was charming to see.

There was little absolutely new legislation. Yet some of it cannot fail to be far-reaching. The authorization of order or office of deaconesses will do to many the most important single taken. It is really but one phase of a great subject which profoundly interested the Conference—the subject of missions. We hope no useless sacrifice and fury will be expended upon question of whether the ladies may become deaconesses belong to "order" or an "office." No words should confuse the Church to what is meant. We have not formed a sisterhood under vows. But good women who are willing to go to the dens of infamy on the Lord's errands wish to have the Church's special God-speed you, they ought to it. And if they think it well to do so that their errand will not be misunderstood, let those who sleep in protected homes while this soul-saving work goes on think twice before denying them so poor a boon. No woman will put on the garb of the Salvation Army rather than go about her work without such protection, ought to suggest the estimate in which she holds the shelter of distinctive dress. We are of the opinion that a joint board of control have been preferable to throwing the whole burden of the experiment Woman's Home Mission Board. But the present arrangement will serve for a quadrennium, after which necessary adjustments can be made.

The truth is, our most difficult field in the near future will be the evangelization of great cities and the centers of factory populations. Provision was made to attack this problem through the agency of the Board of Missions, though it is evident that the Annual Conferences, the strong city churches, and their deaconesses ("servants"), and the bishops through their connexional supervision, will all necessarily be involved in any successful forward movement. A very significant and promising innovation was made in connection with our work in the West, a field that is growing in opportunity and importance with phenomenal rapidity.

The foreign mission work needed very little in the way of improved machinery. Some requests coming from the Board itself as to its constitution were cheerfully granted. The more important of these were the introduction of a larger lay element into the Board, and the election of only one secretary, an assistant to be provided by the Board. Rev. Seth Ward, D. D., was chosen by the new Board for this position, and will enter upon his duties in August. The senior secretary was re-elected, and the Conference set its stamp of hearty approval upon this great cause.

Almost equally with missions, education, the education of ministers in particular, had earnest consideration. The hymen present spoke freely and frankly of the demand which is now upon us for thoroughly trained preachers. To supplement and further such theological training, a Correspondence School was authorized, to be directed by the Board of Education and the theological faculty of Vanderbilt University. Schools of this kind have been found of value in other lines of training. We shall watch the working of this with much solicitude. In all frankness, we must say that our Church is nearer to failure in the matter of adequately training her ministers than at any other point. The value of the work done in our poorer and smaller colleges was brought out. Endowments and buildings do not alone make a school.

While in many branches of Church work invested funds cut the bonds which bring continuous and voluntary support, we trust the Endowment and for Superannuated Preachers will be an exception. The cause is one which will appeal to all. These worn-out preachers are our most worthy and most neglected servants. The fund could continue to grow apace, and still; but yearly collections must not be allowed to fall off on account of it. After a vigorous discussion, pro and con, the local preachers were placed entirely under the jurisdiction of the District Conference. The plan can now be given the first time have a fair trial. If it is a bad one, a later General Conference will be competent to change it.

The reports of the Commission on Moderation and of that on the Constitution of the Church were approved. So were those of the Sunday School Board in providing a department for the training of teachers. All new legislation was ordered to be in operation after September 1, 1902.

The war claim occupied the attention of the Conference much less than secular papers would have had the public suppose. Those who thought the Church had been compromised or might be stated their views fully, but the Conference did not accept those views. The Bishops had long since offered to return the money if any wrong were alleged. To this offer the Conference heartily adhered. But a large majority of the delegates were convinced that no such allegation had been made or would be made by either branch of Congress. There was, therefore, nothing further to be done. To attempt to meet and hush the accusations of ignorant and prejudiced individuals was a hopeless task. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not need to define her position on a matter of common honesty, nor to have her servants tried at the bar of congressional committees. Elsewhere we print the action of the General Conference, the only body competent to pass upon the whole subject. Any further agitation of a matter of which the Church is heartily weary should be looked upon as an attack upon her peace.

Two or three subjects caused earnest deliberation, but without any resultant action. One was an attempt to lengthen the pastoral term in certain cases not now included in the list of exceptions; another, to limit the term of office of presiding elders in some way, and a third, to undertake official arbitration in labor disputes. As to the first two, the Conference was resolutely conservative, and the Discipline is left unchanged. In regard to the third, a false impression went out that its attitude was hostile to organized labor. Such was by no means the case. But the appointment of a Church Board to arbitrate in matters entirely outside our purview is a step so hedged by practical difficulties that a little reflection will show it to be out of the question. The Church, no more than her Lord, has been made a judge and divider over men.

Of the election of two Bishops and the various connexional officers there is no need to speak. These men should not be thought of as exalted to high office, but as chosen for hard and humble service. They will have the prayers and good will of the devout. A splendid century is upon us. We are co-workers with God, and He is doing wondrous things. The whole Church should stand with sandaled feet and girt loins, ready for a swift, unanimous advance.—Nashville Advocate.

***

"Thou, Lord, who knowest my heart, all its desire and all its need, show me what Thou art able to do with it and do what Thou art able; through Jesus Christ."—Bishop Moule.

✽

"No smallest event of the day but contains at least possible occasion for victory or failure, for the Master's use of me, or of His finding me useless."—Idem.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

The cause of temperance received strong impetus in Washington during the past week in the passage, by the House of Representatives, of the Shattuck amendment to the immigration bill. The immigration laws have been modified and made to conform to present conditions, the educational test for immigrants has been made more difficult, all over fifteen years of age being required to read in some language, and the fee for entrance has been raised from $1 to $1.50. The most important feature of the new law comes in an amendment primarily intended to prohibit the sale of liquor at immigrant stations, but in order that there should be no discrimination, the provision reads that the sale of intoxicants will not be permitted on any government reservation. Such a law as this was attempted by reformers in and out of the Capitol at the time of the agitation over the anti-canteen law, but could not be passed because congressmen were unwilling that their supply in the Capitol restaurants be cut off.

In respect to the prohibition of liquors at immigrant stations, it must be admitted that this legislation should have been enacted long ago. It has been an open shame to this country that it has been possible for sharpers and "sharks" of the worst description to ply the newly-arrived foreigners with liquor, and, by extortions and misrepresentation, make their welcome to this country anything but pleasant. This will be stopped under the new law, which stands every prospect of being passed by the Senate, at least in respect to that particular provision.

The sale in the Capitol is another question. Numberless previous attempts have been made toward prohibiting the sale of liquor in the legislative building, many times by the advocates of temperance on the outside, actuated by the wish that the highest law-making body in the land should set an example to the country, and that the consideration of the welfare of the United States should have the deliberation of men not influenced by that which a man "doth put into his mouth which robs him of his brain." It is said that the House is not sincere in its action in regard to prohibition in the Capitol, but that it depends on the Senate to defeat that portion of the amendment, the whole thing being a political ruse to gain the temperance vote at the coming congressional elections. The Senate, not being an elective body in the popular sense, is somewhat removed from the direct disapprobation of the people, and the senators can, therefore, throw out the amendment without having it affect their chances for office so greatly, while members of the House are put on record as having voted for or against a certain provision, and such vote will be remembered to their favor or condemnation.

The action which workers in the temperance field must take will have to be directed expressly at the Senate, and personal letters and petitions will be valuable, especially where one has a direct acquaintance with a senator who will respond to such a reasonable request. If the Senate passes the provision it will become a law, as the President would hardly dare to veto it in the face of the growing temperance sentiment of the country, even if he desired to do so. If the House is really in earnest, it will receive the moral support of the Senate, and if it is only trying to hoodwink the voters, it will be placed in an embarrassing position, from which it can extricate itself only with difficulty. While it is preferable to put the best motives on any action, the interpretation of a lower motive is given in this connection as a part of the rumor connected with the recent action.

The one excuse which can be urged for the use of liquor in the House and Senate restaurants is that it is at hand in cases of necessity for medicinal purposes, granting, in this connection, that liquor has a medicinal value. But this need in the popular branch has been obviated by the investment of the House in a medicine chest, to be filled with remedies approved by Messrs. Wilson, Showalter and Ball, all of whom are physicians, and who are to have $500 to spend in stocking it. The object is to have remedies at hand for emergency cases, as, for example, that of Delegate Smith, who suffered from an apoplectic stroke just after completing his forceful speech for the favorable consideration of the territorial bill. The Senate has been provided with a medicine chest for many years.

The municipal authorities of Washington, in their efforts to have the city excise laws complied with, recently caused the arrest and conviction of both the Capitol restaurateurs for violating the law against keeping an unlicensed bar in the District of Columbia. Each was fined $300, and bond was imposed in the sum of $500 to carry the case to the Court of Appeals. The point made by the defendants is that the District authorities have no jurisdiction over a strictly government reservation such as that occupied by the Capitol; the whole city is on a government reservation, and the District's case is based on the belief that it has been given municipal jurisdiction in regard to liquor license in each and every part. The outcome of this case and of the amendment to the immigration bill will be watched with interest.

Representative Eugene F. Loud, of California, chairman of the House Committee on Post-offices and Post-Roads, points out a temperance development in connection with the system of rural free delivery which he is doing so much to foster, and which has been his hobby during his fourteen years in Congress. It has been called to his attention in various ways and from many sources, he says, particularly from his own State, that the establishment of the free-delivery system has materially decreased the consumption of spirits in country towns, as the farmers do not have to go to the towns for mail, and therefore are not brought so much in contact with the "corner saloon," where companionship often leads a man into temptation. This indirect benefit from rural delivery is in itself sufficient warrant for the establishment and extension of the service,

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 6.

Text of the Lesson. Ex. xvi. 1-15.
Memory Verses. 4, 5—Golden Text.
Matt. vi. 11—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

1. And they took their journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.

We turn back in our studies to the great redemption book of the Old Testament, and in God's own picture book we see not only real happenings, but also the foreshadowing of many things (I Cor. x. 11-13). The deliverance from death and from the bondage of Egypt in connection with the blood of the Passover lamb and the glorious power of the Lord's right hand sets before us God's great redemption provided for us by Christ, our Passover, while the succeeding events suggest the too common experience of the believer in which there is apt to be more murmuring than rejoicing.

2, 3. And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness.

At Marah it was because they did not like the water, and now it is because they cannot see what they are going to eat, failing to see that He who delivered them from Egypt and divided the sea for them would surely not fail to care for them in every way. But in them we see ourselves, for which of us can say that Rom. viii. 32, delivers us from all murmuring?

4, 5. Then said the Lord unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you, and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day (the portion of a day in his day—margin) that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law or no.

So it is written in Ps. lxxviii. 24, 25, "And had rained down manna upon them to eat and had given them of the corn of heaven. Every one did eat the bread of the mighty" (margin). Just think of it, food for millions day by day right from heaven! He would teach them to look to Him alone and be content to live by the day.

6, 8. Ye shall know that the Lord hath brought you out from the land of Egypt. Your murmurings are not against us, but against the Lord.

As to their murmurings it is written in Ps. cvi. 14, 24, 25, "They lusted exceedingly in the wilderness and tempted God in the desert. They believed not His word, but murmured in their tents and hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord." They possibly did not think that in murmuring against Moses they were murmuring against God, but when Israel demanded a king in the days of Samuel the Lord said unto Samuel, "They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them" (I Sam. viii. 7).

9, 10. Come near before the Lord, for He hath heard your murmurings.

Thus Moses commissioned Aaron to speak unto all the congregation, and as he spake to the people they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud. Thus the Lord Himself appeared to them, assuring them that they were dealing with Him and not with Moses and Aaron.

11, 12. And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel. Speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread, and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God.

What great grace on His part toward these unbelieving, murmuring hosts! They had complained that in Egypt they had flesh and bread to the full, so He will give them in the wilderness flesh and bread to the full (verse 3). Truly He is El-Shaddai, the mighty God who is all sufficient, and in Him dwelleth all fullness. His presence insures all sufficiency in all things (I Cor. ix. 8), and He would have us find in Him our all and know that every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning (Jas. i. 17).

13-15. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat.

So they had the flesh of quails in the evening and manna in the morning, all they could eat, not because they deserved it, but simply by the grace of God. The manna was like coriander seed, white, and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey (verse 31). They were to gather it every morning, every man according to his eating (verses 16, 18, 21), and so they gathered it, some more, some less. On the sixth day they gathered enough for two days, for none fell on the Sabbath. If they gathered more than enough any other day, it bred worms and stank, but not so the surplus gathered on the sixth day. All that God asked of them was faith and obedience, yet in everything they transgressed. Some gathered more than enough on the ordinary days, and some went out to gather it on the Sabbath day (verses 19, 20, 27, 28), and they found to their sorrow just as God had said (Ps. lxxviii. 12, 22, 37, 39). In the great gospel chapter on manna our Lord says among other things, "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven, for the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world." Manna is suggestive of Christ in that it came down from heaven. It was the only food, it was free and sufficient for all, it must be gathered fresh every morning and each must eat it for himself. An omer of it was to be laid up before the Lord to be kept, and it would seem that it was placed in a golden pot in the ark of the covenant (Heb. ix. 4).

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

We must change men's conditions as well as their hearts.—Rev. A. C. Bane, Methodist, San Francisco.

No Countenance of Evil.

The gospel lends no countenance to any sort of idealism that ignores the fact of evil.—Rev. S. C. Eby, St. Louis.

The Foundation Stone.

The religion of Christ gave its teaching a foundation stone for all the progress of the future.—Rev. E. I. Gosben, Congregationalist, Ogden, Utah.

The Way of Safety.

Love God, and there is no danger either here or elsewhere. Be true, faithful, loyal, and you will hear welcoming voices when you stand on the border land.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Spiritual Brotherhood.

Let us lift our philanthropy up to the level of Christ, make our brotherhoods brotherhoods of the spirit as well as the hand, our unions unions of Christ's love for men's souls as well as their mortal bodies.—Rev. John E. White, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

The Spreading of Joy.

Like a lovely song heard in the night the tones of kindness and pure happiness float far through the darkness of the world. We cannot "bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades" which shine from constellations of love.—Rev. Dr. John W. Day, St. Louis.

The Way to Heaven.

It is a thousand times easier to go to heaven than to go to hell. All the power of the spirit of God, all the influence of the Christian religion and the best influences of the world lead a man to the right.—Rev. William Patterson, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Man's Supreme Achievement.

A true and noble personality is a value beyond all pomp and circumstance, beyond all possession or power. A man's supreme achievement in human life is not the amount possessed, the thing done or the station occupied, but himself.—Rev. Dr. N. Luccock, Methodist, St. Louis.

A Good Word For the Press.

The influence of the press is one of the powers for good, and I believe the men who control the work and purposes of these papers are men who are in thorough sympathy with every movement which has for its object the assisting and uplifting of the people.—Rev. Dr. Richard Harcourt, Methodist, Reading, Pa.

Living In the Present.

There is a sense in which every man should live in the present. It is the eventful hour and the only period in which a man can live; but, on the other hand, no man can live well today who is not looking toward that which is before him. The prospect of a bright tomorrow makes today strong and beautiful.—Rev. G. B. Vosburgh, Baptist, Denver.

Root of Evil; Spring of Good.

Money lifts the hand of brother against brother, it is lamentably true, but money, too, can be a messenger of mercy and of the noblest sentiments in the race. The passion for money chases men from home and kindred, but it builds homes and asylums and places of refuge for the sick and the aged and the lonely.—Rabbi Louis Grossman, Cincinnati.

Christian Unity.

Speaking for myself, I do most solemnly and sincerely believe in the unity of the church universal. I believe that truly God begotten spirits of whatever name or ecclesiastical organization are the same in love, disposition, desire and aims. Despite our clashing creeds and variant and multiplied organizations we are one in Christ.—Rev. Dr. Landrum, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

The Divinity of Man.

Ignorance may temporarily embarrass us, our follies may place us in momentary straits, our foolishness may curtail our liberty, our superstitions may hold the good in abeyance, but back of all this fictitious sense of things, behind all this masquerade, lies the fact that man is divine, and he may at any time return to this basic fact and reform himself.—Rev. Francis Edgar Mason, Independent, Brooklyn.

Necessity of Discipline.

If we are to succeed in the things that relate to the higher life, we must be under discipline; the hand that offends must be cut off; the habit that weakens must be given up. It is not a broad and easy way to which we are called any more than the rugged path of knowledge is easy. It is a straight and narrow way, and it calls for those who are in earnest, who are brave, whose faculties are keenly alive.—Rev. V. E. Tomlinson, Universalist, Worcester, Mass.

In Good Company.

Poverty is the cradle of greatness, and in it the world's greatest benefactors and the world's Redeemer have been rocked. In eternity the condition of this world will be reversed, an prince and temporal kings will be paupers on thrones of spiritual power receiving the grateful homage of men. The dead and sceptered spirits that rule us from their urns today are fishermen, tentmakers and railsplitters. After all the poor are in good company.—Rev. P. M. Gunsaulus, Chicago.

Fatherhood and Motherhood.

The man who is not blessed by fatherhood has failed of the complete cycle of his being. The woman who does not become a mother has not reached the sweetest and finest development of her nature. As a rosebush that never bursts into flower, as an apple tree that never has hanging on its boughs the beautifully tinted and luscious tasteful fruit, so human lives that are not blessed by fatherhood and motherhood come short of the perfect unfolding of their being.—Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage, Unitarian, New York.

HEAVY LIQUOR OUTPUT.

It Costs Americans $340,015,406 to Quench Thirsts.

The census preliminary report on the manufacture of liquors in the United States shows the following results:

Number of establishments 2,840, increase 48 per cent; capital $457,074,087, increase 70 per cent; wage earners (average number) 44,417, increase 23 per cent; total wages $28,005,484, increase 20 per cent; miscellaneous expenses $183,099,796, increase 61 per cent; cost of materials used $70,512,042, decrease 12 per cent; value of products $340,615,406, increase 18 per cent.

The distilled liquor statistics are:

Number of establishments 907, increase 120 per cent; capital $32,551,604, increase 5 per cent; wage earners (average number) 3,722, decrease 22 per cent; total wages $1,733,218, decrease 23 per cent; miscellaneous expenses $73,218,227, increase 12 per cent; cost of materials used $15,147,784, increase 2 per cent; value of products $90,798,443, decrease 7 per cent. The lack of uniformity in reporting internal revenue tax accounts in a measure for the decrease in the value of distilled liquor products.

The malt liquor figures follow:

Number of establishments 1,523, increase 22 per cent; capital $415,284,463, increase 79 per cent; wage earners (average number) 39,532, increase 31 per cent; total wages $25,826,211, increase 25 per cent; miscellaneous expenses $109,329,231, increase 127 per cent; cost of materials used $51,674,928, decrease 19 per cent; value of products $217,269,713, increase 30 per cent.

The vinous liquor figures follow:

Number of establishments 359, increase 52 per cent; capital $9,838,015, increase 70 per cent; wage earners (average number) 1,163, increase 11 per cent; total wages $446,055, increase 49 per cent; miscellaneous expenses $552,338, increase 104 per cent; cost of materials used $3,689,330, increase 180 per cent; value of products $6,547,310, increase 130 per cent.

AN EXPERT ON DRINK.

Some Remarks by Seved Ribbing, the Swedish Medical Authority.

Seved Ribbing, the famous professor of medicine at the Swedish University of Lund, made these remarkable statements in concluding an address on one phase of the drink curse:

"How large a per cent of moral downfalls are caused through drink I am unable to say, but certainly it is not infrequent that you hear from many a questioned youth for an answer, 'I was somewhat under the influence of liquor.'

"Through drunkenness and in drunkenness one accustoms himself to conditions which under ordinary circumstances would be religiously shunned. In course of time the sense of shame is overcome and silenced, and the evil habits are looked upon as an everyday necessity.

"The cases when a young man will in cold bloodedness and with a clear head and with decided intention throw himself into evil deeds are very seldom in comparison with those that happen under the influence of liquor.

"An English army physician has shown figuratively that sickness in a troop is much less among the total abstainers than with the balance of the men."

A WAR ON CIGARETTES.

How One Educationalist Will Fight the Habit.

Cigarette smokers are to be summarily dealt with by Dr. Herbert F. Fisk, principal of the Northwestern University Preparatory school at Evanston, Ill., says a writer in The Union Signal. Dr. Fisk recently made this simple but direct statement at chapel:

"I ask any boy in this school who smokes cigarettes and can or will not give them up to leave. Money that has been paid for tuition will be refunded."

The honored head of this large school has made repeated efforts to discourage smoking by the students and, having failed by "moral suasion," has adopted the above mentioned forceful measure.

Dr. Fisk declares that not one out of five cigarette smokers passes in his studies and that their low standing is seriously affecting the grade of the school. We applaud the courage of Dr. Fisk and trust his sensible example will be contagious. If a boy knows he must decide between good scholarship or cigarette smoking, he will be brought up to the evil of the habit in an effective manner.

A Legislative Experiment.

An experiment in temperance legislation known as the intoxicating liquors (sale to children) act went on trial in London the first of the year. The measure provides that any holder of a liquor license who sells intoxicating liquors to any person under the age of fourteen years unless in corked and sealed bottles and in quantities not less than one reputed pint for consumption off the premises only shall be liable to a fine of 40 shillings for the first offense and of £5 for every subsequent offense. It is intended of course to check the prevalent practice among the working classes of sending children to bring drink from taverns for home consumption.

Ban on College Carousals.

President Angell of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor has prohibited class carousals, known as "smokers" in the student vernacular. "While we cannot prevent gatherings of students as individuals," says Dr. Angell, "we can and will prevent them getting together in the name of the university and filling up on beer to their own disgrace and that of the school."

Some people do worse even than meet temptation half way—they go all the way.

Balsams from the Northern Wood are in Pynn-Balsam, the certain cure for coughs.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and North Carolina
Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.
LURA
GROTTONE
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOGA
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS
NORFOLK
ROANOKE
KENOVA
CHILLICOTHE
COLLINGSBURY
AND THE N. E. T.
Write for Rates, Maps, etc. Sleeping Car Reservations Descriptive Circulars to any Agent or W.B. BEVILL, ALLEN, FRANK
GENERAL PASS AGENT, DIVISION OF THE RAILROAD
RICHMOND, VA.

CITIZENS' BANK,
BLACKSTONE, VA.
Capital, $57,000; Surplus $16,400.
W. H. MANN, President.
J. M. HARRIS, Vice-President.
JOS. M. HURT, Cashier.
BENHAM MORRIS, R. LOGAN HARRIS, Assistant Cashiers.
Does a General Banking Business

DR. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.
PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.
All Prescriptions compounded by experienced Druggists

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,
R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used.

RHEUMATISM.
NEURALGIA,
HEADACHE,
STIFF NECK,
STIFF MUSCLES,
STIFF JOINTS,
STIFF KNEES,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
PAIN IN THE BACK,
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS,
PAIN IN THE SIDE,
CORN AND BUNIONS.

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.
 "First pure, then peaceable."
 "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."
 "Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents. Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
 Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.
 East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.
 South Boston, May 25th, at night.
 Boynton, May 28th, at night.
 Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.
 Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.
 South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.
 Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.
 Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.
 Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.
 District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.
 Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.
 Martinsville, June 29th, at night.
 Main Street, July 2d, at night.
 Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.
 Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.
 Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.
 Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.
 E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.
 Calvary, July 23d, at night.
 West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.
 J. C. REED,
 Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.
 Ettrick, May 18th, night.
 High-Street, May 25th, morning.
 Blandford, May 25th, night.
 Matoaca, June 1st, night.
 Greenville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.
 Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.
 Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.
 Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder, The Richmond Weekly Times, The Southern Farmer, and American Poultry Journal.

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.
 East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.
 Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.
 Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.
 South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.
 Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.
 South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.
 North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.
 West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.
 Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.
 Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.
 West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.
 Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.
 West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.
 R. T. WILSON, P. E.

INCOME doesn't make prosperity, if the outgo is bigger. Did you ever figure out what sickness costs you per year; doctors' bills, medicine bills, etc., to say nothing of the suffering. Rheumatism strikes like a knife in the back if left alone; with Perry Davis' Painkiller, the terrors of this disease are headed off. Painkiller relieves muscular cramps, lumbago, neuralgia, and sciatica. 25 and 50 cents.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND FOR EDUCATION.

TOTAL SUBSCRIPTION AND CASH FROM MAY, 1898, TO MAY, 1902.

At the last General Conference a plan was adopted for raising a Twentieth Century Thank Offering for education. The General Board of Education was charged with the duty of conducting the campaign, and the president of the Board, Bishop C. B. Galloway, was appointed General Manager. The amount asked for was a sum equal to the minimum offering of one dollar per member, aggregating in round numbers $1,500,000. It will be seen by the following report how well the Church has responded to this call on behalf of her educational work. Most of what remains unpaid will doubtless be paid. Much of it is in the shape of notes payable in installments.

J. D. HAMMOND, Sec'y.

CONFERENCE.	BY WHOM REPORTED.	SUBSCRIBED.	PAID.
Alabama	A. L. Andrews	$ 50,609 81	$ 16,000 00
Arkansas	F. S. H. Johnston	40,545 60	21,956 50
Baltimore	H. M. Hamill	52,024 00	19,928 38
Brazil	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	5,000 00	8,000 00
China	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	12,000 00	4,500 00
Cuba	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	500 00	500 00
East Columbia	E. P. Greene, Agent	7,500 00	5,408 99
Columbia	P. A. Moses	43 25	43 25
Denver	T. S. Wheeler	20 00	20 00
East Texas	V. A. Godbey	21,735 05	8,821 27
Florida	T. G. Lang	24,392 07	14,811 35
German Mission	C. A. Lehmberg	3,357 00	1,488 95
Holston	R. G. Waterhouse	75,451 00	36,000 00
Illinois	R. P. Howell	1,200 00	287 00
Indian Mission	H. J. Brown	9,055 00	1,512 65
Japan Mission	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	3,000 00	1,650 00
Kentucky	E. G. B. Mann	20,000 00	14,867 41
Korea	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	1,650 00	1,650 00
Little Rock	F. S. H. Johnston	40,444 91	25,731 91
Los Angeles	A. Adkisson	647 00	647 00
Louisiana	W. H. LaPrade	20,124 50	18,704 50
Louisville	A. P. Lyon	34,000 00	17,700 00
Memphis	J. W. Blackard	30,122 60	9,000 00
Mexico (3 Conferences)	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	10,000 00	1,300 00
Mississippi	J. R. Bingham	50,553 38	40,434 88
Missouri	G. M. Gibson	36,700 00	26,150 00
Montana	D. B. Price	15,000 00	8,000 00
New Mexico	E. F. Goodson	609 64	509 64
North Alabama	G. W. Reid	27,000 00	20,000 00
North Carolina	J. C. Kilgo	505,910 71	505,910 71
North Georgia	J. W. Quillian	74,710 92	27,770 10
North Mississippi	J. R. Bingham	16,855 59	10,935 61
North Texas	S. C. Riddle	21,000 00	9,964 16
Northwest Texas	F. B. Sinex	68,158 51	42,730 72
Pacific	N. A. Whitmer	5,425 75	1,126 25
South Carolina	J. W. Kilgo	65,000 00	39,218 64
South Georgia	C. E. Dowman	39,014 79	25,113 24
Southwest Missouri	J. S. Jenkins	58,870 00	25,535 00
St. Louis	T. E. Sharp	169,000 00	119,000 00
Tennessee	W. F. Tillet	65,425 00	42,871 45
Texas	Seth Ward	23,000 00	15,000 00
Virginia	James Cannon, Jr.	97,099 89	36,500 00
West Texas	J. M. Moore	6,608 70	13,058 58
Western	W. A. Youngman	105 15	49 00
Western North Carolina	S. B. Turrentine	41,773 50	7,807 78
Western Virginia	S. F. McClung	21,823 30	8,835 39
White River	F. S. H. Johnston	44,471 34	40,051 34
General Board of Miss.	J. D. Hamilton, Treas.	55,606 15	55,606 15
Woman's Foreign Bd.	Mrs. S. C. Truehart	42,000 00	42,000 00
Woman's Home Board.	Mrs. R. W. MacDonnell	25,804 06	25,804 06
Total		$2,040,918 17	$1,420,511 86

HAMPTON MINISTER CAUSES CON- FISCATION OF SLOT-MACHINE.

Hampton, Va., June 23.—Considerable discussion has been heard on the streets to-day over a sermon preached in the First Methodist church by the pastor, Rev. Sydney Peters, Sunday morning, in which the minister severely criticised the action of the Town Council. Mr. Peters was discussing the bad effect of gambling, when he referred to a recent ordinance adopted by the Council licensing slot-machines. The minister declared the action to be the most high-handed outrage ever perpetrated on a Christian community. He urged the people to make it so warm for the members of the Council as to cause them to resign their seats in the body. He said that in all his experience this was the first town that he ever heard of licensing gambling, and that it was time for the people to take a hand in the affairs of the town. Mr. Peters' remarks were stinging, and he handled the councilmen without gloves. As the result of the sermon, the Ordinance Committee of the Town Council met to-day and determined to order the police to confiscate the slot machines doing business in Hampton. — Dispatch.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Danville District Conference will be held in Clarksville, Va., June 24th-26th. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, D. D., will preach the opening sermon. Rev. R. A. Compton, W. W. Royall, and R. F. Gayle are appointed the Committee on Examinations.

The Conference will convene at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday. The opening sermon will be preached at night. Every delegate is urged to be present at the opening session. J. C. REED,
 Presiding Elder.

Danville, Va., March 13, 1902.

If any Christian man desires an earthly indication as to what work God would have him do for Christ, let him look around and see what work is being neglected by other men.

Religious News.

BACK TO VIRGINIA.

Dr. John L. Buchanan, once Superintendent of Public Instruction of Virginia, and afterwards with Randolph-Macon College, at Ashland, has resigned the position of president of the University of Arkansas, and will return to Virginia to live, probably going to Ashland again. It is understood that ill-health was the cause of Dr. Buchanan's resignation.—Leader.

WESLEY CHURCH CORNER-STONE.

On Thursday afternoon of this week the corner-stone of the new Wesley M. church building, now in progress of erection on Halifax street, will be laid with impressive Masonic and religious ceremonies. Powhatan Starke Lodge, of this city, will officiate, and Rev. W. J. Atwill, a former pastor of the church, will deliver the address. During the past few years the congregation of Wesley church has grown so largely in membership as to necessitate a more commodious edifice. The old building has been torn down, and a much larger and more convenient one is being erected in its place. The congregation has not only been very enthusiastic, but very liberal in meeting the expense of the change.—Dispatch.

TO RESIGN.

On account of continued ill health, the Rev. C. E. Blankenship will be required to resign the care of the Barton Heights Methodist church, at least, for the remainder of the present Conference year. It is probable that he will be succeeded by the Rev. Ernest Wells, now at Randolph-Macon, with whom the church is now in correspondence. The proposition at present is for Rev. Blankenship and his family to return to Sydnersville, Va., where they went on the recent vacation, and where they have a number of friends. At that place the minister will remain and rest up until the next meeting of the Virginia Conference in November. At that time, he feels well enough to resume charge of the church, he will do so. If not, he will finally resign its care.—Times.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Many important and attractive improvements are in contemplation for the improvement of Union Station Methodist church during the present summer. At a meeting of a committee appointed for the purpose last night a fine new vo-manual pipe organ was contracted for with the firm of M. P. Moller & Co., Hagerstown, Md., who recently placed one of the instruments in the new Grove Avenue Baptist church. The organ purchased for Union Station is to be one of superior make-up with many important features, and will contain all the recent improvements necessary to produce an up-to-date instrument.

It will be encased in appropriate furnishings, and will be a very attractive addition to the interior of the church, entirely filling the alcove provided for its reception. It will be pumped by electric motor. The instrument is to be a gift to the church from the Sunday school, and will be installed so as to be in service during the session of the next Annual Conference, which is to be held in Richmond in November.

The Ladies' Aid Society is engaged in raising the necessary funds for a new carpet for the church, and are about ready to contract for its purchase.

New singing books are to be furnished to the Sunday school in a few weeks.—Leader.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Delegates and visitors coming to this Conference by rail will be met at Union Level, Southern Railway, on Tuesday afternoon, July 15th, at 1:50. Railroad companies have been asked to allow special rates for the occasion, and our request will doubtless be granted, but we are not yet able to say what the rates will be. We desire to know whom we may expect at the above mentioned time. Delegates and visitors coming by private conveyance will please come to Shiloh church, North View, the seat of the Conference. Those who arrive on Tuesday afternoon will find some one present to direct them to their homes. Any further information our brethren may desire we shall be glad to furnish.

R. S. BAUGHAN.

Union Level, Va., June 24, 1902.

REV. DR. HEAD DEAD.

Leesburg, Va., June 16.—The Rev. Nelson Head, D. D., probably the oldest and most widely-known minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died in Leesburg on Sunday, aged 91 years, 4 months, and 12 days. He retained his mental faculties to the end, and died peacefully.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Dr. Head was one of the oldest ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, and of the entire Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as well. He was born in Leesburg, Va., February 3, 1811, and had thus passed his ninety-first birthday. He was a son of the late George Head, and a brother of the late Captain Geo. R. Head, at one time a member of the Virginia House of Delegates. He entered the church when very young, and was in the active ministry of his denomination for more than fifty-two years, beginning his career when the itinerary was long and laborious.

Dr. Head was one of the most prominent men in the ministry, a preacher of deep learning, a profound theologian, a strong and effective minister, and one who always exercised great influence in the councils of Methodism.

Disabled by the infirmities of age, a few years ago, he retired to the quietude of his home in Leesburg, being ministered to by his devoted wife and warm friends. With child-like faith, in humble submission to the Divine will, and with mental faculties unimpaired, he has preached sermons more eloquent than words.

Dr. Head joined the Baltimore Conference in 1834, was ordained deacon in 1836, and made full elder in 1838.

His first charge was the Westmoreland (Va.) Circuit, which included lower Stafford, King George, and Westmoreland counties.

Next he went to Richmond county. This section he called "the classic ground of Virginia, the home of the Washingtons, Lees, and others." After two years there, he was sent to Fredericksburg, and was in that town two years.

LOCATED IN RICHMOND.

At this time, much against his wishes, he was transferred to the Virginia Conference, but with the understanding that, if he afterwards desired it, he should be brought back to Baltimore Conference. This was before the Methodist Church was divided.

He was then stationed at Shockoe Hill church, Richmond. From Shockoe he went to Madison county, where he said he had the hardest time of his entire ministry, as he had to ride over so many high hills and mountains. Then he renewed his relations with Baltimore Conference. He was assigned to Stafford Circuit in 1840, was there two years, and then went to Baltimore City Station, Eutaw Street church. After two years' service there, he went to Rockville Circuit, where he remained two years, that being the longest term of service at any one place at that time.

From Rockville he went to Harper's Ferry, and after two years there he joined his allegiance to the Southern Methodist Church, and was assigned to Nottoway Circuit, Virginia. Thence he went on duty at Petersburg for one year at High Street church, and then to Norfolk for two years. He was then for two years at Lynchburg, going thence to Centenary church, in Richmond, for two years. From Richmond he went to Farmville for two years. At this time he was made presiding elder of Randolph-Macon District, and served four years, going again to Centenary church, Richmond.

After two years in the capital city, he came to Baltimore Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was pastor at Leesburg church for four years. Next he was presiding elder of Washington District for four years. After this he had charge of the church at Hamilton, Loudoun county, for two years, and at West River, Md., one year. He then married his second wife and went to Christiansburg, Va., for two years. After his term there he was placed, at his own request, on the superannuated list. Yet he did not cease to preach whenever called on, and up to the time of his last sickness, which confined him to his house, he supplied vacant pulpits frequently.

Dr. Head was twice married, his first wife being Miss Morton, of Lynchburg, and his second, surviving him, Miss Fannie Mead, of Lynchburg.—Dispatch.

CHICKEN DINNER TO METHODIST MINISTERS.

Yesterday was a dark day for spring chickens in Norfolk, for the preachers went to Mathews, and that genial host, Captain Southgate, was not deterred even by the beef trust or the fancy prices of the Princess Anne bird from setting before the clergy their traditional and toothsome bill of fare. Captain Southgate, the ideal host and steamboat commander, knows that the only thing preachers like better than a chicken is two chickens. The occasion of the trip was the outing of the Christian Thought Club of the Methodist ministers of this vicinity. Higher criticism and transcendentalism were laid aside, and the only heresy recognized as such was that of the man, who fortunately did not appear, who was not ready to tell a good story and enjoy those related by others. The hospitable people of Mathews and Gloucester had news of the trip, and were out to greet their friends. Informal speeches were made at the dinner table, and Rev. W. Asbury Christian, the Tidewater poet, read an original and humorous ode descriptive of the trip. The day was a perfect one, and the excursion all that could be desired. The beautiful shores of Gloucester and Mathews never looked prettier.

The party was composed of the following gentlemen: Revs. C. H. McGhee, J. K. Jolliff, C. L. Bane, W. A. Christian, E. T. Dadmun, E. H. Rawlings, J. N. Latham, W. C. Vaden, James Cannon, Jr., D. T. Merritt, Ernest Stevens, W. R. Proctor, C. W. Cain, R. H. Bennett, and Mr. R. H. Bennett, Jr.—Landmark.

EDUCATE THE GIRLS.

1. In no section of the country have the women been treated justly in education, says President McIver, of the North Carolina State Normal School. In some quarters the injustice has been less flagrant than in others.

2. Illiteracy among the women throughout the United States, and especially in the Southern States, is much greater than it is among men.

3. The most important factor in our civilization is the white girl in the country; she will make the home and fix the ideas of the people, and as mother and primary teacher she will do the most important teaching that is done for the human race; until recently the State, the church and the philanthropists have in the South devoted their attention, so far as endowed institutions are concerned, almost exclusively to the education of the white man, the negro man and the negro woman.

4. It is suicidal and criminal for the State, the church and society not to see to it that all women have at least equal educational advantages enjoyed by men; that 2,000,000 illiterate mothers in the South mean 4,000,000 or more illiterate children for society and the schools to contend with in the next generation, and that it is safer and cheaper to educate them now than then.

5. If these statements are true, we ought to act at once. Let this be done, not by taking anything from men of the white race or from the negro men and negro women, but by increasing from all sources our gifts of every kind to those educational institutions which are training the most important part of our population, so long forgotten, but which must always set the pace of our civilization.

The first thing the Spirit doth in a sanctified soul is to beat out new windows there, and to diffuse a marvellous light.

WASHINGTON. This discourse of Dr. Talmage is full of inspiring thoughts for those who find life a struggle and shows that we have many celestial sympathizers; texts, Hebrews xii, 1, "Seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses;" 1 Corinthians xv, 32, "I have fought with beasts at Ephesus."

Crossing the Alps by the Mont Cenis pass or through the Mont Cenis tunnel, you are in a few hours set down at Verona, Italy, and in a few minutes begin examining one of the grandest ruins of the world, the Amphitheater. The whole building sweeps around you in a circle. You stand in the arena where the combat was once fought or the race run, and on all sides the seats rise, tier above tier, until you count forty elevations, or galleries, as I shall see fit to call them, in which sat the senators, the kings and the 25,000 excited spectators. At the sides of the arena and under the galleries are the cages in which the lion and tigers are kept without food until, frenzied with hunger and thirst, they are let out upon some poor victim, who, with his sword and alone, is condemned to meet them. I think that Paul himself once stood in such a place and that it was not only figuratively, but literally, that he had "fought with beasts at Ephesus."

The gala day has come. From all the world the people are pouring into Verona. Men, women and children, orators and senators, great men and small, thousands upon thousands come, until the first gallery is full; and the second, the third, the fourth, the fifth—all the way up to the twentieth, all the way up to the thirtieth, all the way up to the fortieth. Every place is filled. Immensity of audience sweeping the great circle. Silence. The time for the contest has come. A Roman official leads forth the victim into the arena. Let him get his sword with firm grip into his right hand. The 25,000 sit breathlessly watching. I hear the door at the side of the arena creak open. Out plunges the half-starved lion, his tongue athirst for blood, and with a roar that brings all the galleries to their feet he rushes against the sword of the combatant. Do you know how strong a stroke a man will strike when his life depends upon the first thrust of his blade? The wild beast, lame and bleeding, slinks back toward the side of the arena; then rallying his wasted strength he comes up with fiercer eye and more terrible roar than ever, only to be driven back with a fatal wound, while the combatant comes in with stroke after stroke until the monster is dead at his feet, and the 25,000 clap their hands and utter a shout that makes the city tremble.

Sometimes the audience came to see a race; sometimes to see gladiators fight each other, until the people, compassionate for the fallen, turned their thumbs up as an appeal that the vanquished be spared, and sometimes the combat was with wild beasts.

All Have Lions to Fight.

To one of the Roman amphitheatrical audiences of 100,000 people Paul refers when he says, "We are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses." The direct reference in the last passage is made to a race; but elsewhere having discussed that, I take now Paul's favorite idea of the Christian life as a combat.

The fact is that every Christian man has a lion to fight. Yours is a bad temper. The gates of the arena have been opened, and this tiger has come out to destroy your soul. It has lacerated you with many a wound. You have been thrown by it time and again, but in the strength of God you have arisen to drive it back. I verily believe you will conquer. I think that the temptation is getting weaker and weaker. You have given it so many wounds that the prospect is that it will die, and you shall be victor, through Christ. Courage, brother! Do not let the sands of the arena drink the blood of your soul!

Your lion is the passion for strong drink. You may have contended against it for twenty years; but it is strong of body and thirsty of tongue. You have tried to fight it back with broken bottle or empty wine flask. Nay, that is not the weapon. With one horrible roar he will seize thee by the throat and rend thee limb from limb. Take this weapon, sharp and keen—reach up and get it from God's armory—the sword of the Spirit. With that thou mayest drive him back and conquer!

But why specify when every man and woman has a lion to fight? If there be one here who has no besetting sin, let him speak out, for him have I offended. If you have not fought the lion, it is because you have let the lion eat you up. This very moment the contest goes on. The Trajan celebration, where 10,000 gladiators fought and 11,000 wild beasts were slain, was not so terrific a struggle as that which at this moment goes on in many a soul. The combat was for the life of the body; this is for the life of the soul. That was with wild beasts from the jungle; this is with the roaring lion of hell.

Men think, when they contend against an evil habit, that they have to fight it all alone. No! They stand in the center of an immense circle of sympathy. Paul had been reciting the names of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Joseph, Gideon and Barak and then says, "Being compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses."

A Cloud of Witnesses.

Before I get through I will show you that you fight in an arena, around which circle, in galleries above each other, all the kindling eyes and all the sympathetic hearts of the ages, and at every victory gained there comes down the thundering applause of a great multitude that no man can number. "Being compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses."

On the first elevation of the ancient amphitheater, on the day of a celebration, sat Tiberius or Augustus or the reigning king. So in the great arena of spectators that watch our struggles and in the first divine gallery, as I shall call it, sits our King, one Jesus. On his head are many crowns. The Roman emperor got his place by cold blooded conquests, but our King hath come to his place by the broken hearts healed and the tears wiped away and the souls redeemed. The Roman emperor sat, with folded arms, indifferent as to whether the swordsman or the lion beat, but our King's sympathies are all with us—nay, unheard of condescension! I see him come down from the gallery into the arena to help us in the fight, shouting until all up and down his voice is heard: "Fear not! I will help thee! I will strengthen thee by the right hand of my power!"

They gave to the men in the arena in the olden time food to thicken their blood, so that it would flow slowly and that for a longer time the people might gloat over the scene. But our King has no pleasure in our wounds, for we are bone of his bone, flesh of his flesh, blood of his blood.

In all the anguish of our heart
The Man of Sorrows bore a part.

Once in the ancient amphitheater a lion with one paw caught the combatant's sword and with his other paw caught his shield. The man took his knife from his girdle and slew the beast. The king, sitting in the gallery, said: "That was not fair. The lion must be slain by a sword." Other lions were turned out, and the poor victim fell. You cry, "Shame! shame!" at such meanness. But the King in this case is our brother, and he will see that we have fair play. He will forbid the rushing out of more lions than we can meet. He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able. Thank God! The King is in the gallery! His eyes are on us. His heart is with us. His hand will deliver us. "Blessed are they who put their trust in him."

The Angels in the Gallery.

I look again, and I see the angelic gallery. There they are—the angel that swung the sword at the gate of Eden, the same that Ezekiel saw upholding the throne of God, and from which I look away, for the splendor is insufferable. Here are the guardian angels. That one watched a patriarch; this one protected a child; that one has been pulling a soul out of temptation! All these are messengers of light! Those drove the Spanish armada on the rocks. This turned Sennacherib's living host into a heap of 185,000 corpses. Those yonder chanted the Christmas carol over Bethlehem until the chant awoke the shepherds. These at creation stood in the balcony of heaven and serenaded the newborn world wrapped in swaddling clothes of light. And there, holier and mightier than all, is Michael, the archangel. To command an earthly host gives dignity, but this one is leader of the 20,000 chariots of God and of the ten thousand times ten thousand angels. I think God gives command to the archangel, and the archangel to the seraphim, and the seraphim to the cherubim, until all the lower orders of heaven hear the command and go forth on the high behest.

Now, bring on your lions! Who can fear? All the spectators in the angelic gallery are our friends. "He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands lest thou dash thy foot against a stone. Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder; the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under foot."

Though the arena be crowded with temptations, we shall, with the angelic help, strike them down in the name of our God and leap on their fallen carcasses! O bending throng of bright angelic faces and swift wings and lightning foot, I hail you today from the dust and struggle of the arena!

I look again, and I see the gallery of the prophets and apostles. Who are those mighty ones up yonder? Hosea and Jeremiah and Daniel and Isaiah and Paul and Peter and John and James. There sits Noah, waiting for all the world to come into the ark, and Moses, waiting till the last Red sea shall divide, and Jeremiah, waiting for the Jews to return, and John of the apocalypse, waiting for the swearing of the angel that time shall be no longer. Glorious spirits! Ye were howled at, ye were stoned, ye were spit upon; they have been in this for themselves, and they are all with Daniel knows all about lions. Paul fought with beasts at Ephesus.

Help From the Prophets.

In the ancient amphitheater the people got so excited that they would shout from the galleries to men in the arena: "At it again!" "Forward!" "One more stroke!" "Look out!" "Back!" "Huzza! Huzza!" So in the gallery, prophetic and apostolic, they cannot keep their peace. Daniel cries out, "Thy God will deliver thee from the mouth of the lions!" David claims, "He will not suffer thy foot to be moved!" Isaiah calls out: "Fear not! I am with thee! Be not dismayed!" Paul exclaims, "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" The throng of prophets and apostles cannot keep still. They make the welkin ring with shouting and halleluiahs.

I look again, and I see the gallery of the martyrs. Who is that? Hugh Latimer, sure enough! He would not apologize for the truth he preached, and he died, the night before sunrise, from the bedpost in perfect glee at the thought of emancipation. Who is that army of 6,666? They are the Thibault legion who died for the faith.

Here is a larger host in magnificent array, 884,000, who perished for Christ in the persecutions of Diocletian. Yonder is a family group, Felicitas, Rome and her children. While they were dying for the faith she stood encouraging them. One son was whipped to death by thorns; another was flung from a rock; another was beheaded. At last the mother became a martyr. There they are together, a family group in heaven! Yonder is John Bradford, who said in the fire, "We shall have a merry supper with the Lord tonight!" Yonder is Henry Voes, who exclaimed as he died, "If I had ten heads, they should all fall off for Christ!" The great throng of the martyrs! They had hot lead poured down their throats; horses were fastened to their hands and other horses to their feet, and thus they were pulled apart; they had their tongues pulled out by red-hot pinchers; they were sewed up in the skins of animals and then thrown to the dogs; they were daubed with combustibles and set on fire! All the martyrs' stakes that have been kindled could be set at proper distances, they would make the midnight all the world over bright as noonday. And now they sit yonder in the martyrs' gallery. For them the fires of persecution have gone out; the sword is sheathed and the mob hushed. Now they watch us with an all-observant sympathy. They know all the pain, all the hardship, all the anguish, all the injustice, all the privation. They cannot keep still. They cry: "Courage! The fire will not consume; the flood cannot drown; the lions cannot devour. Courage down there in the arena!"

Some Eminent Spectators.

What? Are they all looking? This hour we answer back the salutation they give and cry, "Hail, sons and daughters of the fire!"

I look again, and I see another gallery—that of eminent Christians. What strikes me strangely is the mixing of companionship of those who on earth could not agree. There is Albert Barnes and around him the presbyter who tried him for heterodoxy! Yonder are Lyman Beecher and the church court that denounced him! Stranger than all, there are John Calvin and James Arminius! Who would have thought that they would sit so lovingly together? There are George Whitefield and the ministers who would not let him come into their pulpits because

(Continued on page 14.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.*TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 35. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M. (From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.)

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

2:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Naples.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.*THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH. LEAVE RICHMOND:

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAY 11, 1902.

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York-river landings.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, daily, except Sundays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND.

9:15 A. M., No. 15, daily, from West Point, with connection from Baltimore, except Monday.

0:45 A. M., No. 9, daily, except Sundays and Mondays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations.

Nos. 15 and 16 will make no stops between Richmond and Quinton.

Steamers sail from West Point 5:50 P. M. daily, except Sundays. Steamers call at Gloucester Point and Claybank Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and Yorktown and All ponds Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

C. W. WESTBURY,District Passenger Agent,
920 east Main street,
Richmond, Va.S. H. HARDWICK,General Passenger Agent,
C. H. ACKERT,
General Manager,
Washington, D. C.CHAS. M. WALSH*STEAM*MARBLE & GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,*TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and*Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some data as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.*"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APL. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.	No. 31.
2:15 P. M.	10:37 P. M.—Lv. Richmond.
2:56 P. M.	11:20 P. M.—Lv. Petersburg.
7:27 P. M.	4:12 A. M.—Lv. Raleigh.
10:25 P. M.	7:00 A. M.—Ar. Hamlet.
10:35 P. M.	7:20 A. M.—Lv. Hamlet.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
2:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.—Ar. Columbia.
	(Eastern Time.)
1:05 A. M.	9:40 A. M.—Lv. Columbia.
	(Central Time.)
4:55 A. M.	2:10 P. M.—Ar. Savannah.
9:15 A. M.	7:00 P. M.—Ar. Jacksonville.
10:50 A. M.	—Ar. St. Augustine.
5:45 P. M.	6:45 A. M.—Ar. Tampa.
10:32 P. M.	10:08 A. M.—Ar. Charlotte.
1:35 A. M.	10:22 A. M.—Lv. Chester.
3:43 A. M.	12:35 P. M.—Lv. Greenwood.
6:13 A. M.	2:50 P. M.—Lv. Athens.
7:50 A. M.	3:55 P. M.—Ar. Atlanta.
	5:40 P. M.—Ar. Augusta.
11:35 A. M.	7:20 P. M.—Ar. Macon.
6:25 P. M.	9:20 P. M.—Ar. Montgomery.
	2:55 A. M.—Ar. Mobile.
	7:25 A. M.—Ar. New Orleans.
6:55 P. M.	1:40 A. M.—Ar. Nashville.
8:20 A. M.	8:20 A. M.—Ar. Memphis.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norfolk, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norfolk with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norfolk, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Sleeping cars between New York and Tampa. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington, and between Washington and Jacksonville. Pullman sleeping cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa; also through drawing-room. Sleeping cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe cars between Hamlet and Atlanta and between Hamlet and Savannah.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-room Buffet Sleeping cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest day coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure

CASNOW & CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,
Watches,

Fine Repairing. Jewelry.
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians

721 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,

Patent Lawyers,
Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW, PLANING MILLS
and UMBERYARD.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.

—
PLOW HANDLES.—
TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.—
CORN MEAL.—
SLAT & WIRE FENCES

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

TESTIMONIAL TO PROF. FRANCIS SMITH.

ALUMNI OF THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA PRESENT HIM WITH A HAND-SOME SILVER SERVICE.

The alumni of the University of Virginia have been quietly arranging to do special honor to Professor Francis H. Smith, of the University, on the completion of his fiftieth year with that institution. It was determined to make the affair accord with the traditions of the University and the characteristics of Professor Smith; therefore, the preparations were made and the result of them reached in strict privacy.

Last week Professor Smith was lured here to pay a short visit to his life-long friend and fellow-student, John L. Williams, at Mr. Williams' residence, No. 315 east Grace street. About a dozen gentlemen, alumni of the University and friends of Professor Smith, were present. In the course of the evening when a pause occurred in the general conversation, Joseph Bryan attracted Professor Smith's attention and proceeded to read an address to that startled gentleman. The address was the framework for the presentation to the Professor of a volume compiled for his special pleasure and of a magnificent silver service. The silver came from Tiffany's, and is decorated with the new chrysanthemum pattern, and each piece is suitably inscribed with the Professor's name, together with the date and occasion of the presentation. The book consists of a copy of the address delivered by Mr. Bryan, together with many scores of uniform pages, each inscribed with some suitable sentence written and signed by an alumnus of the University, and all expressing reverence and love for the recipient and tributes to his qualities as a scholar, instructor, and a gentleman. These tributes are beautifully bound together and make a book which is unique and priceless, and likely to be an heirloom for many coming generations. It contains the names and sentiments of old and young men, who have been students under Professor Smith in the half century of his career at the University, and who are distributed in every part of the country. Among them are Bishops, presidents, and professors of colleges, Governors, Senators and authors, and men who have attained distinction in every walk of life.

The surprise was complete, and Professor Smith, in his attempt to reply faltered several minutes and visibly struggled to restrain his emotion. After a time, however, he mastered himself and succeeded in delivering a delightful little address, expressing in simple language and with deep feeling his appreciation of the honor done him by the remembrance and affection of his former associates and pupils. The address delivered by Mr. Bryan was as follows:

In behalf of your old friends and pupils, we have great happiness in offering you our most hearty congratulations on reaching your professional jubilee—the fiftieth year of your service in the School of Natural Philosophy in the University of Virginia. We beg leave to present you these testimonials of our sincere love and very great honor.

The little book will, we trust, be pleasant reading in your later years. It is full of fresh and kindly tributes from the hearts of those who have known you best, and who have long and unfailingly honored you—your old familiar friends and pupils.

You will find its contents sober, simple and genuine; the little volume, as it were, a gathering of loose and fragrant natural flowers, a basket of matured fruits, not withered by age or staled by custom, but fresh with the dew of early youth upon them, coming from all sections of our country, from all varieties of honorable men, occupying all walks and pursuits of life, full of kind and loving remembrances.

LASTING REMINDERS.

These works of art will, we hope, brighten and gladden the very hospitable table before yourself and the most amiable and devout lady, who has been the companion of your joys and sorrows, and the helper of all the grace and goodness that is in you. They will go down to your children and to your children's children, lasting reminders of the honor and usefulness of yourself and your family.

Were we to consider only your unambitious soul, your modest, lowly and unselfish nature, we would hand these things to you in the privacy of your own home, with our warmest and sincerest wishes. And the kindly smile and shake of the hand would be an ample and happy acknowledgment.

But against such privacy on such an occasion this noble institution, whose usefulness you have enlarged and whose honor you have magnified, protests; your friends, who know your merit, protest; your pupils, who have enjoyed your instruction and influence, protest; your country, which has along so many paths and in so many ways been blessed with your gentle and holy influence, and even the mother country, which has known of you, protest; the everlasting fitness of things protests. In spite of yourself and our misgivings, this function must be before the world.

Heaven does with us as we with torches do, not light us for ourselves. A candle was not made to be put under a bushel, and you must, for a moment, patiently submit to what we have to say to you and of you. We do not undertake worthily to display your deserts. Our highest praise will fall short of them as we think. It is not an easy thing fairly to bestow merited praise without the suspicion of flattery.

Pardon us, then, if as plain business men we try to offer you an honest and correct balance sheet of your business; though perhaps a little illuminated whether you will or no.

BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

Those of us who were your old classmates, few though we be alive, remember you as an unpretending student, only conspicuous for the purity of your character, your single-hearted and unflinching devotion to light and truth, divine and human, which men on a lower level and within narrower confines call science. With those classmates you, in the lead, explored the infinite wisdom of the heavens, the fixed stars in their place, the planets in their orbits facing the great centre and source of light, all proclaiming the divineness of the hand that made and sustained them, and yet expressed in short equations; more brief than the single law of love the principle of universal order. All these made up the gospel of the heavens, speaking of the rounds of duty; of the works of light and goodness; of the worship of the great God; of the divine mixed mathematics that counts the hairs of the head and marks the least atom in His account.

As your pupils recall the happiness of your personal presence, your gentle and honorable manhood, they love to dwell on them; and with keen delight, they bring to mind how you unfolded to them the ample page of knowledge in all its simplicity and grandeur; how you unveiled the graces, the divine beauty and wisdom of nature, and made your hearers to be ravished with their loveliness. They remember, in the most lively way, how you, with them, explored the paths which no fowl knows, which the vulture's eye hath not seen, neither the fierce lion nor his whelps have trod. They remember how, with a reverent soul, you revealed to them the profoundest mysteries of creation, and how you led them, in spite of themselves, to acknowledge the infinite wisdom, power and goodness of the great Creator, and to feel their sonship after His image. They remember how, through the infinite and the infinitesimal, with telescope, spectroscope and microscope, you made them approach infinite knowledge; how, by the multiplication of power, the irresistible force of daring effort, they were made familiar with Almighty-ness; and how, through the telegraph and telephone, they learned to regard Omnipresence as a common every-day business fact. Moreover, you made them, by telephonic wires and wireless telegraphy, to feel conscious that their imploring voices might reach the throne of heaven and the heart of the great God unseen and at hand, near or afar off. You made them feel how that man, made of clay, inspired by God, and established as lord of creation, is imparting his life to this earthly clod, giving it a nervous system and making material things to throb with electric life. And yet, in your daily intercourse with them, far above all mysteries and knowledge, and power and tongues, you exalted the most excellent gift of charity, the bond of peace and of all virtues, patient, comely, hopeful—simplex munditis. By such graces, by such high scientific treatment, you inspired the soul of those who were under you, and made them familiar with the highest reach of manhood.

ALL HONOR HIM.

None of those who have enjoyed your influence and have gone forth into the world have ceased to remember you with inspiring joy.

Your brother professors honor you, as you go in and out among them as a loyal Christian man, set only upon faithfully discharging your duty, whatever it may be; earnestly participating in the plainest service of rendering your modest but efficient aid to the highest; in diffusing truth, in promoting the good of mankind and the glory of the Heavenly Father. They have known you as a kind, judicious and ever ready friend, and so they love you.

Your Alma Mater recognizes you as realizing and honoring science and scattering its light in all directions; revering virtue and practicing it. She sees you teaching, exemplifying, illustrating manhood in its highest and largest development, lowly and grandly; honoring those in high place according to their dignity, but cheering and loving the least and the lowest; in all your life radiating the spirit of civilization, of enlightenment, and of true religion. She recognizes you as among the brightest jewels of her crown.

Your country has felt the influence of your light and teaching, and wherever (within her own borders or in the general world) an alumnus of the University is found there Professor Francis H. Smith is honored and loved.

And now, we ask heaven's favor for you. As you day, in spite of passing clouds and shadows, has been full of light and beauty, so may its evening close with pleasantness and peace.

ARCHER ANDERSON,
WYNDHAM R. MEREDITH,
C. W. P. BROCK,
JAMES C. LAMB,
JOHN L. WILLIAMS,
JOSEPH BRYAN,
W. E. PETERS.

At the conclusion of the address Mr. John L. Williams presented for the committee a beautiful and massive silver tea service and an exquisitely-bound book, on whose leaves the friends of Professor Smith had written each his tribute.—Leader.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

SHE TRUSTED GOD.

Some one tells the story of a Christian woman who was noted for the calm and peaceful attitude she maintained under the most trying circumstances. Another woman, hearing of her, said, "I must go and see that woman and learn the secret of her strong and useful life." She went to her and said, "Are you a woman of great faith?" "No," was the reply, "I am a woman of little faith in a great God. I try to see the hand of God in the present, and trust Him for the future." This was the secret of her peace.

Her faith in Christ had wrought in her that spirit of peacefulness which nothing of trial and disappointment could disturb.—Ram's Horn.

If we do stumble and fall, it is to our credit if we stumble and fall toward God.

RESCUE WORK OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Through its City Mission Boards the Woman's Home Mission Society does rescue work, and "Doors of Hope" furnish temporary aid for poor, sin-sick girls. At Dallas, Tex., in the Ann Browder Cunningham Mission Home and Training School a larger plant than any other is maintained. There all who enter are pledged to remain two years unless they can be restored to their families. A course of training is given which fits these poor girls to rise above the conditions of the past, and they go out prepared for respectable bread-winning. In this home they are taught cooking, sewing, laundering and other domestic arts. There is room in the house for fifty girls and their babes, and there are never spare beds. During the past year one hundred young girls who had been swooped into the whirlpool of lost virtue sought refuge at this home. Twenty-nine of this number were restored to their parents, twelve were provided with situations, and seven died. Only one returned to the old wayward life. In the five years of the existence of this home more than two-thirds of the girls who have been admitted have been restored to virtue, and are to-day making self-respecting, law-abiding citizens.

AN ARTIST'S FIDELITY.

Leonardo Da Vinci had just finished his great painting, "The Last Supper," and a friend came in to look at it. The friend admired a goblet on the painted table. "How wonderful it is," said the friend, "it stands out like solid silver." The painter dashed his brush over the goblet, and exclaimed, "Nothing shall draw men's eyes away from my Lord!" It is with that spirit that we should keep Christ in the foreground, and ourselves, our plans and reputations in the background.

SPECIAL SEASHORE EXCURSIONS VIA SHENANDOAH VALLEY ROUTE.

Double Daily Service via Roanoke, Luray, Hagerstown, Cumberland Valley and Pennsylvania Railroads to Atlantic City, Cape May, Sea Isle City, Avalon, Anglesea, Wildwood, Holly Beach, New Jersey.

Tickets will be on sale July 10th and 24th, August 7th and 21st, limited to sixteen days, including date of sale.

If tickets sold during July and August are deposited with Ticket Agent at Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, on arrival, a stop-over of ten days will be allowed at Philadelphia on going trip.

Additional information upon application to Agents Norfolk and Western Railway.

W. B. BEVILL,

General Pass. Agent, Roanoke, Va.

SPECIAL FOURTH OF JULY RATES VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

For the Fourth of July holidays the Southern Railway will sell special tickets from all points on its lines at one and one-third fares for the round trip. Tickets on sale July 2d, 3d, and 4th, with return limit July 8, 1902.

SAVE THE CHILDREN.—Statistics will prove that a large percentage of deaths among children may be traced to complications arising from the early souring of milk by bacteria. Cholera infantum is the most fatal disease of infancy, and common, especially with bottle-fed infants. Perry Davis' Painkiller in the emergency is best remedy, and saves many a child's life while the doctor is coming. 25 and 50 cents.

TO CALIFORNIA AND RETURN.

For Less Than Half Fare, Via Southern Railway, New Orleans and Sunset Route. Or, Tarough Asheville (Land of the Sky), Memphis, Kansas City, and Colorado.

These special tickets will be on sale August 1st to 7th, inclusive, to either Los Angeles or San Francisco, with return limit September 30th. $65.25 for the round trip. Liberal stop-over privileges. You may go one route and return another if desired. For detail information, illustrated pamphlet and folder, apply to any agent of the Southern Railway, or C. W. Westbury, D. P. A., Richmond, Va. je 2712t

SPECIAL RATES VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following special rates will apply via Southern Railway for special occasions mentioned:

VIRGINIA STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS, SESSION 1902.

Special rate of four cents (4) per mile one way for the round trip. Apply to agents for details.

FOURTH OF JULY RATES, SEASON 1902.

Rate of one and one-third first class limited fares for the round trip, between all points. Tickets on sale July 2d, 3d, and 4th, with return limit July 8, 1902.

ANNUAL MEETING SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., JULY 1-4, 1902.

One fare plus $2 membership fee for the round trip from all points. Tickets on sale June 27th to July 1st, with return limit July 8th, except by deposit of tickets with joint agent, and payment of fifty cents, extension until September 10th may be obtained.

STATE CONVENTION B. Y. P. U., LYNCHBURG, VA., June 25-26, 1902.

One and one-third fares for the round trip from points within the State. Tickets on sale June 23d, 24th and 25th, with return limit June 28, 1902.

PEABODY COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL, NASHVILLE, TENN., JUNE 16 AND JULY 28, 1902.

One fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale June 12th, 13th and 14th, June 27th, 28th and 29th, and July 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit July 31st, except by deposit of tickets with joint agent on or before July 31st, and payment of 50 cents, extension of limit until September 30th may be obtained.

MEETING VIRGINIA STATE DENTAL ASSOCIATION, OLD POINT, VA., AUGUST 3-7, 1902.

Four (4) cents per mile one way distance for the round trip. Tickets to be on sale August 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit August 10th.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Travellers' Protective Association, Portland, Ore., June 3d to 7th.

Mystic Shrine, San Francisco, Cal., June 10th to 14th.

United Order Workmen, Portland, Ore., June 10th to 20th.

International S. S. Association, Denver, Colo., June 26th.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL,

M. F. BRAGG,

Gen'l Pass. Agt.,

T. P. A.,

Roanoke, Va.

Many things are changing and many pass away, but this taking the things of God and showing them to men is to be forever.

Commencing May 25th, additional passenger train service will be operated over Norfolk and Western Railway as follows:

Leave Roanoke 7 A. M., Lynchburg 8:45 A. M., arrive Petersburg 1 P. M., arrive Richmond 1:50 P. M.; leave Richmond 1:15 P. M., Petersburg 2 P. M., Lynchburg 6:15 P. M., arrive Roanoke 8 P. M.

Leave Lynchburg 7:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., arrive East Radford 10:45 A. M., arrive Bristol 2:50 P. M.

Leave Bristol 2:05 P. M., arrive East Radford 6:05 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:55 P. M., arrive Lynchburg 9:50 P. M. Close connection at East Radford to and from Bluefield, Norton, Welch and intermediate points.

Leave Roanoke 8 P. M., arrive Hagerstown 4:15 A. M. Returning, leave Hagerstown 1:20 A. M., arrive Roanoke 9:05 A. M., connecting to and from Harrisburg, Philadelphia, New York and interior Pennsylvania points. Pullman sleeping cars Philadelphia and Welch, W. Va.

Leave Roanoke 9:15 A. M., arrive Winston-Salem 2 P. M., arrive Charlotte, N. C., 6 P. M. Returning, leave Charlotte 11:10 A. M., leave Winston-Salem 2:55 P. M., arrive Roanoke 7:40 P. M. Trains runs solid between Roanoke and Charlotte.

See regular schedule advertisement for further information.

W. B. BEVILL,

General Passenger Agent.

Once upon a time

A man—for an hour—doubled up with cramps, took

Painkiller

(PERRY DAVIS')

was cured—immediately. His friends being told, said—"Pooh, we've all used PAINKILLER—for years.

Moral. Don't suffer—an hour—keep Painkiller (Perry Davis') in the house.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP AND TAKE NO OTHER KIND. Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,

UP-TO-DATE

FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions AND

Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry, of Petersburg.

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 to $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co., CLEARFIELD, PA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

(Continued from page 10.)

they thought him a fanatic. There are the sweet singers Toplady, Montgomery, Charles Wesley, Isaac Watts and Mrs. Sigourney. If heaven had had no music before they went up, they would have started the singing. And there the band of missionaries—David Abeel, talking of China redeemed; and John S. Williams, of India saved; and David Brainerd, of the aborigines evangelized; and Mrs. Adoniram Judson, whose prayers for Burma took heaven by violence! All these Christians are looking into the arena. Our struggle is nothing to theirs! Do we in Christ's cause suffer from the cold? They walked Greenland's icy mountains. Do we suffer from the heat? They sweltered in tropics. Do we get fatigued? They fainted, with none to care for them but cannibals. Are we persecuted? They were anathematized. And as they look from their gallery and see us falter in the presence of the lions I seem to hear Isaac Watts addressing us in his old hymn, only a little changed:

Must you be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease
While others fought to win the prize
Or sailed through bloody seas?

Toplady shouts in his old hymn:

Your harps, ye trembling saints,
Down from the willows take;
Loud to the praise of love divine
Bid every string awake.

While Charles Wesley, the Methodist, breaks forth in words a little varied:

A charge to keep you have,
A God to glorify,
A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky!

I look again, and I see the gallery of our departed. Many of those in the other galleries we have heard of, but these we knew. Oh, how familiar their faces! They sat at our tables, and we walked to the house of God in company. Have they forgotten us? Those fathers and mothers started us on the road of life. Are they careless as to what becomes of us? And those children—do they look with stolid indifference as to whether we win or lose this battle of life? They remember the day they left us. They remember the agony of the last farewell. Though years in heaven, they know our faces. They remember our sorrows. They speak our names. They watch this fight for heaven. Nay, I see them rise up and lean over and wave before us their recognition and encouragement. That gallery is not full. They are keeping places for us. After we have slain the lion they expect the King to call us, saying, "Come up higher!" Between the hot struggles in the arena I wipe the sweat from my brow and stand on tiptoe, reaching up my right hand to clasp theirs in rapturous handshaking, while their voices come ringing down from the gallery, crying, "Be thou faithful unto death, and you shall have a crown!"

The Gaze of the Universe.

But here I pause, overwhelmed with the majesty and the joy of the scene! Gallery of the King! Gallery of angels! Gallery of prophets and apostles! Gallery of martyrs! Gallery of saints! Gallery of friends and kindred! O majestic circles of light and love! Thrones, throngs, throngs! How shall we stand the gaze of the universe? Myriads of eyes beaming on us! Myriads of hearts beating in sympathy for us! How shall we ever dare to sin again? How shall we ever become discouraged again? How shall we ever feel lonely again? With God for us and angels for us and prophets and apostles for us and the great souls of the ages for us and our glorified kindred for us—shall we give up the fight and die? No, Son of God, who didst die to save us! No, ye angels, whose wings are spread forth to shelter us! No, ye prophets and apostles, whose warnings startle us! No, ye loved ones, whose arms are outstretched to receive us! No; we will never surrender!

Sure I must fight if I would reign,
Be faithful to my Lord,
And bear the cross, endure the pain,
Supported by thy word.

Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die;
They see the triumph from afar
And seize it with their eye.

When that illustrious day shall rise
And all thine armies shine
In robes of victory through the skies,
The glory shall be thine.

My hearers, shall we die in the arena or rise to join our friends in the gallery? Through Christ we may come off more than conquerors. A soldier dying in the hospital rose up in bed the last moment and cried, "Here, here!" His attendants put him back on his pillow and asked him why he shouted "Here!" "Oh, I heard the roll call of heaven, and I was only answering to my name!" I wonder whether after this battle of this life is over our names will be called in the muster roll of the pardoned and glorified and, with the joy of heaven breaking upon our souls, shall cry, "Here, here!"

[Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

Rich Men's Funerals.

When a rich man dies, his death assumes an importance in dollars and cents which to the man who lives all his life with the prospect of being laid away for his long sleep at a cost of not over $100 seems enormous. Though the millionaire cannot take his wealth beyond the grave, he frequently takes a considerable amount inside the doors of the tomb. The coffin in which Li Hung Chang was buried recently was one which that wily old diplomat had had made to suit his fancy and had carried around with him for many years. It was beautifully ornamented with gold and precious stones and was valued at $65,000. The widow of a millionaire named Hiller lavished $20,000 on the coffin in which she buried the body of her husband. The coffin was of exquisitely carved mahogany profusely ornamented with solid gold and lined with rare silk which cost $65 a yard. Nearly all millionaires spend great sums upon the mausoleums where they and their family are to rest at last. The great Mackay and Vanderbilt mausoleums are examples of this, and Senator Clark of Montana has built him a tomb the cost of which is said to have been $175,000.—New York Press.

Expensive Coronations.

It may be of interest to point out at this time that the most expensive coronation on record was that of the present czar of Russia. Upward of $15,000,000 was spent by the government alone and fully another $5,000,000 by the public authorities of various Russian towns. The representatives of other powers vied with each other in lavish outlays, and, counting the sums spent by other persons, the coronation of Nicholas II. cannot have cost much less than $25,000,000.

The coronation of Czar Nicholas I. was also a very expensive affair. The then Duke of Devonshire was the British representative, and he spent fully $150,000 of his own money in connection with it. The coronation of George IV. was the most expensive in English annals, and this cost only $12,500,000. Of this amount $125,000 was expended on the coronation robe and $225,000 on the crown.

The cost of the coronation of George III. did not amount to half that of the coronation of George IV.

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va.

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad. Blackstone, Va.

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,

Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

MDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY,
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860.

CAPITAL, $300,000.

SURPLUS, $275,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY.

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE

For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 25 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family, old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."

—Western Christian Advocate.

"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."

—Central Christian Advocate.

"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."

—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."

—Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."

—Methodist Magazine and Review.

"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."

—Richmond Christian Advocate.

"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."

—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."

—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"Worthy the great Church of which it is a literary exponent."

—St. Louis Globe-Dem.

"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."

—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."

—Bishop C. C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."

—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"I hope every Christian will have this beautiful magazine."

—Bishop J. F. Hurst.

"It ranks with the best."

—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."

—Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land."

—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only 25 cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for twelve months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get this beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents. Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER,
Blackstone, Va.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

are showing a splendid line of

ESS FABRICS suitable for the hot weather and at popular prices.

MMER CLOTHING for Men and Boys of the latest styles.

st complete line of SHOES for Men, Women and Children to be seen in this section. Our shoes are made of LEATHER and gnaranteed.

Nice assortment of RAW HATS, NEGLIGEE SHIRTS, and NECKWEAR.

THOMSON'S, R. & G., and W. B. CORSETS.

mmense stock of EMBROIDERIES at prices that will asish you.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

MAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE
INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

Old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVERY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.

Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant.
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,*A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR

LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any Bilious Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disease of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand, and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,
RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

The Blackstone Guano Company

BLACKSTONE, V.A.

MANUFACTURERS OF HIGH-GRADE FERTILIZERS.

BRAND

...FOR TOBACCO.

Bellefont

4 to 5—8 to 10—2 to

Hard Cash

2½ to 3½—8 to 10—2

Standard

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

Alliance

2 to 3—8 to 10—2 to

FOR CORN AND COTTON

Highland

1 to 2—10 to 12—2 to

The Blackstone Guano Company commenced the manufacture of their celebrated brands of Fertilizers in 1884.

Since that time the demand for them has steadily increased every year, and we believe that the reason for this increased demand for the goods is due to the fact that all of these Brands have every year exceeded their guaranteed analysis in commercial value. For instance, the guaranteed analysis on—

Blackstone Standard	is	$15.20,	but it actually runs	$16.54
Alliance	"	15.20,	" " "	17.71
Hard Cash	"	16.70,	" " "	18.96
Bellefonte	"	21.20,	" " "	23.59

This shows that the average excess on the above Brands is $2.12½ per ton, which is not only greater than any other factory gives you, but is more than we have ever given before.

For prices, write to

BLACKSTONE GUANO COMPANY,

Blackstone, Virginia.

AGENTS WANTED AT EVERY DEPOT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

ESTABLISHED 1893.

DEVOTED TO THE SPREAD OF SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

VOL. 10. NO. 25

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR., Editor.
BLACKSTONE, VA.

RICHMOND AND BLACKSTONE, VA., JULY 3, 1902.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Black-
stone, Va.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Blanks have been sent to all our preachers to-day to be filled in and returned to the undersigned. Brethren are earnestly requested to go over their rolls carefully and send the desired information as speedily as possible, so that it can be of service to the Board during the present campaign for our schools.

The Secretary would also remind the brethren that no money is to be sent to him for Twentieth-Century offerings, except the offerings for Blackstone Institute and for missions. The other offerings are to be sent to Captain Richard Irby, Ashland, Va.

JAMES CANNON, JR.,
Secretary Virginia Conference Board of Education.

Editorial.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE AND JUDGE CAMPBELL.

The public statement of the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League concerning the Amherst outrage is given below. The editor is a member of the Executive Committee, but was not present at the meeting of the committee, as, owing to his absence from home, he did not receive notification of the meeting of the committee until too late to attend. This he regretted very much, as he desired to be present and to sign his name to the address. After a careful reading of the facts in the case, it seems strange that there should be any difference of opinion as to the verdict which should be given. The Judge of Amherst county should resign at once, as it is an insult to the idea of justice that a law-breaker should sit upon the bench to try other men and to pronounce sentence upon them. If he will not resign, he should be impeached by the Legislature and compelled to retire.

His conduct throughout the whole of this transaction has shown how unfit he is for such a position. An examination of the facts presented in the paper, given below, will show that his views on the liquor subject were evidently not without bias, as he granted license to the druggist, which license the Circuit Court revoked. Then, when it became plainly evident that this drug store was selling more liquor than medicine, and the grand jury investigated the matter, this same Judge instructed the foreman of the grand jury that the druggist had a right to sell "medicated" liquor. It was concerning this ruling that Rev. C. H. Crawford, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, wrote the sentence: "Such rulings set people to wondering which had been doctored the most, the whiskey or the judge." Without discussing at this time the meaning of this statement of Superintendent Crawford, the facts clearly indicate that the Judge of Amherst county had such views on the liquor question as unfitted him to sit upon the granting of any license, or in the trial of any man for violation of the license laws. This is clearly evidenced, furthermore, by the fact that the druggist was tried before a magistrate for selling liquor without license, and was fined, and having appealed to the County Court, the decision of the magistrate was sustained, there being another judge on the bench at the trial of his case. It is not meant by this opinion of the unfitness of Judge Campbell to occupy his position that no man is fit to be a judge who will grant a liquor license; but it is meant that no man is fit to be a judge who will so interpret the law as to allow the sale of liquor in a local option community, especially when both the Circuit Judge and a visiting judge can see no ground for so doing. This is the first evidence of his unfitness for his position.

The second evidence is found in the "contempt" proceedings. With a high and mighty assumption of authority, which would have been supremely ridiculous had it not been so puerile, he attempted to elevate his little County Court to a position of authority never dreamed of by the highest courts in the land. Superintendent Crawford published his opinion of his conduct as a judge in a case already decided, and this judge of this mighty court seems to have imagined himself infallible and certainly denied the right of any man to criticise his official conduct. It was astonishing that a man so ignorant of the rights of citizens should ever have been elected to any position of responsibility by the Legislature. This is the second evidence of his unfitness for his position.

The third evidence of his unfitness for his position is found in the apparent cowardice which he displayed in his assault upon Superintendent Crawford. He may not be a coward, and, indeed, it is said, in extenuation, that he considered his honor involved in the statement made by Superintendent Crawford. That might have been a debatable question, but there is no question but that his honor has been very seriously involved by his conduct in this matter. There is nothing but dishonor when a tall, strong, young man attacks, without the slightest warning, an old, defenceless man, and attempts to vindicate his position by brute force. He has, then, indeed, entered the realm of brute creation, which knows not how to distinguish honor from dishonor, but which considers that "might makes right." Had he known himself to be unjustly criticised by Superintendent Crawford, he should have written and asked an explanation of the language used, and should have explained his position; then, if Superintendent Crawford did not satisfy him, he should have defended himself in the press against what he considered to be unjust criticism; but, instead of that, he did the worst thing he could have done, and showed as clearly as possible his unfitness for his position as a judge of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

A writer in the Richmond Leader, who has not the courage to sign his name to his article, finds much fault with Superintendent Crawford for his statement in reference to Judge Campbell. The editor of this paper does not think that he would have said what Superintendent Crawford said. He would have used plainer language than Superintendent Crawford used. He would have said just what he has already said in this article—namely, "that such rulings showed very clearly that the man who made them was not fitted to be a judge in the Commonwealth of Virginia." Why the Judge saw fit to make such rulings is a question which is not of necessity involved in the matter. It may have been from ignorance, from prejudice, from political causes, or from some other reason. Whatever might have been the cause, such rulings very clearly evidenced to thoughtful people that something was the matter with the Judge. That is all I understood to be meant by Superintendent Crawford's statement, and, until the writer in the Evening Leader comes out like a man and lets people know who it is that is assailing the character of Superintendent Crawford he has no right to sign himself "Clericus," as by so doing he intimates that there is a minister to be found who not only assails the character of another minister, but who is also too much of a coward to do it over his own signature. No such man as that ought to think of throwing stones at another man.

In conclusion, the editor of this paper believes that there is only one way for the Judge of Amherst county to regain the respect of the great body of the respectable, law-abiding people of the State of Virginia. If he will come out in a frank, clear statement that he has been wrong in this whole matter from the very beginning; that he realizes that he has done wrong, and that his usefulness as a judge is entirely gone, and that he hereby resigns his office and asks pardon of the citizens of the State of Virginia as a whole, and of Superintendent Crawford in particular, then he will show that he has the elements of genuine courage and manhood. Until he does this, he can never again expect to have the confidence and esteem of the great body of the Christian people of the State of Virginia.

The Executive Committee's statement is as follows:

The Anti-Saloon contest in Amherst county has extended over a period of fifteen years or more. It is stated that in the village of Amherst, with a population of less than six hundred, more than half of whom are colored, there were at one time at least nine bar-rooms.

The Good Templars formed a lodge, which rapidly grew in numbers, and the temperance question became a prominent one. There were three different local option campaigns in the court-house district at intervals of two years, in each of which the cause was lost. Temperance sentiment, however, gradually strengthened, and four years ago the temperance cause won by a majority of 150. Of the four districts in Amherst county, three at present are without license.

BECAME A DRUGSTORE.

No sooner did the court-house district, which was the last to vote dry, forbid license, than one of the bar-rooms, the principal one at the court-house, was turned into a drugstore, with all the proper outfit, such as a first-class licensed clerk, etc. It is stated, however, that the place was frequented by the same crowd, and that the effects of whiskey were apparent. It is further stated that liquor could easily be gotten for drinking; that it was only necessary to get a prescription from a doctor, put it on a bottle, and have that bottle refilled as often as desired, and by whomsoever presented. While Mr. S. A. Day, who kept the said drugstore, had for two years no druggist's retail liquor license, he always had a United States liquor license. At the end of these two years he applied to the County Court for a druggist's retail liquor li-

(Continued on page 8.)

EDWARD BLAKE: COLLEGE STUDENT.

BY CHARLES M. SHELTON,

Author of "In His Steps," "Malcom Kirk," "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days."

COPYRIGHT, 1902, IN U. S. A., BY ADVANCE PUBLISHING CO., CHICAGO.

(Continued.)

He walked slowly over to his room, went in and sat down by his table. He was really having a fight over his personal inclinations and his sense of what he really owed to Willis and his mother at this particular time. He really did not care to room with his old chum again. He had come to like the quiet of rooming alone. He had grave doubts concerning his influence over Willis in the matter of drinking, although he was obliged reluctantly to confess that he had probably not exerted all his influence to its full limit. But all through his conflict of feeling he could not shut out the generous side of Willis' nature, and certain passages in Mrs. Preston's letters at different times appealed to him.

At last he got up and went out and crossed over to Rankin hall.

The living room was in great confusion, and there was an open trunk standing near Willis' bedroom door. Edward did not see any one and at first thought that Willis was not in. But as he took a step into the room a number of articles, including a hairbrush, a pair of tennis shoes and a sweater, were thrown out of the bedroom toward the trunk. The sweater and the hairbrush dropped inside, but the shoes missed and fell on the other side of the trunk near a number of other things that had evidently been flung near the middle of the room in the same way. Suddenly Willis appeared at his bedroom door with an armful of things. As he caught sight of Edward he pulled up rather hastily, and then threw the whole armful in a heap into the trunk.

"What are you doing?" asked Edward, rather unnecessarily.

Willis laughed boisterously.

"Don't you see? I'm getting ready to 'abandon Hope,' to quote from Dante. I'm going to anticipate being fired by going off before the trigger is pulled, as the gun said to the little boy who thought it wasn't loaded. Goodby scholars, goodby school, goodby Prexy—no, I don't think the rest of it is right to say. He's always treated me square enough. I'm the one that's been a fool."

Edward walked over to the table and sat down on one corner of it.

"I came in to see you about matters generally. I don't think you need to leave college."

"Why, is Wheaton circulating a petition to have me stay, so he can have the pleasure of my company?"

"Not quite that, but he has begged the president not to dismiss you from the college."

"How's that?" asked Willis in evident astonishment.

Edward told him about the scene in the president's study and what Wheaton had said. Willis listened with increasing emotion.

"Well, Wheaton is square. He's worth a hundred thousand men like Rankin, with his money and his sneaking, stinky ways. And after we had putted his room to pieces too; seems like a lot of sympathy wasted on the wrong party, though, don't you think? Did you say he was praying for my soul?"

Edward repeated Wheaton's words as nearly as he could recall them.

"It looks as if his prayers hadn't been heard very much, as far as I'm concerned, doesn't it? But I didn't do the work on the tower. I'm not quite so bad as all that." Here Willis confessed to Edward the truth about his statement that he was the guilty party. "Honest, now, I don't want to be kicked out of college just now. It will just about kill mother. I don't care for myself, but I hate to deal her the last and hardest blow of all." And, to Edward's surprise, Willis put his head down between his knees and gave a

"I'm getting ready to 'abandon Hope,' to quote from Dante."

so that was the result of being unnerved generally over the events of the last 24 hours.

After an awkward silence of several moments Edward managed to say:

"There's another thing I came to see you about. I haven't kept my promise to your mother that I would do anything I could for you. That was before she went out to San Francisco last fall. Do you want me to come back here and room with you?"

"Not if you're coming back just out of pity for me," replied Willis, lifting his head and staring hard at Edward.

"Not pity, but because I want to."

"Come on, then," said Willis, his face changing. Then he added: "What's the use? I'm fired, anyway."

"No, you're not. The president same as said that Wheaton's statement changed the case against you. I tell you, Willis, if you will let drink alone and cut the set you've been going with and steady down to hard work, you can finish your college course with credit."

Willis got up from the trunk and began to walk up and down through the room, tramping over the articles scattered on the floor. "I'll do it!" he exclaimed excitedly. "I'll turn out a credit to mother and you yet. Since you left me I haven't given a row or burnt brass pins whether I went to the devil or not. But if you come back, and Prexy lets me off, I'll show you what I can do!" he repeated, with increasing excitement, as Edward sat silent, looking at him. If Wheaton had been present he would probably have said to Willis: "Will you do all this on your own strength? Don't you need divine help to overcome your passions? Aren't you afraid these good resolutions will fail you when you are severely tempted?" And most of the boys in college would have called him a crank for saying it. Edward kept still, because he had no higher standard for moral strength than Willis had.

At last Willis quieted down, and Edward and he talked over the whole matter of rooming together again. Edward finally agreed to come over the next day, and when he went out Willis was soberly picking up his things and straightening out his room.

The whole affair in which Willis had figured was settled at last by the summary dismissal from college of three of the worst men in it, against whom it was finally proved that they had been guilty of the picture painting. A few others were suspended. Willis and half a dozen more were called before the faculty and severely reprimanded and compelled to make good the furniture and other articles destroyed in Wheaton's room. Willis himself and one or two others apologized to Wheaton personally, and the atmosphere of Hope college cleared up generally with the elimination of some of its worst elements.

Then Edward and Willis resumed their old life together. It was not quite the same, however. For awhile Willis attended strictly to his college work and kept good hours, and Edward could find no fault with him on that score. But as the term went on there were many little things that annoyed Edward and made Willis' company unpleasant. He bore it all silently and kept very busy with his work. Nevertheless, more than once he wished he was rooming alone and almost repented him of his own overstrict interpretation of duty.

It was about this time that President Royce began his chapel talks on war, which attracted attention outside of the college owing to the interest of the world not only in the conflict in the Philippines, but for the war in the Transvaal between England and the Dutch republics. The recent debate in the college between Edward and Wilson had also excited a good deal of talk, and when the president announced one Friday that he would begin a chapel talk on war in general the entire college listened with an intense interest never before shown for any of the previous talks.

"The existence of war in this age of the world," began the president, "is reasonable evidence that we are, as a world, still clinging to the barbarous methods of might, rather than living according to the golden rule or the sermon on the mount. To quote from one of our American men of letters:

"This is a mad world—

"The great church crowded,

"The ancient, torn battleflags are hung high on the walls, where the dusty red and yellow rays from the stained windows strike them.

"The monuments of generals who died fighting look down at the multitude, among whom we see here and there uniformed soldiers from the garrison.

"And the priest drones, 'But I say unto you love your enemies; do good to them that hate you, and whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek turn to him the other also.'

"Yet no one smiles—but the devil.—E. H. Crosby.

"Or to quote again from an English newspaper, published in London:

"OUR BLOODY WORK IN SOUTH AFRICA.
"We are not all mad with the war fever. Some of us are still sane. We see through the mist of lies and know that there is murder being perpetrated.

"When passing along the streets, we read the flaming newspaper posters, 'Brilliant Work,' 'Splendid Cavalry Charge,' 'Boers Cut to Pieces,' and the like headlines; we see men hurling missiles of concentrated destructiveness at their fellow men or rushing at each other thrusting their cold steel into their fellows' quivering, sensitive bodies; we see them falling, lying on the ground, to be trampled underfoot, bleeding to death; we do not see any glory. It matters nothing to us whether the killed and the wounded are British soldiers or Boers; they are our brothers. Talk of 'Boer treachery!' On both sides the war is treason against humanity. It is all unmitigated savagery and diabolism, the work of darkness and delusion. There may be a little more or a little less military etiquette on this side or on that, but etiquette does not disguise the savagery to any one that remains sane. When a missile from one of our naval guns comes crashing along, it does not stand on ceremonies. It kills everybody within reach. That is war.—From Brotherhood, London, December, 1899.

"War is the argument of the savage, not of the civilized man. It is the resort of brute force because one side or the other or both have not enough Christianity in them to be willing to find brotherly ways and means out of a difficulty other than physical force, which is contrary to God's higher law and always results in enormous loss and misery.

"A glance at the cost of war will give us some idea of the awful waste of life and property which this un-Christian method of settling human disputes entails.

"Take the cost of a war vessel like the Oregon, $3,791,777, and that is only a small item to begin with, for the cost of equipment, ammunition, pay for its officers and crew, cost of moving it or even of letting it lie idle in any port, is something enormous. The coal bill of Admiral Dewey for one month two years ago was $81,872. During our brief war with Spain in Cuba we spent $17,748,385 for additional vessels to use as transports, ferryboats, supply ships, etc. A single gun with its mount costs as high as $80,000, and it costs $500 to fire it each time. The total expenses of the Spanish war in Cuba for the United States are difficult to estimate, but for every day of that war the government paid out $800,000. If we add to that the destruction of public and private property, it would be safe to say that for every 24 hours during the war in Cuba over $600,000 was practically consumed. And, in addition, for several weeks after the war actually closed this same expenditure went on, owing to the expenses which the war involved, for sustenance of troops, etc., which continued just the same as if war were in progress.

"The entire amount of money paid out by the United States during March, April, May, June, July and August of 1898 was $98,000,000. All this money, remember, was expended to destroy life and property. No matter what the cause of a war may be, whether it is for freedom or rights or anything else, the expense is the same. And that is all we are discussing now. A cannon fired in defense of one's country kills and destroys just the same as one fired in conquest of tyranny. It is the awful waste of property that war brings that makes it such a fearful way of settling human quarrels. The wars of the world have drained it of vast resources and left a legacy of pauperism and bankruptcy and suffering that ages cannot make good. Napoleon's wars cost Europe over $6,500,000,000 and 1,900,000 lives. The Crimean war of only two years cost $1,500,000,000 and 600,000 lives. These 600,000 bodies laid side by side would extend in an unbroken line from here to Chicago. The Franco-German war cost a third of the entire French army, in killed and disabled, over 200,000 lives, and an expense of $1,500,000,000.

(To be continued.)

Blackstone Female Institute.

NORTHEAST VIEW OF BUILDING.

Motto: THOROUGH INSTRUCTION, UNDER POSITIVE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCES, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST.

A Christian Training School for Girls, opened in 1894. Is this School the School for Your Daughter?

PERTINENT FACTS.

BUILDING AND GROUNDS.

The Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, well located, elevated, with fine natural drainage.

The Building is a handsome brick building, erected specially for school work from plans, the outcome of practical experience. There are three stories and basement—main building 260x40 feet, with wing 60x40 feet; wide verandas; large and airy study hall, class-rooms, music hall, gymnasium, and bed-rooms (only two girls in a room); electric lights; water on every floor, with fire-plugs every fifty feet; Peck-Hammond system of heating (fresh air taken from outside, driven by fan over hot furnaces to the various parts of the building); Peck-Hammond system of sanitation (fire and evaporation, instead of drainage and sewers); all parts of building so connected that no exposure of pupils to weather necessary at any time.

CHARACTER.

I. CHRISTIAN.—It was built by the Methodist Church with one single purpose—namely, to furnish thorough instruction under positive Christian influences.

II. THOROUGH.—There are ten Randolph-Macon graduates in the Faculty. The Principal, Vice-Principal, and the heads of all departments are Randolph-Macon graduates, and have been specially commended by the Randolph-Macon faculty for the work. There is no vain pretence or show. "THOROUGH" is the first word and the last word in the work of the school.

III. SUCCESSFUL.—The purpose and work of the school have commended it to parents. GROWTH.—Number of boarding pupils year by year for seven years—29, 58, 88, 136, 147, 153, 176. Number of officers and teachers in 1894, SIX; at present, TWENTY. Value of grounds and building in 1894, $25,000; at present, $65,000.

THREE COURSES.

REGULAR COURSE leads to Diploma of Graduation at the Institute.

TEACHER'S COURSE gives special preparation for those desiring to teach; Theoretical and Practical Pedagogy Courses. Pupils are taught to teach by actual teaching in Model School and criticism by teachers.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE COURSE prepares directly for Randolph-Macon Woman's College. An extract from a letter written by President Smith, of the Woman's College, is to the point: "I take pleasure in saying that the three students who came to us last year as graduates of your excellent institution entered college classes, and showed themselves qualified for them. This is no more than must reasonably be expected, seeing that your course has been so carefully adjusted to ours and ten of your faculty are Randolph-Macon graduates."

Send for catalogue, giving full information and illustrated to show floor-plans, and special adaptation of building to the work. Address

Rev. JAMES CANNON, Jr., Principal,
BLACKSTONE, VA.

BISHOP CANDLER ON VICTORY.

At the First Methodist church in Oak Cliff Bishop Candler, of Georgia, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Oak Cliff High School. The church was crowded to the very doors. A special musical programme had been prepared. To the accompaniment of piano, violin and cornet, the Oak Cliff choir opened the services by singing "Onward, Christian Soldier," which was followed by "Come, Thou Mighty King," in which the congregation joined, standing.

Bishop Candler read from the 61st chapter of the Prophecy of Isaiah, and from the 2d and 3d chapters of the Gospel of St. John. He said:

Let me call your attention to the fourth and fifth verses of the First Epistle of St. John: "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Our very familiarity with these sacred words operate to dim them to us. The Scriptures have suffered because of this familiarity with these words. The meaning of them lies deep, and if we would always read them reverently and in the spirit of those seeking truth we might find their meaning. If it some day comes to us in its beauty, we need to recur to the author. Not when he was young and hopeful, but when he was old, John talks of victory; not of victory in the future, but of present victory.

What victory had he achieved? He caught the words from his Master when He said to His disciples, "I have overcome the world." What must have been the majesty of that occasion! What must have been stirred in the heart of the gentle disciple when Jesus set forth that His death was at hand! Men had done their worst to Him. Pain, sorrow and humiliation had had their way with Him, and yet He stood there, serene, quiet, and with the voice of the victor, said, "I have overcome the world." So John said he had attained victory. Were Jesus and John using words without meaning?

Imagine their using inflated words. We do that. Words, words we must have. We pile them up, regardless of the weak ideas they express, and think we are impressing those who hear them—and sometimes we are.

These men were sober. These men used the simplest words to express things that were real. They claimed real victory? What was it? We get nearer their meaning by asking, "What do men mean by the world?" We may reach the answer by the process of exclusion, as the doctors do the name of a disease. It is not this and it is not that, and so it must be something else.

God said the world was good, and it is. Always we can find the good if we look for it. Through all the eruptive and explosive changes to which it has been subjected, it is the same world that God meant it to be, and He is everywhere.

Often in solitude the voice of God comes to us, and it is as if the world were not, so surely do we feel the reality of the eternal world.

By "the world" do we mean the men and women in it? Does victory come to us through conflict with men? Some men make all life a campaign to win a victory over some one else, periodically whipping him. This is not victory. There is no conflict between our love of God and our love of men. Let no one tell you that you love your fellow-men too much. The Bible does not tell us that we can do this. This very epistle of St. John teaches that we must love men, as well as God. He who loveth not his brother, how can he love God?

What sort of comfort is it that we give the heart-broken father when we tell him, as he weeps over his dead child, that God took it because he loved it too much.

Suppose a father watching his little ones at play calls one of them in and to the child's question, "Father, why did you call me in?" he answers: "Because you were loving your companions too much. I wish you to think only of me." Such a man would be a miserable, jealous barbarian.

Oh, bereaved mother, when the little feet are still and the little fingers are numb, think not that God called your child home because you loved it too much! It was best for the little child—that is all there is of it.

By "the world," then we do not mean the men and women in it. What do men mean when they say, "One might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion?"

The world that is in conflict with Christ reaches its boundary when it questions right and wrong.

The boundary of our world is where self and conviction collide. We are in conflict with heaven when we are in conflict with earth. Instead of following our own convictions steadily we are seeking our own comfort. All good preaching is an action in ejection, and should be right out from the shoulder. Put the squatters out and the owners in—preach the truth that John preached. All preaching should be against the world of trifling, devouring of widow's portions; sham instead of substance. If we cannot bring men to the kingdom of heaven we must do what Christ did, bring the kingdom of heaven to earth.

Reforming earthly institutions will not bring God upon the earth. I'm for reform all the time—tariff reform and all sorts of reform, and I have my opinions about those reforms. These opinions have been formed by study and thought, and I am willing to talk about them, not preach about them from the pulpit. When a man preaches he tries to get power from above. If we would follow our own convictions and not the fashions we must engage in no mimic warfare. From the dawn of consciousness the warfare is on, and many are they who succumb. Erasmus writes to Luther: "I mean to be as good a Christian as the times will permit." When the spirit of the times comes in conflict with the Spirit of God there are many time servers. The Spirit of God is not the mixed image that Daniel saw, but purified gold from the refiner.

There is in the world a maxim, "Let us be practical." Professional men must follow it. Society women say,

"Let's not go against the trend of the times."

What cursed influence these maxims sometimes have! We cannot reach spiritual results by carnal methods. Men mean to seek God, but when the spirit of the world calls they yield.

The ideals of youth! Those are the real things! If young men and women could only know that the precious ideals that they begin to pinch off for this fashion and that fashion were the only things that can ever make the world heavenly!

Men say in light tones to the young man or woman, "You will learn better." There is no better to learn than the best you think of honor and purity and your duty to God. When you begin to pinch off you make the precious thing mere baggage. John and Jesus had ideals. Jesus said to men, "You have done your worst, but I am the victor. I stand for the eternal things of God." Men who charged up Gettysburg could not say this. The man of Austerlitz, that man who broke down when he came to the real fight, was weak in spite of his victories because he could not say this. What will give us victory over the world? The apostle tells us faith. To be born again—to believe that Jesus is the son of God.

I read not long ago in the Popular Science Monthly an article telling of the power of a gourd vine to lift a stone weighing several tons. I meditated upon this, not believing it at first. I was living in an old house covered with ivy, and one day I saw in the corner of a room a piece of ivy that had penetrated through a brick wall, and in growing had loosened a tenpenny nail from its hold in a wooden beam. This is an example of the tremendous power of vegetable life. We all know the power of animal life, but after all, it is intellectual life that settles everything. We hear ignorant men say, "Be practical. I don't believe in so much learning." I know you don't. You are too ignorant to know how ignorant you are. This man is a merchant, perhaps. Ask him how he gets his stuff to Dallas. He will answer, "It came over the T. & P." Ask him who surveyed that roadbed. Ask him what a man must know to be a surveyor. Ask him who made those steel rails and what work of the intellect there was there.

Before Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin we used to pick enough cotton to make gloves. After he invented it we all went to planting cotton. It is the spirit of Eli Whitney that moves the world. Some men have no respect for ideas. All they respect is dirty dollars. You couldn't get your dirty dollars if some men hadn't ideas. We can get along without your dirty dollars, but we can't get along without ideas. Moral ideas have the greatest power. Napoleon said God was on the side of the heaviest artillery. What had artillery to do with the Israelites crossing the desert? At one time they were in Egypt and they turned up in Palestine. How did they get there? We may leave out of the question the cloud and the manna and the quail, but how did they get there? Where was the artillery during the Revolutionary war? I remember the picture in my old history of a log on wheels with never a hole in it. We scared the British with it. God is very seldom on the side of the heaviest artillery.

Let the Americans try to go to an island in the Pacific ocean with God, and Napoleon's defeat will be nothing to theirs. God has not dictated. Of all moral ideas Christian ideas are the strongest. Buddhism, Mohammedanism—all must go down before Christianity. But Christians want a chance to talk. St. Peter, Paul, the Master all talked and their work by talking. The Christian life cannot be conquered by the world. Evil has no power. Can we conquer by faith? Who has defined faith? Saviour never did nor St. Paul. What do we mean by our faith in prayer? What we need is faith in God, that will make us pray. Faith is not act, just as love is service. Continuous doing and being according to God's will is faith. God's will is permanent. Customs are transient. God's abides. Man will not resist customs until he believes in God. God is not in a hurry. The stars never quickened when Jesus was on His way to death. The sun kept in his course when Christ hung stretched on the cross. Go on with your miserable maxims. God is calm and serene. Don't think God is going to get scared at any wind you can raise. He pays no more attention to your battles than you would to a fleecy day or a hailstorm. A man that believes in God is never afraid. Faith neither conforms nor raves—it is serene. Men sometimes talk loud and defiant about their faith; they are whistling to keep up their courage. That is not faith. A man almost swears in the pulpit sometimes, and by his manner says, "Ain't I brave?" No, you are a miserable coward. There is no business in faith. Charles Wesley, his in a barn, began to sing, "Jesus, Lord of My Soul." Where is the bitterness in that song? It is the song of a lark soaring above the clouds and singing at the gates of peace. I think I can take my chances if I believe in the power of love and faith. If love is left off by itself it might get helpless. Love and faith join hands I can testify to that. Do you suppose John wrote about Nero? Do you suppose a man who has stood on Patmos is afraid of the little world? It counts for nothing. I wouldn't take a line of fire from youth. Get the thing that abides. Walk on the earth unconcerned and try to make it better. John said: "The lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the earth and the lusts thereof pass away, but the kingdom of God abides forever." Pilate is only immortal because of a passing touch of Jesus.

If you men think these things concern you have come to stay, to Jesus. The Son of God should concern you. The purpose of His coming brought the Son of God into the world was the purpose that made the world. These coronations, these wars, these concerns of the worldly are passing to-morrow they will be forgotten. Naught but the kingdom of God comes to stay. The world is passing. Purity and peace are accomplishing their purpose. Redemption has achieved its finality. All things working in God's own way and the white day will come when nothing will be left to be desired, and therefore nothing left to be achieved.—Dallas News.

DIED IN THE FAITH.

An old herdsman in England was taken to a London hospital to die. His grandchild would go and read to him. One day she was reading in the first chapter of the First Epistle of John, and came to the words, "And the blood of Jesus Christ His Son, cleanseth us from all sin." The old man raised himself up and stopped the little girl, saying with great earnestness:

"Is that there, my dear?"

"Yes, grandpa."

"Then read it to me again, I never heard it before."

"She read it again."

"You are quite sure that is there?"

"Yes, quite sure, grandpa."

"Then take my hand and lay my finger on the passage, for I want to feel it."

"She took the old blind man's hand and placed his bony finger on the verse, when he said:

"Now read it to me again."

"With a soft, sweet voice she read: 'And the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin.'"

"You are quite sure that is there?"

"Yes, quite sure, grandpa."

"Then, if anyone should ask how I died, tell them I died in the faith of the words: 'The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin.'"

"With that the old man passed into the presence of Him whose blood cleanseth from all sin."

TEACHING POLITENESS.

A mother noticed a remarkable change in the deportment of her six-year-old son. From being rough, noisy and discourteous, he had suddenly become one of the gentlest and most considerate little fellows in the world. He was attending the kindergarten, and the mother naturally inferred that the change was somehow due to his teacher's instruction.

"Miss Smith teaches you to be polite," she remarked, in a tone of interrogation.

"No," said the boy, "she never says a word about it."

The mother was puzzled, and all the while when further questioning brought only more emphatic denials. The teacher had ever given her pupils lessons in good breeding.

"Well, then," the mother asked, "if Miss Smith doesn't say anything, what does she do?"

"She doesn't do anything," persisted the boy. "She just walks around, and is so polite. We feel just as polite as anything."

"That was all he could tell about it," his mother began to see through the mystery.—Educational News.

It is a great deal easier to do that which God gives us to do, no matter how hard it is, than to face the responsibility of not doing it. We have abundant assurance that we shall receive all the strength we need to perform any duty God allots to us.—J. R.

Communications

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

A coroner's jury brought in a verdict declaring that the officers of the Coal Creek mine, that exploded, and the State Mine Inspector, were negligent, and that their negligence was responsible for the catastrophe that hurried 216 souls into eternity without warning. It is evident that this negligence, if it existed, was not malicious; for they had nothing to gain, but everything to lose by the catastrophe. It was perhaps a case of false security. That error is very common. Sinners are guilty of this every day. Christians are guilty of it too; if many of us knew what is in store for us in the near future, I am sure we would walk more closely with God.

If the rich fool had known that his soul would be required of him at midnight, he would not have spent the day in planning larger barns in which to store his superabundance of goods. He would not have been commanding his soul to take its ease, but he would have been making his peace with God.

It may be that ere this reaches you, there will be an interregnum in England, if that is possible. There is a proverb that "the King never dies." I apprehend that "his majesty's" case is more serious than the physicians will acknowledge. If the dissipation and high living of the king has not too much undermined his constitution, he may recover. May God preserve his life; if not, may the Holy Spirit prepare him to render with joy his account to the King of kings!

The new editor of the Nashville Advocate copies without comment an editorial article of the Florida Christian Advocate, which advises persons not satisfied with the action of the General Conference on the Publishing House case quietly to drop out—that is to say, leave the Church. What would the Florida editor think if the persons so advised were to turn and advise him quietly to drop out? Wouldn't the parties be even? Many persons will drop out, I presume; but not because of this Florida advice, coming via Nashville. I asked a Methodist gentleman to-day, who is seriously thinking about dropping out, what Church he would join if he dropped out. He replied, "None."

Some of the disciples dropped out in the days of Christ, and when He asked the twelve if they were going to drop out, too, they replied substantially, "Where will we drop to? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

May I not say to any who are contemplating dropping out, be careful, brethren, that you do not drop away from Jesus Christ. Stick to Him and you are safe.

Well, the drought is burst; I didn't say busted; yet how much more expressive is this slang word than the genuine? Lately we have had a few showers that gave us hope, but to-day we had a wet rain, a real baptism of blessing. My poor garden is partially saved. My father's faithful servant Dick was ploughing in his master's cornfield near the end of a six week's drought, ploughing in despair. Dr.

Nickerson Sneed passing, said: "Dick, is your corn suffering?" Dick replied with a tear in his eye, "No, doctor, done sufferin'."

My little crop is not done suffering, but the rain, I fear, has only deferred the evil day. But God always does right, and if we did the same, we would have very little trouble. O the depth of the riches of His wisdom and goodness!

The University of Tennessee has established a normal summer school for the teachers of the South, and so far some 1,200 pupils have been in attendance. The instructors are doing good work, and there are daily lectures for the whole attendance—lectures that are doing much good and giving great satisfaction.

I have measured the work I have done by way of writing Holston history since last October, and I find that, although confining myself to pioneer history—that is to say, to the period before 1824—I have nearly ready for the printer about 1,000 pages of such a book as a volume of McFerran's History of Methodism in Tennessee. Of course, it must be retouched, added to and abridged, more or less.

R. N. PRICE.

Morristown, Tenn., June 26, 1902.

THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

The writer gave his name in the fall of 1882 at the session of our Conference in Portsmouth, Va., as one of the charter members of our Brotherhood. Although since that time it has cost no little sacrifice and self-denial on his part to pay up the dues to the Brotherhood, yet no money he has ever given has afforded the writer more pleasure. The Brotherhood, properly conducted, is a grand organization, and its usefulness already in our Conference cannot be doubted. The money raised through its assessments at the death of a preacher comes in very opportunely for the benefit of the deceased brother's family. This is practical religion. In so many cases the family of the deceased preacher is left in needy circumstances at his death, and the amount raised by our Brotherhood at the opportune time is of incalculable benefit to the survivors.

Important and helpful as the monetary part of the Brotherhood is, that's not all. The Brotherhood draws us closer together in fraternal bonds. It engenders a spirit of brotherly sympathy and love among us. It has a tendency to make us feel that we are a band of brethren with common ties, with same hopes, aims and aspirations, and are organized for mutual helpfulness. It is strange that some of our preachers from various pretexts fail to join our Brotherhood.

But the Brotherhood, like other things, may be abused, or, on account of our zealous friends, made a failure. The taking up collections for the families of deceased preachers, however worthy and deserving they may be, who fail to join the Brotherhood will surely tend to destroy this useful organization. If preachers are trained to expect financial aid with no reference to the Brotherhood when death comes and their families then be assisted, they will naturally save the expense of the Brotherhood and stay out of it. The making special efforts to raise extra money through the Brotherhood when popular ministers die is manifestly unjust to the rank and file of our brethren. Of course when a D. D. dies whose work and ministry has been a power, and his brethren and admirers wish to contribute for the benefit of his family, all right, but we all ought to be on a par in the Brotherhood. Let everybody share alike. It would not be practicable to make special appeals through the Brotherhood for extra contributions for the family of every preacher who dies. People would tire of this, and to make a difference in any case seems to me to have a tendency to injure the Brotherhood. Let us stick to the Brotherhood. Use it for all it is worth. Get all to join it who will do so. It is to be devoutly hoped its over-zealous friends won't kill it. E. P. PARHAM.

The lessons only which have cost us pain, which we have learned in struggle, which have been born out of anguish of heart, will heal and really bless others. It is when we have passed through the bitterness of temptation, wrestling with evil and sore beset, victorious only through the grace of Christ, that we are ready to be helpers of others in temptation. It is only when we have known sorrow, when the chords of our love have been swept by it and when we have been comforted and helped to endure, that we are fitted to become comforters of others in sorrow.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The March issue of the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine has for its leading article an appreciation of President Theodore Roosevelt as a historian. The numerous illustrations are from photographs taken at Cambridge, Massachusetts, where he spent his college days—the Hasty Pudding, the Porcelain Clubs, to which he belonged; University Hall, Harvard, which he attended, and other places of interest. Pictures of some of his professors are also given. The manner and worth of his "Naval History of 1812," and his "Winning of the West" are judiciously estimated.

God does not give grace until the hour of trial comes. But when it does come, the amount of grace and the nature of the special grace required is vouchsafed. Do not perplex thyself with what is needed for future emergencies; to-morrow will bring its promised grace along with to-morrow's trials.—J. R. Macduff.

Let us lay hold of the happiness of to-day. Do we not go through life blindly, thinking that some fair to-morrow will bring us the gift we miss to-day? . . . Know thou, my heart, if thou art not happy to-day, thou shalt never be happy.—Anna Robertson Brown.

It is when we feel all broken up and wasted, and that we can only bring the bits to God, that He says, "Come," and He will take us and mend us and make us whole again.—Mrs. Whitney.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 13.

Text of the Lesson, Ex. xx, 1-11.
Memory Verses, 3-11—Golden Text,
Luke x, 27—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.]

1, 2 And God spake all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

It was now the third month since they had been redeemed from the bondage of Egypt. They had come to Mount Sinai, and the Lord had offered to make them a peculiar treasure unto Himself above all people, a kingdom of priests, a holy nation, if only they would obey His voice. This they readily promised to do, and now we see them gathered about Mount Sinai, the mountain quaking greatly and covered with fire and smoke, out of the midst of which God speaks the words of our lesson to the people (chapter xix). It was a day unlike any before or since in the history of the world. So wonderful was it that a people should hear the voice of God out of the midst of the fire that the fact is stated ten times (Deut. iv, 12, 15, 33, 36; v, 4, 22, 24, 26; ix, 10; x, 4). He first reminds them that their redemption from Egypt was wholly His doing, without any help of theirs, for "salvation is of the Lord" (Jonah ii, 9), and He never asks an unredeemed soul to keep His commandments. He often reminded them that He brought them forth from Egypt (Ex. vi, 7; Lev. xi, 45; xxii, 33; xxv, 38, 42; xxvi, 13; Ps. lxxxii, 10), which He called an iron furnace (Deut. iv, 20; 1 Kings viii, 51; Jer. xi, 4), that they might be His own people and serve Him.

3. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me.

Since they were redeemed by the only living and true God to make Him a name on the earth in the sight of all nations (11 Sam. vii, 23; Isa. lxiii, 12, 14), therefore they were forbidden to have aught to do in any way with the gods of the nations, idols of wood and stone, the work of men's hands (11 Kings xviii, 36, 37; Jer. x, 10, 11).

4-6. I the Lord thy God am a jealous God.

God is called jealous just seven times. The other six places are Ex. xxxiv, 14; Deut. iv, 24; v, 9; vi, 15; Josh. xxiv, 19; Nah. i, 2, and in all but the last He is so spoken of in connection with the worship of idols. The word translated "jealous" also means to buy, purchase or redeem. We are redeemed to be a people for His own possession (Tit. ii, 14, R. V.), and He wants us all for Himself. Idols are works of men's hands, and it is surely silly to bow down to that which we can make, as if our own works which we have made could care for us. In Deut. iv, 15, 16, the reason for this second commandment is given. We are not apt to bow down to graven images, but if anything is tolerated in our hearts' affections that prevents our Lord Jesus from having first place we are grieving the Holy Spirit.

7. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain.

The name above every name must be ever hallowed, as Jesus taught us to pray (Matt. vi, 9). Not only is all kind of so called profanity forbidden, but as the name stands for the character (Ex. xxxiv, 5-7), all that would in any way belittle the character of God must be carefully avoided. We are here to honor Him in every way and magnify His name, for there are so many who blaspheme that worthy or beautiful or honorable name by the which ye are called (Jas. ii, 7). See God's abhorrence of everything that is merely outward in Isa. xxix, 13; Ezek. xxxiii, 30, 32, and in His condemnation of the Pharisees (Matt. xxii, 5). It may help some one if I pass on right here a word of explanation given to me by an aged and devout servant of Christ who is very familiar with Hebrew concerning a passage which long perplexed me—"Thou hast magnified Thy word above all Thy name" (Ps. cxxxviii, 2). He said as I asked him concerning it: "Did you ever write a check? After filling in the amount, what did you do?" "I signed my name." "Yes," he said, "and thus you magnified your word over your name. And the sense of 'above' here is 'over.' He has magnified His word by His name, and if we dishonor His word we ill treat His name."

8-11. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

This command takes us back to Gen. ii, 1-3, the word "remember" pointing us to something before made known. The Sabbath was made for man, and the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath (Mark ii, 27, 28). If, then, He is my Lord, the Sabbath is specially mine that on it I may have special communion with Him. In Isa. lviii, 13, 14, we are taught that we are to honor Him, not doing our own ways nor finding our own pleasure nor speaking our own words, and that thus we shall delight ourselves in the Lord. In Col. ii, 16, 17, we read that even the Sabbath is a shadow of things to come, perhaps referring to the keeping of a Sabbath that remains for the people of God, but which we can foretaste even here (Heb. iv, 9, 10). The word "Sabbath" means rest, and there is no rest but in Christ and in His finished work. We never find rest until we cease from all our own efforts, our own works, and accept Him and the benefit of His great work of redemption. Then, being saved by His blood, which includes His life, His death and His resurrection, we need to know the rest which comes by ceasing from all our works in the daily life as Christians and allowing God to work in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure (Phil. ii, 13).

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

All grace is found in the bosom of the Father.—Rev. Dr. Wilson, Methodist, Danbury, Conn.

A Wireless Message.

A thought is the wireless message of soul to soul.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Progress in Spiritual World.

The law of progress is just as much a law in the moral and spiritual world as it is in the natural and growth is sanctification.—Rev. C. J. Hall, Denver.

An Unworthy Church.

The church that does not save people, and a great many people, is unworthy the ground on which it stands.—Rev. Dr. Warren S. Danley, Presbyterian, McKeesport, Pa.

What Salvation Means.

Salvation means more than deliverance from sin and Satan; it means service. It means more still; it means sacrifice.—Rev. Dr. William J. Holtzclaw, Baptist, Atlanta, Ga.

The World's Brother.

The pre-eminence of Christ consists, in the first place, in the fact that he is the one universal character. He is the son of man; he is the world's brother.—

Bishop C. B. Galloway, Methodist, Washington.

The Equality of Men.

The conflict of classes will never subside until the great principles of the equality and fraternity of men as taught by the Man of Nazareth are accepted and put into operation.—Rev. Bruce Brown, Christian, Denver.

Employing the Divine Hospitality.

The union with God is more than a hiding place from the storms of life; it is a home for the soul, a permanent dwelling place. It is the constant enjoyment of divine hospitality.—Rev. Richard Hartley, Baptist, New York.

The Greatest Discovery.

The earliest great achievement of the twentieth century is wireless telegraphy, but incomparably greater is the discovery of the way to send our messages to the very ear of God.—Rev. James J. Dunlop, Presbyterian, Boston.

Children of the Same Father.

Religion teaches me that we are all children of the same Father, brothers and sisters of the same Redeemer and consequently members of the same family. It teaches me the brotherhood of humanity.—Cardinal Gibbons, Catholic, Baltimore.

Lessons of the Infinite.

Everything in this beautiful world has a lesson of permanent and eternal good in it, and the mind and heart thrill with the sweetest emotions when they find the lessons of the infinite in the common things which we see and handle every day.—Rev. Alfred F. Smith, Methodist, St. Louis.

Simple, but Not Easy.

Religion is simple, but not easy. It has the right to ask of every man that he shall give himself to it in the fullness of his power. Religion always begins, and it never begins in any other way, when a man comes to himself.—Rev. Dr. William J. Tucker, President of Dartmouth College.

Need of an Endless Life.

There is no greater mistake than that we need only this world's lights to guide us through this world. Earth needs the solar orb to lighten and fructify it. Our souls need the power of an endless life to sustain them in their daily toils and troubles.—Rev. Dr. J. T. G. Nichols, Unitarian, Saco, Me.

Separating Chaff From Wheat.

There is a cry going forth for a ministry which speaks with authority. Back of every true ambassador of Jesus Christ is the divine authority, or, if it be not so, the ministry is the most stupendous of all farces. The chaff of the pulpit must go; the wheat will remain.—Rev. Henry Irving Rasmus, Baptist, Chicago.

The Crown of Desire.

If there be one thing more certain than another about human nature, it is this—that by itself it is incomplete. The soul of man cannot live without God. Wickedness is imperfection. Selfishness is sin. The crown of desire is the consciousness of the divine presence.—Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water, Episcopalian, New York.

The Working Out of a Plan.

We see a world crowded full of design, wheel within wheel, the most delicate adjustments of means to end. The plain man says, "Here is the working out of a plan, and a plan involves a wise planner." The philosopher can never overthrow that plain reasoning by any specious pleas.—Rev. C. P. Wishart, Presbyterian, Allegheny City, Pa.

Work a Form of Worship.

It is my profound conviction that the evils of that system in the industrial world of the day which turns the worship of work into a mockery and a blasphemy will not be changed until its pathos has stirred the hearts of men and aroused them to realize that the mandates of religion extend over the six days of the week as well as over the seventh and that work is as much a form of worship as is prayer.—Rev. Dr. Henry Berkowitz, Hebrew, Philadelphia.

Crowned With Beauty.

The soul that is crowned with the beauty of the Lord our God stands forth unchanged and unchangeable. Therefore adorn and make beautiful the doctrine of God our Saviour. Illustrate the Christian life in your beautiful character and career. Be a living sermon on the mount, clothed with flesh. Remember that Christian character represents the greatest achievement of the fine arts. The true Christian character must be as full of color as is the spring, as full of fruit as the autumn, as perfect in his purity as the white cloud.—Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

"POOR MAN'S CLUBS"

DR. TALMAGE ANSWERS ADVOCATE OF OPENING SALOONS ON SUNDAY

Speaks For the Wives and Children of the Workingmen Who Would Rush to the Ginmill on the Sabbath.

Intemperance is a broad subject and needs to be handled in a cautious, conservative manner. Inebriates are merely those who fall through strong drink. It is possible to palliate some great evil or exterminate some boodvice that is ruinous in such words as phrases as to mark an intemperate spirit, says Rev. T. De Witt Talmage in The Christian Herald. When reformers or men of the sacred profession become apologists for any evil that has been known by its fruits to be a menace to the national good, evil that has laid in ruins some of the loveliest homes and burdened the shores of history with the wreck of the most brilliant genius and done more to populate perdition than war with all its horrors, then we are at fault in saying these men are guilty of inebriety of speech.

It is deeply to be regretted that men who minister at church altars should in any form apologize for the existence of the saloon or attempt to show that it is a necessary evil. Evil is never necessary. Christ came to destroy works of darkness and not to apologize for their existence. His servants must in like manner smash to shreds these bulwarks of Satan if they are to be loyal to his cause.

It is said that the saloon is a social factor and the poor man's clubroom; that as a rule the homes of our workingmen are ill furnished, ill ventilated, small and uncomfortable and that the brilliantly lighted and decorated room gives him such surcease from discouragement as to make life endurable. The music and hilarity of the places beguile the sons of toil of a sense of social injustice done them and for that reason these so called clubrooms ought to be opened on the Lord's day to our workingmen. What is to be said of the wives and children, who must remain in these ventilated and overcrowded tenements? Why should this so called clubroom the saloon, not be opened to them and thus give all the money to the saloon keeper for the still greater enrichment of his home and clothing rich raiment his children? If the money spent in the saloon was spent at home it would not be the evil crowded, ill ventilated and uncomfortable place, but could be easily made a hundredfold more attractive than the most gayly furnished barroom. Many of the clubrooms, even for the rich, are neither good nor wholesome if their whole history were laid bare. They alienate men from their homes, foster habits not at all conducive to good morals, such as gambling and secret drinking, and there ought to be no circle of so called friends that a man cannot welcome to his home and introduce to his family.

It is argued that the workingman finds in these establishments and beer gardens both congenial society and an opportunity for moderate enjoyment and that temperance reformers have misrepresented these so called social centers—the saloons and beer gardens of our great cities. Have our clergymen and other advocates of this form of sociability frequented or even spent one whole evening in such places? Have they listened to the ribald jokes, the obscene jests, the filthy tales, the discussions about the inequalities of society and dangerous sentiments so often voiced against capital and capitalists that become the germs of anarchism, the noise and oaths that rise from these so called congenial centers? And, remembering that what is seen and heard one evening is reproduced the year round, how can the servants of Christ advocate such a line of conduct for our workingmen? The enjoyment is not moderate (if it can be called enjoyment), but has always ended in immorality, and every employer will testify, if he testifies to the truth, that no workingman who patronizes these so called clubrooms for the poor man on the Lord's day is as valuable a servant on Monday morning as he would be were he to abstain from drink.

But it is said the food served at the saloons is not only cheap, but excellent and presented in a tempting manner to their patrons. The "free lunch" is the devil's bait on the hook to catch the victim of the drink habit. What is the food served that is so excellent? Enter any barroom, and on the side table you will find some sour pickles, dry cheese, hard crackers, unsavory sausage or bolognas strong enough to disgust a rat's stomach, and this is the free lunch served, or the better class saloons may dish up some hot broth called soup, but all intended to lure the patrons of the bar to drink what will prove final destruction to soul and body!

Bad News For Beer Drinkers.

Beer drinkers probably will "view with alarm" the present startling condition of the hop market in this country. In the United States last season's crop of hops was 150,000 bales. Of these only 10,000 bales remain on the Pacific coast, and the total number of bales in New York state is not more than 2,500. These figures include all grades of hops, and as brewers are not heavily stocked generally there is a decided prospect of a hop famine. New hops will not be harvested until September.

A Warning From Austria.

One hundred thousand copies of a pamphlet entitled "Away With Alcohol" have been distributed by the accident insurance department of the Austrian government.

D. R. W. V. ADKINS,
Blackstone, Va.

PHYSICIAN AND DRUGGIST.

All Prescriptions compounded by expert

House Druggists

TEACHERS.

A number of well-prepared teachers, men and women, most of them college graduates, are registered with our Teachers' Bureau and anxious for work. We will be glad to correspond with the authorities of any school needing teachers, and are sure we can fill satisfactorily a number of vacancies.

Address J. D. HAMMOND,
Secretary Board of Education, M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread
a thin coating of

PURE REFINED
PARAFFINE

Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package. Sold everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY
THROUGH THE STATES OF
MARYLAND, VIRGINIA, OHIO,
WEST VIRGINIA, and NORTH CAROLINA.

Shenandoah Valley Route
THROUGH PULLMAN VESTIBULE SLEEPERS.

LURA GROTTOS
NATURAL BRIDGE
MOUNTAIN LAKE
BRISTOL
KNOXVILLE
CHATTANOOG
LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN
BIRMINGHAM
MEMPHIS
NEW ORLEANS
CHILLICOTHE
COLLINGSBURG
AND THE N. C. R.

Write for Rates, Maps, and Sleeping Car Reservations. Describe your trip to any Agent.

W. B. BEVILL, Agent
GENERAL PASS AGENT, Division of Transportation, Richmond, Va.

CITIZENS' BANK,

BLACKSTONE, VA.

Capital, $57,000; Surplus $16,400.

W. H. MANN,
President.

J. M. HARRIS,
Vice-President

JOS. M. HURT,
Cashier.

BENHAM MORRIS,
R. LOGAN HARRIS,
Assistant Cashiers.

Does a General Banking Business.

The Union Central LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

OF CINCINNATI, O.,

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

Total income over .....	$7,000,000 00
Total outgo less than .....	4,000,000 00
Gain in assets for 1901 .....	3,608,295 20

Interest income for the year was $1,630,362, which paid all death losses, $1,092,872, and left a balance of $537,490. Had the interest rate been as low as many of the Companies it would have been only $1,200,000, and had the death loss been as high, this Company would have lost $1,400,000 in death losses, thus the UNION CENTRAL saved to its policy holders for one year alone over $700,000, as compared with many other large Companies.

This Company wrote in Virginia $1,700,000, and after taking off all death claims, lapses, and extra policies returned, it leaves a net gain of over $1,200,000 in insurance in force for 1901, which amount was not surpassed by but one Company of the many doing business in the State—a great showing.

The net gain in surplus for the year, $707,000, was largely in excess of any previous year, which means their dividends for 1902 are to be held up to former years, which is a showing that should be greatly appreciated by the public when it is considered in the last few years nearly all of the Companies have greatly reduced their dividends.

I made a close study of the question before taking any insurance, and after having actual returns in dividends on my first two policies I doubled my insurance with the UNION CENTRAL. It is a good Company for protection of the family, and a good Company for investment.

REV. JAMES CANNON, JR.

My dividends in this Company are most satisfactory. I have two policies with them.

H. H. SEAY.

I don't believe there is any better insurance on the market than the UNION CENTRAL. I carry $10,000 with them.

HARRY L. WILLIAMS,
Of Stokes, Williams & Co.

R. L. CLIBORNE, District Manager,

Blackstone, Va.

R. S. TUCK, General Agent,
Box 244, Richmond, Va.

Too much cannot be said for

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

Thousands are willing to testify to its merits, saying it is the best Liniment they ever used

RHEUMATISM.
NEURALGIA.
HEADACHE
STIFF NECK.

It Is Good For Man and Beast.

For

STIFF MUSCLES.
STIFF JOINTS.
STIFF KNEES.
SCIATICA LUMBAGO
PAIN IN THE BACK
PAIN IN THE SHOULDERS.
PAIN IN THE SIDE.
CORNS AND BUNIONS.

Rub well with and use

Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER.

A Weekly newspaper devoted to the spread of Scriptural holiness.

"First pure, then peaceable."
"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

"Abstain from every form of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

REV JAMES CANNON JR., Editor.

OUR MOTTO:

A METHODIST NEWSPAPER IN EVERY
METHODIST HOME.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Send one or two cent stamps, money order, postal note, or registered letter. Do not use five, eight or ten-cent stamps. No receipt is sent for subscriptions, as the price of the paper is so low that money cannot be spent in stamps unnecessarily. The date on the address will be changed on the receipt of subscription price.

Obituaries of fifty words or under, inserted free. Half a cent a word for all over fifty. Marriage notices not exceeding six lines, ten cents.
Sample copies to any desired address.

Address all communications to
Rev. James Cannon, Jr., Blackstone, Va

QUARTERLY CONFERENCES.

DANVILLE DISTRICT—THIRD QUARTER, IN PART.

Washington Street, May 18th, at night.

East Halifax, Concord, May 24th, 25th.

South Boston, May 25th, at night.

Boydton, May 28th, at night.

Clarksville, Rehoboth, May 31st, June 1st, 11 A. M.

Chase City, Eastern, June 1, 3:30 P. M.; June 2, 11 A. M.

South Pittsylvania, St. Johns, June 5th, 11 A. M.

Danville Circuit, Rock Spring, June 7th, 8th.

Charlotte, Lebanon, June 15th, 16th.

Prince Edward, Mt. Pleasant, June 21st, 22d.

District Conference, Clarksville, June 24th-26th.

Henry, Pleasant Grove, June 28th, 29th.

Martinsville, June 29th, at night.

Main Street, July 2d, at night.

Chatham, Siloam, July 5th, 6th.

Patrick, Providence, July 12th, 13th.

Rocky Mount, July 17th, at night.

Franklin, Red Valley, July 19th, 20th.

E. Franklin, Epworth, July 21st, 22d.

Calvary, July 23d, at night.

West Franklin, Rock Spring, July 26th, 27th.

J. C. REED.

Presiding Elder.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT—THIRD ROUND.

Market-Street, May 18th, morning.

Ettrick, May 18th, night.

Lugh-Street, May 25th, morning.

Blandford, May 25th, night.

Matoaca, June 1st, night.

Greensville, Emporia, June 7th-8th, morning.

Wakefield, Rocky Hock, June 14th-15th, morning.

Surry, Morning's, June 15th, afternoon; 16th, morning.

Sussex, Oak Grove, June 22d-23d, morning.

BOTH

FOR

One Dollar.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times.

Both of these papers will be furnished for one year for the small sum of ONE DOLLAR.

Send $1.00 to Southern Methodist Recorder, and you will have both these papers sent you for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

BOTH FOR $1.25.

The subscription price of the American Illustrated Magazine is $1 a year. The subscription price of this paper is $1 a year. We will supply both for one year for $1.25.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ALL FOR $1.50.

The Southern Methodist Recorder,

The Richmond Weekly Times,
The Southern Farmer, and
American Poultry Journal,

All four papers for $1.50. The publications may be sent to one or several addresses.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

ONLY THREE DOLLARS.

The Southern Methodist Recorder and the Richmond Daily Times—a religious weekly and a secular daily—both for $3.00 for one year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

Prince George, Gary's, June 28th-29th, morning.

East Dinwiddie, Salem, June 29th, afternoon; 30th, morning.

Nottoway, Poplar Hill, July 5th-6th, morning.

Blackstone Station, July 6th, night; 7th, morning.

South Brunswick, Prospect, July 12th-13th, morning.

Mecklenburg, Kingswood, July 13th, afternoon; 14th, morning.

South Hill, South Hill, July 14th, night; 15th, morning.

North Mecklenburg, Shiloh, July 18th, afternoon.

West Lunenburg, Grace, July 19th-20th, morning.

Lunenburg, Antioch, July 20th, afternoon; 21st, morning.

Brunswick, Liberty, July 26th-27th, morning.

West Brunswick, Bethel, July 27th, afternoon; 28th, morning.

Dinwiddie, Rocky Run, August 9th-10th, morning.

West Dinwiddie, Mansen's, August 10th, afternoon; 11th, morning.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

NO SUBSTITUTE WANTED.—No!

I did not ask for a bottle any cheaper, or twice as large, or one made by yourselves. I did ask for and will not have any substitute for Perry Davis' Pain-killer; I have used it, my father used it, and I would not be surprised if my grandparents did so too. There is no imitation that can equal it. That I am sure of—for stomach ache,

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE AND JUDGE CAMPBELL.

(Continued from 1st page.)

cense, which was granted. Under this he sold liquor for one year.

When he made his application for a similar license for the succeeding year, the Anti-Saloon people presented a protest, but the County Court granted the license. An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court, which revoked the license. Things appeared, notwithstanding, to go on very much as before, and many people believed that liquor was freely sold. There is reliable authority for the statement that twelve barrels and twenty-eight boxes of liquor were received at the Amherst depot by the said druggist within four months' time.

"MEDICATED" LIQUOR.

A special grand jury was appointed in March last, and it was testified to before them that ardent spirits had been bought from this druggist; but all the parties also declared that it was "medicated." The foreman of the grand jury is credited to have said that he was instructed by the county judge, Clarence J. Campbell, that the druggist had a right to sell "medicated" liquors. No indictments, therefore, were made. This seeming miscarriage of justice so outraged the good people of Amherst that expressions of protests were used subsequently at the morning service of the Baptist church by the Rev. J. L. Wiley, at which Judge Clarence J. Campbell was present. That night at the Methodist church a similar protest was made by Rev. E. V. Carson. Thereupon Judge Campbell arose and made a statement in defence of his own conduct in regard to the case of the druggist. The occurrences in these churches and the high state of excitement that ensued were much talked of, being reported quite at length in the public prints of the State.

DR. CRAWFORD'S VISIT.

It was at this point in the situation that Rev. C. H. Crawford was invited, as the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, to visit Amherst and co-operate with the temperance people there in strengthening the cause. He spent with them two or three days, preaching at the two churches on Sunday, and making on that afternoon a statement to a public meeting of the aims and methods of the Anti-Saloon League. It was in reference to this ugly situation that Superintendent Crawford wrote in the March issue of the Christian Federation the following paragraph: "At Amherst recently a whiskey-selling druggist was presented to the grand jury. It was proved that he had sold about twenty-five barrels of whiskey during the past year, and a number of witnesses testified that they had bought it from him; but the jury was instructed by the judge that the druggist had a right to sell 'medicated whiskey,' so they brought in a verdict of 'no indictment.' Such ruling set people to wondering which had been doctored the most, the whiskey or the judge."

CONCLUSIONS DRAWN.

From this simple statement of facts it will be seen that the situation at Amherst Courthouse was one of long standing and aggravated. It will be seen further that Dr. Crawford was there upon invitation of the people of that community in the interest of the League. He did not make the situation, but was endeavoring, in co-operation with the people there, to further the cause of temperance. It is also true that the proceedings in the County Court were called in question by many of the people of the community. It was in reference to this state of the public mind that the last sentence was written in the paragraph to which exception was taken by Judge Campbell.

As to the expediency of publishing the statement in question the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League passes no judgment, preferring to leave it to every man to decide for himself. If, however, Judge Campbell thought himself thereby aggrieved, the courts of the land were open to him to enter suit against Superintendent Crawford for libel.

THE JUDGE'S COURSE.

Judge Campbell, neglecting this plain remedy which the law had provided for him, resorted to the extraordinary course of summoning before him for contempt of court Superintendent Crawford as editor of the Christian Federation. By such a course Superintendent Crawford was deprived of a trial by a jury, and was subject to the arbitrary powers of the judge. As the article in question had been written after the conclusion of the druggist's case in the Amherst court, Dr. Crawford felt himself justified in refusing to obey the summons to appear for contempt of court. Thereupon an attachment was issued for him. When he did appear at the May term of the court, the judge postponed the case with a view to having present also some of the reporters of the Richmond press. We need not speak of the annoyance, the loss of time, and the expense to which Superintendent Crawford was put by these proceedings.

Meantime Mr. S. A. Day, the druggist, was tried before a magistrate on five warrants for violation of the law in selling liquor and fined $20 for each count, and put under a peace bond of $500. He immediately appealed to the County Court. When the case came up at the May term of the County Court, the verdict of the magistrate was sustained. At this trial Judge Campbell did not sit, but at his request another judge presided. This decision must be regarded as throwing light on the previous situation at Amherst.

THE RECENT TRIAL.

When the case of Dr. Crawford finally came to trial on June 24th, Judge W. H. Mann, counsel for Dr. Crawford, stated that in view of the fact that Judge Campbell's mind seemed to have been made up as to the decision of the case, it seemed hopeless for him to make his argument in defence of his client. Yet he ventured, in spite of all, to do so. So cogent was his reasoning, so clear was his statement of the law and facts in the case, that Judge Campbell felt himself forced to dismiss the case, thus seemingly deciding against himself. During the trial Judge Campbell gave Dr. Crawford an opportunity to re-his statement. As it was evident Judge Campbell resorted to this method only after he discovered that powder was wet, Dr. Crawford felt he could say nothing more than he had not intended for the words near the construction which the judge chose to put upon them.

THE HORSEWHIPPING.

The crowd separated all thought of the matter was at an end. Judge Campbell left the court-room. A short time after, as Dr. Crawford and Judge Campbell, in company with the Rev. Mr. Finley and Rev. Mr. Carson, were leaving the court-house, they met Judge Campbell, with a heavy walking-stick in one hand and a whip in the other. As he was shaking hands with Dr. Mann, Dr. Crawford, in a friendly way, reached out his hand to shake hands with him, supposing the incident was closed. Hereupon Judge Campbell, with the remark, "I gave you an opportunity to apologize and you did not; now take this," began to strike his unsuspecting victim, inflicting severe lashes and an exceedingly painful wound upon his head. In this affair Judge Campbell had no advantage. He was young, athletic, prepared, and was standing on his feet and somewhat higher than was Dr. Crawford. Dr. Crawford is a gray-haired man, was wholly without suspicion, and, needless to say, without means of any kind whatsoever. We are ourselves unable to express the indignation which we feel at the cruel and cowardly assault made upon a minister of the Gospel by a man who represented the dignity and honor of the Commonwealth. Such a disgrace we believe to be without parallel in the history of Virginia, and hence the intense expression of condemnation against Judge Campbell which has gone up from the people and press of this State is without precedent.

THE LAW INVOKED.

We wish to put upon record our appreciation of the faithful services of Dr. Crawford, as superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, rendered to the cause of temperance, and we hereby give expression of our deepest sympathy with him in that he has had to endure in this honorable affair. As citizens and as representatives of the temperance people of this State, we earnestly call upon the courts and the Legislature, whom we, as a League, leave this matter, to deal adequately with Judge Campbell, to the end that such disgraceful an act may be utterly repudiated by the Commonwealth of Virginia.

(Signed)

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE VIRGINIA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.
June 27, 1902.

Choose Thou for me my friends,
My sickness or my health;
Choose Thou my cares for me,
My poverty or my wealth.
Not mine, not mine the choice
In things or great or small;
Choose Thou my guide, my strength,
My wisdom and my all.

—Bonar.

Religious News.

Improvements on Pocomoke M. E. church, South, began this week, under the supervision of Mr. George W. Johnson, who has contracted to do the work for the sum of $400.—Enterprise.

Rev. Lewis P. Brandford, of Danville, Va., is conducting a protracted meeting at the Methodist church in Urbanna. Very large crowds are attending, and a considerable amount of interest is being manifested.—Times.

Rev. R. Finley Gayle, pastor of Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal church, was taken quite sick on Saturday, the 21st, and was unable to preach on Sunday as usual. While it is thought that he is better now, his condition is rather critical.—Times.

Rev. John R. Gill is now at his mother's, his physician having advised a change of scene. His condition is improved and hopes are entertained for his early recovery. He is accompanied by his faithful wife and two interesting little girls.—Citizen.

The Anti-Saloon League has recently prepared some interesting facts about the liquor business in North Carolina. Of the 97 counties, 47 are under absolute prohibition; 5 have dispensaries, but no saloons; 20 have saloons only in the county seat, leaving only 25 counties which may be classed as "wet."—Landmark.

The marriage of Mr. Benjamin Robertson Turner, of Mount Sterling, Ky., and Miss Alice Norcross Littleton, daughter of the Rev. O. Littleton, of the Virginia Conference, took place on Wednesday morning, June 25, 1902, at 9:30 o'clock, at the East Suffolk parsonage. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father in the presence of a few friends.

The attendance on the occasion of the laying of the corner-stone of the new Urbanna Methodist church not long since was said to have been the largest ever seen on such an occasion. The ceremonies were conducted by Urbanna Lodge, A. F. and A. M., assisted by brethren from lodges of surrounding counties. Eighty-odd members of the craft were in line when they marched from the hall to the church. State Senator J. Boyd Sears, of Mathews, was the orator of the day.—Times.

PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Delegates and visitors coming to this Conference by rail will be met at Union Level, Southern Railway, on Tuesday afternoon, July 15th, at 1:50. Railroad companies have been asked to allow special rates for the occasion, and our request will doubtless be granted, but we are not yet able to say what the rates will be. We desire to know whom we may expect at the above mentioned time. Delegates and visitors coming by private conveyance will please come to Shiloh church, North View, the seat of the Conference. Those who arrive on Tuesday afternoon will find some one present to direct them to their homes. Any further information our brethren may desire we shall be glad to furnish.

R. S. BAUGHAN.

Union Level, Va., June 24, 1902.

Rev. Paul Bradley, of West Norfolk, has been spending some days past in King George in the interest of the Methodist Orphanage now being erected in Richmond. He preached to a large congregation at Fletcher's chapel Friday. A collection was taken up for the benefit of the Orphanage. During the afternoon children's day services were celebrated, and a most interesting programme carried out under the efficient superintendence of Mr. Julian Pratt, of Fletcher's chapel Sunday school. Rev. Mr. Bradley preached at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at Trinity church.—Times.

The Norfolk Ledger says: "Bishop A. Coke Smith, D. D., of this city, who was recently raised to the Bishopric by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, left here to-day to begin the active work of the Episcopacy—he having been resting at his cottage at Willoughby Beach since his return from the General Conference of his Church, held at Dallas, Texas. He goes from here to Salisbury, N. C., where to-morrow and Sunday he preaches in the interest of city mission work. He has a considerable itinerary just ahead of him, as on next Sunday he goes to Hertford, N. C., to dedicate a church, and on the second Sunday in July he will be at Rockingham, N. C., to attend a District Conference. He will then return home for a week, and then go to Western North Carolina to attend several District Conferences. The Bishop's friends here still have the hope that he will make his permanent home in Norfolk."

REV. MR. TILLERY MAY BECOME A BAPTIST MINISTER.

The Rev. J. R. Tillery, formerly of the Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church, South, who recently became a member of the East-End Baptist church, of this city, will now in all probability be admitted to the full Baptist ministry.

At the meeting of the Baptist Ministers' Conference this morning Mr. Tillery was present, and was introduced to the body by the Rev. Joel T. Tucker, pastor of the End-End church. After a statement made by Mr. Tillery a committee was appointed to examine him, with a view to setting him forth to the full Gospel ministry. The committee consists of the Revs. J. B. Hutson, D. D., C. S. Gardner, D. D., George Cooper, D. D., W. S. Leake and W. T. Derieux, D. D.

In his statement, which was voluntarily made, Mr. Tillery indicated his reasons for leaving the Methodist Church, and also gave an explanation of his trouble with the Baltimore Conference. As regards the former, Mr. Tillery said he went over to the Baptists on account of a conscientious conviction that he should obey the Lord in methods of baptism. He had come to the conclusion that immersion was the only proper way of administering the ordinance, and that other forms of baptism are no baptism at all.

Concerning his trouble with the Conference, Mr. Tillery made a full statement, going over the whole ground. He exhibited papers signed by the investigation committee of the Conference exonerating him of all blame.—Dispatch.

METHODIST PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Methodist preachers of the city held their regular weekly meeting this morning with a fair attendance of the pastors, who made the usual reports of their labors on yesterday.

The approaching District Conference to be held in July in Mecklenburg county, near Union Level, was discussed. The majority, if not all, of our pastors will attend this meeting. It will be a pleasant outing for the brethren, besides being an important meeting at which local preachers are licensed to preach the Gospel and recommendations for admission into the Annual Conference made for suitable applicants. At this meeting the lay delegates, with their alternates, are elected to the Annual Conference. Bro. Guyer will furnish his tent for the occasion. Large crowds will no doubt attend the sessions of the Conference if the weather proves favorable. The spread of big dinners on the occasion may be expected, and the preachers' favorite dish—fried chicken—will be no doubt in evidence.

Bro. Hatcher is very hopeful of securing the amount of money necessary to make the extensive and needed improvements at Market-Street church.

Our president, Dr. B. F. Lipscomb, gave edifying talks on various subjects of interest to the Church. The time passed pleasantly and the brethren disbanded in fine humor.—Secretary, in Progress.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS.

An interesting session of the Methodist ministers of this city and vicinity was held in Epworth church yesterday morning.

Rev. R. H. Bennett, who occupied the chair, called on the Rev. Dr. J. C. C. Newton, of Salisbury, Md., to open the meeting with prayer.

The reports called for indicated that the warm weather had in some cases diminished the attendance, but otherwise they were of an interesting nature.

The Rev. E. T. Dadmun conducted the usual services at Centenary. The hour for the evening service has been changed to 6 o'clock, which will be continued during the heated term.

At McKendree the Rev. W. R. Proctor preached to good congregations. He also conducted the services at the mission connected with this church in the afternoon.

At LeKies' Memorial the Rev. C. W. Cain preached to a good congregation in the morning, and the Rev. W. R. Crowder, of Denby's, at night.

The chaplain of the Seamen's Bethel, the Rev. J. B. Merritt, had a fair day.

The Rev. D. T. Merritt had a good Sunday school and the usual services at Port Norfolk. Four were received by certificate.

(Continued on page 13.)

WASHINGTON. —A familiar illustration from the barnyard is employed in this discourse by Dr. Talmage to show the comfort and protection that heaven affords to all trusting souls. The text is Matthew xxiii, 37, "Even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."

Jerusalem was in sight as Christ came to the crest of Mount Olivet, a height of 760 feet. The splendors of the religious capital of the whole earth irradiated the landscape. There is the temple. Yonder is the king's palace. Spread out before his eyes are the pomp, the wealth, the wickedness and the coming destruction of Jerusalem, and he bursts into tears at the thought of the obduracy of a place that he would gladly have saved and apostrophizes, saying, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

Why did Christ select hen and chickens as a simile? Next to the appositeness of the comparison, I think it was to help all public teachers in the matter of illustration to get down off their stilts and use comparisons that all can understand. The plainest bird on earth is the barnyard fowl. Its only adornments are the red comb in its head-dress and the wattles under the throat. It has no grandeur of genealogy. All we know is that its ancestors came from India, some of them from a height of 4,000 feet on the sides of the Himalayas. It has no pretension of nest like the eagle's eyrie. It has no luster of plumage like the goldfinch. Possessing anatomy that allows flight, yet about the last thing it wants to do is to fly, and in retreat uses foot almost as much as wing. Musicians have written out in musical scale the song of lark and robin redbreast and nightingale, yet the hen of my text bath nothing that could be taken for a song, but only cluck and cackle. Yet Christ in the text uttered while looking upon doomed Jerusalem declares that what he had wished for that city was like what the hen does for her chickens.

Christ's Simple Teachings.

Christ was thus simple in his teachings, and yet how hard it is for us who are Sunday school instructors and editors and preachers and reformers and those who would gain the ears of audiences to attain that heavenly and divine art of simplicity! We have to run a course of literary disorders as children a course of physical disorders. We come out of school and college loaded down with Greek mythologies and out of the theological seminary weighed down with what the learned fathers said, and we fly with wings of eagles and flamingoes and albatrosses, and it takes a good while before we can come down to Christ's similitudes, the candle under the bushel, the salt that has lost its savor, the net thrown into the sea, the spittle on the eyes of the blind man and the hen and chickens.

There is not much poetry about this winged creature of God mentioned in my text, but she is more practical and more motherly and more suggestive of good things than many that fly higher and wear brighter colors. She is not a prima donna of the skies nor a strut of beauty in the aisle of the forest. She does not cut a circle under the sun like the Rocky mountain eagle, but stays at home to look after family affairs. She does not swoop like the condor of the cordilleras to transport a rabbit from the valley to the top of the crags, but just scratches for a living.

I am in warm sympathy with the unpretentious old fashioned hen because, like most of us, she has to scratch for a living. She knows at the start the lesson which most people of good sense are slow to learn—that the gaining of a livelihood implies work and that successes do not lie on the surface, but are to be upturned by positive and continuous effort. The reason that society and the church and the world are so full of failures, so full of loafers, so full of deadbeats is because people are not wise enough to take the lesson which any hen would teach them that if they would find for themselves and for those dependent upon them anything worth having they must scratch for it. Solomon said, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." I say, Go to the hen, thou sluggard. In the Old Testament God compares himself to an eagle stirring up her nest, and in the New Testament the Holy Spirit is compared to a descending dove, but Christ in a sermon that began with cutting sarcasm for hypocrites and ends with the paroxysm of pathos in the text compares himself to a hen.

Hawks of Temptation.

One day in the country we saw sudden consternation in the behavior of old Dominick. Why the hen should be so disturbed we could not understand. We looked about to see if a neighbor's dog were invading the farm. We looked up to see if a stormcloud were hovering. We could see nothing on the ground that could terrorize, and we could see nothing in the air to ruffle the feathers of the hen, but the loud, wild, affrighted cluck which brought all her brood at full run under her feathers made us look again around and above us, when we say that high up and far away there was a rapacious bird wheeling round and round and down and down, and, not seeing us as we stood in the shadow, it came nearer and lower until we saw its beak was curved from base to tip and it had two flames of fire for eyes and it was a hawk. But all the chickens were under old Dominick's wings, and either the bird of prey caught a glimpse of us or, not able to find the brood huddled under wing, darted back into the clouds. So Christ calls with great earnestness to all the young. Why, what is the matter? It is bright sunlight, and there can be no danger. Health is theirs. A good home is theirs. Plenty of food is theirs. Prospect of long life is theirs. But Christ continues to call, calls with more emphasis and urges haste and says not a second ought to be lost. Oh, do tell us what is the matter. Ah, now I see; there are hawks of temptation in the air, there are vultures wheeling for their prey, there are beaks of death ready to plunge, there are claws of allurements ready to clutch. Now I see the peril. Now I understand the urgency. Now I see the only safety. Would that Christ might this day take our sons and daughters into his shelter "as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing."

The fact is that the most of them will never mind the shelter unless while they are chickens. It is a simple matter of inexorable statistics that most of those who do not come to Christ in youth never come at all. What chance is there for the young without divine protection? There are the grogshops, there are the gambling hells, there are the infidelities and immoralities of spiritualism, there are the bad books, there are the impurities, there are the business rascalities, and so numerous are these assailants that it is a wonder that honesty and virtue are not lost arts. The birds of prey, diurnal and nocturnal, of the natural world are ever on the alert. They are the assassins of the sky; they have varieties of taste. The eagle prefers the flesh of the living animal; the vulture prefers the carcass; the falcon kills with one stroke, while other styles of beak give prolongation of torture. And so the temptations of this life are various.

Protect the Young.

Fathers, mothers, older brothers and sisters and Sabbath school teachers, be quick and earnest and prayerful and importunate and get the chickens under wing. May the Sabbath schools of America and Great Britain within the next three months sweep all their scholars into the kingdom. Whom they have now under charge is uncertain. Concerning that scrawny, puny child that lay in the cradle many years ago, the father dead, many remarked, "What a mercy if the Lord would take the child!" And the mother really thought so too. But what a good thing that God spared that child, for it became world renowned in Christian literature and one of God's most illustrious servants—John Todd. Remember, your children will remain children only a little while. What you do for them as children you must do quickly or never do at all. "Why have you never written a book?" said some one to a talented woman. She replied: "I am writing two and have been engaged on one work ten years and on the other five years—my two children. They are my life work." When the house of John Wesley's father burned and they got the eight children out, John Wesley the last before the roof fell in, the father said: "Let us kneel down and thank God. The children are all saved. Let the rest of the place go." My hearers, if we secure the present and everlasting welfare of our children, most other things belonging to us are of but little comparative importance. Alexander the Great allowed his soldiers to take their families with them to war, and he accounted for the bravery of his men by the fact that many of them were born in camp and were used to warlike scenes from the start. Would God that all the children of our day might be born into the army of the Lord!

The Mercy of God.

But we all need the protecting wing. If you had known when you entered upon manhood or womanhood what was ahead of you, would you have dared to undertake life? How much you have been through! With most life has been a disappointment. They tell me so. They have not attained that which they expected to attain. They have not had the physical and mental vigor they expected or they have met with rebuffs which they did not anticipate. You are not at forty or fifty or sixty or seventy or eighty years of age where you thought you would be. I do not know any one except myself to whom life has been a happy surprise. I never expected anything, and so when anything came in the shape of human favor or comfortable position or widening field of work it was to me a surprise. I was told in the theological seminary by some of my fellow students that I never would get anybody to hear me preach unless

I changed my style, so that when I found that some people did come to hear me it was a happy surprise. Most people, according to their statement, have found life a disappointment. Indeed, we all need shelter from its tempests.

About 3 o'clock on a hot August afternoon you have heard a rumble. You first took for a wagon crossing bridge, but afterward there was a louder rumbling, and you said, "Why, is thunder?" And, sure enough, clouds were being convoked for diapason. A whole park of artillery was rolling down the heavens, the blinds of the windows in the were closed. But the sounds above were not more certain than the sun beneath. The cattle came to the and moaned for them to be let do that they might come home to shelter and the fowl, whether dark Brahma or Hamburg or Leghorn or Dorn began to call to its young. "Cluck, cluck!" and take them under the wagon house or shed and had them all bid under the soft feathers by time that the first plash of rain struck the roof. So there are sudden tempests for our souls, and, oh, how dark gets, and threatening clouds of bankruptcy or sickness or persecution or bereavement gather and thicken, blacken, and some run for shelter to bank, but it is poor shelter, and others run to friendly advisers, and they to help, and others fly nowhere since because they know not where to and they perish in the blast, but others hear a divine call saying, "Come, all things are now ready." "The son and the bride say come."

Need of Warmth.

The wings of my text suggest warmth, and that is what most want. The fact is that this is a world whether you take it literally or figuratively. We have a big fire called the sun, and it has a very fire, and the stokers keep the coals stirred up, but much of the year cannot get near enough to this fire to get warmed. The world's extremities are cold all the time. Forget that it is colder at the south pole than at the north pole and that the arctic is not so destructive as the antarctic. Once in a while the arctic will let explorers come back, but the antarctic hardly ever. When at the south pole ship sails in, the door of ice is almost sure to be shut against its return. Life to many millions of people at the south and many millions of people at the north is a prolonged shiver. When I say that this is a cold world chiefly mean figuratively. If you want to know what is the meaning of the ordinary term of receiving the "shoulder," get out of money and trouble. The conversation may have been almost tropical for luxuriant thought and speech, but suggest necessities and see the thermometer drop to 50 degrees below zero, and that which till a moment before had been a warm room. Take what is unpopular position on some question and see your friends fly by chaff before a windmill. As far as myself is concerned, I have no word of complaint, but I look off day by day and see communities freezing out and women of whom the world is worthy. Now it takes after one now after another. It becomes popular to depreciate and defame and execrate and lie about some people. This is the best world I ever got into, but it is the meanest world that some people have got into. The worst thing that happened to them was their cradle, the best thing that will ever happen to them will be their grave.

(Continued on page 11.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT FEB. 16, 1902.

TRAINS LEAVE AND ARRIVE FOURTEENTH-STREET STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND, VA.:

10:20 A. M., No. 9, daily, for Durham, N. C., Danville, and all local stations south; connecting at Burkeville with N. and W. railway for Farmville, Lynchburg, and all local stations west; at Jeffreys for local stations on Norfolk Division to Danville; at Oxford for Henderson.

2:30 P. M., No. 29, limited train daily, for Jacksonville and all Florida points; Havana, Nassau, etc. Connects at Moseley with Farmville and Powhatan railroad; at Greensboro for Durham, Raleigh, and Winston-Salem; at Charlotte with No. 85. United States fast mail, solid train, daily, for New Orleans and points South, which carries Sleepers to New Orleans. Drawing Room Sleeper Richmond to Atlanta and Birmingham. Through train, with Sleeper, Salisbury to Memphis. Dining Car service.

11:30 P. M., No. 11, Southern Express, daily for Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, and points South. Sleeper for Danville, Greensboro, Salisbury, and Charlotte, open at Richmond 9:30 P. M. Connection with New York and Florida Express and Southwestern Limited, which carries Through Sleepers to Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Tampa, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. Complete Dining Car service. Also, Pullman Tourist Sleeper Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays Washington to San Francisco, without change, with connections for all points in Texas, Mexico, and California.

6:00 P. M., No. 17, local daily, except Sunday, for Keysville and intermediate points.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND:

6:00 A. M.)

5:43 P. M.) From Atlanta, Augusta, Jacksonville, Asheville, and all points South.

8:40 A. M., from Keysville and local stations.

8:25 P. M., from Durham, Charlotte, Danville and intermediate stations.

LOCAL FREIGHT.

Nos. 61 and 62, between Manchester and Neapolis.

York River Line, VIA WEST POINT.

THE FAVORITE ROUTE NORTH.

LEAVE RICHMOND:

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT MAY 11, 1902.

4:30 P. M., No. 16, Baltimore Limited, daily, except Sundays, for West Point, connecting at West Point with steamers for Baltimore and York-river landings.

2:15 P. M., No. 10, daily, except Sundays, local express for West Point and intermediate stations. Connects with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

5:00 A. M., No. 74, local mixed. Leaves daily, except Sunday, for West Point and intermediate stations, connecting with stage at Lester Manor for Walkerton and Tappahannock.

TRAINS ARRIVE RICHMOND.

9:15 A. M., No. 15, daily, from West Point, with connection from Baltimore, except Monday.

0:45 A. M., No. 9, daily, except Sundays and Mondays.

5:15 P. M., daily, except Sundays, from West Point and intermediate stations. Nos. 15 and 16 will make no stops between Richmond and Quinton.

Steamers sail from West Point 5:50 P. M. daily, except Sundays. Steamers call at Gloucester Point and Claybank Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and Yorktown and Allmonds Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

C. W. WESTBURY.

District Passenger Agent.

920 east Main street.

Richmond, Va.

S. H. HARDWICK.

General Passenger Agent.

C. H. ACKERT,

General Manager,

Washington, D. C.

CHAS. M. WALSH

STEAM

MARBLE &amp; GRANITE WORKS.

Petersburg, Va.

Manufacturer and dealer in—

Monuments, Headstones,

TOMBS, Etc.

—Also—

Iron and Wire Fencing

—For—

Cemetery and Other Purposes

Designs sent free to any address, on application, if age of deceased and some limit as to price given. Work delivered at any depot, and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

"CAPITAL CITY ROUTE."

Short Line to Principal Cities of the South and Southwest, Florida, Cuba, Texas, California and Mexico, reaching the Capitals of six States.

SCHEDULE IN EFFECT APL. 16, 1902

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND—MAIN STREET STATION—DAILY.

No. 27.

2:15 P. M.

2:56 P. M.

7:27 P. M.

10:25 P. M.

10:35 P. M.

7:50 A. M.

2:00 A. M.

No. 31.

10:37 P. M.

11:20 P. M.

4:12 A. M.

7:00 A. M.

7:20 A. M.

3:55 P. M.

10:35 A. M.

9:40 A. M.

2:10 P. M.

7:00 P. M.

6:45 A. M.

10:08 A. M.

10:22 A. M.

12:35 P. M.

2:50 P. M.

3:55 P. M.

5:40 P. M.

7:20 P. M.

9:20 P. M.

2:55 A. M.

7:25 A. M.

1:40 A. M.

8:20 A. M.

Lv. Richmond.

Lv. Petersburg.

Lv. Raleigh.

Ar. Hamlet.

Lv. Hamlet.

Lv. Atlanta.

Ar. Columbia.

Lv. Columbia.

Ar. Savannah.

Ar. Jacksonville.

Ar. St. Augustine.

Ar. Tampa.

Ar. Charlotte.

Lv. Chester.

Lv. Greenwood.

Lv. Athens.

Ar. Atlanta.

Ar. Augusta.

Ar. Macon.

Ar. Montgomery.

Ar. Mobile.

Ar. New Orleans.

Ar. Nashville.

Ar. Memphis.

Train No. 35 leaves Richmond 9:10 A. M. daily for Petersburg, Norfolk, N. C., and all intermediate points. Connection at Norfolk with train arriving Henderson 2:10 P. M. and Raleigh 3:50 P. M. daily, and Durham 4 P. M. daily, except Sunday.

Trains leave Richmond for Washington, New York, and the East daily—No. 34 at 6:45 A. M., and No. 66 at 5:05 P. M.

Connection at Jacksonville and Tampa for all Florida East coast points and Cuba and Porto Rico; at New Orleans for all points in Texas, Mexico and California.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT RICHMOND—DAILY:

6:35 A. M., No. 34, from all points South and Southwest.

4:55 P. M., No. 66, from all points South and Southwest.

5:45 P. M., No. 36, from Norfolk, N. C., Petersburg, and local points.

SLEEPING-CAR SERVICE.

Nos. 31 and 34—Florida and Metropolitan Limited. Pullman Sleeping cars between New York and Tampa. Vestibuled coaches between New York and Washington, and between Washington and Jacksonville. Pullman sleeping cars (daily) between Jacksonville and Tampa; also through drawing-room. Sleeping cars between New York and Atlanta, and Cafe cars between Hamlet and Atlanta and between Hamlet and Savannah.

Nos. 27 and 66—Seaboard Fast Mail. Pullman Drawing-room Buffet Sleeping cars between New York and Jacksonville, connecting at Hamlet with Sleeping car to and from Atlanta, in connection with which through Pullman tickets are sold. Pullman Parlor cars between Jacksonville and Tampa. Finest day coaches.

W. J. MAY, City Ticket Agent.
Z. P. SMITH, District Pass. Agent.
Phone 405. 1006 E. Main Street.

We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

Send model, sketch or photo of invention for free report on patentability. For free book, How to Secure TRADE-MARKS write to GASNOW &amp; CO.

Opposite U. S. Patent Office
WASHINGTON D. C.

THIS COLLEGE IS NOW LOCATED IN ITS OWN GRAND NEW BUILDING,

northeast corner Broad and Ninth streets, Richmond, Va. Constructed of iron, granite, and gray brick, 40 x 124 feet, four stories above basement, it is one of the handsomest and most substantial school buildings in the country. The oldest Business College in the State, and the only one owning its building. With one exception, this is true of the whole South.

Richmond, Va., September 21, 1900.

I could have gotten a scholarship at another business college in Richmond for half what it cost me at the Smithdeal, although the regular rates of all the business colleges in Richmond are about the same.

When I reached Richmond I inquired of several business men for the best business college in the city, and without exception they all recommended Smithdeal as the best.

WILLIAM E. ROSS.

A letter from Mr. D. M. Cloninger, Stanley, N. C., dated July 5, 1900, asking for catalogue of our school, contains this statement:

"I am personally acquainted with some of your former students, all of whom are now holding lucrative positions, and they attribute their success to the thorough training obtained at your college, and speak in most glowing terms of you and your college."

We Teach—
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, English.

For catalogue giving full particulars and showing that we give liberal discounts for a knowledge of English for the Shorthand Department, and Arithmetic added for Commercial Department, address
G. M. SMITHDEAL, President.

Sterling Silver!

Diamonds,
Watches,

Fine Repairing. Jewelry.
Mail Orders Have Careful Attention.

Manufacturing
Lumsden & Son,

Jewellers and Opticians
781 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

WANTED INVENTORS

to write for our confidential letter before applying for patent; it may be worth money. We promptly obtain U. S. and Foreign

PATENTS

and TRADE MARKS or return ENTIRE attorney's fee. Send model, sketch or photo and we send an IMMEDIATE FREE report on patentability. We give the best legal service and advice, and our charges are moderate. Try us.

SWIFT & CO.,
Patent Lawyers,
Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SAW, PLANING MILLS and UMBER YARD.

MECHANICAL REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

SASH, DOORS, BLINDS.
—
PLOW HANDLES.
—
TOBACCO HOGSHEADS.
—
CORN MEAL,
—
SLAT & WIRE FENCES.

Farmville M'f'g Co.,
FARMVILLE, VA.

D. R. L. C. TUCKER,

SURGEON DENTIST.

Richmond, Va.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

(Continued from Page 9.)

The Rev. E. K. Odell preached at Huntersville at the morning and evening hours to fair congregations. The Sunday school was very good. It was organized into a missionary society. The attendance on the League was fair. Officers of the League were installed and consecration services held.

The Rev. C. L. Bane attended the Sunday school and League and preached to fine audiences at Cumberland Street. One member was received by certificate. The pastor conducted a funeral in the afternoon.

The Rev. G. H. McFaden reported a large Sunday school at Wright Memorial, 386 being present. He preached to a packed house at night. One member was received by certificate.

The Rev. George Wesley Jones conducted both services at Trinity, and received three by certificate.

The Rev. W. R. Crowder had a fairly good Sunday school at Denby's, and preached morning and afternoon.

The Rev. Dr. J. P. Barrett said the Sunday school at the Christian Memorial Temple was better than usual. He had a good day, and conducted the usual services.

The Rev. W. A. Christian preached morning and night at Memorial to good congregations and received one by certificate.

The Rev. C. H. McGhee reported a well attended Sunday school at Lambert's Point. He preached to a good congregation in the morning. In the afternoon children's day was observed, the attendance being fine, and the children acquitting themselves with credit.

At Queen Street the Rev. Dr. J. H. Moss preached morning and night fine sermons to fine audiences.

The pastor, the Rev. J. K. Jolliff, preached at Smithfield for Dr. Moss in the interest of the Virginia Conference Orphanage. The church there pledged itself to raise about $400 for this cause.

The Rev. J. T. Mastin presented this cause on the Isle of Wight charge with encouraging results.

The Rev. J. N. Latham conducted the morning and evening services at Park View, and spoke at the Y. M. C. A. in the afternoon.

The Rev. R. H. Bennett conducted the regular services at Epworth and received one on profession of faith.

At Owens Memorial, the Rev. Ernest Stevens preached at the usual services and had a good Sunday school.

The Rev. W. P. Jordan conducted a good Sunday school in Park Place.

At Monumental the Rev. E. H. Rawlings held good services morning and evening.

The Rev. Dr. J. C. C. Newton, formerly stationed at Owens Memorial, but now at Trinity church, Salisbury, Md., was present, and gave an interesting account of his work. He expects to have the assistance of Evangelist Bransford, of Danville, in a meeting in October.

ADDRESS BY MR. W. E. FENNO.

Mr. W. E. Fenno, the international secretary of the Naval Y. M. C. A., was present, and was accorded the privileges of the floor and spoke briefly in reference to his work. It was inaugurated at Key West during the Spanish-American war, and from there was carried to Brooklyn, N. Y. Through the generosity of Miss Helen Gould, $450,000 were secured to build and equip a suitable building. This has been fitted up with everything to attract and help the sailors and marines of the United States Navy. The committee has established a like institution here at 187 Church street, and a secretary has been selected and will take charge next week. A large part of the money necessary to carry on this work has been raised, and the movement is an assured success.

JUDGE CAMPBELL CONDEMNED.

At yesterday's session of the Methodist ministers of this city and section resolutions extending the sympathy of the body of Rev. C. H. Crawford, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, were adopted, and the meeting denounced the action of Judge Campbell, of Amherst, who cowhided the Rev. Mr. Crawford some time ago.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas our brother, Rev. C. H. Crawford, superintendent of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League, has of late been brought into unpleasant publicity and subjected to humiliating conditions by the acts of the Judge of Amherst county; therefore Resolved, That we reassure Dr. Crawford of our hearty sympathy in his good work.

Second. That we condemn the attack of Judge C. J. Campbell upon Dr. Crawford.

Third. That we trust there shall be taken such steps as may be necessary to vindicate the high and responsible position of the judiciary.

Fourth. That while we do not enter into the merits of the original case, we do say that if Judge Campbell felt himself aggrieved, there were sane and legitimate means which he could have used to right the matter.

The meeting then adjourned with the benediction by Dr. Newton.—Landmark.

CHRISTIAN THOUGHT CLUB.

The vice-president, the Rev. E. H. Rawlings, called the Christian Thought Club to order in regular session in the lecture-room of Epworth church on yesterday at noon. Prayer was offered by the Rev. George Wesley Jones. The question concerning the reading of new books indicated that the members have not read as many lately as heretofore, their multifarious duties preventing. Still the list was an extensive and varied one.

It was decided not to meet again till October, except on the call of the president to hear the report of the Committee on Programme. The regular order was an original paper on "The Old Testament According to Jesus," by the Rev. Dr. J. C. C. Newton, of Salisbury, Md. The members were treated to one of the most excellent and most carefully-prepared papers that has ever come before the club, and indicated the fine scholarship of this estimable Christian gentleman. At the conclusion of its reading, Dr. Newton was thanked by a rising vote, and the hope was expressed that he would have it published in some of the periodicals of the Church.—Landmark.

MARRIED AT MONTICELLO.

Miss Ada P. Perkinson and James E. Howell, both of Brunswick county, Va., were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the parlor of the Monticello Hotel, the Rev. W. T. Green, pastor of Beadles' Memorial M. E. church, performing the ceremony.

Miss Perkinson, who had been a teacher in the public schools in Brunswick county, has been visiting for several weeks with friends at No. 425 King street. Her fiancé arrived here on Saturday, and arrangements were made to have the nuptial knot tied out on the broad expanse of Hampton Roads. For this purpose they were to go down on the steamer Hampton Roads to Old Point, accompanied by Mr. Green and a few friends, and the wedding was to have been solemnized on the return trip.

When the party got to Norfolk, however, it was found that the steamer would not make the trip in time for the couple to catch the afternoon train over the Southern Railway, by which they were to leave on their wedding journey, consequently the romantic plan was given up, and the party proceeded to the Monticello, where the ceremony was performed.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Howell left for the South.—Virginian-Pilot, June 24th.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Sunday, June 23d, marked the ninth anniversary of the Anti-Saloon League of the District of Columbia, and was fittingly celebrated by the members of the League. In a brief but comprehensive review of the work of the year, Mr. Herman C. Metcalf, chairman of the committee on mass-meetings, stated that, taking the figures of less than a year ago, the decrease in the total number of saloons in the District, despite the growth in population, amounted to 472 since 1892, the present ratio being 1 to every 458 persons, estimated population of 1902. The present enrollment of the League, as given by Mr. Metcalf, represents 120 societies, of which 78 are church societies, 31 strictly temperance societies, and 11 of miscellaneous character. The chief feature of the meeting was the address of Representative Gibson, of Tennessee, who spoke most encouragingly of the progress of the temperance movement. Referring to his own experience in Congress, covering eight years, he said that while during the first Congress of which he was a member, he personally saw three members of the House in a state of intoxication, during the present Congress he had seen none. Referring to the sale of liquor in the Capitol, he said that the demand came almost entirely from outsiders visiting or having business with Congress, and he confidently predicted that within two years the sale on government land would be completely abandoned. "Congress abolished slavery in the District," he said, "and when Congress abolishes liquor from the Capitol, it will be saying to the country that Congress has stamped its disapproval on the saloon business."

Mr. James F. Cunningham recently addressed to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia a vigorous protest against the establishment of numerous "social clubs" within their jurisdiction. Mr. Cunningham makes the point that these "clubs" are "in reality nothing more than Sunday bar rooms"; that they charge a mere nominal initiation fee, usually $1, and then, of course, charge the usual bar-room prices for drinks. He alleges that these so-called clubs are really worse than the ordinary saloon, for the reason that the saloon keeper is governed by laws which necessitate, at least in the District, his closing his place of business on Sundays and on week days at midnight, but the clubs continue to transact their nefarious business on Sundays and at all hours. The fact that the proprietors of these institutions are shrewd enough to keep within the pale of the law governing the more exclusive and genuine social clubs makes them difficult to deal with, but that will not prevent the Anti-Saloon League and similar institutions from endeavoring to discover some means whereby the evil may be remedied.

It is generally understood at the Capitol that there will be no action during this session of Congress on the Sunday closing law which is now in Senator McMillan's committee. The fact that there are many men, in no way affiliated with the Church movement for the sanctification of the Sunday, interested with the Church workers in the promotion of the law, warrants the statement that such a law will eventually be placed upon the statute books, but so many and such diverse interests have presented themselves that it will be impossible to get the law passed at this session. It has been claimed that by prohibiting the sale of all groceries on Sunday, in a climate as warm as that of Washington, considerable hardship would be inflicted upon certain poor families, who are compelled to rely on the ice boxes of their local merchants for their supplies of meat and milk, etc., and, while the reasons advanced against the passage of the bill sound somewhat hackneyed, a further investigation of the conditions will be made, and if the representations of certain opponents are found to be correct, an effort will be made to so alter its provisions as to prevent any suggestion of hardship to the very poor. The contentions of the opponents of the law recall the effort once made in Chicago by certain charitable people to establish free ice boxes in neighborhoods occupied by very poor people with a view to preserving in proper condition articles of food, and particularly the food of infants, which is so susceptible to contamination by heat and lack of proper ventilation. What the outcome of the experiments was, unfortunately, I am unable to state.

An enthusiastic and well-attended Convention was held in Washington last week by the fourth General Conference District of the Epworth League, over 200 members being in attendance. A unique feature of the Conference was the holding of several "sunrise" prayer-meetings, one of which took place on the grounds of the American University, and which was followed by a breakfast on the same grounds. Among many interesting addresses, one delivered by Rev. Frank D. Gamewell, D. D., attracted much attention. It consisted of a graphic description of the siege of Peking, and the defence of the British Legation, in which Mr. Gamewell took an active part. He asserted his firm belief that only the prayers of the Christian people throughout the world saved the refugees from the peril which threatened them on every side. Referring to conditions in China, Mr. Gamewell asserted that the Christian missionaries had the entire sympathy of the common people, but that the more educated classes used their influence to incite the people against the missionaries and imaginary wrongs inflicted by them. Before the close of the sessions the delegates to the Convention were received by the President, and had the honor of being the last delegation of any description which will be received in the White House until after the alterations now in progress are completed, presumably some time in October.

Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D., superintendent of the Reform Bureau in Washington, has discovered, with the help of the attorney of the Bureau, that the contract entered into by the Secretary of the Treasury and the directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, is "deficient," and is making an earnest effort to secure its perfection. By the terms of this contract the exposition company is supposed to bind itself to keep the doors of the exposition closed on Sundays in return for the liberal appropriation made towards its expenses by Congress. It is alleged, however, that once the company has secured possession of the $5,000,000 appropriated by Congress the exposition company will be able to break the contract and open the doors of the exposition at will. In view of this situation Dr. Crafts is sending out petitions to which he hopes to secure a large number of signatures. One is addressed to the President, urging him to take steps to insure the validity of the contract; another requests the same of Hon. David R. Francis, president of the exposition company, and a third is addressed to the Bureau, urging that, in the event that the contract is not properly drawn and signed, the Bureau take legal steps to prevent the payment of the funds appropriated.

INTER-CLASS COLLEGE SPIRIT.

Next to the college spirit that of the class is the sentiment most cherished by the student, but there also exists much loyal feeling between the alternate classes, it being a universal tradition for the juniors to champion the freshmen and for the seniors and the sophomores to be on the best of terms. Inter-class parties and various contests for championships, etc., are also productive of much college interest. The department of college news in The Delineator for April takes up the matter of inter-class amenities and discusses various features of the life at the leading institutions. College women everywhere should be interested in this article.

THE PETERSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Will convene at Shiloh church, North Mecklenburg Circuit, Wednesday, July 16th, at 9:30 A. M. Rev. S. C. Hatcher will preach the opening sermon.

Committee to examine candidates—Revs. J. R. Sturgis, J. B. DeBerry, and W. G. Boggs.

All necessary information will be furnished in due time by Rev. R. S. Baughan, the Conference host.

R. T. WILSON, P. E.

SPECIAL RATES VIA SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The following special rates will apply via Southern Railway for special occasions mentioned:

PEABODY COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL, NASHVILLE, TENN. JUNE 16 AND JULY 28, 1902.

One fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale June 12th, 13th and 14th, June 27th, 28th and 29th, and July 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit July 31st, except by deposit of tickets with joint agent on or before July 31st, and payment of 50 cents, extension of limit until September 30th may be obtained.

MEETING VIRGINIA STATE DENTAL ASSOCIATION, OLD POINT, VA., AUGUST 3-7, 1902.

Four (4) cents per mile one way distance for the round trip. Tickets to be on sale August 3d, 4th and 5th, with return limit August 10th.

TO CALIFORNIA AND RETURN.

For Less Than Half Fare, Via Southern Railway, New Orleans and Sunset Route. Or, Through Asheville (Land of the Sky), Memphis, Kansas City, and Colorado.

These special tickets will be on sale August 1st to 7th, inclusive, to either Los Angeles or San Francisco, with return limit September 30th. $65.25 for the round trip. Liberal stop-over privileges. You may go one route and return another if desired. For detail information, illustrated pamphlet and folder, apply to any agent of the Southern Railway, or C. W. Westbury, D. P. A., Richmond, Va. je 2712t

SPECIAL SEASHORE EXCURSIONS VIA SHENANDOAH VALLEY ROUTE.

Double Daily Service via Roanoke, Luray, Hagerstown, Cumberland Valley and Pennsylvania Railroads to Atlantic City, Cape May, Sea Isle City, Avalon, Anglesea, Wildwood, Holly Beach, New Jersey.

Tickets will be on sale July 10th and 24th, August 7th and 21st, limited to sixteen days, including date of sale.

If tickets sold during July and August are deposited with Ticket Agent at Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, on arrival, a stop-over of ten days will be allowed at Philadelphia on going trip.

Additional information upon application to Agents Norfolk and Western Railway.

W. B. BEVILL,
General Pass. Agent, Roanoke, Va.

NO LONGER THAN YOUR HAND is the spot in your back directly affected by lumbago. But it is big enough to prostrate you until a kind friend rubs Perry Davis' Painkiller into your aching flesh. Then the throbbing pain, which has been as bad as toothache, dies away. Painkiller is equally good in relieving sciatica and the various forms of rheumatism. 25 and 50 cents.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

An Old and Well-Tried Remedy.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS OF MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, WITH PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP AND TAKE NO OTHER KIND. Twenty-five Cents a Bottle.

FURNITURE

IT WILL PAY YOU WHEN IN Blackstone to call at our nicely

FITTED-UP STORE

where you will find everything kept in a

FIRST-CLASS,
UP-TO-DATE
FURNITURE STORE.

We guarantee our prices as low as any market in the State. Orders by mail promptly and carefully attended to.

C. L. CARTER.

SPECIAL LOW RATE EXCURSIONS VIA NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., August 11th to 15th.

B. P. O. Elks, Salt Lake City, Utah, August 12th to 14th.

Write for information as to rates and dates of sale of tickets.

W. R. BEVILL, M. F. BRAGG,
Gen'l Pass. Agt., T. P. A.,
Roanoke, Va.

Just a second, please—

To tell YOU that

Painkiller

(PERRY DAVIS')

is an infallible cure for Cramps, Colic and all Stomach Complaints.

For 25c.—a large bottle

Moncure & Epes,

DEALERS IN—

Dry Goods, Notions
AND
Fine Footwear.

Leave your Laundry with us; we are Agents for the Model Steam Laundry,
of Petersburg.

There are certain facts about the RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY that we wish every reader of the RECORDER to know. In this space we can mention only a few.

If any one of these facts interests you, let the Principal know, and he will write you personally full information or will visit you at your home. Here are the facts:

1. Over one hundred degrees have been conferred in the past five years on students trained at our Academy.
2. Our work has been endorsed by over twenty colleges and universities.
3. Special features peculiar to our Academy, in methods of Discipline and Instruction, have secured for us most gratifying results.

E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, BEDFORD CITY, VA.

THE BEST LAWN SWING
MADE

AGENTS WANTED

Lawn Swings and Settees, Hammock
Chairs, Camp Chairs and Stools, Ironing Tables, Wash Benches, Etc.

Agents easily make

$5 to $10 PER DAY.

Will furnish samples at reduced prices to those desiring agency. Exclusive territory given. Address,

Clearfield Wooden-Ware Co.,
CLEARFIELD, PA.

(Continued from page 10.)

What people want is warmth. Many years ago a man was floating down on the ice of the Merrimac, and great efforts were made to rescue him. Twice he got hold of a plank thrown to him and twice he slipped away from it, because that end of the plank was covered with ice, and he cried out, "For God's sake, give me the wooden end of the plank this time!" and, this done, he was hauled to shore. The trouble is that in our efforts to save the soul there are too much coldness and icy formality, and so the imperiled one slips off and floats down. Give it the other end of the plank; warmth of sympathy, warmth of kindly association, warmth of genial surroundings. The world declines to give it and in many cases has no power to give it, and here is where Christ comes in, and as on a cold day, the rain beating and the atmosphere full of sleet, the hen clucks her chickens under her wings, and the warmth of her own breast puts warmth into the wet feathers and the chilled feet of the infant group of the barnyard, so Christ says to those sick and frosted and disgusted and frozen of the world: "Come in out of the March winds of the world's criticism, come in out of the sleet of the world's assault, come in out of a world that does not understand you and does not want to understand you. I will comfort, and I will soothe, and I will be your warmth, 'as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing.'" Oh, the warm heart of God is ready for all those to whom the world has given the cold shoulder.

Christ Takes the Storm.

But notice that some one must take the storm for the chickens. Ah, the hen takes the storm. I have watched her under the pelting rain. I have seen her in the pinching frosts. Almost frozen to death or almost strangled in the waters, and what a fight she makes for the young under wing if a dog or a hawk or a man come too near! And so the brooding Christ takes the storm for us. What flood of anguish and tears that did not dash upon his holy soul? What beak of torture did not pierce his vitals? What barking Cerberus of hell was not let out upon him from the kennels? Yes, the hen takes the storm for the chickens, and Christ takes the storm for us. Once the tempest rose so suddenly the hen could not get with her young back from the new ground to the barn, and there she is under the fence half dead. And now the rain turns to snow, and it is an awful night, and in the morning the whiteness about the gills and the beak down in the mud show that the mother is dead, and the young ones come out and cannot understand why the mother does not scratch for them something to eat, and they walk over her wings and call with their tiny voices, but there is no answering cluck. She took the storm for others and perished. Poor thing! Self sacrificing even unto death! And does it not make you think of him who endured all for us? So the wings under which we come for spiritual safety are blood spattered wings, are night shadowed wings, are tempest torn wings. In the Isle of Wight I saw the grave of Princess Elizabeth, who died while a prisoner at Carisbrook castle, her finger on an open Bible and pointing to the words, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Oh, come under the wings!

But now the summer day is almost past, and the shadows of the house and barn and wagon shed have lengthened. The farmer, with scythe or hoe on shoulder, is returning from the fields. The oxen are unyoked. The horses are crunching the oats at the full bin. The air is bewitched of honeysuckle and wild brier. The milkman, pail in hand, is approaching the barnyard. The fowls, keeping early hours, are collecting their young. "Cluck!" "Cluck!" "Cluck!" And soon all the eyes of that feathered nursery are closed. The bachelors of the winged tribe have ascended to their perch, but the hens, in a motherhood divinely appointed, take all the risk of a slumber on the ground, and all night long the wings will stay outspread, and the little ones will not utter a sound. Thus at sundown, lovingly, safely, completely, the hen broods her young. So, if we are the Lord's, the evening of our life will come. The heats of the day will have passed. There will be shadows, and we cannot see as far. The work of life will be about ended. The hawks of temptation that hovered in the sky will have gone to the woods and folded their wings. Sweet silences will come. The air will be redolent with the breath of whole arbors of promises sweeter than jasmine or evening primrose. The air may be a little chill, but Christ will call us, and we will know the voice and heed the call, and we will come under the wings for the night, the strong wings, the soft wings, the warm wings, and without fear and in full sense of safety, and then we will rest from sundown to sunrise, "as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing."

Dear me! How many souls the Lord hath thus brooded! Mothers, after watching over sick cradles and then watching afterward over wayward sons and daughters, at last themselves taken care of by a motherly God. Business men, after a lifetime struggling with the uncertainties of money markets and the change of tariffs and the underselling of men who because of their dishonesties can afford to undersell, and years of disappointment and struggle, at last under wings where nothing can perturb them any more than can a bird of prey which is ten miles off disturb a chick at midnight brooded in a barnyard.

Under the Divine Wings.

My text has its strongest application for people who were born in the country, wherever you may now live, and that is the majority of you. You cannot hear my text without having all the rustic scenes of the old farmhouse come back to you. Good old days they were. You knew nothing much of the world, for you had not seen the world. By law of association you cannot recall the brooding hen and her chickens without seeing also the barn and the haymow and the wagon shed and the house and the room where you played and the fireside with the big backlog before which you sat and the neighbors and the burial and the wedding and the deep snowbanks and hear the village bell that called you to worship and seeing the horses which, after pulling you to church, stood around the old clapboarded meeting house and those who sat at either end of the church pew and, indeed, all the scenes of your first fourteen years, and you think of what you were then and of what you are now, and all these thoughts are aroused by the sight of the old hencoop. Some of you had better go back and start again. In thought return to that place and hear the cluck and see the outspread feathers and come under the wing and make the Lord your portion and shelter and warmth, preparing for everything that may come and so avoid being classed among those described by the closing words of my text, "as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." Ah, that throws the responsibility upon us. "Ye would not."

INSURANCE

Fire, Life, and Accident.

Best Companies only Represented.

R. L. CLIBORNE,

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING, BLACKSTONE, VA.

D. R. L. B. SPENCER & CO.,
Blackstone, Va

DRUGGISTS.

Paints, * Oils, * Druggists' * Sundries.

Cor. Main and Broad Blackstone Va

W. F. WALLACE, M. D.,
Blackstone, Va.

GENERAL PRACTICE.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Pres. and Gen'l Counsel.

FORTESCUE WHITTLE,
Vice-President.

EDW. W. BUTCHER,
Secretary.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

PETERSBURG SAVINGS AND INSURANCE COMPANY
OF PETERSBURG, VA.

Established 1860

SURPLUS, $275,000.

CAPITAL, $300,000.

INSURE YOUR PROPERTY IN THIS OLD AND RELIABLE COMPANY

W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.;
OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWER, Agents, Crewe, Va.;
JOSEPH E. GARLAND, Agent, Farmville, Va.

READ THIS! THE METHODIST MAGAZINE For Our Readers.

EVERYONE WILL APPRECIATE THIS OFFER.

By special arrangement with the Methodist Magazine Publishing Company (St. Louis, New York, and Chicago), we are enabled to offer their beautiful monthly magazine to every one of our subscribers for only 25 cents. That is to say, we will give the magazine for twelve months with every yearly subscription to this paper, new or renewal, for only 2 cents extra. Send $1.25, and we will send you for one year the Southern Methodist Recorder and the splendid pictorial monthly

THE AMERICAN
ILLUSTRATED METHODIST
MAGAZINE.

This is the only illustrated Methodist magazine published in the United States. Most of our readers have seen it; if not, write us, and a free sample copy will be sent you. The Magazine is a beautiful publication, containing not only the general literature and artistic illustrations which are characteristic of the best features of the high-class secular magazines, but it has also the distinctive literature of our Church. No other magazine so richly deserves a place in every Methodist home. It is chaste in matter, lavish in illustration, ably edited, and contains departments of interest to every member of the family old and young.

HOW THE METHODIST MAGAZINE IS REGARDED BY THE PRESS AND BY CHURCH OFFICIALS.

"We welcome it, relish it, recommend it."

—Western Christian Advocate.

"Its aim is to advocate and magnify the things which worldwide Methodism holds in common."

—Central Christian Advocate.

"A high-grade periodical, worthy of a place in every Methodist home."

—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"Instructive, entertaining, edifying."

—Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A vigorous religious monthly, one that should be a benediction to many homes, and an inspiration to many lives."

—Methodist Magazine and Review.

"Ought to run easily to an issue of a hundred thousand."

—Richmond Christian Advocate.

"It ought to take the place in our Methodist homes of magazines of less religious character."

—Arkansas Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."

—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"Worthy the great Church of which it is literary exponent."

—St. Louis Globe-Dem.

"Takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."

—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"Welcomed by the whole Methodist family."

—Bishop C. C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."

—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"I hope every Christian will have the beautiful magazine."

—Bishop J. F. Hurst.

"It ranks with the best."

—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart."

—Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land."

—Prof. T. Barry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

This remarkable offer of a year's subscription to this splendid Magazine, for only cents, is for prompt acceptance. It may not remain open long, and we hope that all our readers will take advantage of it at once.

Send price of renewal for one year, and date of your subscription to our paper will be extended, and the American Illustrated Methodist Magazine will be sent you for two months.

Let us hear from you at once. Don't wait. This is a great opportunity to get the beautiful pictorial monthly magazine for a whole year at a cost to you of only 25 cents.

Send $1.25 for the two periodicals to the SOUTHERN METHODIST RECORDER, Blackstone, Va.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

are showing a splendid line of

ESS FABRICS suitable for the hot weather and at popular prices.

MMER CLOTHING for Men and Boys of the latest styles.

st complete line of SHOES for Men, Women and Children to be seen in this section. Our shoes are made of LEATHER and gnaranteed.

Nice assortment of

RAW HATS, NEGLIGEE SHIRTS, and NECKWEAR.

THOMSON'S, R. & G., and W. B. CORSETS.

mmense stock of EMBROIDERIES at prices that will as-ish you.

SEAY-BAGLEY CO.

BLACKSTONE, VA.

ORGANIZED 1865.

VIRGINIA STATE INSURANCE CO.,

OF RICHMOND.

ASSETS, $408,344.07.

This is a Home company; Invests its money at Home; helps Home industries, and solicits Home patronage.

V. RANDOLPH, Pres't,
CHAS. K. WILLIS, Sec'y,
ROBERT LECKY, Jr., Ass't Sec'y.

OMAS L. MORTON, Agent, Farmville; HARPER & WEST, Agents, Suffolk; OLIVER, ELLIOTT & SOWERS, Agents, Crewe; H. L. WATTS, Agent, Portsmouth; J. T. WEST & BRO., Agents, Waverly; GEO. W. DEY & SON, Agents, Norfolk; W. E. HURT, Agent, Blackstone, Va.

ORGANIZED 183

VIRGINIA FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE CO.

RICHMOND, VA.

ASSETS - - - $800,000.00.

INSURES AGAINST FIRE AND LIGHTNING.

old Virginia Institution issues a short and comprehensive Policy, free from any petty restrictions, and liberal in its terms and conditions.

AGENCIES IN EVRY TOWN AND COUNTY.

W. E. HURT, Agt., BLACKSTONE
And VICINITY.
Wm. H. PALMER, Pres. W. H. McCARTHY, Sec'y.

DO YOU NEED MONEY

To Build a Home or Pay Off Old Debts? If so write to the undersigned. Best References Furnished. Time made to suit the borrower. Money loaned at lowest rate possible.

FARMVILLE BUILDING & TRUST CO.

Do You Need Anything in the Furniture Line

—Buy From—

W. T. DOYNE,

Main Street, Farmville, Va.

Will sell anything you want for furnishing your house at a lower price than can be bought for elsewhere. Chamber suits in Oak, Walnut, and Imitation Hard Woods; Springs, Mattresses, etc.; Buffets, Side-boards and China Presses, Extension Tables and Chairs of every description. Baby Carriages in great variety, and . . . . .

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER.

When in Farmville call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All pains cured
by Dr. David's
Pain Cure.

Dr. David's

Unfailing
and pleasant,
Dr. David's Cough
Syrup.

Anti-Bilious Liver Pills,

A VALUABLE REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINT, BILIOUS AFFECTIONS, HEADACHE, AND ESPECIALLY SICK HEADACHE, PAIN IN THE SIDE. STOMACH, BACK OR INTESTINES, GIDDINESS, DIMNESS OF SIGHT, WEAK NERVES, LOSS OF APPETITE, COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, DERANGEMENT OF THE KIDNEYS, AND ALL DELICATE FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

DR. DAVID'S LIVER PILLS are offered to the public as the best cure for a disordered liver known, and but one trial is needed to convince the most skeptical of this fact.

These Pills are very mild and harmless in their action upon the Liver and Bowels, and where persons are suffering with any of the above Affections, Headache, especially Sick Headache, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, or any disorder of the Liver or Stomach, they should always have a box of them near at hand and take them by directions found on the box.

The verdict of everybody that has taken Dr. David's Liver Pills is, "They are the best and most pleasant Pills I ever took." All sufferers should give them a trial. Price 25 cents a box; five boxes for $1.00. For sale everywhere. Ask for Dr. David's Liver Pills, and have no other. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

OWENS & MINOR DRUG CO.,

RICHMOND, VA.

IF YOU WILL WRITE FOR OUR

Vehicle Catalogue

YOU WILL SEND US AN ORDER FOR A

Carriage, Buggy or Farm Wagon.

IF YOU SEND US A MAIL ORDER WE WILL

GUARANTEE TO SUIT YOU

—IN—

Style, Finish and Durability of Work.

Drop us a line when in need of anything in the HARDWARE LINE.

Harris-Dillard H'dw're Co.,
BLACKSTONE, - VIRGINIA

